PREFACE.

This book will be found to contain the largest and most important collection of public and private papers relative to the early history of the maritime provinces that has hitherto been published. No private collection of papers in Canada, with perhaps the single exception of the Chipman papers, can compare with the Winslow collection as regards the length of the period that it covers, the number of writers represented, and the variety of subjects with which it deals.

Some years ago the editor learned of the existence of the collection and was invited by Mr. Francis E. Winslow of Chatham, in whose keeping the greater part of the papers were, to examine them with a view to their preservation in some permanent form. The importance of such a step became apparent upon the most cursory inspection. The editor indeed found himself well nigh overwhelmed with the extent and variety of the materials available for historical purposes and the greater part of his leisure time during the last two years has been devoted to the task of digesting and arranging them for publication. Large as the volume is, as now printed, it does not begin to represent the mass of materials of varying degrees of interest and importance to be found in the original collection.

In addition to the papers in possession of Mr. Francis E. Winslow there have been added a considerable number of letters and documents kindly loaned by other members of the Winslow family, and the editor's obligations are especially due to Mr. Edward Pelham Winslow of Stratford, Ont., and Miss Mary Winslow, of Woodstock, N. B. Several letters written by Edward Winslow and a few other documents of interest have been added, of which the originals are to be found among the Chipman papers.

In the arrangement of the papers as now printed the chronological order has been adhered to as far as possible. A copious index has been prepared which will be found to add very greatly to the value of the book for purposes of reference.

Some idea of the variety of topics with which the volume deals may be gathered from the fact that it contains about six hundred and fifty letters and documents written by about one hundred and seventy different persons and covering a period of nearly fifty years. The editor's task has been chiefly one of selection and arrangement with the addition of such foot notes as will enable anyone to read the pages of the book intelligently even though not conversant with the subject in hand.

More than one hundred and fifty of Edward Winslow's letters are printed, the originals of which are, in most instances, rough drafts, doubtless often improved in the final letter. The versatility of Winslow's pen is really extraordinary, and posterity will confirm the judgment of his contemporaries that, as a letter writer, among his many correspondents he knew no peer.

The character of Edward Winslow as depicted in the pages of this book is worthy of admiration. He was a splendid specimen of the Tory of olden time, loyal to his king and country, strong in his adherence to the principles in which he believed, true in his friendships and his resentments not lasting, a good son and tenderly devoted to the happiness of his family. His energy and activity in public affairs was limited only by the opportunities of service afforded him and by the condition of his health. A generous and sympathetic nature rendered him always alive to the necessities of the unfortunate. To this characteristic of his nature the words of his life long friend Sir John Wentworth attest when he observes in a letter to Judge Chipman, shortly after Judge Winslow's decease, that his late friend's usefulness to others had occupied those exertions which his family had reason to lament had not been more directly applied to his own advantage.

Edward Winslow will be found to be his own best biographer. His virtues and his failings are alike truthfully portrayed in his writings; to the reader of this book is entrusted the formation of a just opinion of his character. He enjoyed the friendship and esteem of some of the foremost men of his generation, many of whose letters will be found in the pages that follow.

The publication of the Winslow papers is rendered practicable by the generous aid of Mr. Francis E. Winslow. The volume appears, as is very proper, with the imprimatur of the New Brunswick Historical Society, which has also contributed towards its publication. The editor's task has been a labor of love in which he has been greatly cheered by the interest manifested in the book in advance by many whose opinion he greatly values.

The "Winslow Papers" will be found to shed much light upon the attitude of the Loyalists in the American Revolution and the circumstances that attended their settlement in the maritime provinces at the close of the war. The book will also be found to be a veritable mine of information with regard to the circumstances under which the Province of New Brunswick sprang into existence. The leading incidents of our early provincial history, social and political, are clearly portrayed, and much light thrown upon the somewhat obscure period dating from the beginning of the past century down to the close of the war of 1812.

In view of the fact that the book is intended as a memorial of the life and work of Judge Edward Winslow, as well as a repository of historic facts, no apology is needed for the insertion of much that is of a personal character. The letters to his own family and the pathetic story of his death will not to the general reader be the least interesting portion of the volume. The responsibility for all that has been published rests solely with the editor who has done his work to the best of his ability amidst the many interruptions and distractions incident to a busy life.

The editor has to express his obligation to various members of the Winslow family for their confidence in entrusting to his judgment the selection of all that is printed in this volume. Cordial thanks are also tendered to Sir John Bourinot, Dr. W. F. Ganong, and Mr. S. D. Scott, for timely suggestions; to Jonas Howe, Ward Chipman Hazen, Joseph Ewing and Harry Piers, for use of letters and assistance in procuring illustrations; and to many others for their friendly interest displayed in a great variety of ways.

INTRODUCTORY.

The late Judge Winslow of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick was a lineal descendant of Edward Winslow, the Mayflower pilgrim and first Governor of Plymouth Colony. His ancestry may be traced back to Kenelm Winslow of Kempsey, County of Worcester, England, who died in 1607. To Kenelm Winslow was born by his wife Catharine, in 1560, a son Edward. This Edward Winslow (the first of the name so far as we know) was the progenitor of a long list of namesakes. He lived at Drortwich, England. He was twice married, and the oldest son by his second wife, whose maiden name was Magdalene Ollyver, was Edward, the Mayflower pilgrim. From him, as the first of the name in America, the Winslows of New Brunswick trace their descent as follows:

1. Edward—son of Edward and Magdalene Winslow, born 1595, died in 1654, aged 59 years. By his second wife, Susannah White (widow of William White) he had two children, Josiah and Elizabeth.
2. Josiah—son of Edward and Susannah Winslow, born 1628, died in 1680, aged 52 years. Married 1657 Penelope Pelham.
3. Isaac—son of Josiah and Penelope Winslow, born 1670, died in 1738, aged 68 years. Married Sarah Wensley.
4. Edward—son of Isaac and Sarah Winslow, of Marshfield, born 1713, died at Halifax June 9, 1784, aged 71 years. Married Hannah (Howland) Dyer.
5. Edward—son of Edward and Hannah Winslow, born February 20, 1746; died May 13, 1815, aged 69 years. By his wife Mary he had a numerous family, including Daniel Murray, Mary, Thomas Aston Coffin, Penelope, Edward, Hannah, Sarah Ann, Christiana Bannister, John Francis Wentworth, Eliza Chipman, Catherine.
6. John Francis Wentworth—son of Judge Edward and Mary Winslow, born at Kingsclear, New Brunswick, in 1793, died at Woodstock, N. B., October 14, 1859, aged 66 years. He married Sept. 25, 1823, Jane Caroline, youngest daughter of Andrew Rainsford, Esq., Receiver General. Their children were Francis Edward, John Coffin, Mary, Edward, Elizabeth Rainsford, Wentworth, Thomas Bradshaw and Edward Byron.

A few words with reference to these several generations will not be amiss.

(1) Edward Winslow of Mayflower fame, the first ancestor in America, joined the Pilgrims at Leyden, Holland, where in 1618 he married Elizabeth Barker. Not long afterwards he and his young wife left the comforts of a luxurious home to encounter the perils of an ocean voyage in a frail little ship. It was on the 22nd of December, 1620, the Mayflower arrived at Plymouth, and the little Pilgrim Colony began life anew in a wilderness whose solitudes were broken only by the cries of the wild beasts, or perhaps the still more fearful war whoop of the savage. The poor young wife died a few months after she came to America. Edward Winslow, as already stated, was the first Governor of Plymouth Colony and no individual contributed more to its establishment and success than he. He combined great energy with an extensive knowledge of men and affairs. He was sent to England four times as agent of the Colonies. He died in 1654 at sea, on his return from the West Indies, where he had been sent by Oliver Cromwell as a commissioner to superintend an expedition to the Spanish West Indies.

For further information respecting Governor Edward Winslow and his immediate descendants, the reader is referred to W. T. Davis' "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth." See also Wm. S. Russell's "Guide to Plymouth," pp. 238-240.

(2) Governor Winslow's son Josiah, like his father, filled the office of Governor of the Plymouth Colony, and was a man of much influence and ability.

(3) Hon. Isaac Winslow, of Marshfield, filled various positions of public trust. He had several children, whose names are of special interest to the people of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia; among them were John, Elizabeth and Edward. The eldest of these, General John Winslow, is well known for the part he was called upon to play in the Expulsion of the Acadians. The journal of his doings in that connection will be found in the Collections of the Nova Scotia Historical Society, Vol. III., pp. 71-196. Gen. John Winslow's son Pelham was a Loyalist, and at the evacuation of Boston in 1776 came with the army to Halifax; he married Joanna, daughter of Gideon White. Elizabeth Winslow, sister of General John Winslow, married Colonel Benjamin Marston, and their son Benjamin was an active Loyalist, who at the peace in 1783 was employed as Chief Engineer in laying out the Town of Shelburne, and afterwards was the first Sheriff of Northumberland County.

(4) Edward Winslow, brother of General John Winslow, was an accomplished scholar and gentleman of fine presence and engaging manners. He was a generous host, and his mansion was often filled with a distinguished company, the aristocracy of the Old Colony. The old Winslow Mansion is still standing on North Street, Plymouth, within a stone's throw of Plymouth Rock; the following description is condensed from the Boston Herald of March 24, 1889.

The house is a large square one with fluted Corinthian corners and an air of old English solidity, which at once marks it as a residence of some former leader of the Colony. It was built about the year 1754 by Edward Winslow, a great grandson of Governor Winslow, who purchased the land from Consider Howland (a grandson of John Howland, one of the Mayflower Pilgrims) and is still commonly called "the Winslow house." The lofty lindens by the front door were planted in 1760 by the fair hands of Edward Winslow's daughter. A big hall-way runs from front to back of the house and on either side are lofty square rooms. Up stairs, in the front, the rooms are very high, with high wainscoating, deep recessed window seats and queer old-fashioned mouldings around the ceilings. At the front of the house is divided into two stories, while the rear contains three. The house was confiscated and sold after the Winslows abandoned it at the time of the Revolution.

Edward Winslow was a man of note in the community. From 1757 to 1762 he was one of a Board of select-men, and in 1760 was Treasurer of the colony. In conjunction with his son, Edward Winslow, Jr., he held the offices of Collector of the port, Registrar of Probate and Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas. Deprived of his offices in 1775, he solicited permission to remove to New York, and in 1781 joined the British garrison in that City, the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Henry Clinton, allowing him a pension of £200 per annum, with rations and fuel. On August 30, 1783, he embarked at New York, with his family and servants, and on September 14th arrived at Halifax, where he died a few months later at the age of 72 years. He was accorded a public funeral, the pall bearers being Governor Wentworth, Lieut. Governor Fanning, Hon. Arthur Goold, Brigadier General John Small, Hon. Foster Hutchinson and Henry Lloyd, Esq. The funeral was attended by Governor Parr, the General commanding the Forces, and many prominent officials, including the Executive Council of Nova Scotia.

The tomb of Edward Winslow will be found in the upper right hand corner of old St. Paul's grave-yard, opposite Government House, in Halifax. The stone is a flat slab, gray in color, with the following inscription:

> "Sacred to the memory of Edward Winslow, Esquire, who died the 9th of June, 1784, in the 72nd year of his age. Descended from a race of ancestors, Governors of the ancient Colony of Plymouth, he in no one instance degenerated from their loyalty or virtue, but while he filled the first offices, became as conspicuous by public integrity as he was amiable in the milder shades of private life. Although his fortunes suffered shipwreck in the storm of Civil War, and he forsook his native country from an attachment to his sovereign, neither his cheerful manners nor the calm reward of conscious rectitude forsook him in old age. He died as he lived, beloved by his friends and respected by his enemies."

The widow of the elder Edward Winslow survived her husband for twelve years. She died and is buried at Fredericton, and the following is the epitaph on her tombstone:

"Sacred to the memory of Hannah Winslow, widow of Edward Winslow, Esq., formerly of Plymouth, in the Province of Massachusetts Bay, who died on the 23rd day of May, 1795, whose unaffected piety, peculiar dignity of manners, serenity of temper and benevolence of heart rendered her justly and universally respected to her latest hour. This tribute is erected by her children."

(5) Edward Winslow, son of the above, afterwards Judge of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, was a graduate of Harvard in 1765. He was one of the founders of the Old Colony Club, and his address in 1770 was the first ever delivered at an anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims. He was his father's assistant in the various offices which the latter held, and was also Naval Officer of the port. At the breaking out of the Revolution he was loyal to the crown. When Lord Percy led the expedition to relieve Major Pitcairn at Lexington on April 19th, 1775, young Winslow was his guide. He received from General Gage the appointment of Collector of the Port of Boston and Registrar of Probate for Suffolk County. On the evacuation he went to Halifax, carrying with him all the Records, and also the Royal Coat of Arms from the Council Chamber. The Records were returned in good order after the peace, but the Coat of Arms remained and now hangs on the walls of Trinity Church, St. John.

Sir William Howe appointed him Secretary of the Board of Officers, of which Lord Percy was President, for the distribution of donations to the troops, sent out from England by private munificence. Returning to New York he was appointed Muster-Master-General of the Loyalist forces with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

" vincial Troops taken into His Majesty's pay within the Colonies lying in (Signed) "Stephen Kemble, Deputy Adjutant Gen."

He was actively engaged throughout the war and had deputy muster-masters at various centres such as Halifax, Rhode Island, New York, Philadelphia, and in Florida and the Carolinas. In 1779 he commanded the Associated Refugees at Rhode Island and served in two campaigns. At the close of the war he was sent to Nova Scotia by Sir Guy Carleton, to make arrangements for the disbanding and settlement of the Loyalist Regiments. He was at this time appointed Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in Nova Scotia. He was largely instrumental in promoting the division of the old Province of Nova Scotia, and had General Fox accepted the post offered him of Governor of New Brunswick, Edward Winslow would have been our first Provincial Secretary. He was appointed a member of His Majesty's Council for the Province. He held in addition the offices of Surrogate, and Surveyor of the King's Woods for New Brunswick under Sir John Wentworth and was the presiding Justice of the Court of Common Pleas for the County of York.

It was not, however, until he was appointed a Judge of the Supreme Court in 1807 that he received the reward justly his due for long continued and disinterested public services. The following year he was, for a short time, Administrator of the Government as Senior member of the Executive Council. He died at his residence "King's Wood" on May 13, 1815.

A beautiful double light Memorial Window has been lately placed in St. Mary's Chapel, Chatham, N. B., which bears the following inscription:

> "To the Glory of God and in Memory of the Honorable Edward Winslow, Judge of the Supreme Court, and one of the Loyalists of the Province. Died May 13, A. D., 1815, AE. 69 years. He was a descendant of Governor Winslow of Plymouth, Mass. —Loyal to Church and King—Faithful to all duties of his public and private life—A good Son, an affectionate Husband and Father, and a True Friend. This window was erected by his grandson, F. E. Winslow."

(6) John Francis Wentworth Winslow in his boyhood was a clever lad, as is shown by the fact that when but nine or ten years of age he occasionally acted in the capacity of amanuensis for his father, whose hands were not infrequently crippled by severe attacks of rheumatic gout. Among the "Winslow papers" of the years 1802-3 there are some in his boyish hand. When about 14 years of age he was gazetted an Ensign in the Nova Scotia Fencibles, and shortly afterwards joined the regiment at Newfoundland. Finding that the influences brought to bear upon him in this Corps were undesirable—many of the officers being dissipated—he was by his father's influence transfered in 1810 to the 41st Regiment in Upper Canada. He served in the war of 1812, and was with General Brock at the taking of Detroit and at the battle of Queenstown Heights. He displayed great coolness and courage at the unfortunate battle of Sackett's Harbor. At the close of the war in 1814, on the disbanding of his regiment he was placed on half pay. He returned to New Brunswick and was with his father in his last illness. He married Sept. 25, 1823, Jane Caroline Rainsford, a lady who was universally beloved and admired by all who had the privilege of knowing her. She survived her husband many years and died April 4th, 1891, at the age of 90 years and 6 months. The Rainsford family were noted for their longevity. Mrs Winslow's mother, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Cummings, was the mother of sixteen children, several of whom lived to a great age.

John Francis Wentworth Winslow was a namesake of the Governor of Nova Scotia, in fact Sir John and Lady Wentworth were his God parents, and always took the most affectionate interest in him. When the County of Carleton was organized in 1832, Mr. Winslow was appointed High Sheriff, the tenure of office to be for life or during good behaviour. He held office until 1856, discharging the duties, which were often of an arduous and sometimes dangerous nature, to the satisfaction both of the government and of the public. The County of Carleton at first extended from Eel River to the St. Francis, a distance of more than 150 miles. During the period of the so called "Aroostook war" the duties of his position called for the exercise of great tact combined with firmness and courage. Sheriff Winslow possessed these qualities in an eminent degree and managed to maintain friendly relations with the American authorties on the border, continuing the while to exercise jurisdiction in the "disputed territory" until the Aroostook valley was awarded to the United States by the Washington Treaty in 1842. Another ordeal through which he passed was during the time of the Woodstock riots in 1847, when his manly and impartial conduct bore good fruit in maintaining the supremacy of the law and restoring good fellowship.

In the year 1856 Sheriff Winslow was removed from office for political reasons. He was reappointed the next year, but again displaced. This occasioned much feeling on the part of his friends, and was a sore disappointment to the Sheriff personally. Some two hundred letters expressive of sympathy and esteem were sent in from all parts of the country signed by the best adherents of both political parties. At least a thousand individuals joined in the remonstrance.

Sheriff Winslow did not long survive his retirement to private life. He died at his residence at Upper Woodstock in October, 1859, aged 66 years. As a citizen, he was the soul of honor, one of those men of whom it might be said "his word was as good as his bond." He was a faithful and devoted member of the Church. His mortal body lies beside that of his wife beneath the shadow of a lofty elm in the old churchyard at Woodstock, and the monument erected to his memory bears the inscription:

> "A staunch friend, a generous opponent, a faithful official; in honor unstained; of loyalty unimpeachable, and respected even by his enemies."

Seven of his family survived him, five of whom are still living in New Brunswick, viz.:—Francis Edward Winslow, Manager of the Bank of Montreal at Chatham for 32 years past; Mary and Wentworth Winslow of Woodstock; Edward Byron Winslow, Barrister, of Fredericton, and Thomas Bradshaw Winslow, clerk in the Crown Land Office, Fredericton.

John Coffin Winslow, for many years Post Master at Woodstock, died at that place a few years ago.

EXPLANATORY NOTE.

For the selections contained in the pages that follow the responsibility rests solely with the writer of this Note. It was manifestly impossible—and if possible not desirable—to copy the whole of the immense collection of "Winslow Papers," containing as it does hundreds of letters and documents of all degrees of interest and importance. With such an abundance of materials there was of course much difficulty in making choice of what should appear in these pages. The writer could only endeavor to use his best judgment. This he has done.

In not a few of the letters it will be found that parts are omitted—the omissions being indicated by asterisks or other marks. Such omissions were necessary in order to keep the work within bounds. Examination of the original letters will, however, show that the portions omitted are usually either lacking in historic interest, or are merely repetitions of that which is told elsewhere.

The instances in which it has seemed advisable for any other reason to omit portions of letters of a private and confidential nature are surprisingly few, in view of the fact that the correspondents were numbered by the score and included all classes of men. As for Winslow himself, few men have so little reason to be ashamed of anything they may have written as he.

WINSLOW PAPERS.

Jonathan Sewall to Edward Winslow.

Jan'ry 10, 1776.

Dear Ned:

* * * * * * * * * *

I am out of all patience at hearing, from you and others, the accounts of your Sufferings—what Excuse can be Form'd for a British Admiral, who, with 30 or 40 Ships under his Command, suffers a Garrison to starve tho' surrounded with plenty of every Necessary within the reach of his Ships; who tamely & supinely looks on and sees Fishing Schooners, Whale-boats and Canoes riding triumphant under the Muzzles of his Guns, & carrying off every Supply destined for your relief. Heaven grant you patience, & reward every one according to the Deeds done in the Body. I can tell you for your comfort, that he is cursed as hard on this side of the Water, as he can be on yours—he has now no Advocate here & I believe will scarcely find a Friend in England upon his return. I hope by this time, you are relieved in some measure, as out of the great Number of Ships w'ch have sailed loaded with provisions & Coal, it will be hard indeed, if some don't get in safe, in spite of the Vigilance of the Rebels, & the Inactivity of Trunnion. I verily believe your Sufferings are drawing near a period—you will undoubtedly have, early in the Spring, an Army of 40,000 & a Fleet of upwards of 70 Ships, & then the Mettle of the Rebels will be try'd—hitherto their successes have been owing to their having none to oppose them—the poor infatuated Wretches, as yet, know Nothing of War—they have been treated as froward Children heretofore, but now, they will be treated as incorrigible Traitors. I pity, I feel for the Majority, but, for their Sakes, I wish the vengeance of G. Britain may speedily overtake their base Deluders.

I wish you were here Ned, with Money enough in your pocket—you can have no idea what a noble Country this is for a Gentleman—every Thing is upon an immense Scale—whatever I have seen in my own Country, is all Miniature, yankee-puppet-show. I was at Court the Day before yesterday, being the Queen's Birth Day, (I am now at the 20th) & I believe in my Conscience, the prime Cost of the Dresses I saw there, was sufficient to have purchased our whole Continent—the Wealth of this Country is truly astonishing, but unless a Gentleman can get his Share of it, he has no Business here—£600 per An. is but as a Drop in the Ocean —the Man is lost—he is Nothing—less than Nothing and Vanity—& his Contemplation of his own comparative Littleness, is Vexation of Spirit—but, humiliating as it is, I wish to stay here for the Sake of giving my Boys a Chance for the grand prizes which every professsion presents to view—however, I fear, the cold, inhospitable, Lilliputian Region of Halifax will finally bring me up; for as to Massachusetts Bay, I wish it well, but I wish never to see it again till I return at the Millenium—No, believe me, Ned, the Mad Conduct of my Countrymen has given me a Dose I shall never get over—God mend them, & bless them—bnt let me never, never be cursed with a residence among them again. I hate the Climate where Rebellion and Fanaticism are ingendered—& I would shun it as I would a country infested with the plague—from all which, good Lord, deliver me. I thank you for writing to me, & beg for such favors every opportunity & in return, you shall have frequent Scribblings from, dear Ned,

Your faithful Friend &c.

Jon. Sewall.*

Appointment as Muster-Master-General.

Head Quarters, New York,
30th July, 1776.

Edward Winslow, Esq., to be Muster-Master-General to the Provincial Troops taken into His Majesty's pay within the Colonies lying on the Atlantic Ocean from Nova Scotia to West Florida inclusive.

Stephen Kemble,† Deputy Adjutant General.

*Jonathan Sewell was a graduate of Harvard and attorney general of Massachusetts, and, prior to the Revolution, the intimate friend of John Adams. He was eloquent and gifted. His estate was confiscated by the Americans. He went to England in 1775. He held the appointment of judge of the admiralty for Nova Scotia from 1769 until his death. He came out to New Brunswick in 1788 and died at St. John Sept. 26, 1796. (See letter in this book under date 27th Sept., 1796). The elder Ward Chipman was his protege. His wife, Esther Quincy, was sister to the wife of John Hancock, the first signer of the declaration of independence. He died in Montreal Jan. 21, 1810. Jonathan Sewell's eldest son and namesake became chief justice of Quebec.

†Stephen Kemble was born in New Brunswick, in New Jersey, in 1740. At the age of seventeen he was an ensign in the 44th regiment. He served in the French war, and rose by successive gradations of rank until he was colonel in the 60th, or Royal American Regiment of Foot, and was deputy adjutant general, in 1772, of the British forces in North America. In 1805 he retired from the army. He received a grant of 20,000 acres of land on the St. John river, which included a large portion of the parishes of Hampstead and Greenwich. He died in 1822, aged 81 years. See article by Jonas Howe on "Kemble Manor" in New Brunswick Magazine for September, 1898.

Edward Winslow to Col. Patterson, Adjutant General.

New York, 6th, Nov'r, 1776.

Sir:—At the request of Brig. Gen. Delancey I attended at Hampstead on Long Island the 28th ulto. & mustered all those who have enlisted in his Brigade and were not included in my returns of the 4th inst. I cannot make a better apology for any errors in my method of proceeding than by observing that all the battalions which are to form this brigade are at present incomplete, & I am not able to obtain from Mr. Porter, or others any precedent or form for such partial musters; I am therefore reduced to the necessity of establishing a kind of system for myself and I have endeavored to calculate my reports so as to answer those purposes which you were pleased to tell me were expected viz., "ascertaining the whole number of effectives & also the particular numbers raised by each Captain." When any one of the battalions is perfect I shall engross the companies of which it is formed & return one regular roll.

I most humbly beg to trouble you once more on the subject of the donations* in my custody—Among 'em are 4,000 flannel waistcoats, 7 or 8,000 yards fine warm baize, a considerable quantity woolen caps, mittens and gloves, and 12 Hogsheads shoes all of which are very scarce articles here & would be particularly useful to the army at this time. I have made several applications to Earl Percy for a meeting of the board of General Officers, that a distribution might be made. The fear of incurring his Lordship's displeasure prevents me from repeating my request. At present the goods remain in store subject to some risque & totally useless. If I can be favor'd with any directions respecting them I shall immediately obey—I am with great respect,

Yr. most obed't & h'ble serv't,

E. Winslow.

Col. Patterson.

E. Bridgham to Edward Winslow.

December 5th, 1776.

Dear Sir,—

I have sent you pr. John all the papers you required.

Major Rogers, Captains Grant and Campbell and another Captain who is raising another independent Company were all here yesterday enquiring for you to muster their men. They were all extremely anxious to have it done as till then they cannot receive pay, &c. Major Rogers sent an officer to you Express, whether he found you, you can best tell—

*These donations were provided by generous individuals in England. See references in this book under date January 12, 1778; also under Edward Winslow's memorial, Dec. 28, 1780.

If it could with propriety be done I would muster them for you with all my heart. General Howe sailed this day for Amboy with all his Family & Baggage. It is reported that Gen. Cornwallis is at Prince-Town within forty miles of Philadelphia.

A vessel arrived yesterday from Halifax. Reports by her are that a considerable body of rebels have landed in that Province and have besieged Fort Cumberland. The people in Halifax are in great consternation. It is said Gen'l Massey has requested of Gen. Howe a reinforcement of 2,000 men. * * *

Capt. Grant has this minute called upon me, says that Capt. McKenzie is going to the Jerseys, refuses paying him till his company is mustered.

Flushing, February 6th, 1777.

Dear Sir—Lieutenant Colonel Pattinson† is arrived here last night, and has brought me a copy of the General orders of Monday in which the General has appointed him to my corps. As it will take up some time to arrange matters with him respecting the regiment, I am apt to think I cannot have the pleasure of seeing you in New York before Saturday morning. * * * I have just rec'd an express order from the neighborhood of Rie that ninety odd fine young fellows are lying hid at a lady's farm. I have therefore ordered Capt. Hoyt hither without delay, and I am about arming the new schooner with swivells, &c., which my people cut out of Rayway river in the Jerseys.

We all met yesterday at Mr. Cumlines and spent a very chearfull day. Your company would have added exceedingly to our jollity, but suppose from a multiplicity of business you forgot your promise.

Adieu and believe me, with the greatest amity
Dear Sir
Your most obedient & most humble Servant,

P. S. My best compliments to my worthy friend McKenzie.

Sir,—

These acquaint you that your Father Edward returning to Plymouth, by a Fall dislocated his shoulder but soon had it restor'd. Mrs. Solomon Davis died at Plymouth last Thursday.

When Mr. Temple returned to Boston he informed me that you said the Files and Records of our Court of Probate* were carried to Halifax. I beg to know of you what is become of them & also that you would use your interest that by some means the Files of that Court may be had by us, for I believe they were carried away from Boston through your kindness. They can be of no service to you or your Friends, but are of very great importance to us & doubt not but you will do what you or your superiors shall judge proper to be done in the premises and you will greatly oblige many Thousands beside

Gov. Montfort Browne to Edward Winslow.

Sir,—I pay'd you a visit yesterday morning to acquaint you that your presence is much wanted at my head quarters in order to muster about eighty or ninety men which are a part of those in whom I place particular confidence—it is possible I may receive many more ere your arrival here, as they only waited for Captain Hoyt's armed sloop; Governor Wentworth wishes you would call upon him in your way hither as he purposes doing me the honor of a visit, and waits at home for that purpose.

A Company of Gentlemen, each of good fortune, are in their way hither to joyn me, they decline pay, or any emolument whatsoever, some of them are already arrived, and all of my acquaintance. I shall request the General's permission to put them all into one Company: Such spirited conduct deserves applause. I did intend writing on this subject to my worthy friend McKenzie, but upon second thoughts, suppose he wishes I would not trouble him with matters out of his line—I am in vast haste, Sir, Long Island, 31st Oct'r, 1777.

Sir,—I this day communicated the order of the Com'r in Chief to Brig. Gen'l Skinner relative to the men inlisted by Mr. Maddox—I also paraded Maddox company at Decker's ferry & discharged therefrom 32 men whose names are in the list enclosed, all of whom acknowledged that they were taken from the prison ships & that they were formerly in rebel privateers, &c.—these I committed to a guard of 25 men who had orders to escort 'em to the ships from which they were taken. It was my intention to have mustered all the battalions in Brig. Gen'l Skinner's Brigade, of which I had given previous notice to the respective commanding officers, but on my arrival at Staten Island I found it impracticable. Before the late storm they were encamped on the Hill near the redoubts in huts of their own forming, roofed with poles and covered with earth. By the violence & long continuance of the rain those huts were entirely destroyed & the men reduced to the necessity of seeking shelter wherever they could find it. They are now scattered over almost every part of the island, & very many of 'em are sick with agues, rheumatics and other disorders. In such a state it was impossible to collect them. I therefore requested Brig. Gen. Skinner to give me notice when he was ready for a general muster. As soon as I receive information from him I shall attend. * * *

I have been anxiously expecting to hear from you since my last which was written & sent while you remain'd at the Hook, but am fearful your passage was equally tedious & disagreeable with your stay here, as several Arrivals within these few days give no Intelligence of you, we have however at last the pleasing account of the reduction of the Forts on the Delaware, which have so long been the object of general expectation, which will, I hope, facilitate your immediate accession to Head Quarters. Nothing of great importance has occurred here since you sailed, *what circumstances are worth relating I will endeavor to recollect. For this fortnight past the Rebels have regularly every night landed in small parties on Staten Island, generally without effect, sometimes taking off two or three of the Picket Guards stationed along the shore, this conduct however is very distressing to the troops there, as they are kept constantly alarmed, & have not during all that time had one night in bed. Last Wednesday night they seem to have meditated a serious attack. Gen'l Dickinson landed with 14 or 15,00 men, with some pieces of artillery, but upon discovering some Frigates coming down early in the morning, upon the signal Gun for that purpose being fired, he returned to the Jerseys, taking off a Lieut. Buskirk & a few men of Buskirk's Corps:† as I learn from general Report. Gen. Clinton went down, but returned early in the afternoon on Thursday. At the same time a party attacked somewhere near Kingsbridge, but to as little purpose I believe, tho' I have not yet been able to learn the particulars.—On Tuesday night a party of the Villians landed at Bloomingdale,‡ & after having plundered, set fire to Gen'l Delancey's house, and took off one or two of the guard which he kept there, from the first Battalion, who being employed upon working upon his farm, in the day time, of course slept all night, which prevented a seasonable Discovery of their intention. About the same time two or three Persons were intercepted in an attempt to make their escape from the City, who being searched and examined, have led to the discovery of a plot formed by a number of the Inhabitants, to set fire to the City upon an attack being made from without; thirteen are said to be found out & 3 or 4 sentenced to be hanged;—since this discovery, whether in consequence of any connection between them I know not, all the rebel officers

*With the army under General Howe to Philadelphia, where there were some Loyalist corps to be mustered.

†This was the fourth battalion of the Loyalist corps, called the New Jersey Volunteers, the commander of which was Lieut. Colonel Abraham Van Buskirk. His commission is dated Nov. 16, 1776. The majority of the corps were of Dutch extraction. Col. Van Buskirk was the first mayor of Shelburne, N. S., but many of his men settled in the parish of Kingsclear and others at Fredericton.

‡Bloomingdale, on Manhattan Island, was the country seat of General Oliver DeLancey. It was at that time in the suburbs of New York but has long since been incorporated in the city limits. The incident here referred to is related in detail in Jones' Loyalist History of New York. Brig. Gen. Oliver DeLancey in 1776 raised for the king's service three battalions, which are mentioned in this letter. (See Jones' Loyalist Hist. of N. Y., vol. 1, p. 264.). At the peace in 1783 the first and second battalions received a large grant of land at Woodstock, N. B. The Griffiths, Smiths and others of that place are descended from officers of that corps. Most of the third battalion of DeLancey's brigade settled in Queens and Sunbury counties.

on this Island were surprised about 2 in the morn'g a few days ago and hurried off by the assistance of the militia & the Volunteer Company called together for that purpose, & sent on board ship; not one of them, to our great joy is left.—The Battalion from Satauket* is now stationed about 3 miles below Col. Ludlows, on the north side of the plain, & that from Huntington at Jamaica, which saved me great trouble in the muster; since their removal the Rebels have landed at Huntington & taken off some Friends to Government. A general attack is daily threatened, & the destruction of the City warmly anticipated, as we could collect by People that have come in; but I think we shall be quite safe if the reinforcement talk'd of, arrives from Gen'l Howe's Army. There have been & still continue frequent Desertions from the Provincial Corps at Kings-bridge;—Genl. Skinner's Brigade† is not yet reduced to three Battalions, as we expected; I wish to know if it is a measure determined upon, as in that case, I shall defer entering them in the Books, till it takes place. I shall enclose you an exact State of the Provincial Troops, from the last muster, which I have just completed, you will observe those detach'd to the Chasseurs, make an additional casuality, this I tho't best, as that company seems now to be established, & it gives a very erroneous idea of some of the Battalions, to have those thus detach'd, considered as a part of their present effective strength—particularly the independent Companies, as you will see by inspection. By comparing this State of the Provincial Troops with that you carried with you, you will see the "total inlisted" in this, owing to the recruits, considerably exceeds them in that, & yet the "total Privates present," falls short; this is owing to those in the additional Casuality being considered as present, in the former State. Most of the abstracts for pay, are signed, if you should not return soon, which I anxiously hope you will, I shall wish for your directions with respect to the next muster.

*The third battalion of DeLancey's brigade was commanded by Colonel Gabriel G. Ludlow, with Lieut. Col. Richard Hewlett second in command. The men of this battalion were nearly all natives of Queens County, Long Island, N. Y. The battalion stationed at Huntingdon at this time was the first, commanded by Brigadier Gen. DeLancey in person, with Lieut. Col. John Harris Cruger as second in command. The second battalion was at Kingsbridge, above New York. It was commanded by Colonel George Brewerton, with Lieut. Colonel Stephen DeLancey (the general's son) second in command.

†The New Jersey Volunteers comprised at first six battalions. The corps was raised about the latter part of the year 1776 by the efforts of Brig. Gen. Cortlandt Skinner. The corps was known as "Skinner's Greens," probably on account of the color of uniform. Officers and men were chiefly natives of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York. In the engagement at Staten Island, Aug. 22, 1777, the brigade lost quite heavily, and in consequence the first and fifth battalions were amalgamated in April, 1778. The third and sixth battalions were consolidated into one about the same time. Finally in 1781 the second battalion was merged with the others, thus reducing the original six battalions to three. These at the close of the war were commanded by Lieut. Colonels Stephen DeLancey, Isaac Allen and Abraham Van Buskirk.

I have, agreeable to your directions, waited on Gov. Wentworth, & presented him a state of the Provincial Troops, with which he appeared highly gratified, & was induced to say things which I had no right to expect; he made such unsolicited offers of assistance upon his arrival in England, as encouraged me to make known my situation exactly: & he has kindly promised to make particular inquiry into the cause of my difficulties. His civility was beyond expression, and as I am generally embarassed on such occasions, I fear I appeared very awkward in expressing my gratitude; I wish if you have an opportunity, you would let him know the peculiarly grateful sense I entertain of his kindness; as it is the only return that will ever be in my power to make.

Bridgham was mistaken in the account he first gave me of the Donations, he since tells me that, Genls. Vaughan, Robertson & Jones as a board appointed the person I mentioned, as knowing best to whom to distribute them; who has since taken them all into his possession. * * *.

Edward Winslow to Committee on Relief of Soldiers, Etc.

Philadelphia, 12 January 1778.

Gentlemen,

It was my intention to have Transmitted Your Committee every transaction of the Board of General Officers (relatives to the distribution of those articles sent for the relief of Soldiers serving in America &c) as they occur. This was practicable while a Majority of the members who compos'd the Board, remain'd in Garrison; but the separation which took place immediately on our landing in the Province of New York, render'd a meeting impossible & prevented me from receiving such instructions as I suppos'd necessary.

I am now directed by the Commander in Chief to furnish you with the best information which my present situation will admit, & I have ordered the Store Keeper at New York (who is in Possession of all the papers) to transmit a particular account of the receipts & issues from our leaving Nova Scotia to the present time.

[Note by the Editor.—The goods that remained undistributed were shipped to Staten Island. The cheese was divided among the British regiments; 5000 lbs. tobacco among the foreign troops; the molasses and essence of spruce made into beer and issued to the soldiers at New York. On arrival of the "Catherine & Richmond" from England with another donation, there was a second general distribution. The distressed widows and orphans were supplied with shoes, hose, flannel, etc. The money donated also was judiciously used. Winslow closes his letter as follows.]

I have Generally performed in person the pleasing Task of distributing the Donations & of Course have had the best opportunity of observing the effects, & I think I may venture to assert that the most Sanguine expectations of the Generous Subscribers to this Charity must be fully Answer'd. Many objects* have been snatch'd from extreme wretchedness & made comfortable, and many friendless Orphans now live to acknowledge your Bounty who without it might not have existed.

I flatter myself that my particular account will meet your approbation—and I beg leave to subscribe my Self,

Your most faithfull &
Obed't Serv't,
Ed. Winslow,
Sec'ry to the Board of Gen'l. Officers.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

Valley of Hadad, Feb'y 15, 1778.

My dear Friend,—

One Mr. Shenstone in a book of his, which I once read, says "that the best time to answer the letters from a friend is the moment of the receipt of them, because then the intelligence received and the warmth of Friendship most forcibly co-operate." * * *

Never was female weakness more conspicuous upon the most interesting interview, than my sensations were joyous, melancholy, calm, immoderate & confused at the perusal of the most unexpected yet pleasing letters that I ever received; unexpected because I imagined the first egg shell that could float from the Delaware to the Hook would have owned you its passenger, and pleasing as they acquaint me with incidents with respect to a Friend whose interest and happiness is very justly the first object of my wishes and attention. * * *

Friendship, in this very self-interested period of the world, or perhaps more properly that part of the world where we are at present amusing ourselves is a name almost exploded and I suppose, with half mankind around us, would be laughed at if placed in competition with interest on any occasion,—but on this as in many other instances I value it the more for its rarity and thank God I am not so improved in the polite maxims of the present age as to have forgot the old fashioned principles I learned at home. * * *

I am glad your envy of the retirement of the Valley (of Hadad) is like to operate so forcibly as to induce you to partake of it. I think you would not be disappointed if your situation is such as you describe. My dear fellow you need not enjoin it upon me to write by every opportunity. I can with you say "this cursed itch for scribbling" will never suffer me to neglect you. * * *

It is with pleasure I inform you that Polly & Murray* have been in high health ever since you sailed. Not a return or even a symptom of those complaints which used to be so frequent and were so distressing to me. * * *

In your letter No. 3, comes a new subject and a d——d affair it is & first let me thank God we did not hear of it till you were so far recoverd. What astonishes me is that the Villain has not been discovered. If he has been, it is still more extraordinary that discipline should be so far relaxed upon any prudential or political considerations as to suffer so flagrant a piece of Villainy to pass without its due punishment.

I hope you have not concealed the worst. I tremble to think of the danger you have been in. I fear you are now so used to these hair breadth escapes that you will think a shield will always be supplied by your propitious stars. * * *

But before I quit the subject I must tell you that the most ludicrous turn is given to the whole affair in the city. They say you fought with a post and wounded yourself and mention the story of jumping into the sloop—had you not written so seriously I should not have suspected it was just as you have related.

I am glad you have had an opportunity of providing for Richard tho' I believe few masters would have parted with so good a servant, especially when in so great need of one, on such considerations. As for your Dutch "Valet de Chambre," I think he will find his match here for stupidity, slowness, dirtiness and honesty in an English blue-coat-boy that Tom Moore† inlisted for a Drummer, whom I have taken to clean shoes and shovel snow. * * *

Polly is wishing to see you and hopes this will never find you at Philadelphia.

Your unalterable, affectionate & faithful Friend,
Chip.

Edward Winslow to Robert Hallowell.

Since I wrote you from Philadelphia I have rec'd yours of 15th Jan'ry, for which I am extremely oblig'd. Your acknowledgment of a continuance of a cordial esteem for me gratifies me vastly.

The hint given me with respect to the tidesmen shall be attended to as far as possible. Altho' convinced by my own frequent experience of the ingratitude of mankind in general, I have not yet learned to neglect the distressed when its in my power to relieve 'em. That I may in some future day want what I now lose by assisting others, is an idea which I never indulge. It would be a species of blasphemy in me. It would argue a distrust of that Providence, which has hitherto dealt out favors to me most profusely. In all the variety of vicissitudes which I've experienced since I quitted peace and contentment with the best of friends in the obscure village of P[lymouth], I've never wanted such comforts as my neighbors enjoyed. Damn me if I believe I ever shall.

I've lately heard from our family by a letter from my father and Sally, dated 5th March last sealed for the first time in these three years— they are all well. You'll envy me when I tell you that I've had several chances lately of remitting money to them. My father has contrived to negotiate the matter by receiving cash of the prisoners at Boston and drawing on me for the amount. These orders I have paid with more alacrity than I ever rec'd money from the same good man to discharge a steward's Bill at Harvard College after being dun'd a Quarter for it. Is it not peculiarly hard that the old gentleman should be poor? Yet true it is that had not an accidental sum from me prevented he must have sold his house at P[lymouth].

Sally in her letter most seriously regrets that her dear Mr. Hallowell's clothes pass the house every Sunday on the back of a nasty great cooper, and poor Mr. Savage's, she says, were purchased and are worn by Tommy Spooner.

At the auction Sally's friends attended and bought some few things of yours, among which is a miniature picture of your sister (she supposes). It is kept among her precious relics, and will be carefully preserved. My pincushion too, poor thing—merely because it was found in bad company —was condemned to be sold and I suppose now hangs next to the new-dyed petticoat of some indelicate fat fisherwoman's wife. How the Devil my pincushion could come among your things I cannot possibly imagine. In some future day you shall give me satisfaction on this subject.

Had I any news I dare not communicate it. Letters in these precarious times are subject to such variety of accidents that one trembles at every line lest it may fall into the hands of the malicious, be misconstrued, &c.

There is nothing in my power to command that I would not give for one hour's conversation with my most loved friends of the Monday night club. Not even a Peter* should interrupt me, nor should the orders of a Coffin silence me for a moment. Many things would I tell you so completely ridiculous as to make you laugh, but many more so tragical as to draw tears from the stubbornest of you.

What effect the late maneuvres of administration will produce cannot be conjectured. I believe, and am happy in the idea, that the Americans will not accept the terms. They have treated Lord North's speech and the acts with their usual contempt & indignity—they've been publicly burnt in Jersey, &c. Should these insolent vagabonds in consideration of their present distresses be induced to listen to the proposal made by government, I really think the American friends of government are in a situation most peculiarly awkward. For my own part I feel no anxiety. I am in an office the execution of which is frequently hazardous; I have hitherto performed my duty faithfully, and will continue to do it altho' Hell's in front and perdition in my rear. I therefore fear no consequences and ask no favors. But when I cast an eye on some venerable figures and consider their services and their sufferings, and know that they are unnoticed and unforgotten, by Heaven I feel a noble indignation—and it rises and increases sweetly when I observe scoundrels who have just emerged from the very centre of rebellion, fellows who have fill'd chairs at Congress—persecuted the loyal members of committees, and commanded Rebel regiments in times of action, now pushed most rapidly into places confidential and lucrative.* But I am growing imprudently scurrilous.

Tell Mrs. H. that I have not—nor will I forget my obligations to her; make my most sincere respects to her and to your brothers and Capt. Bishop's families, and to such other of my American friends as may fall in your way.

Believe me, most affectionately & sincerely

Yours,

E. Winslow.

Pelham Winslow to Edward Winslow.

Newport, May 30, 1778.

Dear Sir:—I received yours by Doct'r Wightman with the order inclosed which he has since discharged. * * *

Mr. Leonard, who went from this garrison with the fleet to receive Gen. Burgoyne's army, by stress of weather was driven into Plymouth harbour, where he obtained permission to supply your father with two quarter casks of wine. He has again sailed for Boston with a fleet laden with provisions, by which opportunity we sent some clothing and other necessaries for your patients consigned to the care of Martin Brimner Esq'r, which we flatter ourselves will be safely delivered. * * *

There is about a year's pay due to me as Fort Major of Castle William, whereof I presume the warrants are lodged in the paymaster's office, I have drawn an order in your favor to receive it. * * *

The rebels are still persecuting our unhappy friends. In a late letter of Mrs. Blowers to her husband she writes that even your father has been called upon to turn out as a common soldier, hire a man in his room, or go to gaol. I have refrained from sending this intelligence to [your] sister Pen, lest it should too strongly affect her tender filial heart—perhaps you may blame me for mentioning it even to you. When Mrs. Blowers wrote, your father was at Marshfield, whether as a place of abode or on a visit she does not say. Sister Penny is very much perplexed and undetermined about returning. She is anxious of seeing her parents and conducing to their happiness. * * *

*This statement is corroborated in some measure by Judge Thomas Jones in his Loyalist History of New York, Vol. 1, p. 159, etc.

Give me leave to congratulate you on your removal to New Utrecht, where I will with pleasure visit you on my return.

Compliments to the happy family and all other friends concludes me, Yours sincerely, Pelham Winslow.*

Edward Winslow, Esq'r.

Note.—There was a strong Loyalist party in Plymouth County. There is filed among the Winslow papers a "List of Refugees from the County of Plymouth," dated in 1775, in which there appear some ninety names, of which seventy-three are from Marshfield. The list is printed in full in the Proceedings of the Mass. His. Society for March, 1886. Among the prominent Loyalists in the list we find the following:—

From Middleborough,—Hon. Peter Oliver, Dr. Peter Oliver, Jnr., Ebenezer Spooner.

From Plymouth,—Edward Winslow, Jun., Cornelius White, Gideon White, Jun., Lemuel Goddard, Elkanah Cushman.

From Halifax,—Josiah Sturtevant, Daniel Dunbar.

From Pembroke,—Thomas Jocelyne.

From Scituate,—Dr. Benjamin Stockbridge, Charles Curtis.

From Marshfield,—Hon'ble. N. R. Thomas, Abijah White, Deacon John Tilden, Capt. Nath'l Phillips, Pelham Winslow, Dr. Isaac Winslow, Nathaniel Thomas, Elisha Foord, Sylvanus White, Capt. Cornelius White, Stephen Tilden, Warren White, Seth. Bryant, Joseph Hall, Gideon Walker.

Dear Winslow, * * Business adieu! Now for yourself, let me tell you my friend I am by no means pleased with your situation on Long Island which seems to me a very dangerous one, as I would be bound, were I on the other side of the Question, to take you or our friend the Brig'r from any part of that Island, and truly my fears tell me you are of sufficient consequence to be attempted. Therefore I will direct that on the receipt of this you forthwith retire either to New York or Newport, at the last of which places I have an house. Your sister is with us as

*Pelham Winslow of Plymouth, Mass., attorney-at-law, was a son of General John Winslow (well known in connection with the Acadian expulsion) and a cousin of Edward Winslow. Pelham Winslow graduated at Harvard in 1753 and entered the office of James Otis as a law student. At the revolution he became a pronounced Loyalist, and in 1774 was obliged to seek refuge with the British forces in Boston. In 1776 he accompanied the army to Halifax and went thence to New York. He engaged in the royal service and was fort major of Castle William. He died in 1783, leaving a wife and infant daughter, who were afterwards living at Shelburne. Our affair at Warren, Bristol, &c. you have heard of. It has produced this effect at least, the delaying Mr. Sullivan's intended attack on us and perhaps, for a time, has frustrated a more general plan. Adieu, Governor Montfort Browne to Edward Winslow.

Rhode Island, June 18, 1778.

I wished exceedingly, my Dear Sir, for the pleasure of seeing you before I embarked at N. York, and I endeavored all I could to effect that wished for satisfaction by calling several times at your house to no purpose; it was a mortification to me not to have had it in my power to have trusted you with our destination, which had been kept a secret for some time, as thereby I might have received a line of introduction to some of your relations who I wished to be acquainted with. Having understood that your amiable sister* lived within the district of the Encampment under my Command, I took the liberty to visit her, & had the satisfaction to find her the pleasing Counterpart of her affable and agreeable brother for whom as well as his sister I retain the most perfect friendship and esteeem; if it can come within the circumstance of my Command to do anything that can serve any friend or relation of yours I request you will communicate it to me, as thereby I shall have an opportunity to testify the personal attachment Esteem & regard with which I have the pleasure to subscribe myself, My Dear friend;

Your most obedient Serv't.

Montfort Browne.

You have, inclosed, a letter sent me this morning by your Amiable Sister.

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

June 22nd, 1778.

Altho' no opportunity for England has offered, I will not suppress the before going lengthy epistle but go on to tell your Excy. that since the writing I've had perhaps as fortunate an escape as any man in this world can boast of. On my return from Philadelphia I removed my quarters from the Valley of Hadad to the house where Gen'l Howe's Head Quarters were, in New Utrecht Town. On the 13th inst. about 12 at night a party of rebels (supposed to be about 25) landed directly below my house, marched up to the street, reconnoitered and as we imagine satisfy'd themselves that I was at home, but as their principal object was Flat Bush and an alarm might be the consequence of an attempt on me, they passed on to the houses of Major Moncreiffe* and Mr. Bache, both of whom they made prisoners and carried off. They also attacked the Mayor's house near Flat-Bush Church, but he luckily heard 'em early enough to take possession of his garret to which there was no entrance but a trap door. A musket fired in the town just at the time alarmed 'em and induced 'em to desist. On their return a small party were detached from their road, which was about 200 yards from my house. Most happily I had a number of my friends about me, Daniel Murray, Mr. Upham, Parson Panton,† Mr. Chipman and myself were very socially sitting round my table with the windows open. Whether our appearance was too formidable or whether they suspected from our being up at so late an hour that we were ready for 'em—or what was the cause, God knows, the fact is that they civilly omitted calling and until 8 o'clock in the morning I did not hear or suspect than anything of the kind had or could have happened. You may imagine that a small effusion of gratitude succeeded the intelligence. Not a single charge of powder or ball had I in my house. It is perhaps the most extraordinary circumstance that ever took place. A party of men to land in a clear evening, pass five miles in a public road by a great number of houses, enter a town, take two of the principal inhabitants and return and embark unmolested—is not it a pleasant telling story! It is beyond a doubt that it was a premeditated plan between the rebel officers on parole and the scoundrels who came over. I fear that some of the inhabitants of this village were not innocent. It has had a very happy effect for me. Gen'l Tryon immediately ordered a party of the 35th to Flat Bush and your Excellency's Troop of Dragoons were sent to New Utrecht. I have this week had the pleasure of putting them in possession of very comfortable quarters lately occupied by rebel officers. They are all round me, Bannister‡ in the house with me. I am prodigiously gratify'd at this movement for various reasons. The lads are exceedingly pleased at this mark of confidence and are perfectly reconciled to the performance of very severe duties. Six of them patrole every night on the beach from Gravesend point to Deny's and in the street. Murray* is quite Commandant of the City and I'm a sort of Magistratical assistant. (Together) I believe we shall make a tolerable figure, and effectually prevent any future incursions of the Rebels— I am endeavoring to put him in a way of issuing orders, making reports & communicating such other facts as I am acquainted with. Edward Winslow to Benning Wentworth (Son of Gov. Wentworth).

What in the Devil's name Mr. Benning Wentworth are you about that you can't spare the time to write a line to your friends in this country. From the Gov'r I did not expect a letter immediately on his arrival in England because I supposed he would have matters of great importance to transact, but I concluded that you could find a few minutes leisure. I desire sir, after you have seen the Lions & all the other monstrous curiosities of London, that you collect yourself and remember that there are several persons in this Land of Liberty and peace who are anxious to hear from you. The Gov'r will inform you of a pretty little maneuvre of the rebels on my end of the Island. Guess if I did not feel desperate queerly. The Mayor saved himself by a trap door. Chip is determined to cut one at my house and I suppose the example will be followed by the neighbors so that whenever there's an alarm all the Inhabitants will be bobbing up and down like Coons & Neo in "Nid & Nod." It is said that Gen. Clinton is certain to come with the army by land to New York, if so they must kick up a hell of a dust in the Jersies. I really imagined soon after your departure that something very capital would have taken place ere this, but there has been such a damnable series of treating and

Daniel Murray at this time held a commission in Governor Wentworth's Volunteers, but later was major in the King's American Dragoons. He commanded the latter corps when they were sent to the St. John river in 1783. It was the first of the Loyalist regiments to arrive, and for a while it lay encamped at, or near, the site of Carleton on the west side of the St. John harbor, but later it was sent up the river to be disbanded in Prince William. Major Murray operated saw mills on the Pokiok river, but they proved unremunerative, and were destroyed by fire in 1798. He owned 200 acres at the mouth of the Pokiok and also 120 acres on Long Island, in Prince William, and here he resided for some years. His property was sold at the instance of his creditors, Messrs. Donaldson and Garden, in 1807. The major had left the province in very embarrassed circumstances about the year 1803. He died at Portland, Maine, in 1832. However &c., &c.,—God grant that my next to you may be dated in some Province rather to the northward of this. Sure am I that the army at present here may crush this cursed rebellion if they exert themselves now. I hate the subject. Again I desire to be informed when are you to return, what you are about, &c. Let me be remembered to all my American friends, and believe me

August, 1778.

As well may a Man of War put to sea without Her tender—or a new-made General move without his Aid d'Camp— as a letter from Chipman to Judge Sewall be concluded without a Scrip from me. His epistles lately are of a bulk so enormous & contain intelligence so prodigious with comments so monstrous, that a summary or abridgement is absolutely necessary—mine like running Footmen push forward with all possible expedition just to announce his coming. And now may it please your honor, he is coming to inform you of a number of particulars—I wish I could saw with "authentic certainty"—and to give his opinion upon a number of events which I'm oblig'd to declare have not as yet & probably never will take place. Monstrously gratify'd was I at reading a few paragraphs in your letter wherein you charge him with being rather "too sanguine in giving credit to vague reports" & inform him that "many of his articles of intelligence have been propagated & refuted before his letters arrive." This very matter I have told him of several times— but to little purpose— until the other day an accident convinced him how dangerous it was to report stories relative to public matters in these uncertain times, until they were certainly authenticated. You will please to observe that we live in a house directly opposite to a remarkable Dutch Church, which is built in an octagonal form tapering from Bottom to Top & terminating in a small Belfry— In short the external appearance is so very singular and odd that my friend Jesse Adair when we landed at this place on the great 27th of Aug. swore "it was a Haystack with a chimney to it." Within side of the building is a dark crooked staircase which winds round the house & leads at last to the Belfrey from whence you have a most extensive view of the sea. To this place on all occasions our friend repairs when there's the least suggestion that a Fleet or Ship is to be seen. Unfortunately a report prevail'd that the French fleet had return'd to this harbor. He together with a Mr. Forrest (who like other human creatures is liable to mistakes) mounted the look-out and saw most distinctly with a "very good glass," Count D'Estaing advance toward the Hook & his Lordship our Commander in Chief retreat from before him & cover himself within the Beach—their colors were plain to be seen, their motions were such as from the reason & nature of things render'd it impossible that the fleet without should be any other than that commanded by Count D'Estaing and the fleet within of course the same which was directed by Viscount Howe. Full of this important news he posted to the City, & (saving a little altercation with an honest farmer who declar'd that no fleet or vessel had arriv'd) he got safe to the Coffee-house Bridge (where all secrets are divulg'd). Here he communicated the tidings & soon monopoliz'd the attention of a gaping multitude. Every presumptuous doubter was satisfy'd by Chip's reason'g & conclusions—the story flew—it reach'd Head-Quarters—our friend was summoned to appear, expatiated on the motions — the signals — the Colors—the numbers—& the magnitude of the Ships, & came off after convincing the most obstinate that he was right. But alas he was wrong. It was not the French-fleet, it was only a small detachment of his Lordship squadron which were station'd without & were approaching nearer the shore. Since this I really believe that proof more authentic will be waited for—and that greater dependence may be placed on his next information.

E. Winslow to Capt. John Smith, Pay Master of the Loyalist Forces.

Inclosed is a contingent bill for extra expenses and payment of Deputies from August 1777 to August 1778.

In July 1776 I had the honor of being appointed Muster Master General of Provincial Forces raised and to be raised in North America from Nova Scotia to West Florida inclusive. At that time there was only one provincial corps in his Majesty's service (excepting those at Halifax). Afterwards the Queen's Ranger's, DeLancey's Brigade, Jersey Volunteers, &c., &c., were recruited and quartered in various places remote from each other. It was thought expedient that all the corps should be mustered once in two months—this order occasioned much travelling and expense to the muster-master; I was therefore directed to charge extra expenses and indulged in appointing a deputy. The provincial corps have increased so very considerably since, that Sir Wm. Howe was induced to appoint deputies for me in several places. Mr. Turner was appointed at Halifax. On Mr. Bridgham's resignation Mr. Chipman was appointed at New York, and on my being ordered to Philadelphia his appointment was confirmed by Sir Henry Clinton. I was afterwards ordered from Philadelphia and Mr. Mouat was appointed to act during my absence, and on his departure Mr. Bell transacted the business. General Howe also appointed Capt. Martyn, a refugee from New England, to act as deputy muster-master at Rhode Island, and directed me to pay him 5 shillings per day which I have done to 24th August.

As I am under a necessity not only of mustering the provincial Forces six times a year exclusive of the partial musters, but also of adjusting and certifying every abstract for pay of the commissioned, non commissioned and private men, the business of my office has become very important and laborious. At a moderate computation I do not ride less than 260 or 270 miles every muster and I am obliged to keep one person constantly employed in my office. * * *

I shall esteem it a very particular favor if you will present my account and obtain the necessary warrant for that and my pay. I would not have presumed to trouble you on this occasion, but am prevented by sickness from making a personal application.

I am very respectfully,

Your most obed't serv't.

Edward Winslow to Lieut. Col. Innes.*

11 August, 1778.

Sir,—

When anything materially affects the service I conceive it my duty to represent it to you, whether my knowledge of the transaction is acquired by accident, or officially. I have in a free conversation suggested my opinion to you that the Corps of King's Orange Rangers† is at present in a position peculiarly alarming— Feuds & dissensions among the Officers— Mutinies & Desertions among the men. Irregularities in Reports are becoming exceedingly frequent. From what cause or concurrence of causes these circumstances arise I cannot presume to determine.

Whether the present Commandant‡ is not sufficiently experienc'd

*Colonel Innes, as inspector general of the Loyalist regiments, was in a large measure responsible for their efficiency.

The corps was ordered to Nova Scotia, and embarked for Halifax Oct. 27, 1778. It remained in Nova Scotia till the peace in 1783, and was then disbanded at Quaco (or St. Martins), near St. John.

in military matters? or whether by any other means there is in officers and men a want of that confidence in him which is essential to order & discipline in a new Corps I know not— but from the variety of unhappy events which have of late taken place, I apprehend one or the other. I am sensible that on days of public parade— such as Inspections & Musters—there is not a provincial Corps in his Majesty's service more capable of distinguishing itself by a performance of military exercise & maneuvres than this—nor is there a better body of men.

These considerations increase my concern at the information this day received from Mr. Chipman, who on his way from mustering Col. Emerick's* recruits yesterday learned that on Sunday night last fourteen men, including the non-Commissioned Officers of the Guard, deserted to the enemy from the Ship where they were posted. Of these men the principal part were such as inlisted when the corps was in its infancy & until this have continued faithful & obedient.

An example of this sort, with repeated declarations of other men that they shall avail themselves of the first opp'y to follow it, appears to me sufficiently important to justify my troubling you with this.

I am very respectfully,

Your most obed't h'ble Serv't.

The conduct of our dearly beloved cousins at Boston towards Blowers gives a pretty little idea of the present government. It surely deserves the name that used to be so emphatically pronounced by our superlative friend now at Brompton, "most mixtest." A certain quantity of power seems to be dealt out by the grand Congressional Assembly to each province [State.] The division of that among the variety of orders which compose the system makes a monstrous confusion; the consequent little squabbles (as somebody observed to Blowers) must be expected in "a free State."

Blowers tells us many extraordinary stories relative to the improvement of the Bostonians in what a certain lady calls "the liberal arts." Would you realise that the sons of some of our true old charter saints publicly roll in chariots with kept mistresses, and that many of our former meek and lowly christians, now freed from restraint, are rioting at a great rate. The principal ladies, dear creatures, are not so well pleased with the present assemblies as they were with the former ones. A daughter of Hitchborn the Boat-builder married to Bruce the butcher (who had made his fortune by privateering and been to France) was heard to make comparisons not to the advantage of the present managers. She exclaimed bitterly and loudly that it was not now as in the old times; then they were judicious in the choice of company but now forsooth assemblies were like operas, everybody that could pay was admitted. I wish I could know what were Mrs. Bruce's ideas of operas five years ago—I dare say she thought they were something to eat. * * *

There is no scene that can be exhibited on the face of the earth the observation of which would afford more genuine pleasure to me than a public gathering (in the way of dance & cards) of these new made gentry mixed with broken French Counts, &c. &c.

Benning Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

London, Berners-Street, Sep. 19, 1778.

Dear Winslow,—

I am exceedingly gratified by your friendly letter of the 23rd of June, and really ashamed that it was not in answer to one from me. I'm censurable indeed for not having addressed you long since, even before I'd seen the Lions and other great curiosities in this vast metropolis, which I've viewed in turn, but as you may have heard of them from an able hand,* and possibly examine them yourself soon, I'll not attempt a description. * * *

I find you still keep up the old game and that your house is yet the most desirable in the country— I congratulate you on your escape from the hands of tyranny; methinks had the ragged rogues felt bold enough to storm your castle, it would have deprived me of so pleasant an epistle from you. Late hours are sometimes useful and a good appearance is half the battle. I want to see Chip's Trap door exceedingly; I'd hazard a voyage in the month of March for a single sight and it would be charming to see it improved upon an alarm.

Pray make my best regards to him, for in truth he is among the first of my friends. * * *

I am dear Sir,

Your attached friend and servant,

B. Wentworth.

*The reference is to Governor Wentworth. Benning Wentworth was a brother of Lady Wentworth; he died Feb. 18th, 1808, in his 53rd year and was at the time Secretary of Nova Scotia.

Bristol, 20th Sep'r 1778.

Ned,—

For heaven's sake tell me when, where, and how you learnt the art of painting so critically as to make me laugh and cry at the same instant? I never experienced it before, but upon my soul your tragic-comic letter, strange as it may seem, did absolutely produce these two contrary effects upon your humble servant. I read and wept and laughed, and laughed and wept and read in unison through your whole epistle. Such serious heart rending truths told in a style and manner so Cervantic, so Shandyish, so serio-comically, had they been read to an Angel and a Devil must have forced a smile and a tear from both— no wonder then that I, who am a compound of both, should laugh like Democritus while tears flowed plentifully at every line— Your crooked rivers, Chesapeaks, reason & nature of things, and then the "army in high spirits"—the burthen of the song, faith, for three years past—or at least the chorus at the end of every campaign, affords such a picture of three years transactions, that I am almost determined to print it and set every man, woman and child in Great Britain and Ireland and the Town of Berwick upon Tweed to laughing and crying. No faith I'll inclose it to Lord North to be communicated to His Majesty in private—& yet, God bless his good soul, why should I wish to make him cry? It is no fault of his that this cursed rebellion was not suppressed long ago— unless you call mercy and tenderness in the extreme a fault. Well I believe it is in this instance, & so let his Majesty cry a little, it won't hurt him much, considering the accompanyment will be laughing, allegro et il penseroso. His Majesty, heaven long preserve him, is a great lover of music & a shrewd sign that in his composition is too much of the milk of human kindness to suffer him to deal justly with our d——d fanatical, republican, New England, rebellious, ungenerous, ungrateful scoundrels. Oh! how I wish they had for their sovereign for a little time an unfeeling, politic king of Prussia or Empress of Russia with such an army and navy as for the last three years have been marching and counter-marching by land and regattaing by sea, reconnoitring breastworks & peeping into rivers and harbors— "all in high spirits." Under the direction of a mind not entangled with the softer feelings of humanity or something worse, what might not have been effected? would not the Congress have been sent to the Devil long ago? We should have seen Cities, towns, villages and fields destroyed and laid waste till distress had opened the eyes of the deluded and changed the hearts of the deluding, and brought back the surviving remnant to duty and happiness. * * * Boston well fortified was left standing with all its conveniences for Trade and piracy to accommodate these vipers who first fomented the rebellion. Long Island was taken and the brave conquerors restrained till 15,000 rebels quietly retreated to a place of safety—Philadelphia was taken late in the Autumn only to be given up in the Spring, cum multis aliis quae nunc prescribere longum est, and would only serve renovere dolorem

Patience! It is mortifying to look back, let us look forward then. I have not lost my anchor of hope yet. I flatter myself the perfidy of France and the obstinacy and haughtiness of the Congress will rouse Britons to vengeance. I have great dependence upon the present Commander in Chief and if Admiral Lord Howe will but give a good account of D'Estaing's French fleet all may be well yet.

Jan'y 4th 1779.

N. B. Thus far had been wrote some months in answer to your first letter. Let me go on a little. * * How prematurely we judge on this side of the water as well as you. O Lord! are we to go on thus all the voyage?* No. Heaven forbid. It must come right some time or other, but God only knows when.

I thank you for all your kindness to Chippy.† I hope I shall live to thank you at Cambridge my lad!

Yours, de tout,

Jno. Sewall.

Sir,—

Mr. Chipman informs me that you are to accompany the provincial-Corps who are at this time under orders for embarkation, and that there is no objection either with Col. Innes or yourself, to your acting as an assistant to me, at which I am gratify'd, & I inclose you such instructions as have been given to the other gent'n who are employed by me. The last of which, (respecting an alphabetical record) you need not comply with, so far as relates to those Corps which embark from this place as I have one already. I only wish you would send me the Muster-Rolls at every period & I'll enter the Recruits, Casualties, &c. Should any new Corps be raised within your muster you will find the advantage of such an alphabetical list—on a wide paper—for at a subsequent muster you can see without any kind of trouble if the same person has been absent two successive musters on any doubtful pretence, and a variety of other conveniences arise from it.

Dear Sir,—

Since I have been in England, I have often by the way of my brother Robert, had very great pleasure in hearing that you were well and had employments under Government which filled up most of your time, and taking it for Granted that some of the business's must be Lucrative I had the greatest Satisfaction in thinking, that for your many losses and much Suffering, you would after paying the expenses of Management realize something handsome.

Everybody but Scounderals in this country have been much Disappointed in their expectations from your Side of the water. The last as well as former Summer had like to have passed over without anything being done. General Clinton's passage thro' the heart of the Enemies Country with the Remains of Gen. Howe's Army, opposed by the Combined force of the United States has done Sir H. Clinton great Credit, and had not Count D'Estaing arrived off the Coast, and required the attention of the Army and Navy, much more would have been done, and have put an end to the War by Conquest, had not the Commission restrained the Military operations.

Some time since I wrote and requested the favour that you would urge Mr. Isaac Winslow, Executor to his unkle the late Isaac Winslow Esq., who was formerly of Boston and died in N. York, to impower his Attorney here, (who has abundance of Effects in his hands) to Discharge a bond due to me from the Estate of the Deceased with Interest Between £7 & £8 hundred pounds, & having never heard from either of you I

Your Much Obliged Humble Serv't

Benj. Hallowell.

Please to direct my letters to Lane & Frazier,

In Penny's* last letter I'm informed "that Major Barry has charged me with negligence in not writing to him," & she is pleased to add in a very pretty sisterly kind of stile—that, "if I do not immediately make a satisfactory apology I am an ungrateful scoundrel & deserve to be hanged." I should almost assent to the propriety of her conclusion & the justice of her sentence if I could not excuse myself by asserting that I've been scarcely able to write my name for the four last months, Bilious fever, agues, & rheumatics, & sundry other disorders (peculiar to this uncivil capricious climate) united in their attack upon me & effectually hindered the performance of any duty social or official. This apology (made as early as possible) will I trust be acknowledged as satisfactory.

The uninteresting events which constantly succeed each other in a garrisoned City, afford a man no chance of amusing his friend at a distance; a detail of 'em would be painful to a writer & would give no pleasure to him who reads.

Our attention has been rous'd at some late movements of the army. The attaching of nine British regiments (viz. 4th, 5, 27, 28, 35, 40, 46, 49, 55th) who under Maj. Gen'l Grant it is agreed are gone to the West Indies, and two Provincial regiments, the Pennsylvania & Maryland Loyalists (who were in the same fleet) to Pensacola. The Expedition commanded by Lt. Col. Campbell furnishes matter for variety of conjectures. It consists of the 71st Regt., two, or part of two Regt's Foreigners, New York Volunteers 300; 1st Delancey's 260; 2nd Do. 200; 3rd of Skinners 300† & a small party of Artillery. The prevailing idea at first was that they were intended for St. Augustine but before their departure, which was delayed by contrary winds, some circumstances took place to alter our opinion. While they lay at the Hook, Light Infantry Companies were formed, and each corps contributed in proportion to its strength,* Sir James Baird to command the whole & such other arrangements were made as sufficiently convinced me that they expected opposition at their landing. It is since confidently asserted that a large body of men in N. Carolina & Georgia had solicited Sr. Henry to send a party into either of these provinces which they would instantly join, but we've been so often amused by this kind of intelligence that I acknowledge my expectations from the report are not very sanguine. Bayard's Corps† reinforces Nova Scotia.

The speculators on Political subjects who now exercise their talents here are either Refugees from the Country, mortify'd with their present situation & murmuring at every public measure, or mere superficial traders collected from every quarter of this strange world. From such men impartial discussions cannot be expected, I listen to 'em because there are none better. The sending Provincial Troops on such services has become matter of consideration among 'em; they have generally censured the measure as unjust & not consistent with the original compact. This assertion arises from an idea that all or most of the provincial corps were Local & intended to defend particular provinces from which they could not be removed but by their own consent. Contracted as this sentiment may at first appear there is some reason for it. Those men who consulted their own immediate advantage and reputation more than the public good gave assurances, for which they had no authority from the Com'r in Chief, and seduced men into the service by promises that they should not be called, on any emergency, from particular places. However as I have the honor of being connected with those troops I'm not puzzled to account for the policy, if unable to applaud the justice of the measure. Most of the recruits enlisted expressly for the term of two years, or during the continuance of the rebellion; there is not wanting among them men of sufficient cunning to suggest that those terms imply an option in the soldier whether he will continue in service after the expiration of the first period; quibbling and dishonorable as this suggestion may seem to a European gentleman; it is a tolerable pretence for an American labourer, and the consequences of it were more serious than you would at first imagine. Discharges have been demanded by those who enlisted early, &c. Were they to remain entirely inactive and in the vicinity of the places where they formerly lived desertions would be frequent. The pleasure of gratifying revenge for recent persecutions and injuries, or a flush of romantic military ardor were the inducements to engage. They have been in some measure disappointed in their first expectation and a two years service as soldiers has considerably cooled 'em in the latter. It cannot therefore be impolitic to change their ground.

Those who are actuated by mere caprice I do not pity, but there are many who would with alacrity serve during the rebellion under the same officers who promised to lead them—but from necessity or some other cause, Commanders have beeen changed, men drafted, &c., &c. Coxcombs—Fools—& Blackguards, have been provided as officers in the Provincial Line. The soldiers, unaccustomed to severity, have been made miserable and unhappy. I really am no advocate for indulgencies to soldiers but I cannot think it below the dignity of an officer who wishes well to the service in general to consult the disposition of his men. But enough * * I've been listening this day with great satisfaction to the observations of my friend Blowers, made during his barbarous confinement at Boston, but before I communicate any part of 'em, let me add my grateful acknowledgements to those of that worthy man for your extreme politeness and attention to him. When he left this garrison I should have taken the liberty of mentioning him to you, but I considered that from his connections at Rhode Island you would most probably see him & I was sure that his good qualities could not escape your discernment I am exceedingly gratify'd at finding that you were made acquainted with his plan and that it met your approbation. The harsh treatment which he received during his stay at Boston was most unprecedented & cruel . You may one day hear the particulars from him, I will only tell you that the dampest, dirtiest hole in the common gaol was the place allotted him.

municating 'em. To gratify your curiosity is among my motives for writing at present, but I acknowledge the principal one is to support, by as fair arguments as I can produce, some opinions which I offered during your friendly visit at Springfield. A long acquaintance with you has confirmed me in the idea that I forfeit your esteem whenever my actions or my serious decisions appear the result of passion, prejudice or interest. That forfeiture is an event which I should deprecate as very unfortunate to myself, and to avoid it I shall endeavor to convince you that I was not influenced by any such principle in the declarations which I frequently made on our favorite subject, The Provincial Troops! I have uniformaly asserted and I most sincerely believe that those Corps if duly encouraged would have been much more respectable in point of numbers than they are at present, and if properly employed would have contributed largely towards suppressing the rebellion in America. These are the facts on which I mean to enlarge.

It seems to be a proposition almost incontrovertible that the original design in the institution of Provincial Corps was "To employ as bene-"ficially as possible such of the Americans, or American residents, as "inclined to serve in a military line; that those who were of consequence "in the country might exert their influence in procuring recruits for the "service of Government." In this light the plan was viewed by the King's friends assembled at Boston when it was first suggested by the venerable Gen'l Ruggles;* and I have not forgotten with what alacrity the idea was adopted by many of the most respectable characters among the refugees. Such, however, was the situation of the British army, their distress for provisions & other perplexing circumstances, that an effort to raise Recruits there would have been impolitic and must have proved ineffectual. 'Tis unnecessary for my present purpose to take any notice of the Regiment called The Emigrants† as that is now numbered in the *General Timothy Ruggles, born in Massachusetts in 1711, a graduate of Harvard in 1732. He attained the rank of brigadier general during the French war. He was an energetic Loyalist. After the peace in 1783 he settled at Wilmot, N. S., where he died in 1795 at the age of 85 years. Benjamin Marston (under date Dec. 13, 1784) writes in his journal: "Arrived at General Ruggles, "spent two days with that brave, worthy old man, who at three score and ten "is beginning the world anew with as much activity as if he were but one score "and ten." See biography of General Timothy Ruggles by Henry Stoddard Ruggles of Wakefield, Mass.; also Sabine's Loyalists of the American Revolution.

†The Young Royal Highland Emigrants were organized by General Gage's order to Lieut. Col. Allan McNab, June 14, 1775. The men were recruited at Quebec, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, and (later) at Newfoundland. The second battalion of the regiment, commanded by Major John Small, was stationed in Nova Scotia during the war. The corps was very efficient, and was on Dec. 25, 1778, included in the British establishment as the 84th regiment of foot.

Line; nor need I mention The Fencible Americans* who were principally recruited at New-Foundland—or Legge's Corps, which is yet inconsiderable and has been mostly at Halifax. Passing these by, I shall attempt to shew from other instances how much the original intention has been perverted and to enumerate some of the discouragements which some of these regiments have labored under. This I confess is a task peculiarly painful because it obliges me to take a retrospective view of some of Sir William Howe's administration—an administration which no real friend to the British Government can look back upon without experiencing extreme chagrine.

The first provincial recruits that joined the army was a party called The New York Volunteers. They were collected about the North River before the Troops appeared in that quarter and (with their leaders Grant & Campbell, half-pay officers, who had settled in that country and acquired property and influence) they escaped to the King's Ships at Sandy-Hook. After some months they were forwarded to Halifax, where they arrived a few days before the embarkation of the Troops. Here they were reviewed and formed into two companies & Grant & Campbell were appointed Captains. At that time it was urged that no provision was made or fund established from which these unfortunate men could be cloathed or accoutred, and they embarked with the Troops with only the wretched remnant of the apparel in which they had escaped from the rebels six or eight months before. In this distress, they landed at Staaten Island. A few small articles were bestowed on them while there, but nothing to relieve them essentially. On the famous 27th of August, 1776, when the rebels were subdued on this island, the two companies served together and distinguished themselves in such a manner as to extort the most particular compliments from the Commander-in-Chief. Almost naked & extremely feeble from a long series of fatigues, they absolutely did not murmur, but appeared to realize that the rebels of the country were the original causes of all their misfortunes, and this consideration whetted their resentment to a great degree of keenness. But the inattention to this meritorious little party (altho' it had not the effect which might naturally have been expected on the members who composed it) was matter of serious concern to others. Sensible men who were zealots in the King's cause had anticipated the most cordial welcome & ample support to such as should join the troops. They were exceedingly disconcerted at the treatment of these Volunteers. It was not credited that a General whose command was so extensive could possibly want the power to furnish common necessaries for 200 men, if his disposition toward them was favorable, especially as it was known that

*The Royal Fencible Americans were organized in Nova Scotia in June 1775, and by the close of that year 300 men were enlisted. The majority were by birth Europeans or Loyalists from the old colonies; many also were recruited in Newfoundland. A considerable portion of the corps settled in Charlotte county in 1783. During the war the garrisons at Fort Cumberland and Fort Howe were supplied principally by this regiment.

†Governor Legge's order for raising this corps (the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers) was issued Oct. 16, 1775, but in April following it only numbered about 60 men. However, the number enlisted on Feb. 1, 1780, was 568. At the peace, in 1783, many of the corps settled at Ship Harbor, N. S.

New York, 12th January, 1779.

My Lord:—

On the 15th July, 1776, I was appointed by Sir Wm. Howe Muster-Master-Gen'l of all His Majesty's Provincial Forces, raised and to be raised within the district of North America, under his command, and was informed by him that I was to receive ten shillings a day and an allowance for extra expenses.

At the time of my appointment only one Provincial Corps, the York Volunteers existed here, but before the expiration of the first year, warrants were issued for raising several brigades and regiments and the recruits for them were scattered through the various parts of the Garrisons then held by the King's Troops. It was judged necessary to muster them all, once in two months and to certify the concurrence of the abstracts and Subsistence accounts with the Muster Rolls, previous to their being paid. On the appointment of an Inspector General† I consented to continue that part of the duty and exhibited an account for the expenses I had incurred and for the payment of a Deputy for the first year, up to August 1777, which was approved and paid. In the course of the last year I was ordered to Rhode Island and Philadelphia, and as Provincial Corps were forming in both those places, Sir Wm. Howe was pleased to appoint Deputies there. Those Deputies have been paid by myself. When at Philadelphia I presented accounts up to March in the second year, but was desired to postpone them till the year expired. I was immediately ordered to New York, soon after which Sir Henry Clinton took the command. At the expiration of the year in August last, I delivered my accounts for my deputies and expenses to Capt. Smith and requested they might be presented: after they had been some time in his hands I was informed it was necessary for me to deliver them personally to the Commander in Chief. I was then, and for two or three months afterwards, confined to my bed with a most tedious and dangerous fever and am now wholly unable to attend at Headquarters. During all this time I have been able but twice to go to New York. Once the Commander in Chief was absent, at the other time I was informed he was so particularly engaged that he could not be seen.

*Lord Rawdon was intimately associated with the Loyalist regiments. He commanded a corps known as the Volunteers of Ireland, raised in America in 1778, which rendered gallant service and was mustered as a Loyalist corps. Lord Rawdon was adjutant general of the Loyalist forces.

To avoid giving more trouble than this application necessarily requires, I have desired Mr. Chipman to attend your Lordship's leisure for an answer.

I am with the highest respect, my Lord,
Your Lordship's most obed't & most humble serv't,
Ed. Winslow.

Hugh Mackay Gordon* to Edward Winslow.

Pensacola 20th March, 1779.

My dear Sir,—

I am happy to inform you that I have at last arrived at my Banishment. We had but a narrow escape upon our Passage from New York to Jamaica our Convoy having parted with us a week after being out. However on the 30th Nov'r the Transports arrived safe at Kingston, where we remained one month owing to the alarming state of the island of St. Domingo. I assure you I spent a very agreeable time. It is a pleasant and most plentiful country, but it never was known so sickly for 32 years past. A number of Provincial Officers were taken ill of most violent fever—Capt'n Grafton Dulany† & Doct'r Kidd died after a few days illness. You may easily conceive what a change it is coming from a pleasant plentiful country into a wretched one, & I may say with safety I am now in the worst part of the world—nothing to be had but lean Beef and Pork except Poultry which is extravagantly dear, & it is so d——d hot fish stinks before it can be boiled. The only thing this pleasant place abounds in is a beautiful white sand which circulates freely It gives me pleasure to inform you that General Campbell has

*Hugh Mackay Gordon at this time was Edward Winslow's deputy at Pensacola. He went to Halifax at the peace in 1783, and there the intimacy with Winslow was further increased. Gordon rose rapidly in his profession, was a colonel in the army in 1807, and in 1815 a major general. He proved a good friend to Colonel Winslow. See letter of Winslow to S. S. Blowers of 7th June, 1806.

†Captain Grafton Dulany in 1777 organized a company for the Maryland Loyalists. He died Dec. 23, 1778. Dr. Alex. Kidd of the same corps died Nov. 21, 1778.

appointed me both Deputy Muster Master General and Deputy Inspector of Provincials in West Florida & I conceive myself much obliged for your attention.

As Lieut. Col. [Wm.] Allen's Corps* was the first disembarked I mustered them on the 30 Jan'y. Copies of the Muster Rolls are enclosed which I took some pains to get correct & I hope you will find 'em so. Lieut. Col. Chalmer's Corps† was not mustered until the 22nd Feb'y owing to the number ill of the Small Pox. You will observe by the Muster Rolls enclosed this disorder carried off a great many, which induced General Campbell to disperse one Company agreeable to the enclosed order—for the propriety of this measure see the Strength of the Companies.

There is a dispute concerning the Rank of Lt. Col's. Allen & Chalmers, it has been referred to General Campbell who will not settle but conceives Allen has the preference. You must know who has the preference & I am sure, altho' Allen's not on the spot, you will endeavor to have justice done him. Chalmers goes to New York, & I believe principally with a view to get the Rank, for fear those Corps should be thrown together. For my part I ought to have some knowledge and I must confess I have no doubt but Allen should be the eldest which I told General Campbell.

Enclosed I send you monthly returns & have only to beg you may send me such further Directions as you shall think necessary.

Pray make my best Compliments to Mr. Anderson, N. & W. Coffin and all my old Friends, and tell them not to come to Pensacola.

Believe me to be, Most sincerely Yours,

Hugh Mackay Gordon.

Instructions for Edward Winslow Esquire hereby appointed to command a detachment of Provincial Forces and Refugees ordered on a Secret Expedition: Head Quarters, Newport, March 30th, 1779.‡

†Lieut. Col. James Chalmers' commission as commander of the Maryland Loyalists bears date Oct. 14, 1777—same date as Col. Wm. Allen's commission. At the close of the war he went to England. His corps settled in the parish of St. Mary's, York County, N. B.

River of Bedford by the West Channel, leaving Palmer's Island between them and the Fort. It is recommended that Mr. Leonard* go with the Privateers & that he prevent any irregular landing of the sailors & others until a communication is effected. The Troops to disembark at Clark's Cove; the Transports & "General Leslie" privateer will remain in the Cove until they receive orders from the Commandant of the Troops. The Troops first disembarked will instantly begin to destroy the Bridge at the Head of the Cove leaving proper sentinels at a convenient Post near this Pass when the Troops have moved from it.

Captain DePeyster† with fifty men to move forward toward the Town, take possession of the wharves & hinder all communication between the town & the rebel shipping, the remainder of the party to hold possession of the hill behind the town, which commands it; this position to continue until it is evident that all the Rebel property is secured by the Privateers. Such men as are well acquainted with shipping to be put on board those Rebel Vessels that are nearest the wharves so as to navigate them out. After having destroyed all buildings improved as Barracks, store houses, and every public deposit, the Troops will embark with all possible expedition to return to this Post from which to be employed in such other service as may be thought necessary.

The success of this attempt wholly depending on the quickness & regularity with which it is executed, it is therefore most strictly enjoined that no stores are broke open & Plundered or any other Depredations suffered which may retard the movements or create disorder.

The order of debarkation to be as follows:—Capt. DePeyster with the Grenadiers & Gov'r Wentworth's Volunteers‡ to land first, afterwards the Refugees. This order to be reversed at embarking. It will be understood that when the Grenadiers are in front, Governor Went-

*George Leonard of Massachusetts was second in command of the Associated Refugees. In 1783 he was one of the agents employed in the locating of the Loyalists on the River St. John. He was a member of the council of New Brunswick. In the legislature, as a magistrate, colonel of militia, and in the execution of the very difficult office of superintendent of trade and fisheries he was active and fearless. As a churchman and as a member of the board of commisssioners of the New England company for civilizing and Christianizing the Indians he was equally energetic. Throughout his life George Leonard was a great friend and admirer of Edward Winslow. He died at Sussex Vale in 1826.

†Abraham DePeyster commanded the Grenadier company of the King's American Regiment, in which his commisssion is dated Dec. 13, 1776. He came to New Brunswick in 1783, and was a grantee of Parr Town. In 1785 he was sheriff of Sunbury county, residing at Maugerville. He became provincial treasurer in 1792 and removed to St. John. He died at his residence opposite the site of the present Custom House in Prince William street, Feb. 19, 1798, aged 46 years. For further particulars see Lawrence's Foot Prints, page 55.

‡Governor Wentworth's Volunteers were organized about the year 1777 under the patronage of John Wentworth, late governor of New Hampshire. The members of the corps were mostly Massachusetts men of good standing and education. Many of them afterwards obtained commissions and were posted to other corps, notably the King's American Dragoons.

worth's Volunteers will be in the rear, the Refugees always in the centre. Captains Goldsbury & Martin will keep their companies as distinct as possible. The future reputation & dearest interests of the Refugees depending on the success of this exertion it is not doubted that regularity, sobriety & the most implicit obedience will invariably be observed.

At all events Captain DePeyster's Company is to return with proper convoy to Rhode Island immediately after the Party leaves Bedford. The Privateers that convoy the Transports will be furnished with private signals. Mr. Leonard will also have private signals. Some rebels of importance or in Public offices are to be bought off.

Should it be found unadvisable from the apparent Force of the enemy or other causes, such as contrary winds or extreme badness of weather, to pursue the Enterprize it must then be expedient to return; Easy conquests being the object in view & not a contention with a too superior Force.

R'd Prescott.

Col. Winslow's Report of the Bedford Expedition.

Newport, 6th April, 1779.

Sir,—

I have the honor to report to you my arrival at this place with the Grenadier Company of the King's American Regiment*. Our attempt on Bedford failed of success by want of wind to carry our vessels into the harbour—the Rebels had observ'd us off & had collected in force to oppose our landing & had manned a fort which commanded the entrance of the Harbour & made various other preparations.

Their great superiority of numbers, strong positions & other material circumstances rendered an attack upon them too hazardous, especially as General Prescott had so pointedly ordered me not to contend with superior force & suggested that in the infant state of our party "easy conquests ought to be our object." I therefore reluctantly relinquished the enterprize, and as I was instructed to alarm the coast & harrass the enemy as much as possible I proceeded with the party down the Sound as far as the town of Falmouth, against which Mr. Leonard drew up the Privateers in a line and kept up a fire for two hours directly at the houses, while Capt. DePeyster of the King's American Regt., and Capt. Murray of Gov'r Wentworth's Vols., with a party of about forty men (which was all we could embark at the time, having no flat boats) made a show of landing. The Rebels alarmed by the firing at Bedford had thrown up a very long breastwork from behind which they fired without effect at the party who coasted along the shore. As there was no object in view at this place beyond harrassing the Rebels the party returned to the Vessels without receiving any other injury than two men very slightly wounded.

*The warrant for raising this corps was issued about Dec. 11, 1776, at least this is the date of Colonel Edmund Fanning's commission. The men of the regiment belonged to Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York. A troop of cavalry was included in the corps. At the peace, in 1783 the King's American Regiment settled between Pokiok and Eel River, on the west side of the River St. John.

This expedition will be productive of good consequences exclusive of effectually alarming the whole coast from point Judith to Hyannas & even the whole of Cape Cod, we had frequent opportunities of conversing with the inhabitants of Eliz'h Islands, & have reason to apprehend that the arguments of Major General Gray has caused a very sincere conversion in them.

I am exceedingly gratified at an opportunity of testifying that every individual of the party discovered the most extreme ardor, and I am perfectly convinced that it will be more my duty to check than to encourage them in their future operations. I am particularly indebted to Major Upham* for his advice & assistance on all occasions.

I left the command of the Refugees with Capt. Murray who has already exhibited most convincing proofs of a spirit of enterprize & sound judgment. They are to proceed to Nantucket and deprive of the means of commerce a nest of traders who have carried on a trade to France and who import a variety of articles necessary for the Rebels. I have no doubt of their success in this attempt.

Regimental Orders of the Corps of Loyal Associated Refugees.

Quarters, Newport, April 11, 1779.

Captain Murray, Captain Goldsbury & Captain Martin, with the officers & men of their respective companies, to assemble and embark at 5 o'clock this afternoon. This detachment to be furnished with Sixty Rounds of Ammunition and to take with them their Blankets and provisions for two days.

*Major Josnua Upham of Brookfield, Mass., graduated at Harvard in 1763. He begun his military career in conjunction with his old friend Edward Winslow on this occasion. He was afterwards with Benedict Arnold in his attack on New London, Connecticut. In 1781 he was deputy inspector general of Refugees at Lloyd's Neck on Long Island. Here with the aid of the undisciplined Refugees he repulsed the attack of some French marauders. In March, 1781, he was major in the King's American Dragoons, and in September, 1782, aide-de-camp to the commander in chief, Sir Guy Carleton. He settled in New Brunswick at the peace and became one of the judges of the supreme court and a member of council. His death took place in England Nov. 1, 1808, at the age of 67 years. His mission to England was to secure an increase in the salary of the judges, and in this he was successful.

Captain Murray the Commanding Officer of this detachment will wait on Colonel Fanning,* the Commandant of the Corps of Refugees, when the party are embarked, to receive his orders and Instructions. The Transports and armed vessels for this service will be furnished by Mr. Leonard the navy agent and contractor for the Associated Refugees.

[The embarkation was postponed for certain reasons until the 23rd April.]

Quarters, Newport, 23 April, 1779.

The whole Corps of associated Refugees to embark at 6 o'clock this afternoon on board the armed vessels "General Leslie" and "George" and a transport brig. Captain Murray will take the command and when the party is embarked will report to Colonel Fanning their number and receive his Orders and Instructions for carrying into execution the particular service recommended by the Board of Directors and approved by Major General Prescott the Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces on this Island. Mr. Loring† the surgeon will go on this service with the proper materials and preparations for such an expedition which may probably be performed in forty eight hours.

[Note.] On the 14th May, 1779, a party of 167 Loyal Associated Refugees under command of Capt. Daniel Murray started with the design of making a second attempt on Bedford, but learning of the presence of a superior force they took post at Tarpaulin Cove and asked leave to establish themselves there.

The Associated Refugees under Winslow had on June 10, 1779, captured 2 brigs, 2 schooners, 1 sloop, 10 boats with a considerable quantity of goods of various kinds and 35 prisoners, among them some persons of considerable note. Also 134 horses, 138 cattle, 1843 sheep, 11 hogs, 642 lambs, 38 calves. On Sept. 16, 1779, Winslow reports that in the subsequent excursions 13 prizes were taken by the Refugee vessels, 3 of them armed vessels, and that the account of sales of property taken from the Rebels by the Agent's certificate amounted to the sum of £23,427.18.6 sterling. In June and September the Associated Refugees seem to have

In 1786 he became Lieutenant Governor of Prince Edward Island, which position he held nineteen years. been under Col. Winslow's direction, his superior officer and Commandant being Lt. Col. Richard Hewlett* of DeLancey's 3rd Battalion, then stationed on Long Island.

The Associated Refugees included Governor Wentworth's Volunteers under Capt. Murray, a detachment of Colonel Wightman's Loyal New Englanders under Captain Zebedee Terry, and Captain Martin's Corps. The Party sailed from Newport to Lloyd's Neck, Long Island, in June, where they were joined by Capt. Bonnel's party with their whale boats. Two men, Smith and Sears, were taken on board the Royal Charlotte by Winslow to act as guides. The expedition proceeded to Norwalk where it arrived in the early morning of June 30th but whether it accomplished anything of consequence does not appear.

In September 1779, an expedition was undertaken to Martha's Vineyard, and in the Orders of the 9th of that month, issued on board the Royal Charlotte, the words occur, "It is Lieut. Col. Winslow's particular request that the Loyal Refugees will exert themselves to prevent every species of depredations from being committed on the Inhabitants of Martha's Vineyard and the other Elizabeth Islands; it being his as well as Mr. Leonard's determination to treat all those defenceless people and their families with consideration. Countersign from Lieut. Col. Hewlett, Winslow." It is altogether probable that the Associated Refugees accompanied General Tryon† in his expedition in July, 1779, in which many of the Connecticut towns were ravaged and Norwalk and Fairfield destroyed.

He rendered good service as commander of the 3rd battalion of DeLancey's brigade at Satauket, where, in 1777, he repulsed the attack of General Parsons. See Jones' Loyalist History of New York, vol. 1, p. 182. He contributed much to the security of Long Island during the war. At the peace he came to St. John in the month of September, 1783, as senior officer commanding the British and Loyalist troops that were to be disbanded on the river. He settled at Hampstead, Queens County, near Long Island, and died there in 1789.

†Major General William Tryon of North Carolina filled the office of governor (the last royal governor with one exception). He was transferred to New York, where he was governor from July, 1771, to 1780. He was commander in chief of the Loyalist forces. Went to England at the peace in 1783.

Oh ! for the pen of a Sterne to describe a scene on Prudence Island† Figure to yourself the venerable old man sitting on a rock watching the boat which held his only son while it beat against the wind for an hour. Suppose him collecting all his fortitude, strengthening himself by anticipation and struggling against a variety of feelings tender and distressing. See him wiping his brow, which alternately clouded and cleared.

In his pocket were papers giving a particular account of my death and burial, etc. As I approached the shore he pulled—literally pulled (I could not change the word for any other in the world) the paper from his pocket—looked at it—looked at me; then he cried, "My God, he died !"

When I landed—sound and strong, my father fell on his face. I should have deserved everlasting damnation if I could have spoke one word. No, no, I boast, I glory, that I could not speak. I flung myself by my father on the ground: it was his business to begin. There was a spark of something like courage left in his breast and he kindled it—mine was all lost. "I am glad, I am glad," says he, "to see you my boy," and down he fell again, the spark then quenched on the verge of expiration—[Major] Barry, who had been motionless, and stared with silent astonishment at the loving fulness of our sensibility, by a violent exertion of strength, dictated by humanity aroused us. There were present rebel officers and rebel soldiers, King's officers and King's soldiers, sailors of both denominations and negroes—not a heart among them that did not melt. All formalities usual with flags was forgotten, every man turned from us, walked different ways and were profoundly silent. By degrees my father's countenance brightened, and flashes of gratitude darted from his eyes in rapid succession. He did not trouble Heaven with words, but the throne of Grace was never ornamented with a purer effusion of thanks. The poor girl, my sister, had fainted and recovered, and fainted again. I summoned every power to comfort her, and at length prevailed on her to speak.

I afforded them every possible comfort and consolation. The old man declared he was happy and when we parted he only shook his head and pronounced "God bless my son."

When we have performed this service I propose to indulge the party in making some incursions in the colony of Connecticut. Winslow & Leonard to Nantucket Committee.*

Holmes Hole, 20th Sept., 1779.

Gent'n;—

We have read the extraordinary paper or memorial presented by you as a committee from Nantucket, and we must in the most explicit terms inform you that we do not consider it a satisfactory explanation of your conduct, but as a specimen of that duplicity and mean evasion which are the distinguishing characteristic of the people of this country.

Our letter to the Inhabitants was dictated by friendship and was forwarded at the express request of some of your principal men who represented to us, "That in the present state of public matters, the "Magistrates have not a due influence and that the only power now in "being at Nantucket is that which men of property exert over their "immediate dependants." To aid those men in their exertions, to increase their influence and thereby oblige the Town were our motives, and we expected our letter would have been productive of some candid acknowledgement of past crimes and an absolute promise to avoid similar ones in future. Nor had we an idea that all the cunning of the island would have been summoned to produce such an ambiguous monster as your memorial. Disappointed in this respect—it is incumbent on us to prove the charges exhibited against you in justification of the threats contained in our letter. And first to prevent any mistakes, you will observe that we hold ourselves amenable to our superiors for all our transactions, and we are perfectly satisfied from our own experience that Insults and Indignities offered us will be a sufficient apology for our executing vengeance against any people under Heaven. * * *

[The letter goes on to advance proofs of the following charges;—(a) "Rescuing the Sloop Nancymond from our Letters of Marque," (b) "That you aid his Majesty's Enemies," (c) "That you molest & disturb his Majesty's servants." Among the statements made in support of these charges Winslow & Leonard aver that "The Inhabitants (Nantucket) do constantly go off in whale boats from the back of the Island on the appearance of rebel vessels and give intelligence to them of Ships of War (British) or other cruisers in Boston Bay or the Vineyard Sound, and by this means effectually prevent the property of the Rebels from being intercepted. They persevere in their Trade with the French West Indies & thereby afford considerable supplies to the Rebels & this is done notwithstanding you conditioned with Sir George Collier to discontinue that Trade on his granting you permission to purchase those goods in the King's garrisons at Newport & New York." Winslow & Leonard further aver "that no King's officer, friend to Government, or suspicious Person dare make his appearance on your island, but that such persons are under a necessity of concealing themselves as cautiously as if among their avowed enemies—Witness D'cr. Tupper Jun'r., Mr. Thaxter & Mr. Barker who have been lately in that predicament.]

When ships of War have made their appearance at your island—awed by their power you have shewn respect & as much politeness as you are capable of, but we defy you to produce any other instance.

Having finished our proofs which we suppose are ample to establish every fact by us advanced—We must as briefly as possible take notice of your apology for the first transaction, and we are under a necessity of observing that we consider it as an insult offered to our understandings and as a trick too frequently played in America to pass current at present. The blame of the proceeding is lay'd on "lads" who are supposed to have done the mischief without orders and of course the Town is not answerable, and in imitation of that metropolis of mobs, Boston, you resolve and vote that you are perfectly peaceable, that you disavow all hostile proceedings! But Gentlemen—can you possibly imagine that your very frivolous pretence is a sufficient satisfaction for personal injuries, or that your peaceable resolves are in any degree a recompence for waifing an armed vessel & cargo, five hundred muskets & other war instruments, out of the hands of his Majesty's friends into those of his rebellious subjects?

Your accusations against Capt. Duggan are too serious to pass entirely unnoticed. We say that the unruly behaviour of his sailors was subsequent to the loss of the prize; he acknowledges that, irritated by such provocation, they were in some degree irregular, but that every injury done by them was instantly repaired either by ample recompence or punishment of the delinquents, and we have declared & do repeat that if the Inhabitants have suffered by any manner of persons under our command that we are ready to make immediate restitution. It is our duty to assure you that in future we shall resent every Indignity offered, nor will the simplicity of your language or the speciousness of your excuses be a satisfaction for the hostility of your actions.

We are Gent'n Your H'ble Servants,

Ed. Winslow—

Edward Winslow to Colonel Fanning.

Newport, Rhode Island, 25th Sept'r, 1779.

Sir,—I have the honor to report to you that in pursuance of the plan agreed on at New York, I on the 6th inst. embarked with Governor Wentworth's Volunteers on board the armed vessel under command of Mr. Leonard, and on the 9th we arrived at the harbor of Holmes Hole in the island of Martha's Vineyard. The Rebels on the coast had (as usual) been informed of our preparations, and on our approach were in motion all the distance from Seconet-point to Hyannas. The militia of the three counties of Plymouth, Bristol and Barnstaple were on the march, and the artillery moved from the town of Plymouth towards Falmouth. Finding that Martha's Vineyard was our object, the Troops & cannon were countermanded, and they only reinforced the two posts of Bedford and Falmouth. At the former they stationed 250 men, at the latter 300 men with three Field-pieces.

As it was your advice, as well as my inclination, to endeavor at conciliating the affections of the Inhabitants of these Islands by every means in my power, and at the same time not to insist upon the performance of any service from them which might subject them to the resentment of the rebels after my departure, I immediately forwarded the Requisition No. 1 of the inclosed papers, accompanied by the Letter No. 2—the one for their justification for coming on board, the other as a proof of our friendly intentions. * * * *

Before I proceed further in my journal of occurrences I shall beg leave to observe that the Inhabitants of the Elizabeth Islands are now in a predicament peculiar to themselves. Their situation is such as to admit of a free and constant intercourse with the people of the main, while their interviews with those of the King's service are accidental, seldom & short. Reports favorable to the Rebels are circulated with extreme assiduity, prejudices are imbibed and—for want of authentic intelligence—egregious mistakes are made relative to important facts. At the commencement of hostilities they engaged with reluctance, because they were exceedingly exposed to depredations from either party, but at length by the strategems of the rebels and their immediate influence they were seduced into the commission of open acts of treason, and they continued in arms against the King until they were deprived of them by Maj. Gen. Grey in Sept'r, 1778. He also obliged them to furnish considerable supplies for the King's Garrisons. By this exertion of the British Troops they were not only more confirmed in their ideas of danger, but they were also furnished with a sufficient apology for remaining in a state of neutrality & peace.

Conscious that in various respects they had deviated from their agreement with General Grey, they expected severity from us. A conduct directly opposed to such expectation disappointed them agreeably & procured us their confidence; so that from being timid, ambiguous & cunning they became free, explicit, & in some instances ingenuous. Upon the return of their committees the Inhabitants of the several towns assembled and without a dissentient voice, voted to supply us as far as they were able and their laborers and teams were immediately employed in procuring wood, &c.

On the 10th I was informed that Mr. Welsh, purser of the Restoration, being on shore on duty was taken by a party of Rebels from Falmouth As Welsh was a native of Boston & a very obnoxious character (having been an active Revenue officer) I did not think it improbable that he might receive indignities, but I was convinced by an answer to a letter of Mr. Leonard's from the commanding officer at Falmouth, that the Rebels meant to adopt a different kind of policy with us, and that Welsh was favored with particular indulgencies. I this day landed with Capt. Murray's party and was received by the inhabitants with as much civility as could be expected. Such articles as we wanted for our immediate consumption, were brought to us, and we paid for them in commodities useful to them. The scattering among them a few articles of British manufacture had not a bad effect—it revived their old predilection and produced comparisons between British & French commodities not favorable to the latter.

The 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th [September] I spent in reconnoitring the grounds in different parts of the island, attended by some of the principal inhabitants who began to give us new proofs of their hospitality and readiness to oblige us—they also made proposals to sell us their stock of cattle, poultry, &c., for which we engaged to pay them in tea, sugar, coffee, &c. Mr. Leonard appropriated a small vessel (the Fancy) to receive those articles and in two days she was loaded with poultry.

15th [Sept.] I received the following information, "That the General "Assembly of Massachusetts Bay continue to assess the Inhabitants of "Martha's Vineyard, and that the Rate Bills for the present year are now "in the hands of Benjamin Pease, jun'r, "who is appointed collector of taxes." [The letter goes on to state that certain persons on the island were serving on board armed vessels in the service of the rebels and had taken prizes; also that the pilots warned the vessels approachng in the offing of the presence of the squadron under Winslow and Leonard preventing their capture.]

Mr. Leonard * * ordered Capt. Baxter of the Leslie to take into custody the Collector of Taxes & to bring him & his Rate Bills to Holmes Hole, and he also issued a proclamation forbidding all pilots at their peril from pursuing a practice so detrimental to the service. Those who were concerned in the capture of Bell's Vessel instantly fled to the main—others who had been engaged in privateers surrendered & by way of atonement entered our service. The Collector and his Rate Bills were brought and we have reason to apprehend that the order, relative to the pilots, answered the purpose intended.

The Inhabitants were exceedingly gratified at the proceedings against the Collector. * * * *

I made a public declaration to them that as the taxes were assessed for the express purpose of levying war against the King, it would be considered as a most presumptious act in any person who should pay any proportion for that purpose. They requested that they might be permitted to represent this matter to the General Assembly. We consented that Mr. Atheam should pass to Boston on that business. He communicated our threats, &c., and obtained a temporary exemption. * *
On Atheams return he communicated to some of the principal men in the County of Barnstaple the indulgencies which he had obtained from the General Court. They warmly resented the partiality and declared that as their situations on the peninsula of Cape Codd were equally exposed to our depredations they would apply for the same privileges. * *
We have this day the pleasure of hearing that our vessels at Old Town had taken a prize from the West Indies laden with sugar, molasses & coffee.

On the 16th I received the declaration of Bosswell & Bradshaw relative to the sloop Nancymond.

I refer you to enclosures No. 12, 13, 14, 15 for all the subsequent transactions relative to Nantucket, and will only add that the committee after carefully attending to the proofs alleged in my letter, begged leave to withdraw their memorial and apologies and desired to throw themselves on our mercy and that we would make as favorable a representation as circumstances would admit. Altho' I acknowledge myself exceedingly affronted by their insinuations & deceitful conduct—I was disposed to avoid any severities, and I consented to make the best excuse possible for them.

Francis Green* to Edward Winslow.

New York, 25th Sept'r, 1779.

Dear Sir,—Enclosed in a letter from my kinsman, Joshua Winslow, Esq'r, lately arrived from Boston at Halifax, I rec'd a letter unsealed for you, which this serves to cover. I embrace the earliest opportunity of forwarding it.

*Francis Green was a Boston merchant. He graduated at Harvard. He was an ensign in the 40th Regiment at the siege of Louisburg, being but a boy of sixteen. He was a sturdy Loyalist, and a very entertaining biographical sketch of him is to be found in Sabine's American Loyalists. At the peace he settled in Nova Scotia, and was sheriff of the County of Halifax. He afterwards returned to the United States, and lived at Medford, Massachusetts, where he died in 1809.

By an extract from a Boston News Paper of 13th of this month, we find they were steadily watching the motions of your Fleet and determined if opportunity presented to effect the Destruction of it. It is a favorite object with them but I flatter myself their expectations will be frustrated by the Prudence of our Conductors.

That you may succeed in everything is the warm wish of

Dear Sir;

Yours with much esteem,

F. Green.

Rigdon Brice* to Edward Winslow.

Savannah, 6th November, 1779.

I thank you for the appointment you have been pleased to honor me with. * * The Provincials have been so scattered ever since they landed here (till lately) that it was with infinite difficulty a Muster could be obtained at all. When we returned from Augusta about the first of March, part of some Corps were left at Briar Creek, some at Hudson Ferry, Ebenezer, Savannah and Sunbury. I then endeavored to obtain a general Muster of the whole for the April Returns but could not effect it before the Army marched to So' Carolina. In May I followed them and joined in June on John's Island being then a month on my passage. The Stono affair immediately happened & the Army then returned to Beaufort & Savannah. Some of the Provincials remaining at Beaufort & on Lady's Island, I stayed there some time to Muster them, and then followed the main body to Savannah, where I arrived on the 20th August very sick; since which time I have not been out of my room, nay scarcely out of my bed till within these five days. Am now recovering fast but not able to finish the copies for this conveyance. * * *

Savannah, 25th Feb'y. 1780.

Sir,—I herewith transmit you returns of a muster of all the Provincial Corps in this Province, taken in Nov'r & Dec'r last; which is the first compleat muster I have been able to obtain since our arrival here, but some few of the Corps were frequently mustered, tho' I made no return to your office of them, thinking I should be able to make a general return before now; but as the movements of the Army during the summer prevented it, the Siege,* my illness, & the few opportunities of conveyance during the fall & winter, will I hope, induce you to excuse this long delay. And be assured, Sir, that I will use my utmost endeavours to make them at the regular periods hereafter. I am, Sir, Your much obliged Chip enclosed me several of your letters to him during your depredatory Excursion, so that you have corresponded with me unknown to yourself. I should have wrote you, but Chip. in his Letter after your last [A. D. 1779] advised me of your heroical Expedition, & desired me, as your locality would for some time be uncertain, to direct no more Letters to you till further Advice—this was a necessary precaution, as from the nature of your Service your Motion must be as eccentric, & your perihelion more uncertain than that of the Comet which we are now looking out for with all the Eyes in our heads; this apologizes for my not writing to you. Your Shandean description of your meeting with your good old Father on Prudence Island, is so pathetic, so sentimental, so feeling, so—so—so exactly as it should be, that I have read it, oftener than I have my Bible, since I rec'd it—I never read it but every fiddle string in my whole Composition vibrates in strict Unison with yours when on Prudence Island—I would have gone as far to be an Eye witness of that Scene of paternal & filial affection, as I would to have seen Yorick's Meeting with poor Maria at Moulines—"God," said Maria, "tempers the wind to the shorn Lamb"—so may he do to your venerable Father!—"shorn indeed!"—mais, n' import.

I lament that the Evacuation of R. Island cut you short in your career of Glory—you ask what I think of it—why faith, there is so much to be said, pro & con that I don't know what to think. As Ronchong said about dying, it was a d——d thing to be sure but then appearances seemed to require it; and I don't know whether Sr. H. Clinton could prudently have gone with so great a force to Carolina without recalling the Troops from R. Island; and if he succeeds against Charlestown, you may retake R. I. when you please—much may be said for the Measure, tho' on your side of the water, much is said against it.

I thank you for the short Account of your incursions, you refer me to Gov'r Hutchinson for particulars, when I see him, but I am sorry to say I never expect to see him again in this world—he has lately bury'd his Son Wm. who dy'd of a Consumption, & my friends write me from London that he is going in the same way, very fast, that he is so far gone as to see no body but his physician & his Children, and that his Daughter Mrs. Oliver is going with the same disorder. Sic transit Gloria Mundi—as you say. I have wrote Chip in two Letters, & shall triplicately and quadruplicately,* desiring him to send me by the return Bristol Ships, a few Newtown pippins, Shagbarks and Cranberrys—do spur him up. You con't conceive what a regale Newtown pippins, Shagbarks & Cranberrys would be to us Refugees. I have nothing new to tell you of a public or private nature, we are in hourly Expectation of important News from Sr. H. Clinton—I hope when it comes to see the City of Bristol again brilliantly illuminated, as it was lately for Sr. G. Rodney's success. Mrs. Sewall, Mr. Sam Sewall, my Sister & my two Boys are all in good health & assure you of their best wishes.

*The risk of letters failing to reach their destination was so great, owing to the dangers of the sea and the number of hostile cruisers, that not only duplicates but triplicates, etc., were frequently sent as opportunity offered, by succeeding ships.

†Robert Hallowell, of Boston, was comptroller of customs at that port. In 1768 he ordered John Hancock's vessel, the "Liberty," to be seized for smuggling wine and removed under the guns of the Romney ship of war. An affray with the populace ensued, in which Hallowell was severely wounded. In 1778 he went to Bristol, England. In 1792 he returned to Boston. He died in Gardiner, Maine, April 1818, in his 79th year.

writing, I had determined to break through it even before I got your letter by Capt. Murray which I duly received about ten days ago, and I believe is the only one I have had from you for near twelve months.

Murray arrived in Ireland some time in January, he tarried there near three months and came to this place on his way to Cowbridge to see his father.* He returned from thence last Tuesday, and Thursday evening set off for his first visit to London.

You mentioned having an interview with your father. I am sure it must have made you both exceedingly happy. I wrote him some time ago; when you write him do mention it, and give my most affectionate regards to all your family. I have been in this place eight months; how much longer it will be my residence I cannot tell, for unless our chest is replenished soon I must go into Wales or somewhere else. I got some friends to apply to Colonel Dalrymple and was in hopes I should have been able to have gone to New York with him—but he gave me no encouragement, and I can assure you I wanted but very little, to embark. He said he had nothing worth my acceptance, but I believe if I had been in London at the time I should have stood a good chance of going out with him.

I have inclosed you some letters from Boston, I will be exceedingly obliged to you to forward them by some careful hand. Mrs. H. begs her best Regards, & I am, my Dr. Ned—

Colonel Edmund Fanning to Ward Chipman.

Smith Street, 2d Sept. 1780.

Dear Sir—It is impossible for me to say how happy I am made by my friend Winslow's letter to me, and the perusal of the Colonel's Letter to Gov. Wentworth. His Representation of the discouragements under which His Majesty's Amer. Corps have been raised, & Have served, merits the Warmest & most lasting Acknowledgements of Gratitude from every person connected with these Corps, as well as from all others who wish well to the Royal Cause & the Glory of the British Nation.

I am so pleased with the whole Letter, and so deeply interested in some parts of it, that if I had time I should possess myself of a Copy of it —but I must not detain it a moment lest the present opportunity of conveyance should be lost.

Yours, Dear Chip,

Very sincerely,

New York 22d. Septr., 1780.

My dear Sir,

Our Chipman made me supremely happy this Morning by delivering me your Letter. I was absolutely bewildered and lost for a Moment under that sudden Revolution of Thoughts, which are known only to the feeling & Grateful Few; how I should most amply enjoy, & fully requite, that Goodness and Friendship which You so eminently possess, & I so happily experience. At first I determined, & so requested Mr. Chipman to inform You, that You should be Lieut. Colo. to the King's Amer. Regim't. & that to effect this point Geo. Campbell* should be aided by me as Lieut. Colonel Commandant in raising a second Batt'n, but I shall more easily succeed, & at the same time more effectually promote the King's Service and Our Country's Good by placing You at the Head of this second Child of my Wishes and Ambition; and if You approve, I will not only be unto You as a Captain Plume & a Serjeant Kite, but in my Endeavors to promote your success in raising your Corps, You shall find me capable of the most virtuous & manly Friendship. Think on these Things, & the Lord give you Understanding to chuse that which is right & best. I ever am, most sincerely and unalterably,

Dear Col.

Your affectionate humble Servant,

Joshua Upham to Edward Winslow.

Dec. 8, 1780.

Dear Winslow, * * * Should the war terminate at this moment and as it ought I shall find it uphill work to extricate myself from pecuniary embarrassment, and before over-taken by old age, to procure anything sufficient for the decent education of my children. * * * All military employments are disposing of on this side the water to a few of our Friends and to all Rebels who will come & receive them—In God's name where shall I find myself? * * * Suppose we jointly deliberate on this, to us very important business.

A General DeLancey for New York, a General Skinner for New Jersey, a General Arnold at large, have and are raising Brigades—& why not a General Ruggles for Massachusetts-Bay &c.; Should this be permitted by the Commander in Chief why may not you & I be the very men to undertake the raising a Battalion each which, with the Dragoons to be raised by Ruggles, will compleat the Brigade. In this way all the men of influence within and some Friends without the lines from the Eastern Provinces may at the close of the war find themselves on sure ground of provision; you & I shall have it in our power to provide for our Boys &c. * * *

Let us make application to the Commander in Chief, subscribed by a number of Gentlemen from the Eastern Provinces, requesting that Ruggles be permitted to raise a Brigade from that part of the country. This done we will apply for warrants, you for one and myself for the other Battalion, either as Colonels or Lt. Colonels, in which case we shall with the Regiment of Dragoons employ every Gent'n from that country who would wish to be recommended, by which means we shall extend an Influence to all parts of that country. We shall by spirited exertions undoubtedly recruit many even in the present situation of affairs. We shall, being properly organized, be in a situation & condition to avail ourselves of every favorable opening while Government are urging their operations to the Eastward as I think they will early in the next spring.

* * * In this way I communicate my sentiments to you, perhaps you will convince me that all my hopes are groundless & merely ideal. I have not hinted my intention either to Ruggles or Murray, I wish them to get fairly on their Legs before their attention is diverted to anything else. I really think my plan if adopted will promote theirs. * * * &c.

J. Upham.

Col. Winslow's Strictures on Sir H. Clinton.*

It was very soon evident to me that the impediments which were thrown in the way of my friends Murray & Upham could not fail to check their progress. The stupor which seemed to seize his Excellency & which nothing short of a super-natural event can rouse him from, effectually prevented any military enterprises. The defensive system which he adopted was so complete that there was no possibility of advancing without the lines and it must have been a very active and determined deserter that could get within them. 'Tis unnecessary to observe that a campaign in which all the Grenadiers of the Army are employed in digging, and half the Dragoons foraging on foot among peaceable inhabitants, could not be productive of capital acquisitions. I leave it to Upham & Murray to give you a detail of the various difficulties which they have encountered & of which I should probably have had my share. From these and other considerations I have at times rejoiced that my offer was rejected.

*The letter containing these strictures may have been addressed to Sir John Wentworth, but there is nothing in the rough copy filed among the Winslow papers to enable one to determine.

The prodigious events which have lately taken place in this country render our conjectures very uncertain. [Winslow had written here the following through which he afterwards put his pen:—"For my own part "as I never despond, I indulge a hope that I shall yet have a chance of "seeing a General that's neither a Rebel or a Histerical Fool at the Head "of a British Army in America & when that happens I shall have no "doubt that the war will terminate as every true friend to the constitu- "tion wishes."]

I do not despond but have yet hopes that every man of spirit in the country will have an opportunity to show it to advantage. You will undoubtedly have the earliest information of what may be intended another year, and it is only for you to point out what your wishes are relative to your matters here.

I do not relinquish my plan but will catch at the first fair chance. Murray has persevered thro' an infinite variety of difficulties & the Corps is, spite of all opposition, respectable & could he be favored with a chance to operate in the Country I have no doubt it would be distinguished.

I fear Upham will fail.

Edward Winslow's Memorial.

In a memorial to Sir H. Clinton dated at N. Y. Dec. 28, 1780, Winslow states, "That on the 15th July, 1776, he was appointed Muster Master General of his Majesty's Provincial Forces with an allowance of 10 shillings per day and that he at the same time was Secretary to a Board of General Officers of which the Right Hon. Earl Percy was President, for which he received 10 shillings per day. That afterwards Col. Innes was appointed Inspector General of Provincial Forces with 20 shillings per day and the provincial rank of Lieut. Colonel, and that he was assured he would obtain like rank and pay for himself on due application." He claims that having anticipated a movement of the army towards the province from which he came, and the hope of enjoying Lt. Colonel's rank and pay in a line of active service, he did not solicit honorary rank. Winslow urges the increase of his pay to 20 shillings on the ground of the great increase in the Provincial Forces and on the principle of justice to himself & to a family once affluent but now reduced through the sacrifice of their possessions.

In another memorial to Sir Henry Clinton asking for leave of absence, Winslow mentions that he was formerly Naval Officer for the Port of Plymouth, and afterwards Collector of Customs for the Port of Boston in New England. He did not succeed in getting his memorial attended to, the Commander in Chief replying, "It can't be now."

Sir,—

His Excellency the Commander in Chief's answer to my memorial for leave of absence has been communicated to me by the Deputy Inspector General, nothing short of the consideration that I am thereby reduced to extreme distress could induce me to give you any additional trouble on this subject, but I am so seriously affected by this decision that I flatter myself I should be forgiven for relating the following circumstances.

That I was among the first who made a voluntary sacrifice of property & enjoyments & joined the British Troops after the commencement of the rebellion, and to the present time I have been constantly employed with the army. When I was appointed Muster-Master-General to the Provincial Forces there were only two companies raised, and even then I received twenty shillings a day for mustering them and for my other appointments They are now increased to several thousands. All the returns of musters from the various posts on this continent are made to my office, and (in addition to the common duty of a muster-master) I am obliged to examine all the subsistence accounts, &c, to certify their concurrence with the Muster Rolls. During the whole of my services in this department I have never received any species of emolument except a bare allowance for my travelling expences, and I beg leave to add that in the execution of my duty I have never in any instance to my knowledge given just cause for complaint or censure.

I have in the province of Massachusetts an infirm father, upwards of seventy years old, to whom I am indebted for the best education this country could afford, and for innumerable other favors. He has a wife and two daughters with him (my mother & sisters.) This family habituated to affluence have now no possible resource from which they can obtain even the necessaries of life without my assistance, and I have hitherto had it in my power, by secluding myself almost from society & practising a system of rigid economy, to save them from burthening government by adding to the number of distress'd supplicants. But by the circumstances mentioned in my first memorial I have been deprived of one half the allowance which I was accustomed to receive and am thereby effectually prevented from performing the necessary duty to my family.

Since my connection with the British Army I have received some very flattering assurances of friendship from some very respectable persons in England. To avail myself of their offer was my only motive for asking a leave of absence at this time, having no other possible resort to save my friends from wretchedness. * * *

I should quit the army with reluctance even for a few months. From Lexington engagement to the present time I have omitted no opportunity of serving as a Volunteer when I had it in my power, and I declare that I eagerly anticipate opportunities of exerting myself in the situation prayed for in my memorial in preference to an application in England for civil offices, or the gratuitous bounty of government, which others have obtained whose pretensions were by no means superior to mine, unless they have acquired that superiority by begging instead of earning their bread.

These facts, so peculiarly interesting to myself & friends must apologize for the confidence in your humanity again to represent my situation to the Commander in Chief, satisfy'd that when it is known to his Excellency he will indulge me in improving the interest of my friends for the purposes mentioned.

The singular advantage which would attend my going in this Fleet compels me to be thus importunate. I have the honor to be,

With every sentiment of respect,

Your most obliged &c, &c,

E. Winslow.

Major Oliver DeLancey,
Acting Adjutant General.

The nature of the present war in America is so peculiar, so different from what British armies have been formerly accustomed to, that experience acquired in other countries avails very little in this. Veterans who served campaigns in Germany and are perfectly acquainted with manoeuvering of armies in regular sieges and defences, find themselves novices when engaged against an army like the present, and bold as the assertion may appear I venture to affirm that the British have gained near as much

*Sir John Wentworth, baronet, the last Royal Governor of New Hampshire, and surveyor of the King's woods in North America. Many interesting particulars relating to him will be found in these pages. A pretty full account of his life is contained in Sabine's Loyalists of the American Revolution. Other particulars are to be found in Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia. Sabine says of him: "In my judgment not one of the public men who clung to the royal cause will go down to posterity with a more enviable fame." At college he was a classmate and friend of John Adams. Sir John was ever a warm friend of Edward Winslow, whose abilities he greatly admired, and whose welfare he did his best to promote.

from their observations of the Provincial and American Troops as the latter have acquired from them. I will only mention one circumstance by way of illustration, which does not in any degree derogate from the honor of the British (God forbid that I should say or write anything that did). When the British Light Infantry began their operations in this country they were almost compact in their movements, regular in their marching and from habit and general instructions they appeared averse to every attempt to screen or cover themselves from danger however imminent. Hence many of them were picked off in all the first skirmishes. It was observed that on all such occasions the enemy placed themselves behind trees and walls, etc., and it was apparently necessary to take them in their own way. In consequence a new word was adopted and the Flank Corps were on subsequent occasions ordered "To Tree"—a word of command as well known to them now as any other.

The theoretical part of military business is not so particularly intricate that a gentleman may not acquire a competent knowledge of it in a short time; much of the necessary knowledge of an officer is not what's generally understood by the term professional, and surely an acquaintance with the country in which he operates, with the temper of its inhabitants, their manners, &c., must be an essential qualification. I have the highest idea of the necessity of discipline and subordination myself but I will not subscribe to the doctrine that it requires a whole life spent in the service to give an officer a just idea of it. Many Provincial officers and very many young officers of the Line are proofs to the contrary. I know that experience is necessary to complete a military character, but that only men who have rose thro' all the gradations of military rank are fit to be trusted with military commands is an idea which I would hope was originally formed in the head of Sir Wm. [Howe] and would never descend farther than to his immediate successor. I would not detract one iota from the respect due to veterans, but in Heaven's name when a state is in danger should men of capability, liberal education and extensive knowledge remain unemployed until all the serjeants of the army are provided for? Surely this cannot be prudence or policy. This war has made many good soldiers for the rebels and it has added many good soldiers to the British. The discipline of the Americans is indisputably copied from the British, but the British in turn have in several instances profited by the examples of their enemies.

A General Burgoyne may contend that a regiment of raw recruits headed by inexperienced leaders cannot carry martial enterprises with success, he however ought to acknowledge that substitutes for discipline and experience were found in the American armies encountered by him, which more than compensated for the want of those qualities.

Having long since established in my own mind by this kind of reasoning the propriety and expediency of employing the gentlemen of this country, I readily declared my resolution to engage in the provincial service. Till the present time I have seen no fair opening. The anticipations of impediments in the recruiting business, had it not been for the discouraging partiality shewn to particular regiments, would never have discouraged me, but the necessity of contact with men whose ideas of service were different from my own was the obstacle that weighed most in my mind; for till very lately there have been to all the Provincial regiments recommendations of officers which were next to positive orders from the Commander in Chief. The present plan of Upham, Murray and myself is calculated to obviate all my objections. The task of recruiting a regiment is certainly arduous but perseverance in it will always ensure success. The progress which Murray has already made is a proof of this assertion, altho' he has had difficulties enough to encounter. In one instance a plan as well digested as ever a recruiting officer formed failed merely from the difficulty of obtaining a pass from Head Quarters to bring off the recruits, and 18 men who would have been doing duty as dragoons in the service are now suffering punishment in Simsbury mines.* Another attempt of less consequence has failed in the Jerseys thro' very extraordinary delays—a third is now under consideration and it appears to me is of so much consequence that it must be adopted. There are a sort of men here who with small pretensions affect a knowledge of this country that indulge themselves in very free observations on the nature of the recruiting business. They laugh at the idea of raising a regiment in the present situation of matters. * * *

We are anxious to exert our utmost endeavors to form a Brigade when we receive your consent to command it. I am sensible that in making this request we raise a proportion of difficulties for you, but I please myself with the consideration that the illiberal observations which may be made on giving the rank of Brigadier General may with equal propriety be let loose on the rank of Lieut. Colonel. * * * I venture to assert that were it necessary the signature of almost every man from the Eastern Provinces might be obtained to a request that you should command the proposed corps. I am sure it can need no additional motive but the public service to ensure your exertions. I need not increase this already extravagant epistle to convince you of that. I observed to you that I had not as yet obtained a warrant. I am in no hurry, nor have I the least objection to waiting until Murray's corps is completed and Upham's respectable. My situation is not exactly the same with theirs.

*Many staunch Loyalists were imprisoned in the mines at Simsbury in Connecticut.

Murray's all depends on the success of this business, and Upham (whose character must be given you by others less partial than myself) has at present little else to depend upon. My own appointment being at the Head of a Department is a very different one, and although the present emoluments of it have been screwed down to the last peg by the Strainer of Gnats and Swallower of camels who at present commands, I have less to complain of than my neighbors. I have no reason to suppose that I shall fail in my endeavors to secure appointment as Lieut. Colonel only that I have failed in every attempt that I have made since Sir Henry Clinton commanded here.

It was not till every mark of respect was shewn our first patron and every argument used to induce him to exert his influence that Upham, Murray and myself presumed to solicit for ourselves. To gratify that worthy man [Gen. Timothy Ruggles] and to facilitate a plan which was concerted by General Vaughan and himself, and which was afterwards objected to at Head Quarters, we cheerfully engaged with a party of Refugees from Rhode Island, with whom we every day risqued our reputation as well as our lives, presuming that the end of our toils would be an appointment to gratify our ambitions by raising the long talked of brigade. Although our successes were much beyond our most sanguine expectations, we found ourselves in the same predicament as before. In short it was evident that the General (Ruggles) had from the unpardonable inattention to him and from other causes contracted such a disgust to present men and measures here, that he could neither negotiate with confidence or serve with alacrity, and there was such a mixture of virtue even with his obstinacy that while we deprecated it as unfortunate for ourselves we dared not oppose it. * * *

Rigdon Brice, Deputy Muster Master in the South, to Edward Winslow.

Sir,—

From the nature of the service in this Country it has not been in my power to transmit Returns to your office so regularly as I ought to have done. Lord Cornwallis has been pleased to allow me an assistant, which will enable me to perform this duty in future. He is just returned from mustering the Troops in Georgia.

I have now sent copies of the Muster Rolls & the strength & distribution of all the Provincial Forces in this Quarter to the 24 June (except the N. York Volunteers, 3d Batt. N. Jersey Vol'rs & South Carolina Royalists, which have not been mustered since April). The British Legion* met with very considerable loss on the 17th Jan., since which time they have not been mustered & are now in Virginia so that they are not included.

I am ordered immediately to Wilmington, where are the Royal North Carolina Regt., a new corps called North Carolina Highland Reg't,† and a new Troop recruiting; returns of which I will send as soon as possible.

Every necessary of life is so extremely dear that I find it impossible to live upon the pay I have hitherto received, and this obliges me to beg you will be pleased to make some addition to it. Major Prevost has honored me with his leave to request that you will please to write to him on this head, and Col. Innes I am sure will do me the favor to promote it, as I have received only five shillings a day since Col. Campbell left Georgia.

During my long sicknes in Georgia Mr. Donald Frazer did my business for above six months, as I cannot obtain any pay for him without your order, I beg you will please grant him something for that service. He was very attentive to the business and has suffered much by the Rebellion.

I have the honor to be, &c. &c.,

Rigdon Brice, D. M'r. M'r. Prov. Forces.

Mrs. Sheaffe to Edward Winslow.

Boston 3d Feb'ry, 1781.

I thank you my dear friend for your kind attention. Capt. Folger called on me by your desire and told me you had lately heard from Hale.‡ Why does he not write me? If he knew the pain his omission gives me he would, he must—or he does not deserve the character I hear of him in various ways. I know not what to think; do my friend explain this mystery, it hangs heavy upon my heart.

*The British Legion was a celebrated Loyalist corps, consisting both of cavalry and infantry. It was organized early in 1778, and during the southern campaign was commanded by Lieut. Col. Banistre Tarleton, a dashing cavalry officer. At the peace in 1783 the corps was sent to Port Matoon, N. S., to be disbanded. Few, however, remained there.

†The North Carolina Highlanders were organized by the McDonald clan, who had lately emigrated from Scotland. The husband of the celebrated Flora McDonald was one of their number. The corps saw hard service during the war.

‡The reference is to her son, Roger Hale Sheaffe. He had the good fortune to attract the attention of Lord Percy (afterwards Duke of Northumberland), by whose assistance he was advanced rapidly in the military line. He became colonel of the 49th Regiment, and took a leading part in the war of 1812. He was knighted and made a baronet, and became a lieutenant general in the army. A biography of nine pages in Sabine's American Loyalists tells of his romantic career. See Edward Winslow's reference to him in this book in a letter written in September, 1810.

I wrote you by Mr. Ludlow; under the same cover was a letter from your sister P[enelope] who is surprised at your mention of not having rec'd a line from her since May last. No my friend no place, time, or circumstance can make her unmindful of you. She is too good a creature to neglect so justly beloved a Brother. I own I was mortified when I found Capt. Folger did not bring me a letter. Have again wrote to Mr. Geyer (which letter beg you to see) about the same matter the rent. I am sure you my dear friend will assist me in getting it all in your power. Gen'l Robinson hired it of me himself in person; indeed I want it, did you know how much, it would pain your feeling heart.

My family join in kind regards. I am my dear friend, with the sincerest attachment.

Yours,

Sus'a Sheaffe.

Edward Winslow to J. Banister.

June 9, 1781.

I desire that neither Mrs. B. nor yourself would suffer the amusements or company of England to wean you from your attachments to this country. Remember that nothing can recompense me for the tears I shed —I am not ashamed to recollect them tho' a soldier—at leaving our once happy town of Boston but the pleasure of attending some of its best inhabitants to their old agreeable situations.

My best regards to Mrs. B., assure her that no vicissitudes can make me forget the many instances of her attention and kindness.

I have been one whole year soliciting leave from my superiors to visit Great Britain. Perhaps by another year I may obtain it."

Capt. Robert Bethel* to Edward Winslow.

East Battery, Halifax April 20, 1782.

My dear Friend,—

Not any circumstance since my memory ever gave me more satisfaction than the receipt of your, your good father's and your virtuous and amiable sister's letters by Major Brace [of the Royal Fencibles.] I cannot well express the joy I felt that that good man is at last free from the brutish insults of an ignorant set of D——ls where he last resided, and that the joy will be still more compleat the moment I hear of the arrival of your dear mother and sister Penelope. Your father's letter convinces me he has a great share of the same flow of spirits that used to enliven the little Plymouthian society when you were all happy together. * * * I most sincerely thank you for all your congratulations and the trouble you took in my favor and I hope I shall always entertain a lively sense of gratitude to you for the honor of the commission I now bear [as Captain in the King's Orange Rangers] as you have been the immediate cause of my procuring it. * * * I should have been extremely happy to have sent you some Salmon and Lobsters but they are not yet in season. Have been trying to get some potatoes that are good but without success, but I promise you by the first conveyance not to omit any article in my power to send you.

*Robert Bethel was a captain in the King's Orange Rangers. He had formerly served as quarter master of the corps, and his promotion was largely owing to Col. Winslow's efforts.

I am your much obliged & sincere friend,

Rob. Bethel.

Rigdon Brice to Edward Winslow.

Charleston, 25th Jan'y, 1782.

Sir,—On my return in June from the long march thro' N. Carolina, I immediately began to prepare Returns of the Provincial forces in this District for your office, and sent them in his Majesty's Ship the Hope, a copy of my letter is inclosed. I proceded to Wilmington & on my return here in Dec'r, the Hope being lost, we have made up another sett to June, compleat, which I hope may come safe to hand.

We have mustered all the Corps in this province to 24th Dec'r. I am going immediately to Georgia and on seeing the Regiments there, will transmit returns of the whole to that period. When these returns were closed I was very sick, and desired Mr. Jenkins, my assistant, to write you.

Absolute necessity obliges me to beg you will be pleased to make some addition to my pay.

I have the Honor to be Sir,
Your most obedient and very humble Serv't,

Rigdon Brice.

Fort Franklin,* Lloyd's Neck,

Dear Winslow,—

The bearers Serg't Joslin and Serg't Carr have applied to me for leave to go to you and if you permit to N. York. Mr. Chace has recommended

Fort Franklin was no doubt named in honor of William Franklin, the last Royal Governor of New Jersey. He was a natural son of Benjamin Franklin. A full biography of him will be found in Sabine's American Loyalists. Lloyd's Neck lies west of Huntington, on the north shore of Long Island. Major Joshua Upham commanded the Loyalists here, many of whom supported themselves by cutting wood for the army at New York. Many of the Kingston, N. B. them in such a manner as to convince me I am safe in granting their request. They will if you do not indulge them further return immediately to this place, on which condition they go. There are some few Privates lately of the Loyal New Englanders who suppose you intended their discharge, but do not know whether they are discharged or not; these men wished to be passed from the Neck, to which purpose you will be so good as to send me a list of such names as I may properly permit to leave the Neck. I am in great haste, you will therefore excuse that list of Particulars which I wish to communicate for your amusement; but as you will, as I hope, in a short time do us the honor to visit this Post in Company with Governor Franklin and Major Murray, I will save my budget for that time. I have the Honor to be Sir,

Your Friend & humble servant,

J. Upham.

[Shortly after the surrender of Lord Cornwallis there appeared an ironical advertisement in the New York Gazette from which the following extracts are taken.]

The late surrender of Lord Cornwallis and his Army, must undoubtedly produce the most happy effects to the British Nation by accelerating the determination of the war and promoting the views of the Ministry with respect to America. It will unavoidably interest Foreign Powers in behalf of the English and has taken off a man who was inimical to the Glory of Sir Henry Clinton and perpetually counteracting his manoeuvres. In a word no one can tell or foresee the happy consequences of this important event. Nevertheless the subscriber finds it convenient for various reasons to remove to Europe. All persons therefore who have any demands against or are indebted to him are requested to make a speedy settlement.

Bristol [England] April 22, 1782.

Dear Chip,—Your letters of 28th July & 18th August have astonished me—you say you have not received a line from me for twelve months, in which time I wrote you I think five. * * * I have been told that out of seven or eight ships which sailed from this port, five were captured and one foundered, among these six were I suppose my letters. In one of them I wrote to the two Neddys—Winslow and Tyng, tho' the former did not deserve it and the latter but by courtesy. * * *

You tell me your income is near £500 per annum and yet you lay up nothing—permit my friendship to suggest that at your time of life you ought out of that sum to be laying up something. I know the unbounded generosity of your disposition, but believe me the most generous when at the top of the hill of life do not always look back with complacency and self approbation. Prudent economy is a virtue which takes rank above profuse generosity. Upon looking back on my past life I often lament that I had not a friend to point my attention to a future period in this world. Not that I repent of the few acts of friendship and humanity which I have to reflect upon, and I think I should have had more and yet have been in better circumstances had I retrenched those foolish expenses in living which benefitted no mortal & which had perhaps their origin in emulation and false pride rather than in any virtuous principle. * * * Look around us as far as your acquaintance with mankind extends and you will find estates have been saved rather than gotten. * * *

There Chip, I don't know how you'll relish my sermonizing, but like it or not, you know it comes from an old friend—perhaps you'll say an old fool. However you may read it to my friend Ned (Winslow) the first Sunday after you receive it if you meet him. I know he will laugh, but tell him I love him with all my heart and soul, and therefore I wish him to give it his serious and devout attention. I wish you would persuade Ned to write me his opinion upon matters and things, aye—apropos again, tell him I wish he would be more niggardly of his money and less of his letters.

My two dear sons have both promised to write you by this opportunity but their time is so entirely filled up at their different schools that I question whether they will be able. I have the most pleasing accounts of them from their masters. * * *

But enough of my boys, it serves to fill up the sheet and indulge parental fondness.

Write me soon—en attendant, adieu,

Yours invariably,

Jon. Sewell.

EXPLORATION COMMITTEE.

Instructions for Messrs. Amos Botsford, Samuel Cummings* and Frederick Hauser† Agents for the Loyalists who purpose to settle in Nova Scotia as well those who go this Autumn [1782] as those who are to follow in the Spring.

That on their arrival in Nova Scotia they apply themselves to discover whether a Tract or Tracts of Land free from all disputed Titles, either with the Indians or former Grantees, can be found sufficient to accommodate the Loyalists and their Families who shall remove thither.

They will examine the soil, timber, game, limestone, rivers, bays,

He came to Annapolis with his wife and two children in company with Amos Botsford, Frederick Hauser and some 500 Loyalists in October, 1782. Some account of the circumstances connected with the voyage and arrival at Annapolis will be found in Miss F. E. Murray's interesting Memoir of Dr. Le Baron Botsford, p. 14.

creeks, harbors, streams and ponds of water with regard to mills, fishing trade, etc. They will examine the face of the country whether it be hilly, stoney, sandy, clayey, etc.

They will enquire what lands in the neighbourhood are granted and to whom, whether the grants be forfeited, or whether they may be purchased and at what rate; and whether advantageous terms may not be made with the present proprietors.

They will endeavor to ascertain as near as they can what will be the difficulties and obstructions in forming new settlements, and what will be the probable advantages.

That they keep a journal of their proceedings and register their observations, noting well the distances from the principal settlements already made, and from noted rivers and harbors, as well as the obstructions in travelling and transporting.

That such lands as may be obtained be distributed and divided among the proposed adventurers in as just and equitable a manner as the nature of the case will admit of; and that they make Reports of their proceedings from time to time as early as may be to the Secretary of the Agency in New York.

Sarah Winslow to Benjamin Marston.

Six weeks ago I wrote you, my worthy cousin, but was disappointed in the opportunity I expected to have sent it by; am sorry I did not send it by some other, being sure it would have afforded you pleasure, as it was expressive of the real happiness we then enjoyed. At that time we were favored with a large share. My Father under the care of our very attentive friend Doctor Bayley recovered his health. We were comfortable settled, blessed with having my brother with us, and constantly surrounded by a pleasing circle of chearful Friends—all entertaining agreeable expectations that Spring would open with enlivening prospects. Alas they are now at an end—Sad is the reverse, our fate seems now decreed, and we left to mourn out our days in wretchedness. No other resource for millions but to submit to the tyranny of exulting enemys or settle a new country. I am one of the number that gladly would embark for Nova Scotia was it either prudent or proper, but I am told it will not do for me at present. What is to become of us, God only can tell. In all our former sufferings we had hope to support us—being deprived of that is too much.

Was there ever an instance, my dear Cousin, can any history produce one, where such a number of the best of human beings were deserted by the government they have sacrificed their all for?

The open enemys of Great Britain have gained their point, and more than ever they could have had impudence to have asked for—while their brave, persevering Noble Friends, who have suffered and toiled for years, and whom they were bound by every tie of honour and gratitude to assist, are left without friends, without fortune, without prospect of support but from that Being who has hitherto supported us, and upon whom we must rely for further protection. This "peace" brings none to my heart, my Brother, my darling Edward, who I wish never again to be separated from, is now hasting away—may he meet you upon his arrival in Halifax. You my cousin I hope will be much with him. He has a most tender affection for you. As his employ will lead him to various parts, you probably will have more frequent opportunity of writing to us here than he will. * * * Do my friend, as you value the peace of this family, caution him to take care of himself. He has been very well, but I am fearfull his fatigue now will injure him. The happiness he has afforded us is beyond my pen to tell you. Since my Father's recovery I have had no alloy to my felicity except my Mother's absence. Poor Lady she will now come jest as her son is gone. Here it's thought best for us to continue for some months—or until it is known what better we can do. Severe are the struggles I must now have with myself. We are parting with numbers who have formed a most delighted society, and when they have all taken their departure, new scenes will there be to hurt my feelings every hour. My Sister, happy girl, is entirely reconciled to staying; if she cannot enjoy one set is determined to another, my sensibility is too great for it. I wish to retire entirely to my own family and endeavor to remain unmolested. My Brother is now seeking a house for us out of the City, he has great consolation in leaving us in charge of so good a man as Doctor Bayley.* It is out of my power, my Cousin, to do justice to the

In 1776 he was a surgeon in the army, but retired shortly afterwards to private life. His wife to whom he was devotedly attached, died in 1777. He occupied the chairs of anatomy and surgery in Columbia College, and was a leading writer in medical publications.

benevolence & kindness of this gentleman. From our first landing here to this hour he has been the most attentive and extraordinary friend that perhaps a family ever met with. Under his care my Father now enjoys better health than he has done for ten years. His study is not only to relieve our "pains" but to make us happy.

This scrawl will make you a partaker of our sufferings; but it will also I hope make you keep in remembrance that it is in your power to alleviate them by writing a line by every conveyance. You are a Christian and Phylosopher, teach me so to be.

My Father, Brother and Sister joyn in love to you. Do remember me kindly to Mr. and Mrs. Deblois and Polly Little when you see them. Adieu. Happiness attend you, will ever pray Annapolis Royal† 15th May, 1783.

My dear Chip—St. Paul in all his travels never experienced one hundredth part of the difficulties which I've encountered since I left you. I am notwithstanding in perfect health and in high spirits, nor shall any rascally vicissitudes which happen in this blackguard world lower 'em.

When I arrived here those unfortunate little ones that God had been so civil as to consign to my care were all sick with the measles—I hope I have convinced Him that he could not have put them in better hands. There was not a place to put their heads in—Col. Small* upon hearing that I had embarked for this place and knowing the difficulty of obtaining quarters) had sent an express from Halifax and had procured two rooms for me, but it was in a family where I could not mix; I therefore instantly hired a place on the other side the river for £17 currency a year—a very tolerable farm with a house almost as large as my log house, divided into two rooms,† where we are snug as pokers.—Peter Ryerson will give you a description of the whole business. He returns to [New] York to settle his own affairs. I've told him to apply to you and if you do anything for him give me an order for the fees as I have had a number of things of him. He has been very useful to us. What shall I say to you my friend—When I recollect the enormous obligations which I am under to Tom Coffin and yourself I am overwhelm'd—they make me cry By Heaven.

At the time of the international boundary arbitration he made a survey of the River St. Croix (A. D. 1797). He settled at Granville, Annapolis Co., N. S., where he died in 1816, aged 81 years. His son Thomas lived at St. John, N. B.

When I arrive at Halifax I shall write you very particularly, at present I have no time. Adieu my dear Chip and Coffin, may God Almighty prosper you more than he has done.

Your most grateful & affect.

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Thomas A. Coffin and Ward Chipman.

[First part missing; written probably in May, 1783].

* * * I intended to write to you Tom Coffin particularly but I really am unable to the task. I however must tell somebody that the Capt. of the ship Peggy‡ is the most extraordinary character in the world—'tis impossible to give an idea of his attention, uncommon generosity and kindness to the unfortunate who came with us. Tell this to Mr. Watson, because he loves to hear of benevolent actions.

*The reference is to Col. John Small commanding the Young Royal Highland Emigrants, or 84th regiment, then in garrison at Halifax. He is frequently mentioned in Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia. Some account of the corps will be found in Patterson's History of Pictou, N. S., pp. 120-122. Colonel Small was appointed lieutenant governor and commander in chief of the Island of Guernsey in 1793. See this book under date Jan. 2, 1794.

†The house was enlarged and improved by Colonel Winslow; he gives a humorous description of it under date 29th April, 1785, in this book. It was situated in Granville, directly opposite Annapolis.

‡Captain Jacob Wilson. See letter under date 7th July, 1783, in this book. The ship Peggy evidently brought a number of distressed Loyalists to Annapolis. Brook Watson, as commissary at New York, received the applications of those desirous of going to Nova Scotia and made arrangements for provisioning them on the voyage and after their arrival. In a letter to Rev. Dr. Brown, written in July, 1791, Watson observes: "In 1783, as commissary general to the army serving in North America, it became my duty, under the command of Sir Guy Carleton, now Lord Dorchester, to embark 35,000 Loyalists at New York to take shelter in Nova Scotia."

[To] Chip again;—If Ryerson* returns to this place do contrive to send by him a little brown sugar, molasses & Indigo, which I cannot buy here at any rate. Pop, who has had a terrible time of it and has discovered more fortitude than ever any women possessed, begs to be remembered to you both. Tell Mr. Townsend that if he'll send me his seine he'll make my fortune & I'll pay for it in fish & cranberries. To him, Chew, Brinley, the Coffins and everybody else say all that's affectionate. Should Ryerson be puzzled about the settlement of his affairs speak to Upham for him. Do Chip, if anything is to be issued from the public stores—such as tools, blankets, or any other kind of thing, receive 'em for me & send 'em here. We are monstrous poor. I have not a spade, hoe, axe or any article of any kind. I've borrowed for the present. A waggon would be of immense consequence. Gilfillan offered one to Col. DeLancey* and he omitted bringing it. Blankets are so dear that I can't think of purchasing & we are badly off. If I'd a boat I would not envy the Great Mogul. I live directly opposite the town of Annapolis. The river not half a mile wide & the ferriage is 8 pence; I can't afford it. I won't bore you. If anything can be got I'm sure you'll send it. * *

Joshua Loring† to Col. E. Winslow.

London, Chidley Court, Pall Mall,

29th May, 1783.

Dear Winslow—I take the chance of this meeting you in New York to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 16th March. I most sincerely participate in your anxiety for the fate of the Loyalists going to Nova Scotia, of which number you think of making one. I well know your enterprising spirit and ability to effect anything you undertake, but I wish your views had in the first instance been directed to the fountain head, for I fear in that remote part merit will be lost; I should therefore

*Probably Peter Ryerson is here meant. He is mentioned in Winslow's letter to Ward Chipman under date 15th May, 1783, in this book. I find, however, in the muster roll of DeLancey's 3rd battalion of August 24, 1783, that one Martin Ryerson, of Capt. Allison's company, is marked as being "With Colonel Winslow in Nova Scotia."—W. O. R.

†Joshua Loring of Boston. He was born in 1737; bred a merchant, married a Miss Lloyd, a very handsome woman, but very gay and reckless. A British officer stated that she lost 300 guineas at cards at a single sitting. Her name is unpleasantly associated with that of Sir William Howe. See Jones' Loyalist History of New York. On the evacuation of Boston, Joshua Loring accompanied the army to Halifax and thence to New York. He was appointed commissary of prisoners by Sir William Howe, and is believed to have been humane in the transaction of his office, although some American writers have asserted the contrary. He was a friend of Edward Winslow and of Sir John Wentworth. He had by his wife two sons, John Wentworth and Henry Lloyd Loring. The latter was a Church of England clergyman, who became Archdeacon of Calcutta. Joshua Loring died in England in 1789.

recommend a personal application here in preference to that retirement. You have pretentions and you have Friends, but they will not stir without being pushed on; of this number I can assure you Sir Wm. Howe is one, and asked me after you the first moment I saw him, but with the present ministry he has not interest to do the most trifling thing on earth for any friend, but on the contrary I expect every hour to hear of his losing his own appointment as Lt. Gen'l of the Ordnance. I have conferred with McKenzie & Balfour* & they both think with me that you should come as early as possible; they are as much as ever your friends, & altho' possessed of no great interest, yet they mav assist you with their advice. Gen'l Gage has no interest, altho' Lord Percy has, and I think that you will hear ere long of his having some appointment in the administration and I am well informed by a gentleman, who dined with him a few days ago, that he mentioned you in handsome terms, therefore I think the sooner you could attend the better. Surely you can get a passage on board some Man of War or Transport without any expense, and if I dare recommend, it would be to come disincumbered. Chipman I know to be your warm friend & I think would take care of your family till you could see what was likely to be done for you, but of this and every other matter you must be the best judge, I can only offer my opinion, having no interest whatever and I fear little prospect of getting half pay. However there is a prospect of some Compensation being made to the Loyalists, which at present is my only hope. Give my best regards to Chipman & any other friends with you, being with real regard.

Your faithful & affectionate friend,

Jos'a Loring.

P. S. By all means keep well with Watson† & Sir Guy Carleton and get their recommendations which will be of the greatest consequence to you, & if you can think of any appointment at Nova Scotia, get appointed by Sir Guy Carleton & recommended for it here, which I have not the least doubt would be immediately confirmed.

*Major McKenzie was deputy adjutant general of the forces. Captain William Balfour held a commission in the 51st regiment; he afterwards rose to the rank of major general, and in 1811 was administrator of the government of New Brunswick.

†Brook Watson, whose romantic career is well known, was born at Plymouth, in England, in 1735. His parents died when he was not more than ten years of age, and he was sent out to Boston to a Mr. Levens. He was sent to sea and at Savannah had a leg bitten off by a shark while bathing in the harbor. In 1750 he came to Cumberland County, N. S., where he was employed in military service under Col. John Winslow. During the Revolutionary war he was commissary at New York (1781-1783). At the peace he retired to England, where he was, not long afterwards, elected to parliament as a member for Poole. He was knighted and became lord mayor of London. He was a warm friend of the elder Edward Winslow and of his family. For further account of Brook Watson see New Brunswick Magazine for August, 1898, p. 96.

Halifax 30th May, 1783.

Dear Marston—I was really distress'd at not finding you here on my arrival, having a monstrous deal to say to you.

The Governor, by whom this letter will be delivered—has (from some cause or other) been pleased to honor me with very particular marks of attention. He appears to be particularly anxious to contribute everything in his power to the assistance of the settlers of Port Roseway,† & he seems to regret that there is not a sufficient proportion of men of education & abilities among the present adventurers. It was his request that I would point out some man on whom he could confide for information & who would candidly & ingenuously communicate such circumstances as were important. I did not hesitate a moment at making the inclos'd memoranda.

Now my dear friend I know how you hate all mere matters of ceremony—so do I—but 'tis my maxim that when I can serve my country or my friends to make little sacrifices of my own feelings.

When the Governor arrives wait on him—offer your services—tell him everything which 'tis necessary for him to know—ask anything for yourself that you may want, &e. &c &c. He is certainly a most frank, honest, worthy man.

Pardon me Marston for presuming to dictate in any instance to you —In this haste I can't say enough. The Gov'r will tell you what our plan of operations is.

Most sincerely & cordially,

Yours. Ed. Winslow.

[Inclosed Memoranda.] Mr. Winslow presents his most respectful compliments to His Excellency Governor Parr, and begs leave to recommend to his notice Benj. Marston, Esq., (now residing at Port Roseway.)

Mr. Marston is a gentleman of liberal education, was formerly an eminent merchant at Marblehead in the province of Massachusetts Bay, and was employed in various public offices there.

He was distinguished as a magistrate for his zealous & spirited exertions, and always supported the character of a man of integrity.

*Benjamin Marston was a merchant and leading magistrate at Marblehead. He was a cousin of Edward Winslow, and is frequently mentioned in these pages. Full particulars of his chequered and adventurous career are contained in the paper read by the writer of these notes before the Nova Scotia Historical Society, shortly to be printed. See also under date May 13th, 1794, and elsewhere in this book.

Ward Chipman to Hodgson, & Co.

New York, 31st May, 1783.

Gentlemen,— * * *

It is now thought to be impossible to evacuate this place sooner than the latter end of September. I shall remain till the last embarkation, when I shall probably sail for England unless there is a great change in the temper and conduct of the Americans who are at present very violent & threaten proscription & exile to every man who has adhered to the King's cause. In the mean time you may rest assured of every attention in my power to your interest and that I am, Gentlemen,

Your most obedient

& faithful humble servant,

Ward Chipman.

Lt. Col. Isaac Allen* to Edward Winslow.

Dr. Sir,—George Black a free man his wife & two children came with me to this place: he has long been free and was one of the brave fellows who served under the gallant Col. Tye; I think he deserves Provision as well as other Refugees. If you should be of the same opinion pray be so good as to say a word for him. I am now obliged to write surrounded by my work people. I wish much to see our friend Murray I fear they will all starve before Spring; my people consume two rations a day—for Heaven's sake think of that matter & endeavor to prevent so great a calamity. There should be something done to assist those who are not able to purchase—You may depend upon it that the soldiers Rations will not do where a man can procure no assistance from Labor or Plundering.

Yours,

I. Allen.

[The above is endorsed in Winslow's hand writing, "Col. Allen, June 1783"—It was filed along with other letters and endorsed "Private letters from June 1st to Dec. 31st, 1783."]

Lt. Col. Benjamin Thompson to Edward Winslow.

Pall Mall Court, 6th June, 1783.

My dear Winslow—I have this moment received your letter of the 27th April. Be sure my good friend I will not forget you. I shall deliver your memorial to Gen. Conway* and have no doubt but it will be attended to. It is the general opinion that all the Provincial officers will get half-pay. The matter is to be moved in the House of Commons next week and Ministers will support the measure, General Conway I hear is to take the lead—He is perfectly disposed to serve us. The Loyalists residing in this Country have presented a petition to Parliament wherein the Provincials† are mentioned—I thought the Provincials had better stand upon their own bottom and accordingly waited upon Lord North and requested that our memorial, recommended by Sir Guy Carleton, might be taken into consideration before the Petition of the Loyalists should be brought forward or at least at the same time.

*Lieut. Colonel Isaac Allen of Pennsylvania commanded the third battalion of the New Jersey Volunteers. He served with much credit during the war, and came to St. John in 1783 as one of the agents for settling the Loyalist regiments on the St. John river. He himself at first settled at Wilmot, N. S., but afterwards removed to Kingsclear, above Fredericton, where many of his regiment also settled. He was appointed in the year 1784 one of the first judges of the supreme court of New Brunswick. The late Sir John C. Allen, chief justice of the province, was his grandson.

9th June. I have made out copies of yours and Chipman's memorials and addressed them to Lord North, which I shall deliver tomorrow—This will not prevent my delivering the originals to Gen'l Conway the moment he comes to Town which will be Thursday next—this is Monday. I have no doubt but we shall get half-pay and Permanent Rank for all the Provincial Officers and it is impossible but you must be included with your Deputies. Your friends here wish you would take a trip to England. I had a long conversation with Balfour about you and he is fully of that opinion. Lord Percy is your friend, he has great influence with ministers and if you were on the spot I am confident he would push you into some comfortable office either civil or military. They talk of new arrangements respecting Nova Scotia. I wish you were here to take advantage of any favorable circumstance that may turn up. It shall cost you nothing for a Lodging; half of mine is perfectly at your service, and it is the pleasantest and best situated in London.‡ My servant shall attend you and we can contrive to live for a little money. Adieu, I begin a new Letter for reasons you will divine.

Yours, &c, &c,

B. Thompson.

*General Henry S. Conway, at this time the secretary of state.

†The term "Provincials" is synonymous with "British American Regiments" or "Loyalist Troops."

‡Edward Winslow's devotion to the welfare of the Loyalists led him to remain at this time in Nova Scotia, where he materially assisted in their settlement. It can hardly be doubted that had he gone to England he would with his natural address and capacity to please, aided by the assistance of influential friends, have secured some appointment by which he would have been spared many of his subsequent difficulties.

Col. Benjamin Thompson* to Lord North.

Pall Mall Court 8th June, 1783.

My Lord,—Having assisted in drawing up the Representation and Petition of the Commanding Officers of His Majesty's Provincial Regiments in North America, and having been desired by them to solicit for them in this Country that the Prayer of their Petition be granted, I take the liberty of troubling your Lordship upon that Subject.

The situations of the Provincial Officers, particularly such of them as are Natives, or were formerly Inhabitants of the American Colonies, is truly distressing. Having sacrificed their Property, and all their expectations from their Rank and Connections in civil Society; and being cut off from all hope of returning to their former homes, by the Articles of the Peace; they have no hope left but in the justice and humanity of the British Nation.

I will not trouble your Lordship with an account either of their services or sufferings; their merit as well as their misfortunes are known to the whole world; and I believe their claim upon the humanity, and upon the justice of this Country will not be disputed.

They have stated their situation in a strong, but at the same time in a most respectful manner in their Representation, which I am informed has been transmitted to His Majesty's Secretary of State by Sir Guy Carleton, and strongly recommended.

As they are extremely anxious to know their fate, I am to request of Your Lordship, that I may be informed whether any, and what resolutions have been taken relative to their Petition, and whether their Claims of permanent Rank in America, and half-pay upon the reduction of their Regiments, will meet with the countenance and support of His Majesty's Ministers.

I know Your Lordship will excuse the liberty I take in troubling You upon this occasion, particularly as you will see by the inclosed Extract of a Letter I have just received from New York, how anxious the Provincial Officers are, and how much they expect that I should exert myself in their behalf.

If Your Lordship should wish for any further information respecting

*The romantic career of SirBenjamin Thompson is well known, and frequent references to him will be found in the pages that follow. He was born in Massachusetts in 1753, went to England during the war and became a protege of Lord George Germaine. He returned to New York early in 1781 and raised a regiment known as the King's American Dragoons, of which he was gazetted colonel and in which many Massachusetts men held commissions. At the close of the war he was knighted. He became a favorite with the Duke of Bavaria, who bestowed on him high rank and the title of Count Rumford. He became one of the leading European scientists, and at his death bequeathed a handsome sum to Harvard College, where a professorship now bears his name. See references to him in this book under date 17th May, 1800.

the Provincial Troops, I will do myself the honor of attending You at any time you may appoint.

Inclosed I have the honor to transmit to your Lordship two Memorials, one from the Muster-Master-General of His Majesty's Provincial Forces in North America, the other from his Deputy. I know them both to be very deserving of the favor and protection of Government—The former, Colonel Winslow, signed the general Representation in behalf of the Provincial Line, and of course was included in Sir Guy Carleton's recommendation. As his is a military Appointment by Commission from the Commander in Chief in America, as well as that of the Inspector General of the Provincial Forces, I should suppose they would both be included, with their Deputies, should half-pay be given to the Provincial Officers in general.

I have the honor to be with the greatest Respect My Lord,
Your Lordships most obedient and most humble Servant

B. Thompson, Lt. Col.
Commandant King's A. Drag's.

The Right Honorable Lord North,
One of His Majesty's Principal
Secretarys of State &c, &c, &c.

Lt. Col. B. Thompson to Ward Chipman.

Pall Mall Court, 9th June, 1783.

My dear Chip—I have received your letter and shall attend to your wishes. I shall deliver your memorial with my own hands to General Conway and I have made out a copy of it addressed to Lord North which I mean to present to his Lordship this day. I have done the same with Winslow's. I have no doubt of your success. Indeed it is my firm belief that all the Provincial officers will get half-pay and of course you among the rest. I have wrote a letter to Lord North upon this subject, a copy of which I inclose, you may make any use of it amongst the Provincial Officers you may think proper—If they could write to me frequently & in strong language upon the subject I could and would make a very good use of their letters—I will not be idle nor rest satisfied so long as my services can be of any use to my deserving Countrymen. My own Regimental affairs were settled by the late Administration. We are upon the American Establishment.*

*Meaning that his regiment, the King's American Dragoons, had been gazetted for half pay.

Make my best compliments to Colonels Ludlow, Robinson, Cruger*—if he is at New York, and to all my old friends. Believe me ever my dear Chip—

Most sincerely and most affectionately yours,

B. Thompson.

Bowery, 20th June, 1783.

My dear Son,—The Commissary General† called upon me last evening and informed me a vessel would sail this day for St. John's. He also tells me you wrote to him in good health and spirits which affords me great pleasure. This is my third letter since you left us—the other two were sent to Halifax to care of Dr. Prince; I have two from you, leaving one due to me which I hope you will pay very soon. Our family are in the enjoyment of health and much happier at the Bowery than at the City. I have a very good garden, quantities of best of cherries—your cow gives us plenty of milk. Your horse very good in a carriage but very wicked out of it. Your chair answers all the purposes of visiting the City in, the chairs you left were never in my possession, Capt. Fred Phillips having delivered them to a man whose name I have forgotten and who he said had a right to them.

I hope this will find you at St. John's. The violence and malice of the Rebel Government against the Loyalists render it impossible ever to think of joining them again.

I hope it will be in your power to provide for us some place where we may enjoy the society of a few friends. I expect your mother next week with Hester and Daphne,‡ she will come via Rhode Island attended by Capt. Horsfield & Lady. We have a round of afternon and evening visitors, I seldom go to the city. The Commander in Chief and Commissary General are now neighbors—the first where Governor Robinson lived and the latter where Major Coffin lived last summer. They frequently call and never fail to speak in your praise. Old friends are leaving us, Judge Ludlow sailed for Great Britain yesterday. I am told Col. Robinson and Col. Ludlow are soon to follow. May Heaven bless prosper & preserve my Son is the Prayer of your Father, Ed'wd Winslow.

†Brook Watson.

‡Colonel Winslow's mother seems to have remained in Massachusetts for a little while, or to have been there at this time. No doubt Hester and Daphne were black servants in the family.

James Cruden to Edward Winslow.

New York, June 23rd, 1783.

Dear Sir,—Permit me to introduce to your acquaintance my friend Mr. George McCree, who will adorn the number of those who from principles of virtuous Loyalty fly from a set of miscreants—who have substituted anarchy and misrule in the place of good Government.

As your influence is extensive (as it of right ought) you may be of service to the Bearer. He is by profession a Merchant, and in as much as your goodness shall induce you to forward His views, will much oblige me. Hoping soon to see you in England I shall only add, God bless you, and beg that you will allow me ever to remain—with exalted esteem and perfect respect.

Dear Sir,

Your very obedient and faithful servant,

J. A. Cruden.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

New York, 25th June, 1783.

Dear Winslow,—We have perhaps done wrong but your friend Judge Ludlow & myself have committed you in a very important instance. To prevent any suspense I will in a few words tell you that B. Gen'l Fox* is to be Commander in Chief at Halifax which is now become a post of the first consequence in the military line, and you are engaged as Secretary to the command. Ludlow, both indeed the Judge and Colonel,† proposed the matter to Me—not thinking your engagements would admit of your accepting it; it appeared to me an object sufficient to induce me to relinquish all my present pursuits, and I was advised & determined to accept it and could I have managed the matter without resigning my appointment as Deputy Muster Master I certainly should have gone—But Mr. Watson told me he was satisfied the Gen'l would not appoint any one here to do the duty but upon my resignation. Mr. Finucane,‡ the former Secretary, petitioned the Com. in Chief for a continuance, but could not obtain it as Sir Guy left the choice altogether with Gen. Fox; applications

*Brigadier General Henry E. Fox was a brother of the well known statesman, Charles James Fox. He was a warm personal friend of Edward Winslow.

†The reference is to George Duncan Ludlow and his brother Colonel Gabriel G. Ludlow. The former became the first chief justice of New Brunswick, the latter was first mayor of the city of St. John, and for many years administrator of the government while Lieut. Gov. Carleton was absent in England. See Lawrence's Foot Prints at pp. 10-12 and 100.

‡Andrew Finucane, a brother of Chief Justice Bryan Finucane, of Halifax, N. S.

& solicitations from officers in the army were making to Fox from all quarters. I requested the Judge to mention you to Gen. Fox, who most readily acceded if the Judge could engage for your undertaking it, as he could then give a decisive answer to any further applications. I without hesitation told the Judge I would pledge myself for your accepting it, he has accordingly committed you with Gen'l Fox, and you must at least for some time comply with our engagements. Fox knows you are a man of business, and matters in the Secretary's office there are not a little deranged: he finds that he is to be in a responsible situation and wants a capable confidential Friend to assist him. I think you will have it in your power to bind him to you, & his interest is and will be the first in the nation. It will save you every expence of living in Halifax, will give you 10s. per day and will put it in your power to serve all your friends, then he knows all about your domestic connections, so that they will not occasion any difficulty or objection. I do not know my dear Ned what your plans or prospects are, I really thought this a most eligible opportunity to serve you; Fox is a man capable of the warmest attachments, and a very aspiring ambitious character, and if he chooses it, can no doubt by his Brother's* interest keep the command at Halifax—at any rate he does not mean to go home.

Think of the matter once & again and if you feel yourself inclined to refuse it—Be at least plausible and save the credit of your friends here in going so far in the business. If you undertake it, convince him you are everything he wants or wishes; humor the rage of public economy, be a man of business, indulge your convivial penchant with caution:—Excuse me my dear Fellow, if these hints are not necessary, they are well intended. Fox I believe only awaits the arrival of another Packet from England before he goes. I shall call on him when he comes to town and will keep you acquainted with everything that takes place.

Col. Robinson† and his family are sailed for England in the Lion, Judge Ludlow in the Packet. Col. Morris‡ and family and Col. Cruger are gone. Several empty transports arriving yesterday from England give us strong reason to suspect we shall all be off this fall. Everything here remains just as when you left us, the People in the Country growing more violent every day.

*Charles James Fox of parliamentary fame.

†Colonel Beverley Robinson, of New York, by his marriage with Susannah Philipse came into possession of a large landed estate on the Hudson river. He raised the Loyal American Regiment at the time of the Revolution, in which corps his son Beverley was lieutenant colonel and Thomas Barclay were major. Colonel Robinson's commission is dated March 28, 1777. There is a pretty full biography of him in Sabine's Loyalists of the American Revolution. His wife Susannah was one of the three women included in the New York confiscation act. The British government granted a sum equivalent to more than $80,000 as a partial compensation for his losses in consequence of his loyalty.

Ryerson could not get his business done to go in the Ranger but will follow soon with the articles I advised you of by that vessel.

Major Prevost* and myself set off on Monday upon a general muster. He desires me to tell you all the appointments you recommended in Bayard's corps have taken place yesterday except the Major's son, objected to by the Com'r in Chief on account of his age.

The Folks in the Bowery [Father's family] are all well and in very good spirits.

How do your little Folks & Pop†—remember me to them most affectionately. Write to me very particularly all about matters and things. I know not where to forward letters to you, whether to Annapolis, St. John's, or Halifax, but the latter I believe will be the most likely place for them to find you. I shall direct to the care of Johnson till I hear from you.

Adieu—

Yours most sincerely and affectionately,

Chip.

Major Aug. Prevost to Edward Winslow.

New York, 25th June, 1783.

My dear Sir,—I was favour'd with your letter by Mr. Buskirk, whose promotion is still pending—I reported on Major Bayard's memo. and have hopes it will succeed.

I am happy to find you have such flattering encouragement respecting your settlement on the River St. John—Your good offices in my favor will ever be gratefully acknowledged. I am determined on fulfilling the conditions of the Grant should you succeed in locating a tract worth improving, and to be guided by your friendly advice respecting the same—any expences attending your obtaining, dividing, &c, &c, I pray you to draw on Ed. Goold Esq. at this place who has my instructions to pay the same at five days sight.

You will be pleased to observe, should you find it necessary, that the lands granted me by Government at the close of the last War cost me nearly eighty five guineas—that the same are now made over by this infamous treaty and given away to the Spaniards by the loss of the Floridas. I only mention this to show I have some pretensions which I wish you to avail yourself of. My very worthy friend the Lt. Governor will if arrived enforce in my behalf any memor'l that may be necessary to give in.

*Major Augustin Prevost of the 3rd battalion of the Royal American (or 60th) Regiment. He was deputy inspector general of the Loyalist troops during the war.

†The reference is to Winslow's wife Polly or Mary.

I now beg to apologise for the liberty I take in giving you, my Dear Sir, so much trouble: be assured I will be happy in every opportunity of giving you assurance of my respectful gratitude having the honor to be most faithfully

Your most obliged servant,

Aug. Prevost.

Memorial of Colonel Winslow & Major Murray.

To His Excellency John Parr, Esquire, Captain General, Governor and Comander in Chief in and over His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia and its Dependencies, Chancellor & Vice Admiral of the same, &c, &e, &c.

Edward Winslow Jun'r, Esq., late Commissary General of Musters for His Majesty's British American Forces, and Daniel Murray, Major, and late Commanding the King's American Dragoons—beg leave to represent:

That during the War in America they have served their Sovereign with fidelity and have been honored with the repeated approbation of their superiors; that they are now deprived of fortunes acquired by their ancestors and are dismissed from their military employments; that governed by the same attachment to the British constitution which excited them to sacrifice their property and expose their lives they are anxious to obtain a settlement in the Province of Nova Scotia under your Excellency's direction, for which purpose they have personally explored a country 125 miles from the mouth of the river St. John's, the boundaries of which are described in the inclosed paper. They hope for your Excellency's permission to form this tract into a township and to dignify it with the name of Prince-William.* In the list of their Associates they are permitted to insert the names of the Honorable Brig. Gen. Fox, Brig. Gen. Clarke, and Brig. Gen. Musgrave. The other persons named have served in various capacities, have lost their all, and are determined to make the most zealous exertions to forward the settlement. The land for which they solicit your Excellency's grant was never located; it is nearly in the centre of that country which your Excellency has been pleased to point out for the accommodation of His Majesty's Provincial corps, and your memorialists presume that by commencing spirited operations there they shall give a spring to the general settlement and essentially serve the public. They are ready to stipulate with your Excellency in the first place to provide with lots in proportion to their rank all the officers and men of the

*The parish of Prince William derived its name from the township here mentioned. The royal patron of the King's American Dragoons was Prince William, afterwards William the IV. of England. The King's American Dragoons came to the St. John river under the command of Major Daniel Murray, and many of their descendants are living today in the parish of Prince William.

King's American Dragoons, who may be found actually resident there in the month of May next, and to procure within any reasonable time such a number of settlers in addition as your Excellency may think necessary after obtaining particular information of the quality of the soil and other circumstances, and to comply with other customary terms of settlement.

Your memorialists therefore request that your Excellency will be pleased to grant them and their associates on the conditions herein mentioned, the tract of land described by John Davidson,* Esq., Deputy Surveyor, and that your Excellency would be pleased to send some judicious public officer of your province as early as the season will admit to join with your memorialists, or such others of the associates as your Excellency may prefer, in making an impartial distribution of the land among such persons as your Excellency may think are entitled thereto and in such proportions as to your Excellency may seem just.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

River St. John's 7th July, 1783.

My dear fellow,—I find that the Brig Ranger is detained by a contrary wind, I therefore make this small addition to my last.

If the ship Peggy, Capt. Jacob Wilson, returns to this place or Annapolis, the honest man who commands her will readily receive anything that is intended for me. I have a considerable stock of pigs and poultry which are my principal dependence for the winter, and grain of all kinds is so scarce and dear here that I fear they will suffer. Should it be practicable to buy for me a few Hhds of Indian corn, pease or anything else that's eatable for them, it will relieve me. If accident throws that same Wilson in your way, tell him how grateful I feel, for the most uncommon attention that ever so rough a fellow exhibited.

Should you see my friend Major Hanger,† I'll thank you to acquaint him that the respectable gentleman who once attended him in quality of a Groom by the name of Newton, has formed a very advantageous connection in this province with the widow of a half pay officer by the name

*John Davidson was a lieutenant in the King's American Dragoons. He was a native of New Hampshire and educated as a surveyor. He settled in Dumfries, York County, near Colonel Jacob Ellegood. He was a member of the house of assembly for York County in 1802, and in his day a very active and useful citizen.

†Hon. George Hanger, an English officer, was appointed major in the British Legion May 24, 1780. He went with the corps to Port Matoon, in Nova Scotia, but the place proved very unsuitable for a settlement and the majority removed elsewhere in 1784.

of Munroe, by which he is in possession of a very excellent house handsomely furnished, good stables and the most delightfully situated farms on the Annapolis River. He introduced himself to the lady by affirming "that he was particularly connected with the hono'ble Major Hanger—that his circumstances were rather affluent, having served in a money making department, and that he had left a very considerable property behind him"—for all which particulars he did me the honor to refer to me. As I was not intimately acquainted with Mr. Newton, but had only casually heard anecdotes of him, I could not vouch for every circumstance, I however assured the lady's messenger that he really had been connected with Major Hanger, that he had made money, and that he had left a large property behind him.

The nuptials were immediately celebrated with great pomp and Mr. Newton is at present a gentleman of consideration in Nova Scotia and apparently a very happy man, and should his honorable friend the Major be under a necessity of visiting this country I have no doubt that he would experience every mark of attention from him and his lady (who is by no means a bad piece.)

A violent cold has hindered me from accompanying Barclay* and Murray on a cruize by water. I am nursing myself and shall be ready to move up the river in a few days. I never saw a set of men more perfectly satisfy'd than those of Thompson's regt.,† not a murmur is heard among them and they received me in a kind of stile that afforded me infinite pleasure.

Yesterday I had the honor of being introduced to three Indian Chiefs, a high priest, squaws and attendants, it really was ridiculous enough. A relation of the particulars may afford fun at some future day. I would have given a year's lease of my life that Nat. Coffin, Fred Philips and yourself had been spectators of the business. I could write eternally to you.

E. W.

P. S. If a small stove for a room can be obtained, send it to me to Annapolis.

*Major Thomas Barclay was a son of Rev. Henry Barclay, D. D., rector of Trinity church, New York. He was a graduate of Columbia College and a law student of the celebrated John Jay. He was gazetted captain in the Loyal American Regiment April 10, 1777, and promoted major October 7, 1777. Later he commanded the Provincial Light Infantry, a corps formed by taking from each Loyalist battalion its light infantry company, and combining them into one organization. This corps saw much service in Georgia and the Carolinas. He settled at Annapolis in 1783, and at once began to fill a prominent place in political life and in public affairs. He was for many years speaker of the house of assembly and adjutant general of militia. He was British commissioner at the time of the adjustment of the international boundary dispute in 1796. For further particulars of Colonel Barclay see Sabine's Loyalists, Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia and Calnek and Savary's History of Annapolis.

†Colonel Benjamin Thompson's corps was known as the King's American Dragoons.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

River St. John's 7th July, 1783.

That's a good fellow Chip, a long letter from an old friend received in this desert is like a glimpse of glory. I know Tom Coffin would write if he could. I am sorry you'd so much trouble in effecting the business I wrote you about by Ryerson. I did not intend it.

You have gratified me much by the account given me of my father's situation and the state of the family—would to God the comfort they now enjoy could be continued to them. Is there any chance my dear Chip that recompence will be made to the Loyalists by Government? Will it be possible for my poor father to obtain only a sufficiency to support him in England for a little time? If so will it not be best for him to go there? What can I do for them, Chip? I should merit the curse of all of 'em were I to give the least encouragement for them to come here. The mortifications which I experience and laugh at would be insupportable to them; the whole country is crowded, the towns are expensive beyond belief, they can't live on rations, nor in sodded huts. If it is fashionable or necessary to make representations of sufferings I am sure you will do it for him. Suppose he obtains any part of a single thousand pounds it will be enough. He can get nothing here; it will be half an eternity before any man will be worth a third of that money. Perhaps in a few years the present savage appearance of this country may in some degree be changed and I may offer them an asylum. Penny's good sense enables her to see this business in a proper light. You must settle it among you; they all know that if anything is done for me in England it will be for their benefit,—I'll have done with this subject. * * *

I saw your new appointment with pleasure. May your consequence be increased until your ambition is satisfy'd and then I think you'll be a pretty consequential fellow. I like your scheme of going to England. I'll not be too sanguine in my opinions—I do think this province ere long will be a good stage for abilities like yours to exhibit upon. The present Att. Gen.* here is an ignorant harmless nincompoop and the Sol. Gen. is a great lubberly insolent irish rebel,† indeed I do not find that there's a man of any consequence in the profession. Sterns is the most so (really) at Halifax. When the variety of people who compose your garrison have scattered about in different parts of this province, I think a gentleman may find an eligible situation and in a good society but this is a subject that shall be treated on largely and deliberately—at present I am in a camp where one man is laying out roads, another building boats. &c.

You wish to know what are my views, plans and prospects. In a few words my faithful friend, In the situation I left, my views were at an end, I had no plans and my prospects were blacker than hell. I knew that the appointment of agent to the Provincials would give me consequence here and furnish employment for my mind. Hitherto everything has happened as I could have wished, the reception I met with from the General, Governor, and all the great people in the country was beyond my most sanguine expectations, it has revived all my old spirits and I have adopted a style that would astonish you. There's not a man from this quarter that presumes to solicit from head Quarters without my recommendation and I have effected some business for meritorious characters which has afforded me vast pleasure. Our old friend Marston has felt the benefit of a pointed application to the Governor without his knowledge. He is appointed a chief Magistrate, or a kind of Governor-General, at Port Roseway and is a confidential man with Governor Parr. I am particularly gratify'd at this circumstance for various reasons.

We have just begun our operations in the land way, the people who have arrived here are prodigiously pleased with the country and I shall certainly soon be possessed of a good farm, and if we've our half pay I will be more than comfortable. I have left those sweet little ones in as comfortable a place as is in this province, made so by own exertions. I found a house and hired it for £6 a year and I've taken a lease for two years. I added two rooms and a chimney and have now a spare bed room at your service, 'tis just on the bank of a most beautiful river immediately opposite the town of Annapolis. I have left Thomson's William* (now Qr. Mr.) to superintend, and mother Silk† & little George. We have plenty of poultry, a good garden and such a variety of fish as you never saw, and I have built a tolerable boat. So much for the family.

On this side of the Bay of Fundy I am speculating pretty largely. I have taken three town lots on the West side of the river,‡ in the most delightful situations I ever saw, for myself, Major Coffin and Col. Ludlow, on condition to build a tenantable house on each within six months. Coffin's is already in some forwardness and my own and Major Murray's will soon make a figure. Should our farms in the general division fall at a distance from this, we cannot lose by the exertion; the houses will cost but a very trifle, and those who are obliged to come without such covering prepared will be glad to pay the expense. I am at present at Murray's Quarters in a township which we shall lay out for the provincials and we have already cut a road from his camp to the river about three miles.

I will not aim at a description of this business. We cut yesterday with about 120 men more than a mile thro' a forest hitherto deemed impenetrable. When we emerged from it, there opened a prospect superior to anything in the world I believe. A perfect view of the immense Bay of Fundy on one side, a very extensive view of the river St. John's with the Falls, grand Lake [or Bay] and Islands on the other—in front the Fort, which is a beautiful object on a high hill, and all settlements about the town with the ships, boats, &c, in the harbour—'twas positively the most magnificent and romantic scene I have ever beheld. Our town is to be on the slope of this hill and you shall have a house in it whether you ever see it or not by Jupiter, I shall look in future with extreme contempt on your poetical descriptions of your pussy, meandering, serpentine, purling rills, &c,—any man, woman or child that has not a stranguary can make such in a minute,—but on viewing a prospect like this an infidel would acknowledge that only God could effect it.

Thank you for the articles you sent me. I am infinitely obliged to Tom Coffin for the encouragement about the seine and boat, and to Gilfillan; you cannot imagine of how much consequence such things are. Should the post be abandoned this fall I am sure I shall not be forgotten. Send me anything in the world that you can procure without expense. With respect to cash Chip, I have done monstrously well,—the tour to Halifax was d——d expensive, but I am determined to be repaid. The 30 Guineas I received of you and 25 out of the abstract has hitherto answered my purpose, for building houses, boats, supporting family and travelling expenses, and as I am now in a wilderness I shall make out till my own subsistence is due.

I have received a letter from Fred Philips of an old date, I cannot find by that or yours whether he is absolutely determined to go to England or not. I promised him letters, he knows how interested I am in everything which concerns him. I have postponed sending them because it is my intention, as we survey the different townships and cruise in the different rivers to form as elegant a description of them as is possible with the assistance of a most able hand who is retained in my service for that purpose, these I shall transmit to Great Britain to my Lord Percy by him, and I am determined at all events to distinguish myself by proposing a plan which affords the grandest field for speculation that ever offered. Take the general map of this province (even as it is now bounded), observe how detached this part is from the rest, how vastly extensive it is, notice the rivers, harbours, &c., Consider the numberless inconveniences that must arise from its remoteness from the metropolis and the difficulty of communication. Think what multitudes have and will come here, and then judge whether it must not from the nature of things immediately become a separate government,* and if it does it shall be the most Gentlemanlike one on earth. Suppose you and he go to England after being provided with the necessary facts, can you be better employed than in a solicitation of this kind properly authorized. You know how Industrious I can be if I please and you may rest assured I will pursue this project with unremitted attention. The people on the other side [the Bay] are already jealous, even the Gov'r fears it evidently, we have therefore been perfectly snug yet. Tell him (Fred) that the want of subjects to render my letters acceptable and of consequence was the only cause of my not forwarding them before. Fanning is expected every hour here and I could have wrote only to Innes a formal letter of recommendation which would not have satisfy'd my mind. I wish to be more serviceable to a man I love like him, I intended to have wrote him, I can't — do you give him a share of this. Acquaint him that White Stocking's colt is very ugly — to make up for it she has been maneuvred by Tartar — of course she will have an elegant one next time, this has been performed by consent of Council. She has never been saddled since she landed at Nova Scotia and is fatter than he ever saw her. The other is a very good horse.

Tell Tom Coffin that Miss Fanny was safely delivered of sixteen puppies — twelve of which were so handsome that a court martial that sat the day I left Annapolis, at which Lt. Col. DeLancey presided, could not agree to destroy any of 'em.

I wrote my father and sisters from Annapolis so lately that they must excuse me now.

Coffin, Brinley, Townsend, Chew, 'tother Fred,† everybody, will believe that I remember them affectionately.

I had a letter prepared for Mr. Watson which, from a circumstance that has lately taken place, I must defer sending by this conveyance. Say everything to him for me that gratitude can suggest and to that

*Anticipating the formation of a new province on the north side of the Bay of Fundy. The idea seems to have originated with Edward Winslow, who suggested it to Colonel Fox. This letter contains the first known direct reference to the subject.

†The names of these officers will be found among the correspondence of Edward Winslow. "T'other Fred" is explained by the fact that there were two captains named Frederick Phillips, one of them in the Loyal American Regiment and another in the King's American Dragoons. Both were Winslow's intimate friends and associates during the war.

best of friends Dr. Bailey, they will readily believe that I have little time to spare. I shall write Col. Ludlow a few lines—there is no Providence if he suffers.

Next time you write me inclose a short note to Pop — it will gratify her. If you had ever an esteem for her it will increase when you know with what perfect propriety she has conducted. Adieu, my friend — brother — everything,

Ed. Winslow.

This letter is a monster in every respect.

My Boy is not dead, thank Heaven, & Paddock* has gone to see him.

Letter of Edward Winslow.

St. John, July, 1783.

We shall tomorrow reconnoitre the township of Conway, which lies on the west side of the river St. John's bounded on that side by the river and running near west on the Bay of Fundy about 10 or 11 miles. Within it is a good Harbor called Musquash Cove where is a valuable tract of salt marsh, said to be 2,500 acres, and which in the opinion of many judicious persons may be easily dyked. At the head of the harbor is a river navigable for small vessels 6 or 7 miles and perfectly well calculated for mills. With these advantages we apprehend that this township may accommodate a considerable number of families, altho' it is generally supposed that the upland is not very good. Some of the best part of it on peninsula nearest to St. John's has been formerly granted and settlements have been made. I shall however be better able to give you an opinion on my return which I suppose will be in about 5 days. Murray is industriously employed with his whole regiment in cutting a road from hence to the old Fort on the Harbor of St. John's, which will be a prodigious service to the settlers at Musquash Cove. He intends extending it to the Cove by degrees. When we have completed the business in this quarter we shall * * * [Remainder wanting.]

*Doctor Adino Paddock was formerly of Boston. He was a son of Major Adino Paddock, who planted the Paddock elms in Tremont street, Boston. In 1779 he went to England and studied medicine and surgery. Returning to America he became surgeon in the King's American Dragoons. He settled after the war at St. John, N. B., but later went to St. Mary's, York Co., where he died. A son and grandson bore the name of "Adino;" both were physicians. The grandson, Dr. Adino Paddock, died at Kingston, N. B., in August, 1893. There was consequently a continuous practice of 110 years by the three Adino's, father, son, and grandson.

[First part missing.] * * when we have ascertained its boundaries and estimated what proportion of it is worth cultivating, we mean immediately to divide it into as many farms as it will admit of — to have them numbered and to settle them with as much expedition as possible, and we shall pursue this method in the other tracts. The system we have adopted may be liable to some exceptions, but we are convinced of the necessity of being prepared to point out to the Provincial Regiments as they arrive here the tracts of Land on which they may settle. An inattention, or want of exertion in the Agents of the Refugees has been the cause of extreme distress to those who have already landed here. They are at present crowded into one spot without covering, and totally ignorant where they are eventually to settle, altho' two townships containing near 300,000 acres of the best land on the River St. John's has been long ago escheated at their application. Why, Upham, was not some man or men of consideration and spirit appointed to take the direction of these people ? The Reverend Gentleman* who is the ostensible person, is certainly unequal to the task, and those who are doing the duty here are not the right kind of men — but this is a subject on which I have not time to speculate. I fear no difficulties in the business which I am engaged in. It is the source of infinite satisfaction that I am connected with two gentlemen whose sentiments in all important instances correspond with my own. Hitherto our matters have been conducted with great harmony of spirit, and I have no doubt that in a few weeks we shall be able to effect the grand object of our errand. I am gratified excessively at the situation and behaviour of your Regiment.† I never saw more cheerfulness and good humor than appears among the men. They are encamped on one of the pleasantest spots I ever beheld, and they are enjoying a great variety of what you Yorkers call luxuries — such as partridges, Salmon, Bass, Trout, Pigeons, &c. The whole regiment are this day employed in cutting and clearing a road to the river and Murray and I intend to ride tomorrow where never man rode before. Before you arrive I expect to have a town-Hut and country Hut, with a fine road from one to 'tother, and I shall be very happy to see you. The great Bell is already mounted. We are in some danger of losing it.

*The reference is to the Reverend John Sayre, who was an agent for settling the Loyalists at St. John. He died at Maugerville the following year. Prior to the Revolution he was rector of Fairfield, Connecticut. This town was destroyed by Gen. Tryon in July, 1779, and Mr. Sayre retired with the army. He went to Long Island, where he occasionally officiated to the loyal refugees. A pretty full account of Mr. Sayre will be found in Eaton's "Tory Clergy of the Revolution," and in Sabine's American Loyalists.

†The King's American Dragoons, in which corps Joshua Upham was a major.

The Parson Agent for the Refugees has purchased Loosely's* Organ and intends rigging it in a church on their side the River. Murray means to challenge him to play all fours who shall have both. If we win, our friend Odell's church will be complete; if we lose — why we'll have no church at all.

In your turn answer me — do you really intend coming to this country? If so, why not employ your regimental friends to build you a house? Will none of you believe that to save you from perdition, you can't find a house to put your heads in? Several of my friends have suggested that they wait my opinion of the country to enable them to decide, but it is a subject on which I will never give advice. 'Tis rather too important. I will say that personally nothing has happened to discourage my settling here, but on the contrary I am pleased, and was it not for the distress I feel for my parents and their family, I should be happy. That good old man & woman are too old and infirm to combat the difficulties which they must necessarily encounter in coming here, and my sisters I fear are unequal to the business. If they must remove I am clear they should go to England, government will not let them suffer, they have many valuable friends there and the difference of passage is inconsiderable. I depend on my friends to advise them for the best, it is a long time since I have ranked you in the number and on this occasion I am sure of your assistance. In anything command me, Upham; give me any opportunity and you shall have new proofs with what sincerity and truth I am

Your affect't Friend,

Edward Winslow.

Col. Thompson to Edward Winslow.

Pall Mall Court, 8th July, 1783.

My dear Winslow,—I congratulate you most sincerely upon the Grant of Parliament of half-pay to all the provincial officers. You and your Deputies and Mr. Bridgham, Colonel Innes's Deputy, are included. I formed the Estimate myself which was laid before the House of Commons, and neither Lord North, General Conway, or any body else made the smallest objection to your claim. The business is not intirely finished, owing to the want of authentic Lists of the Officers of the different Regiments, but as the sum voted is "on account of Half-pay for

*Charles Loosely was an innkeeper at New York and Brooklyn during the war. He pursued the same calling on his arrival in St. John. He was a queer character—advertised in doggerel rhymes, etc., etc. Winslow's pleasantry, in the letter above, assumes that the Rev. John Sayre would have a church on the east side of the harbor, while he and his friends would strive for one on the opposite side, with Rev. Jonathan Odell, late chaplain of the King's American Dragoons, as their minister.

"the Officers of certain Provincial Corps which have served with His "Majesty's Troops in North America in the late War," the claim for half-pay is not only admitted but substantiated, and Sir Guy Carleton is directed to furnish proper lists as soon as possible that estimates of the different Corps may be laid before Parliament at their next meeting that they may be voted specifically.

I have written to Sir Guy Carleton very fully upon the subject and have desired him not to forget to return you and your Deputies upon his Lists. I informed him that you were included in the Estimates I had the honor to lay before His Majesty's Ministers, and that no objection was made to it. So my good friend I think I have fixed the matter for you.

You will receive a great many letters from me by this conveyance, and among the rest one urging you to come to England. I am still of the same opinion with respect to the propriety of that measure; and the sooner you come the better. You have friends here who will exert themselves to serve you, and among all the arrangements that must necessarily be made now upon settling the Government of Nova Scotia I think they cannot want an opportunity to provide for you. Your voyage need not cost much, unless you choose it; and I will be answerable that you may live as cheap in London as in Halifax. Come soon and you will find a pleasant Lodging in Pall Mall Court, and Servants at your service. You know how happy I will be to see you.

With respect to myself personally, I cannot say I have been fortunate in my negotiations. I have not succeeded in my endeavors to get my Regiment put upon the British Establishment, nor have I any prospect at present of being employed. The East India Company so far from wanting troops are applying to Government to recall the British Reg'ts now in their service; and they are so overstocked with Officers of their own that they cannot find employment for one half of those they are obliged to Pay.

My views are now turned another way. You will soon hear of my making a dash that will surprise you all. There is no doubt but the Russians and Turks are upon the Eve of a very serious War, and on one side or other I am determined to have a hand in it.

Tho' I have not succeeded in my wishes respecting the Establishment of my Reg't. with British Rank, we are put upon the American Establishment by a formal order from the King; and His Majesty has been Graciously pleased to honor me with a very flattering mark of his Royal approbation by recommending me to Sir Guy Carleton that I may be appointed "Colonel" of the Kings American Dragoons, and by consenting that Major Murray should be promoted to the Rank of Lieut. Colonel. But this you will keep to yourself till you hear it from some other quarter. It is not public even here.

Fanning* not gone yet. By the bye you cannot conceive what a noise the Establishment of his, and the other Provincial Regiments has made here. Those who had any hand in it are so sore with abuse that they cannot bear to hear it mentioned. Had those Corps not been Established mine would certainly have been. This will appear odd to you but it is nevertheless true.

I have a letter from Chipman of the 1st June. He is coming to England. I hope we shall all three meet there. He says you have taken the trouble of acting as paymaster to my Regt. You know how my accounts stand with Mr. Leechmere and Doctor Paddock. May I beg of you to remember me. But I know you will without my asking it.

Pray remember my Compliments to all near you to whom you think they will be acceptable; Particularly to Polly and the little ones.

I write to Murray by this Opportunity. Adieu, my Dear Winslow.

I am ever most sincerely and affectionately Yours,
B. T.

"Lt. Col. Delancey, Respecting the Govr's Orders about Lands on St. John's."

Annapolis, July 11th, 1783.

My dear Brother Agents,—

I arrived here last night, and tomorrow, wind and weather auspicious, shall sail for Halifax, though if what I am informed at this Place is true, we might better be all of us in New York. It is that Conway, Burton,† &c. are to be given to the Refugees and that the lands to be given to the Provincials are to commence at Sunbury‡ and go northwest to Canada or elsewhere. This I at first esteemed an Idle Report but upon enquiring of Mr. Botsford,‖ he corroborates the whole of it and for his authority

*Colonel Edmund Fanning of the King's American Regiment.

† Townships had been granted on the St. John river as early as the year 1765, including Maugerville, Gagetown, Burton, etc., but much of the land in these townships had never been improved and was now liable to escheat or forfeiture. The township of "Conway," mentioned in letter above, included Carleton and the parish of Lancaster on the west side of St. John harbor. "Burton" included the parishes of Burton and Lincoln in Sunbury County.

‡The reference is to the township (not the county) of Sunbury. It began a little below Fredericton and extended up the St. John river about as far as Long's Creek, or the upper line of the parish of Kings clear.

‖Amos Botsford, formerly of Newton, Connecticut, was a graduate of Yale College. In 1782 he was appointed by Sir Guy Carleton an agent for the Loyalists embarking at New York for Annapolis Royal. They arrived there late in the fall. Mr. Botsford, with Frederick Hauser and others, made a careful exploration of the St. John river. See Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia, vol. iii., pp. 13-15. They sent a full report of their proceedings to their friends in New York. Amos Botsford settled in the county of Westmorland. He was the first speaker of the house of assembly, and continued to hold the position until his death, in 1812, in the 69th year of his age.

has a letter from Mr. Buckley [Bulkley].* The Intelligence coming in this way (unless Mr. Botsford is an execrable Liar) cannot be doubted; if it is true I believe you will join with me in fixing immediately a Period to our Agency, which I shall do instantly on my arrival at Halifax and shall not be very delicate in assigning my reasons. This is so notorious a forfeiture of the faith of Government that it appears to me almost incredible, and yet I fear it is not to be doubted. Could we have known this a little earlier it would have saved you the trouble of exploring the Country for the benefit of a People you are not connected with. In short it is a subject too disagreeable to say more upon. In letters to me send a duplicate one to Halifax, the other to this place.

Compliments to Allen. God bless you both.

St. DeLancey.†

General Timothy Ruggles to Edward Winslow, Sr.

Annapolis 17th July, 1783.

Dear Sir,—By a ship bound to New York I am to acknowledge your kind favor of the 30th of May last, which I received last night. Nothing could add more to my felicity than hearing of your enjoying your health, without which you could have little pleasure at the Bowery even in your pretty Box, with the adjacent two acres of land, which I make no doubt you are improving to the best advantage for the benefit of those happy branches of your family with you, to whom I beg you will be pleased to make my best compliments, which at present is the only tribute of gratitude in my power to make them for the many excellent Indian puddings, &c, &c, that I have so often partook of in their presence at your well supply'd table.

Your fruit trees, when compared with those here, I mean apples, are hardly worth noticing. About ten days ago, I had a present of well toward a bushel of as fine, fair, sound, high flavored apples as you ever saw at New York in the month of January. Colo. Allen of [New] Jersey told me he had drank the best cider here, he ever drank in his life; the same account I had from Doctor Prince who came to this Province from

*Richard Bulkley came to Nova Scotia with Governor Cornwallis in 1749, and was secretary of that province from 1759 to 1793. He died Dec. 7, 1800, aged 83 years.

†Lieutenant Colonel Stephen DeLancey was a son of Brigadier General Oliver DeLancey, and was lieutenant colonel in the 2nd battalion of his father's brigade in August, 1776. He was transferred to the Prince of Wales American Regiment in September, 1781, and again to the New Jersey Volunteers in February, 1782. He was one of the agents for effecting the settlement of the provincial regiments in Nova Scotia. He afterward filled the positions of chief justice of the Bahamas and governor of Tobago. He married Cornelia Barclay, and his family became quite distinguished. See Jones' Loyalist History of New York, vol. i., p. 62.

Salem, & from many other Gentlemen, all being the produce of this Province. Vegetables of all kinds of the very best quality, but not so early as at New York. Fin, scale & shell fish of all kinds except oysters, the want of which is richly compensated by scallops in plenty about the bigness of a common tea saucer & of excellent flavor. The land, very natural to grass of all kinds, with some of our New England husbandry often produces forty bushels of Indian corn per acre; but am apprehensive from the scantiness of heat and much wet weather it is not the proper grain for this climate, and indeed if less attention was paid to it in many parts of New England & more to other kinds of grain I think the people would find their account in it. Wheat, barley, oats and flax thrive well here upon uplands, & peas any where, no bugs were known in the place.

The people begin to clear upland which turns off good crops; the growth of timber in general near the marshes is ever-green, such as white spruce, red spruce, black spruce, fir & hemlock. The upland back from the river is rock maple, yellow & Black birch, beech & white ash, some red oak, no white oak. There is one hiccory tree here, produced from what in our country [New England] we call shagbark walnut—planted by Major Winniet about 23 years ago, an exceedingly fine thrifty tree, about as thick as Col. Gilberts body at the bottom, bids fair to have at least a bushel of nuts this year if no accident befalls them. In the same gentleman's garden is a filbert tree of some bigness, with plenty of fruit growing on it. In the next garden there is a madeira nut tree of considerable bigness—by its appearance has been sometimes nipt by the frost, but not more than I have seen the same sort nipt on Long Island.

Upon the whole I think the climate good & the soil capable of becoming the granary of any part of the continent to the eastward of New York: whether so happy an event may take place in the life time of you or me depends much upon the conduct of those who have it in their power at this crisis to encourage and accomplish the complete settlement of the country, according to the expectations of General Carleton. How it fares with other parts of this Province I am not able to say, but with respect to this part I hear every day lamentations making by people that came last fall, that this year's provision, which they then received and which is all they have to depend upon, will be exhausted before they can get the lands they have been long expecting to settle upon. As they have not yet obtained their patents for it, and the season is so far advanced you may clearly discover that for husbandmen the year is lost. What effect it may have upon others coming into the Province to settle, you Sir can more easily conceive than I can tell.

Thus I have attempted to comply with your requisition & at the same time to mention what I much fear may obstruct the settlement of as fine a country as I ever saw in my life, capable of vast improvement, replete with natural advantages & nothing wanting but numbers of industrious Inhabitants to make a most flourishing Province, which at this time might certainly be had with prudent management.

My apology for this long scrawl is to convince you of my being all attention to your commands notwithstanding my great aversion to writing of which I find you are very sensible. I have only to add that I am upon all occasions, Sir,

Your most obedient & very humble servant,

Edward Winslow, Esq'r. Timo. Ruggles.

Sir Guy Carleton to Brigadier General Fox.

New York 18th July 1783.

Sir,—Major General Paterson having obtained my permission to go to England for the recovery of his health, and Brigadier General Campbell on his private business, I have thought proper to appoint you to the Command of His Majesty's troops in the District of Nova Scotia; You will therefore proceed by the first opportunity to Halifax in Nova Scotia, and on the Departure of Major General Paterson, will take upon you the Command of His Majesty's Troops in that District until further orders from me.

You will receive herewith, Instructions for your Conduct in that Command, and will apply to Major General Paterson for copies of all such letters and orders as relate thereto.

I have directed Alexander Thompson Esqr. Deputy Pay Master General at Halifax, to receive and pay your Warrants for the subsistence and Extraordinary Expenses of the troops under your command, which You are hereby empowered to grant, observing that no uncesessary expenses are incurred.

I am. Sir,

Your most obedient and most humble servant

Guy Carleton.

Sir Guy Carleton to Brig. Gen. Fox.

New York 18th July, 1783.

Sir,—As the situation of the Refugees who have gone to Nova Scotia, may require that they should have a further allowance of Provisions to carry them thro' the Winter, I have directed provisions to the 1st of May next, to be furnished to those whose necessities may require it; which you will be pleased to have carried into execution.

Should you find it an advantage to the Inhabitants, and that it can be done without detriment to the troops, you will send a Battalion to Port-Roseway, but I would wish you in all such cases, where the province is concerned, to consult with the Governor. What I have said of Port-Roseway may be applied to any other of the new settlements where you may judge it advisable.

As it may hereafter be necessary to erect works for the defence of some of the new settlements now forming in Nova Scotia, I recommend it to you to make application to the Governor for a reservation of such lands as may be judged proper for that purpose, for the security of the province in general, as well as for the erection of such buildings and Store houses, as are necessary thereto.

You will please to order the usual bounty of Two hundred days Bate, Baggage, and Forage money, to be issued to such of the German troops as are embarked, and to such of them as may hereafter embark from your districts. I am, Sir,

your most obedient and
most humble servant
Guy Carleton.

Fort Howe, River St. John's, 23rd July, 1783.

Sir,—Please to pay William Hazen Esq. or his order six pounds ten shillings Nova Scotia Currency, it being for thirteen days hire of the Schooner Sea-Flaw for the purpose of conveying the Agents for His Majesty's Provincial Regiments up the River St. John's thirteen days at ten shillings per day.

Edward Winslow, for himself & the other Agents.

Roger Johnson, Esq.,
Commissary &c., Halifax.

Halifax 27 August 1783.

Rec'd the above sum of Edward Winslow Esq.
£6, 10,— Wm. Hazen.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Fort Howe, River St. John's, 23rd July, 1783.

My dear Chip,—I yesterday evening arrived at this place after the most agreeable tour I ever had in my life. Barclay, Allen and a number of young Bucks and myself have explored this grand river one hundred and twenty miles from its mouth and we have returned delighted beyond expression. I must defer a minute description until I have rested myself and have more leisure. Your letter which I have this moment received has caused a kind of agitation which I cannot describe. Had I received a message from the Great Ruler of the World allowing me to chuse an employment (at this critical time) I should have pointed out the very one my friends have so kindly provided for me.* I am now preparing to embark in a Boat to cross the Bay of Fundy, where horses are ready for me to proceed immediately to Halifax. Assure yourself my dear Chip that I will exert myself most capitally on this occasion. From Halifax you shall hear particularly. I am forever indebted to Judge Ludlow and those other of my friends who have interested themselves so materially for me. I cannot tell you in this haste how important I consider it. Thank Townsend for the service and accept my best acknowledgements for the things sent by Ryerson. I shall be obliged to leave P—— and the little ones at Annapolis, 'tis a consolation indeed that I can leave 'em comfortable.

What millions of things crowd on my mind to say to you. Suspend your curiosity till I arrive at Halifax.

Most fervently & affect'ly, Yours,

Ned.

P. S. Left your letter to write my Dad, but am summoned to embark this minute. Say all that is necessary.

Shelburne, 25th July, 1783.

Sir,—I have the honor to inform your Excellency of my arrival here (late Port Roseway) in the Sophia Frigate and that I have named the town and district, Shelburne. From every appearance I have not a doubt but that it will in a short time become the most flourishing Town for trade of any in this part of the World, and the country will for agriculture. For any particulars that your Excellency may wish to know I refer you to the bearer Mr. Robertson.

I did myself the honor to write to you by the "Lucerne" expressing my sentiments relative to the number of Loyalists intending to go to the River St. Johns. I greatly fear the soil and fertility of that part of this province is overrated by people who have explored it partially. I wish it may turn out otherwise, but have my fears that there is scarce good land enough for them already sent there. If all the Provincial Corps go, am certain there will not, which was the reason for my recommending the eastern side of the St. Croix River to your Excellency.

I have the honour to be with great esteem

Your Excellency's most obedient

humble servant,

His Excellency, Sir Guy Carleton. J. Parr.

*As military secretary to General Fox, the newly appointed commander in chief of the forces in Nova Scotia.

Dear Ned,—I this moment learn that Colonel Morse* embarks in an hour for Halifax, and as it is now within half an hour of dinner time, I shall only be able to write a few lines. I am anxious beyond measure to know if my letters relative to your connection with General Fox as his Secretary arrived in season. The evening before he sailed he wrote me a note to know if I had received an answer to my letter to you on that subject. I told him I had written fully to you but had received no answer as there had been no arrivals from that part of the country where you was since my letter could have reached you. Dont fail to let me know by the first opportunity how the matter terminates, I told the General I did not doubt the proposal would be agreeable to you.

It's now next to a certainty almost that we shall be all away from here this fall; I cannot yet determine which way to steer, much will depend upon the intelligence I receive from you and your advice. Should Sir Guy go to Nova Scotia I shall inevitably go there too, or if I am like to forfeit any considerable advantage by not being there this winter I certainly will go. Few, very few, will remain here, Nova Scotia is the rage, petitions are daily going in from very respectable people to the Commander in Chief for lands, &c. Blowers with his family mean to embark in the course of the next month for Halifax, and I think it very probable your father and family will go with him. Your mother is arrived and in health and spirits as indeed they all are.

Keep a look out for me with respect to lands if you can and let me know what is to be done on my part. To have as many strings to my Bow as I could I have signed a petition with Col. Willard and others to the Com'r in Chief. † My anxiety increases every day, all business being at an end, I find myself running behind hand very fast every day,

*Colonel Robert Morse of the Royal Engineers is here referred to. His well known report on Nova Scotia in 1783 is printed in the Canadian Archives for the year 1884.

† Ward Chipman thus became one of the celebrated "Fifty-five" petitioners for lands in Nova Scotia. (See Sabine's Loyalists under name of Abijah Willard; also an anonymous political tract, of which a few copies are extant, printed at London, 1784). Chipman soon afterwards disassociated himself from the company. See his letter under date 3rd August, 1783, in this book. Colonel Abijah Willard was of Lancaster, Mass. He settled near Carleton and gave the name of Lancaster to the parish in which he resided. He was a member of the first council of the province. He died in 1789 at the age of 67 years, and his family returned to Massachusetts. The "Fifty-five" claimed that they were justly entitled to the same allowance as field officers, viz., 5,000 acres each, in consideration of their special services and the dignity or importance of their former positions in society. The other Loyalists at New York strongly resented the claim for special consideration advanced by the "Fifty-five," and considered their action both ungenerous and unfair, and in consequence of their protests the scheme fell through.

for my d——d mode of living is as expensive as ever. You distressed me very much by the account you gave me of my dear boy Chip—God grant your fears may have proved groundless. Let me know how it has fared with him and how Pop with the other dear little ones makes out. Kiss them all for me.

We have no news, no definitive treaty yet. I shall write you tomorrow via St. John's.

Adieu, Yours most affectionately,

Chip.

Brigadier General Fox to Edward Winslow.

Sir,—I suppose you have received Mr. Chippeham's [Chipman's] Letter from N. York on the subject I take the Liberty of writing to you upon. I should be happy to hear by the first opportunity if the proposal is agreeable to you, as I most sincerely wish it may suit your views.

I should not have taken the Liberty of proposing such a thing to you had not your acquaintance, Judge Ludlow, assured me you would not be offended at the Liberty I have taken in making the offer of the appointment of Secretary to me as Commanding Officer of the Troops in N. Scotia. Col. De Lancey has promised to forward this by the first opportunity.

I am Sir

Your most obedient Humble Servant,

H. E. Fox.

Halifax, July 31st, 1783.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, Saturday 2d Aug't, 1783.

My dear good fellow,—Last Saturday I left the River St. John's and crossed the Bay of Fundy and at Annapolis took horse and yesterday arrived at this place. I am amply paid for all the fatigues and dangers which I have experienced by the polite reception I met with from Gen. Fox. On Tuesday or Wednesday next Gen'l Paterson embarks for England and then I shall engage in my new business.

When I received your letter I had just returned from a kind of campaign that would have added a few wrinkles to any man's face, and God knows rest and refreshment would have been very pleasant, but the fear of a possibility that my absence would have been prejudicial, induced me to exert every nerve and I cannot express to You how excessively I was gratify'd at being only 24 hours after the General. Barclay (who knows every circumstance of the matter) will communicate all you wish to know.

I am sensible how far your curiosity extends in matters that relate to me and I would indulge it if I could by this opportunity, but Barclay has been summoned from Capt. Tryers', where we dined, to embark immediately. As I am now becoming a sedentary man, you may depend on my commencing an old fashioned history which I shall forward by the next conveyance.

I cannot describe to you my distress at an event which has taken place in my family. I doubt whether I would not be lessened in your opinion was I to tell you in what manner it has affected me — the poor little fellow. [He probably refers to the death of his little boy "Chip."]

I have reconciled Polly in some degree to my absence. She is more comfortably situated than she ever was before. William (Quarter Master, formerly Thompson's Groom) superintends all the business at Granville. Polly has two cows, which I bought, and from which she makes all her butter, &c. "Silk" continues with her and Frank and little George; and under the management of William they do very well. Presley (Thompson's orderly man) is with me and a very valuable fellow. The place I have hired has been cultivated in such a stile as to ensure us more hay and vegetables than we can possible use. In short Chip for many years past I have not felt myself so free from chagrin so rationally happy, or whatever else you have a mind to call it, as now. My appointment I believe has given as much pleasure to the people here perhaps as ever such an event did for reasons which Barclay will tell you.

I shall follow your rules lay'd down in your letter — rely on't I will be industrious and prudent, the last I acknowledge will be the most arduous task but I am equal even to that. Barclay will pay you twelve guineas, and he means to make a serious application to the Commander in Chief for a sum to reimburse Delancey, himself and me for our expenses in the agency for the Provincial Regiments. If he acquires anything, and I presume he will, I have requested him to pay my proportion to you. I wrote you to send me clothes — if you have not engaged 'em you need not do it. I find I can get 'em here as cheap as at York — only supply the girls with some linen, my kit is in bad condition.

I shall not write the old gentleman, you are possessed of every necessary fact respecting me, and I have requested Barclay to see him instantly after his arrival.

I suppose that my subsistence will be paid for one more period, and that you will pay yourself for such matters as I have been supplied with since I left you.

I know not where to leave off — my different tours have been very expensive, but I have scuttled thro' like an old soldier, and I begin to value myself upon such maneuvres, possibly I may one day do other make an attempt to save a little money. I know that T. Coffin, Fred Philips and yourself sneer at the idea — Laugh and be hanged, I'll try.

I am anxiously expecting the arrival of Colonel Fanning here. Is it not possible my dear Chip that a collection of us (consequential men) may have it in our power to coax you by some means to join us here? What can induce you? This is a matter in which I feel myself so deeply, very deeply interested, that I cannot write dispassionately—but we are enterprising people—may not something be effected?

Adieu,

Almighty God bless you,

Ed. Winslow.

Rev. Jonathan Odell* to Edward Winslow.

New York, Aug. 3rd, 1783.

Dear Sir,—I have been recently feasted with communications of Extracts from your letters to Major Upham and Mr. Chipman, and having paid them in thanks, which you know is orthodox clerical coin, for the pleasure they have afforded me, I now seize the moment while Chip's dinner is waiting for a Guest more tardy than myself to make a tender of the same tribute to you. I am very happy to find from your description of "a prospect" to which a way has been cut by such herculean exertions, my own prospects eventually brightening in the hope that I too, with Friend Chipman, may ere long have a comfortable habitation in your new planned Town, where I shall hope a spark of your fire will also awaken me to feel that noble enthusiasm which looks with disdain on all former objects of description—the mere spurts of small beer and such like diuretic drippings. I have further to acknowledge your excellent Newtonian discovery—never sure did the Hon'ble Major [Hanger] dream of such fortune awaiting his former attendant, secured it seems by your oracular response to the Lady's inquiry. †

But dinner waits. God bless you, I have written a hasty line to Major

*Rev Jonathan Odell was a man of many parts. It is said that "he commenced doctor of physic." He was born in Newark, New Jersey, September 25, 1737, and was for a time preceptor there. He was ordained by the Bishop of London in 1766. He was in charge of the church at Burlington, N. J., when the Revolution began. In 1777 he was gazetted chaplain of the Pennsylvania Loyalists, but was transferred to the King's American Dragoons upon the organization of that corps. He was a protege of Sir Guy Carleton, and became his private secretary, and through his influence was appointed provincial secretary on the formation of the province of New Brunswick in 1783. The office descended to his son, the Hon. W. F. Odell, who held it for 32 years. The father, after coming to Fredericton, is believed to have occasionally officiated in the capacity of a clergyman. He was called the Honorable and Reverend Jonathan Odell. He was quite a clever writer, and composed many bits of poetry. He was the intimate friend of Winslow and Chipman.

Murray—you are my Guardians, and I am sure you will provide for me. If you lose the game at all fours let not the inference be "we will have no church,"* rather let the Church be destined, if it cannot be a house of prayer, to accommodate with a Dwelling—Your affectionate Friend & h'ble Serv't, Jon. Odell.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

New York 3d Augt. 1783.

Dear Winslow,—I wrote you largely the day before yesterday, but as an opportunity offers for St. John's tomorrow by Stephen Skinner† I will not omit it, tho' nothing of consequence occurs to write about. The committee, or rather Agents, appointed by those gentlemen who have lately applied to the Commander in Chief for lands in Nova Scotia go in the ship which sails tomorrow. ‡ I signed the Petition but have since found several names upon the list which do not comport with my ideas of the business at all. I shall of course decline any further concern in the matter relying upon your having it in your power to provide much better for me in your arrangements than can be done in any other way. Our friend Tom Bannister ‖ is upon the list, he subscribes the power of agency and pays his 3 guineas to defray the expences of the agents in negotiating the business for the Company. If it is practicable to have me included for a tract or lot or share or whatever it is called, among those that will be of your party, don't forget me. I should admire a very romantic, grand-water-river-falls-lake-prospect with a good cold spring of water near my house. I shall be very anxious till I know the result of the proposal relative to General Fox, as I am more and more uneasy that so much was said to him on the subject, tho' it was absolutely necessary, unless the matter was given up altogether, and I wished it might be in your option to undertake it if your situation and interest rendered it eligible.

The month of August is arrived and everything here wears the same †Brother of Brigadier General Cortlandt Skinner of New Jersey.

‡The agents for the "Fifty-five" were Rev. John Sayre, Philip J. Livingston, and Nathaniel Chandler. They arrived at Annapolis Royal August 17, 1783, and their proceedings are recorded in a very scarce and interesting pamphlet, of which a copy is in possession of the writer of these notes. Rev. John Sayre went to St. John, and Livingston and Chandler thereupon associated with them Stephen Skinner, who was one of the "Fifty-five," and proceeded to Halifax. The governor demurred to granting so large a tract as 5,000 acres to each individual of the company. Delay ensued. Sir Guy Carleton declined to countenance the project, and in the end it was a complete failure.

‖Thomas Bannister belonged to Rhode Island. He saw some service under Daniel Murray in Wentworth's Volunteers. He was a magistrate at Weymouth, N. S., in 1785.

appearance as it did three months ago, except that now and then a Hessian regiment embarks for Europe. One of these goes on board Capt. Humble in a few days to his great mortification, he wished to go back again to St. John's.

I wrote to you fully in my last my opinion respecting your Father's movements; he means to consult Mr. Watson and his other friends, their opinion with your next letters will ultimately decide him. He dines with me to-day with Barclay and a few friends. I wish you could take a glass with us of the last bottle of Thompson's that I have.

Opinions are various respecting the evacuation of this place, tho' I have little doubt myself that it will be soon. No magazines of fuel or forage are providing for the winter—the whole army is encamping from Newton across to Denys's* as if to be in readiness to embark at a moment's warning. I imagine we shall be hurried off as soon as the definitive treaty arrives.

Whenever your scheme of a separate government at St. John's is ripe for execution I shall be ready to embark in the business. I think if the present illiberal policy in the United States continues, that must soon become a very valuable and important country, and one may then I think stand a chance to be foremost in some line or other.

Dr. Bailey goes to England this fall, Blowers to Halifax immediately. By the way, Miss Kent† is now very ill, I think she must die. You will I think see all your friends at Halifax next winter. My movements are not yet absolutely determined on tho' I think Halifax will bring me up. Remember me particularly to Murray and the rest of my friends with you—

Adieu. Yours most faithfully,

Chip.

Lt. Col. Isaac Allen to Edward Winslow.

Wilmot,‡ August 7th, 1783.

Dear Sir,—I congratulate you on the arrival of General Fox and hope your situation will be as profitable to yourself as I am sure it will be advantageous to your Friends and all distressed Loyalists. Delancey tells me you have relinquished all the Province to the Refugees except the Lands

*Newton was a village a little to the east of Brooklyn, on Long Island, and Deny's, in the same vicinity, was a place where the Loyalist regiments frequently encamped and were mustered by Colonel Winslow.

†Miss Kent was a daughter of Benjamin Kent and a sister of Mrs. Sampson Salter Blowers. She lived with Chief Justice Blowers and her sister at Halifax.

‡Wilmot, in Annapolis County, offered an asylum to a number of Loyalists of merit, among them General Timothy Ruggles. Lieut. Col. Allen's stay there was but brief. Lands were surveyed here for the elder Edward Winslow by direction of Hon. Charles Morris, the surveyor general of Nova Scotia.

above Sunbury. I must therefore on behalf of myself and the ladds I have settled on Kennebekasius* beg your assistance to have that land confirmed to me. The state of the case is this; Doctor Prince about 12 months ago obtained a Promise from Sir Andrew Hammond† for five thousand acres, which was surveyed at his request and expence but not regularly returned in the office nor any Patent taken out. Upon my arrival at St. John's the Doctor proposed to convey me three thousand of the five upon my promising ten settlers, which I immediately did and have been at the trouble and expence of having the lands divided and the men have built, and cleared part of the lands. Doctor Prince was so mortified at the loss of Musquash Cove that he did not chuse to ask any favor of the Governor, but wished Bliss and Major Murray to come in for two thousand acres, the residue of the Tract. I think this tract worth attending to and as I find many are making applications for private Grants you will have no difficulty in procuring this when it is considered that I have been at considerable expence in getting the lands surveyed and settled, and that at the time I entered into the scheme with Doctor Prince I could have no idea it would interfere with the interest of Provincials or Refugees.

Major Barclay, in a letter to Robinson, mentioned that application is made for lands in this town. Whether this Grant is solicited for Provincial officers in general or for individuals I know not. If it should be for individuals I should be glad to have two thousand acres here and would recommend it to you to get a proportion of your lands here as I think the lands equal to any high lands we saw at St. John's. Inclosed I send you the names of the Men‡ settled on the lands at Kennebekasius, so that we must be charged with only three thousand acres of this Tract and the men with two hundred each. I hope you will think with me that this business is worth attending to when I assure you that the lands are equal in Quality to Mauger-Ville and not so subject to the Freshet. If Bliss should decline having a part of this land there will be three lots, which will give Murray, you and myself a thousand each, and they will be more valuable as I have ten excellent Farmers upon them.

Pray let me hear from you as soon as possible and inform me whether

*Lieut. Col. Isaac Allen, with others, obtained a grant of 14,000 acres on the Kennebeccasis river, including in its limits the present village of Sussex. The grant was dated July 6, 1784. It was afterwards relinquished in consideration of a grant of lands elsewhere.

†Sir Andrew Snape Hammond's grant of 10,000 acres on the south side of the Kennebeccasis, in the vicinity of Hammond River, was made on Dec. 23, 1782. The grant was escheated and the land regranted to bona fide settlers.

you are like to succeed or no; if you should succeed for the Lands on Kennebekasius pray write a line to Sergeant Major Ruloffson, who is now there, informing him of it as they are now in suspense and will not proceed in improving as fast as I could wish. I make no apology for this tedious letter, as I know the pleasure you will have in obliging your friend Murray and myself will be superior to the trouble of reading the letter or soliciting the business.

I am still afflicted with the complaint you left me with. I fear I shall never get clear of it. I expect to sail for [New] York in a few days and shall be happy to execute your commands there. I am with great truth,

Your Friend & Hum. Serv't,

I. Allen.

[P. S.] Our friend Hazen knows where these men live: you had better write to him, if you succeed, who will inform them. I have no better Paper.

Halifax 8th August, 1783.

Sir,—It having been represented to Brigadier General Fox that the King's American Dragoons under your command cannot be enhutted at the place where they are at present encamped* without inconvenience to the great number of Loyalists who are forming settlements at the mouth of the River St. John's, and he being also informed that His Excellency the Governor of this Province has assigned a certain tract of land for the accommodation of the Provincial Regiments on the River St. John's beginning at the eastern† boundaries of the Townships of Sunbury and Newtown and extending up the river, I am directed to acquaint you that you have Brigadier General Fox's permission to remove the King's American Dragoons to that part of the District which has been allotted to the regiment by the agents for locating lands for His Majesty's Provincial Forces. And as the procuring the Timber and many other articles necessary for erecting the Huts will at the same time facilitate the clearing the Land and in other respects be beneficial to property which is assigned to the Regiment, it is the General's idea that the Huts may be built without any public expence. Lieutenant Colonel Morse, Chief Engineer, will (in consideration that your regiment may be exposed to peculiar inconveniences from being the first who are ordered to hut on the River St. John's) forward to you such articles as he apprehends cannot be procured at that place.

*The place of encampment seems to have been in Carleton, on the west side of St. John harbor. The regiment was sent up the river to Prince William and there disbanded, a step which was approved by Sir Guy Carleton.

I have the honor to be &c, &c.

Edward Winslow, Secretary.

Brigadier General Fox to Edward Winslow.

D'r Sir,—I am to go tomorrow morning with Col. Morse to the Governour before Ten O'Clock about the business I mentioned to you as I was dressing. I wish to talk to you on the Subject before I go as the more I think of it the more I think sending Troops might produce the most ruinous consequence; at the same time not only my instructions but my real desire would be to attend to every wish and opinion of the Governour's, and even yield obedience to his orders as Governour where I did not commit myself or prejudice the service,

Yours most sincerely

H. E. Fox.

Thursday night.

[P. S.] Be so good as to bring Capt. Studholme's Letters with you.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 9th August, 1783.

My dear Chip,—I now commence my operations in the writing way which will be continued every hour when I have leisure until an opportunity offers for [New] York. The first subject which engages my attention is of course my own money matters. You will find by the acc't. inclosed that I have expended a large sum in the business of Agent for the Provincial Regiments—this sum Barclay assured me he would apply to the Commander in Chief to reimburse. Should be fail (which I cannot suppose) I have no doubt the regiments who empowered me specially will answer for my proportion, as I have certainly succeeded (I flatter myself) beyond what they could expect. But should the public wish to cheat me, and those regiments want gratitude (both which may happen) Barclay is under engagements to pay one half of the sums due to the Express, to Fason, and for the vessel, the whole of which is £19,10—his half £9,15 Halifax currency.

* * 15th August—I intended, my dear Chip, to have bored you with a very lengthy epistle—many are the disappointments of the righteous, &c. A vessel is ordered to depart tomorrow morning and my official business obliges me to neglect everything else. If you want to name a pattern of industry and temperance you cannot hit the mark so perfectly as E. W. I only wish that some man of observation was to remove from this to [New] York to do justice to my exertions* but more of this in future.

Never was a set of men so completely in the dark as those of this Garrison—it is yet so doubtful whether you are to leave [New] York this winter or not, that one cannot determine what to do or how to advise one's friends. I have very few. I am not so seriously concerned about any man on the face of the earth as about yourself. Accustomed as I am to dashing, bustling, staring poverty in the face, dodging it and laughing at it, I don't care a condemn about myself—but you who have taken so much pains to acquire professional knowledge descend with great reluctance one single step from the finale, and you cannot reconcile yourself to anything on a small scale. If necessity should bring you to this province I do really think that a man of spirit and abilities might get as comfortable a living as the climate and the society will admit, and—strange as it may appear—I aver that in my present situation it is as much in my power to assist my friends as any one man in the province of Nova Scotia. You never did me so important a service as by forwarding my present appointment. I have not time nor words to express the satisfaction I have and expect to enjoy in my present connection.

I'm summoned. I did not intend that my duty to my General or any other duty should prevent me from performing my first of duties, to my Father, but I can't add another word, only that I shall set out with General Fox for Annapolis and the River St. John's next week, and that I am invariably Camp Manawauganish,* 12 August, 1783.

D'r Sir,—I have this moment heard of Mr. Hazen's intended departure for Halifax. The Major [Murray] has just got down the river. He is in raptures with it. We shall all move up in about a fortnight—the sooner the better I think, as Hutting in this country is a serious piece of business. There is a report that troops are coming here. If there are detachments from different corps that will justify an appointment [of Surgeon] to the post, I know that your attention is such that I may expect not to be overlooked, tho' of so diminutive a size.

Poor Nase† is distracted about Major Coffin. We have a report by Campbell that he is killed;‡ for God's sake let us know if it is true. I hope not. His house is raised. Nase is very industrious. I hope Gen'l Fox has arrived and that you meet with every wish & pleasure your heart can desire. There is a fleet expected every moment from [New] York. Capt. Stewart‖ of our corps is said to be in it. You cannot expect any News from this remote Corner—from you we expect everything. When shall we hear from the Colonel?§ God grant him his senses. Your very much obliged friend and Hum. serv.

Brig. General Fox to Sir Guy Carleton.

Halifax 15th August, 1783.

Sir,—I have the honor to inform your Excellency that on the 6th Instant, Major General Paterson embarked for Great Britain in His Majesty's Ship Magicienne, under whose convoy were a number of ships carrying the whole of the German Troops from this province. Brigadier General Campbell embarked on the same day for New York and I took upon me the Command of His Majesty's Troops in this District.

I immediately communicated to Governor Parr your Excellency's Instruction relative to sending troops to Port Roseway, and it was the Governor's opinion "that from the present good disposition of the Inhabitants, it was not expedient to send troops there at this time." I also made application to the Governor for a reservation of such Lands in the new settlements now forming in this Province as may be necessary for public purposes, and I was favored with His Excellency's assurances "that such Reservations should be made in all instances."

A list of the several Departments in Nova Scotia is herewith inclosed. I have endeavoured to reduce them as low as the nature of the service will admit. The department of Commissary of Prisoners is discontinued agreable to your Excellency's order, and as your Excellency has given leave for Mr. Winslow, Muster Master General of Provincials to reside at Halifax, I thought it unnecessary to continue Major Skinner and his Deputy here.

I have ordered the allowance of Rum to Working Parties to be reduced to a gill per man (it having been formerly the practice here to allow half a pint) and I have directed that the Commissioned Officers shall receive

*Colonel William Tyng was at one time sheriff of Cumberland County, in Maine. He was born in Boston in 1737. He was commissioned a colonel by General Gage in 1774. He was a commissary at New York during the war, and was sent to St. John at the peace in 1783 to act as commissary and agent for the Loyalists, an office he filled to their satisfaction. He was one of the directors in allotting grants at Parr Town to the Loyalists. The street now called Princess street was at first known as Tyng street. Colonel Tyng retired to Gagetown about 1785 and was sheriff of Queens County. Later he returned to the United States and died near Portland, Maine, in 1807, aged 70 years. Lorenzo Sabine in his Loyalists of the American Revolution eulogizes Col. Tyng.

Spruce-Beer in lieu of Rum (which hitherto has not been the custom in this Garrison). I have also found it necessary to make some regulations in the Issues of Fuel, which I have communicated to Mr. Watson.

On a representation made to me that the King's American Dragoons could not be hutted where they are at present encamped without material inconvenience to the great number of Loyalists who are forming settlements at the mouth of the River Saint-John's; and having been also informed that the Governor has assigned a Tract of Land for the accommodation of the Provincial Regiments, I thought it advisable, after consulting the Governor, to send the Regiment to that Ground, which is about one hundred miles up the River St. John's, and I gave notice to major Murray, "That as the procuring the Timber and many other articles necessary for erecting the Hutts will at the same time facilitate the clearing the Land and be other ways beneficial to the property which is assigned to the Regiment, it was my idea that the Hutts should be built without any public expence."

I inclose to the Adjutant General the returns to the 1st August, I also take the liberty of forwarding a memorial from the Honorable Forster Hutchinson, Esq'r, one of His Majesty's Council for the Province of Massachusetts Bay and Brother of the late Governor. This is a Gentleman of such great consideration and respectable character that I could not decline making his circumstances known to your Excellency through this channel.

I must also submit to your Excellency's consideration the copy of a letter which I have this day received from His Excellency Governor Parr. As the subject appeared to me of very great importance I endeavoured to obtain every information in my power, and on the whole I thought it my duty to observe to the Governor that the measure proposed of sending a Detachment of Troops to the place pointed out in his Letter could not have a tendency to settle the controversy relative to the Boundaries and might in the present situation of matters be attended with very disagreeable consequences. His Excellency the Governor has agreed to defer the matter until I am favoured with particular instructions on the subject.

I have the honor to be, Your Excellency's most obedient and humble Servant,

H. E. Fox, Br. Gen.

Governor Parr to Sir Guy Carleton.

Halifax, 15 Aug., 1783.

Sir,—I should have done myself the honour of writing to your Excellency by Major Barclay, but was prevented by a severe cold in my head. It was to inform you how happy it made me to find that the Provincial corps could be accommodated upon the River St. John near the source of that River leaving the lower part to the Refugees now settled there. * * * Notwithstanding the Provincial corps are settled to their satisfaction upon St. Johns River, I cannot avoid expressing my concern that some of these corps were not set down upon the eastern side of the River St. Croix, or somewhere upon the Bay of Passamaquoddy, the Frontier of this Province, to resemble the cantonments of an army, agreeable to your Excellency's letter dated the 26th April. The inclosed is a proposed Route to Quebec. I have not a doubt but that it will in a short time be compleated with Post Houses &c.

I have the honour to be with great respect,

Your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

J. Parr.

New York, Aug't, 21, 1783.

Dear Winslow,—Your situation with General Fox has undoubtedly given you an opportunity to know that the K. A. Dragoons are established and will receive Half Pay when disbanded. I suppose the present will be the last abstract, I mean from the 25th August—in that case I wish every contingent allowance may be included. You will I am sure take care of us. I hope you will make interest to be continued in your present employment when General Campbell shall take command. I must beg the favour of you to forward the inclosed to Major Murray. I wish him to send me an old Rhode Island admiralty commission.

We shall all soon be with you—every body, all the World moves on to Nova Scotia—Blowers &c will soon be there. God bless you—if possible.

I am most sincerely, Your friend &c.,

J. Upham.

If Murray sends you the commission pray keep it till I see you.

Sir Guy Carleton to Brig. Gen. H. E. Fox.

New York, 22d August, 1783.

Sir,—I have received yours of the 6th instant. * * The 2d Battalion of the 84th Regiment and the British American corps in Nova Scotia and the Island of St. Johns are to be disbanded as soon as possible, for which you will please take the necessary steps. * * The abstracts for the British American Forces are to be made up to the day of their being disbanded, and fourteen days pay from that day without deduction is to be given to each of the non commissioned officers, drummers and private men.

I have ordered that a spade and an axe should be given to each Soldier here, whose future mode of life may require them, on his being disbanded, and you will please to order the same to be issued to each Soldier discharged in Nova Scotia in like manner. * * *

The several corps should be discharged as contiguous as possible to the Lands on which they are to settle, for which purpose you will communicate with the Governor and press him not only to determine the spots for each corps but that he will also expedite, as much as possible, the location of lands for the Refugees on the River St. Johns, which I am concerned to hear has been much delayed. As it is probable some of the Refugees going from hence, notwithstanding the exertions we have made, will not arrive till late in the year, you will be pleased to have the Barracks and Public Stores at Annapolis put into repair for their reception, or for the use of such troops as it may be necessary to send there. The British American Troops from this place will be sent to the River St Johns as soon as possible. * * * I enclose an extract of a letter from the Secretary of State, which you will please to communicate to the officers of the British American Corps, that they may be informed on what ground they stand as to their hopes of half pay. I have no other information on this subject. * * *

I am Sir,

Your most obedient and most humble Servant,
Guy Carleton.

Adjutant General's Office,
New York, 23 Aug. 1783.

Sir,—I am directed by the Commander in Chief to inform you that the King's American Dragoons, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Thompson; the Fencible American Regiment, commanded by Colonel Goreham; Kings Orange Rangers, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Bayard; the Kings Rangers, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Rogers, and the St. John's Volunteers,* commanded by Capt. Callbeck, are to be disbanded as soon as possible at Halifax, or such other place in your province as you and the Governor shall think most advisable, except the Kings Rangers* and St. John's Volunteers, who probably you may think it will be best to dismiss at that Island, where they are now stationed.

The 17th, 33rd, 37th, 42d, 54th, & 57th Regiments are to remain in Nova Scotia under the orders of Major General Campbell.

The corps in Newfoundland commanded by Lieut. Colonel Pringle is to be disbanded as soon as two companies of the 37th Regiment which are to be stationed there, arrive at that place.

Enclosed I send you a copy of the General orders given out this day confirming the sentence of the General Court Martial held on Lieutenant Wheaton of the Nova Scotia Volunteers; and likewise a sketch of the Embarkations which are to take place for your Province as soon as possible. I have the honor to be, Sir,

With great respect, Your most obed't,
Humble servant,

Memorial on behalf of Royal Guides and Pioneers.

To His Excellency Sir Guy Carleton, Knight of the Bath, Commander in Chief, &c, &c, &c,

The memorial of Major John Aldington in behalf of himself and the Regiment of Guides and Pioneers under his command, Sheweth:—That this Regiment or Detachments from it have been constantly on service from the year 1776 to the capitulation of York Town viz: at Danbury, in the Jerseys, from the head of Elk to Philadelphia, at the reduction of Forts Clinton and Montgomery, at Rhode Island and Martha's Vineyard, at the reduction of Charlestown and through the southern provinces, at Cape Far with General Leslie and in Virginia with General Arnold.

That all the officers in the Regiment, with only one exception have been more than six years in the service, are mostly Refugees whose properties have been confiscated and who from their Loyalty have rendered themselves too obnoxious ever to return.

That not having been included in the memorial presented to your

*The King's Rangers were raised under Colonel Robert Rogers, who had previously commanded the Queen's Rangers. He was a brave soldier, and had gained quite a reputation by his services during the French war. He undertook the organization of the King's Rangers in May, 1779, but owing to intemperate habits his success was not very great. The King's Rangers were sent to Halifax in 1779, and afterwards to Prince Edward Island.

Excellency in favor of the other Provincial Regiments, and understanding that Lands in Nova Scotia have been promised to such as were desirous of settling in that country, your memorialists therefore hope they will be considered as entitled to all the advantages which may be given to the other Provincial Regiments, and especially as to Lands in Nova Scotia where they are very desirous of settling and of confirming their attachment to their sovereign by becoming faithful and useful subjects.

John Aldington,
Major Commanding Guides & Pioneers.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 27th August, 1783.

My dear Chip,—When you cast your eye on the date of this letter you will conclude that I have not much leisure to amuse myself or friends.

I really do think that the River St. John's is the pleasantest part of this country and I am sure the land is better than any I have ever seen. I therefore intend to take my estate upon that river, and as I love you just exactly as I do myself, I intend that you shall fare precisely as I do. When I left it there had been no survey for the Provincials. Since I have arrived here I have obtained an order for Murray and his regiment to take possession of a particular spot, in the neighborhood of which I am determined to lay out farms for half a dozen of my friends, and when they are surveyed and bounded I will apply for the Grants, and—what's more—I will obtain 'em. I am induced to do this for a thousand reasons, one of the most powerful is that the regiment will assist so essentially in clearing, &c. I enclose you a letter which I received from Murray, who when I left the river was prejudiced against the country. You shall have a fine prospect, rocks, hills, &c, and there is no fear of your having water near your house.

If you chuse to build on the Intervale your lower story will be full all the spring season, which is very handy. On this tour I will settle the business.

I have wrote particularly to Penny respecting my father and his family. I cannot reconcile myself to their coming here. I can give you no idea of the expences. If Government will make him any allowance why not spend it comfortably in England. If I must support 'em why not let me do it in a country allowed to be more comfortable and infinitely cheaper than this. I cannot do it here, because, altho' I live with General Fox (that is dine), pay no house rent, nothing for fuel, drink no wine (of my own), hire no servants—nor anything else, I cannot if I were to suffer perdition live on all the pay I can get. I shall submit to better advice, but if there's a chance of his getting a recompence, his being in England is the most effectual way to it—but enough.

I am vastly gratify'd my dear Chip at my situation (embarrassed as my circumstances are), I am precisely on the terms with the General that I could wish. In the morning the formal man of business, and be assured that a more penetrating sensible man is not to be found; in the evening on terms of familiarity and, I flatter myself, friendship. In short I have received such marks of attention and such handsome compliments that my vanity is not a little increased. If there was not now, nor never had been any money in the world, I should do tolerably well, but the d——d stuff always plagues me. I do not know how I get rid of it. I give none away and I spend none, but I am always poorer than Lazarus. I hope you will succeed in obtaining a reimbursement of the money which I have expended on the business of Agent, if not I shall be very much distressed. I have as yet received nothing as Secretary and until it is mentioned to me, I shall not open my lips. Difficulties arose here about a paymaster of contingencies, particularly in the Engineers Department. Col. Morse, who has been very polite to me, proposed to the General to appoint me. I was consulted and I thought he had better omit until the Commander in Chief's pleasure was known. Morse, however, urged it and the General consented. It was proposed to me and I accepted it on one condition, which was that I should be permitted to do the duty (till the Commander in Chief had approved my appointment or appointed another) without receiving any pay for it. I knew this proposal would gratify my friend—it had the desired effect. I now act as sole Muster Master of Provincials, Secretary to the General, and Paymaster to the Engineers and with one Clerk at 5s a day I do all this business I believe to general acceptance. If you come here you will find me in point of reputation what as my friend you'd wish me to be. Thus circumstanced we might by laying our heads together effect some substantial matters for both. I shall be monstrously pleased when it comes my turn again to be of some use in the joint concern.

I have this instant heard that a number of respectable Vassals, Ewings, &c, have arrived at Boston and were not permitted to land. I suppose they will of course return to England. I cannot help hoping that my father will think that the most eligible method for himself and family. This country Chip will do well enough for you and I to bustle in but it is the devil for a helpless man. I think you can convince him of it. Let me know what your determination is with respect to yourself and tell me minutely what you wish me to do. My house here will hold two people so that matter's settled for the Apostle Paul shall not supercede you there.

I never know when to stop. Remember me affectionately to all hands.

I have not received one line from Col. Ludlow since I was in this province. I hope my friend Jack Coffin is recovered. I have great anxiety about him.

Most affectionately yours,

Ed. Winslow.

Maj. Gen. Thos. Musgrave to Edward Winslow.

N. York, 30th Aug., 1783.

Dear Sir,—I am infinitely obliged to you for your very satisfactory letter of the 29th June which was only delivered to me last week. From the encouragement you there give me I fear that I must be further troublesome to you for your assistance in getting my lands located as soon as you have finished your own business and that the Governor is disposed to grant them. There is a circumstance which I did not mention to you before, that may perhaps be of some advantage to me in this matter. My ancestors were among the original Baronets of Nova Scotia* and had very large tracts of land annexed to their Patent and altho' they may have forfeited their pretensions to them by not fulfilling their agreements, yet I should hope they might be restored to me or at least other lands of equal goodness. Should you be of the same opinion and think that this will be some sort of claim you of course will make it, otherwise let it drop.

Give me leave to congratulate you on your new appointment and to assure you that few can feel more pleasure than myself at any good fortune which may attend you or your family. There was no persuading the good Old Gentleman to think of undertaking so long a voyage as that to England, and the remaining here was by no means thought advisable, so that his only alternative was to go to Nova Scotia where I hope he will arrive safe and meet with every comfort his merit and situation entitle him to. From your present employment you must be more thoroughly acquainted with all arrangements than we insignificant beings here, so that I suppose it needless to give you the reports we hear. Gen'l Birch† takes his departure on Sunday next and I have entered on his troublesome office but flatter myself that it will not be for long duration, as every dispatch is making for the evacuation that circumstances will admit.

*Sir William Alexander in 1621 received a grant of Acadia from King James I. He obtained from Charles I. permission to create a number of baronets in Nova Scotia, and 107 of these baronets were actually created during the next ten years. The estates of 34 were situated in what is now New Brunswick, 15 were in Nova Scotia, 24 in Cape Breton and 34 in Anticosti. Baronets continued to be created up to the time of the union of England and Scotland. There were more than 280 in all.

†General Birch was commandant of the city of New York during the greater part of the Revolutionary war. He was colonel in the 17th Light Dragoons.

I shall beg to be remembered most kindly to your Chieftain and all enquiring friends, and am with great truth D'r Sir,

Most sincerely yours,

Thos. Musgrave.*

Col. Benjamin Thompson to Edward Winslow.

Pall Mall Court 10th Sept. 1783.

Dear Winslow,—As you possibly have left American before this letter can reach Nova Scotia I shall leave a duplicate of it for you in London.

I am just upon the eve of setting out upon my travels, and it is not a small mortification to me that I shall be absent when you will arrive here. I shall leave London on Sunday next, shall cross from Dover to Calais, and from thence shall pass through Flanders to Strasburg, and by Ulm and Munich to Vienna where I propose to winter. In the Spring I shall visit Hungary, Bohemia, Saxony and the King of Prussia's Dominions, & from Berlin shall probably shape my Course towards old England, which I mean to make my home. How long I shall be absent from it I cannot tell. If there should be a war in any part of Europe (which does not at present seem probable) I shall stay abroad longer, as I would not miss such an opportunity of improving myself in my profession; but if there should be nothing of that sort to detain me I shall return as soon as I have satisfied my curiosity with seeing what is curious in the Northern parts of Europe. My first scheme was a much wilder, or if you please, a more desperate one, as you will see by my last letters, but the goodness of my friends in this country has induced me to change my plan.

Lord Sackville† has had the goodness to charge himself with the care of all my affairs of every kind, both public and private, in my absence; and he permits me to tell my friends that they may consider him in that light. I have left with him all my papers, and memorandums of all my wishes relative to my affairs, with full and legal powers to act for me in everything.

In my last letter I took the liberty of mentioning to you my wishes respecting my pecuniary concerns in your part of the Country. I have now only to beg you would be so good as to take charge of them, and that you would remit to Lord Sackville any monies you may have of mine, or that you may receive for me either as pay, or as payment of the Debts due to me from the officers of my Regiment. You may if you please correspond with me as usual, only directing your Letters to the care of Lord

*General Thomas Musgrave succeeded General Birch as commandant at New York in 1783. His name appears among a list of officers who on Dec. 10, 1783, applied for lands at Prince William, on the St. John river.

† Lord Sackville is better known as Lord George Germaine. He was Lieut. Col. Benjamin Thompson's friend and patron.

Sackville, Pall Mall, London. His Lordship will open the Letters and you will get answers to them, but it will be as well to write to Lord Sackville directly. If you come to England you will wait upon him of course, and if you dont like him very much indeed I shall be grealty disappointed. I have told him that he will like you and that he would do so even were you my enemy instead of being one of my best friends. It is now a long time since we parted, and I have not yet had the pleasure to receive a single line from you, tho' I have wrote you whole Volumes. Pray let me hear from you soon, and often. Your letters will reach me safe, wherever I may be, provided you address them to the care of Lord Sackville, and I will write to you through the same channel.

Remember me to all my friends in Nova Scotia, and believe me ever, My Dear Winslow,

Yours most sincerely

B. Thompson.

Major Joshua Upham to Col. Winslow.

New York, Sept, 12, 1783.

Dear Winslow,—I am allowed five minutes only to write to you. I beg you will use your influence that the District and Country to be settled by the Provincials be erected into a County and called by the name of Carleton—that the principal Town on the River St. John be called Guy.* Surely no man has so effectually contributed to the settlement of that Country as Sir Guy Carleton. I wish the Provincial Officers may have the credit of proving the above. I submit the matter with pleasure to your management; have written to Murray on the Subject. I am sure you will gladly give us your Influence to effect every possible mark of gratitude and respect to our best friend and most effectual Patron.

I have the honor to be dear Sir,

Your friend & humble servant,

J. Upham.

Sir Guy Carleton to Br. Gen. Fox.

New York, 12th Sept. 1783.

Sir,—I enclose a return of troops embarked for Nova Scotia. The British and British American Regiments that go to the River St. John's, are commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Hewlett of Delancey's 2nd Batt. who has directions, together with Capt. Prevost, Deputy Inspector General of British American Forces, to disband them as soon after their arrival as it can be done with convenience, but not later than the 20th of October on which day I shall consider them all disbanded. He is directed to report his proceedings to you of which you will give me the earliest information. The Regiments have received a quantity of necessaries and stores at this place, so that they can have no demands whatever after their arrival.

I am informed from good authority, that the people from Machias,* mentioned by Governor Parr to have placed themselves on the Eastern side of the River St. Croix, have withdrawn from thence, but I should recommend it to the Governor to make such arrangements as will effectually secure that frontier before our Post at Penobscot is evacuated.

I am Sir,

Your most obedient and most humble servant,

Guy Carleton.

Sir Guy Carleton to Lieut. Col. Hewlett.

New York, Sept. 12, 1783.

Sir,—You are to take command of the British and British American Troops mentioned in the margin, and which are to proceed to the River St. John's in the Bay of Fundy in Nova Scotia. On your arrival there you will see that the stores intended for them are duly delivered, and you will take such steps as shall be necessary for the several corps proceeding immediately to the places alloted for their settlement, where they are to be disbanded on their arrival, provided it does not exceed the 20th October, on or before which day Capt. Prevost, Deputy Inspector of British American forces, has directions to disband them, for which purpose you will give him the necessary assistance wherever you may happen to be at the time, adhering strictly to the King's Instructions published in the order of the 17th August last.

The disembarkation of the troops must not be delayed as the transports must return with all possible despatch. Directions have been given to Mr. Colville,† assistant agent of all small craft at the River St. John's, to afford every assistance in his power to the corps in getting to their places of destination, and the commanding officers of corps will make application to him for that purpose.

I am, &c., &c,

Guy Carleton.

Governor Fanning to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 21st Sept, 1783.

My dear Sir,—I have the pleasure to acquaint you that Gov'r Wentworth and myself arrived here yesterday in the Gray Hound packet, from Falmouth, and thinking it may be of consequence to you to have the letters which I brought for you as early as possible I commit them, with several other letters for our Friends, to the care of an Express which I understand is going to Gen. Fox. As I expect you will return here with the Gen'l in a few days I say nothing of business or politicks. Governor Wentworth and myself should both write to the General if it was not that we are told he is to return on the 26th Instant. This we desire you to be so good as to communicate to him with a tender of our compliments and best wishes. At the same time we beg your acceptance of our compliments and congratulations to yourself on your allowance of half-pay as Muster Master General and your still better fortune of being Secretary to Gen'l Fox.

I am most sincerely yours,

Edm'd Fanning.

S. S. Blowers* to Ward Chipman.

Halifax Septem'r 25th, 1783.

My dear Chip,—I fully intended to have written to you by the Bonetta but I was in such a fidget about my lodgings &c. that I could not find time. I wrote indeed to Jeffrey but fear the letter was not put on board.

*Sampson Salter Blowers of Boston graduated at Harvard in 1763. He was an exceedingly able lawyer, the friend and associate of Adams and Quincy. He studied law with Jonathan Bliss in the office of Lieut. Gov. Hutchinson. After a severe experience at the hands of his countrymen at the outbreak of the Revolution he went to New York, where he filled several positions in connection with the army. He came to Halifax at the peace in 1783 and was not long afterwards appointed attorney general of Nova Scotia in 1785. In 1809 he was made chief justice. He died in 1842 in his 100th year, having outlived nearly all his contemporaries, and having, it is said, never worn an overcoat in his life. It is believed that he never again placed foot on the soil of Massachusetts from the hour he left it during the war. He left his estate to William Blowers Bliss, the second son of his old friend Chief Justice Bliss of New Brunswick.

Mr. Deblois took charge of it and is apprehensive that it missed the Opportunity, by that Ship, and went by a small Schooner which sailed about the same time. Our passage was as well as we had reason to expect, and we are now comfortably lodged at a Mrs. Whitty's where we have three Rooms and a kitchen for eight pounds a month, and are now all three of us, sitting in tolerable health and spirits round a good fire. I have been politely received by the Governor, and have seen several of the great men here, and am told by them all that my coming among them is agreeable and that I shall soon find business. This last however I am inclined to doubt, in any extensive degree. From all I can learn there is very little business in our way to be done here, and that but indifferently paid for, and there is no want of lawyers. I hope indeed as the Settlements increase there will be more need of us. At any rate I have started in the race and must now do my best to get on. The Supreme Court will meet next month when I expect to be sworn & shall be better able to judge of all Matters, Men and Things. Ned has not yet returned from St. John's, but is soon expected. The family are tollerably well settled in a small House on the Hill, which the Col. had taken for his Office &c. The old Gentl'n has just been to tell me that he hears his son has hired, for 3 years, a small Farm and House which is now repairing at or near Annapolis, which he supposes is fitting for him and the family, and that he expects to remove there as soon as Ned returns to this place.

Pray have you heard anything from England relative to the Epochs. A Paquet arrived here two days ago with Gov's Wentworth and Fanning, but they seem to know nothing but that the Provincial Corps are established and the Muster Master General with them, but I cannot learn how it is with his Deputy. There is an Act of Parliament made appointing Commissioners to examine and ascertain the losses of the Loyalists who are to exhibit their Claims before the 25th (I think) of March next, after which none will be received. Gov'r Wentworth has not brought his family but they are to follow in the Spring it is said. He is come here as Surveyor General [of the King's woods] with £800 a year and a Guinea a day while on actual Service. Col. Fanning, who appears to be much pleased with his appointment,* talks of going to Annapolis or Port Roseway to reside, as he cannot get a house here to his mind.

Pen Winslow has been confined with a bad Cold ever since she left the Ship but is now getting better. She desires me to tell you it will be your turn to monodize very soon she fears. Mrs. Blowers and Betsy beg to be particularly remembered. Mrs. Blowers says she wants you here very much to enliven the gloomy Scenes which surround her. The weather to be sure is abominably dull and the Town looks as solitary compared with New York, as Newport used to when we were there. Everything is intollerably dear and the old Inhabitants are accumulating wealth at a great rate by the exorbitant prices which they extort from the Strangers.

Pray when are the Troops to leave New York? and do you hold your resolution of going to England? How goes on the important business of the various Boards with you? and is there to be any pay given? Who is gone or going to England, who coming here, and who intend to stay in the Country? Answer me all these Questions, and tell me everything foreign and domestic before you depart or I shall snarl at you. Let me be remembered affectionately to Taylor & Jeffrey, and believe me most cordially yours,

S. S. Blowers.

Halifax 26th Septr. 1783.

Dr. Sir,—Apprehending it will not be disagreeable to you to have a Short history of our voiage, present situation, &c, I take this opportunity of advising you that after a disagreeable passage of fourteen days, during the most of the time every passenger (myself excepted) were very sick, we arrived at this Garison; on my arrival found Ned absent on an Excursion to the River St. Johns with Gen'l Fox, &c; previous to his departure a pretty little box was procured by him for our reception, much of the size of the Bowery house, for which I am to pay £45 pr Ann. It was very lucky for me that he took that precaution, as it is almost impracticable to get a house to put your head in. I have been treated with great politeness & Civility by the principle people here and have been at two Balls and one concert, at the concert was exceedingly good musick vocal and instrumental, there appeared to be nothing wanting to make it compleat but your voice to have been added to the same; altho' there was a Gent that sang extremely well, I can truly say I had much rather hear you than him, there is something so sprightly in your Singing that affords me more pleasure than almost any other person. There was present at the concert, Gov'r Parr, Gov'r Wentworth and Gov'r Fanning, with a number of Brilliant Ladies & Gent'n of the Navy & Army, had you been there, how you would have danced.

Col. Fanning assures me the provincial Cores are all established on half pay, that the same is allowed to Ned "dur. vita." As I suggest it will not be long before you cross the great and mighty deep, I do most sincerely wish you a pleasant passage, a safe arrival at the great City, a joyfull winter, and in the Spring a Sight of you at Nova Scotia; your company in the most dreary part of N. S. will make the same agreeable to me & myne who frequently talk of and wish you to spend the winter at this place. I have a favour to request of you when in G. Britain viz. that you would inquire of Mr. Gyer,* if anything has been done relative to the matter I intrusted him with on my arrival at N. York. When the port of Boston was shut up the Collector Comptroller & other Officers of the Customs at Boston were directed by the Commissioner to remove to Plymouth with their books, papers, &c, and to open their office at Plymouth, &c., and my office as Coll'r for the port of Plymouth was to cease until the port of Boston should be again open'd, which was then expected would be the case in a very short time. On the third day of June, 1774, the Custom-house books, papers, &c, were removed from Boston to Plymouth, and the Custom house business carried on by Mr. Harrison, Halloway, &c, which was heretofore transacted by me, and so continued to do business until the first of Oct'r, 1775, during which time I provided for them an Office, fuel, and candles, which with the fees received for the Collector (which I had the promise of being made up to me) amounted to more than three hundred pounds Ster. On the 12th of Sept. 1774, Mr. Harrison the Collector gave me his note of hand for fifty pound sterling pr. Ann. for doing his business until the port of Boston should be again opened. Altho' I do not expect him to pay me until the port of Boston was again opened, yet I think he can have no objection to paying me for transacting his business from the 12th of Septr. 1774 to the 12th of Oct. 1775, during which time I transacted his business, he being absent, amounting to £54. 3. 4. * * * I am now told my letter must be sent in half an hour, you have my most grateful acknowledgments for the manifold instances of your bounty towards me, and my most ardent wishes for your happiness here and hereafter. My family, Laura in particular, Joyn in the above prayer. Ned is not yet returned. Adieu my Friend, and believe me

Yrs. most sincerely,

Ed. Winslow.

Lt. Col. Hewlett to Sir Guy Carleton.

St. John's, Bay of Fundy, 29th Sept. 1783.

Sir,—Agreeable to your Excellency's orders I have the honour to inform you that the troops under my command arrived at the River St. John's the 27th Instant except the ship "Martha" † with the Maryland

*Frederick William Gyer of Boston was a friend of Edward Winslow. He was considered wealthy, but a few years later failed for "an amazing amount," and in his failure Ward Chipman was a heavy loser. When Winslow's young son, Murray, was sent to school in England he received a kindly welcome from the Gyer family.

†The transport ship "Martha" was wrecked on a ledge near the Seal Islands, and of 174 persons on board 99 perished and 75 were saved by fishing boats and brought to St. John.

Loyalists and part of the 2nd Battalion DeLancey's and the ship "Esther" with part of the Jersey Volunteers, of which ships no certain accounts have been received since their sailing. This day a small party of the Guides and Pioneers are landed, which proceed from the Falls up the River St. John's tomorrow if the weather permits.

I have given the necessary orders for the Troops to disembark tomorrow and encamp just above the Falls on the River St. John's from which place they shall be forwarded with all possible expedition to the place of their destination, but am much afraid the want of small craft will greatly prevent their dispatch.

I have the honor to be Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

Rich'd Hewlett.

LOSS OF THE MARTHA.

On the 23rd Sept'r Ult., four o'Clock of the morning the Transport ship Martha — Willis, Master, struck on a ledge of Rocks between Capc Sable and the Seal or Tusket Islands. The Master had said the preceding evening that he had seen Land, and of course every Person on Board supposed that he would lay to in the night; but as he set off from New York in a suit of old sails, some of which he had been obliged to change before the above unfortunate day; the few men who composed the Crew (for he had not on Board above twelve seamen and boys capable of navigating the vessel) were employed a number of hours, rigging and setting up a new main top-sail in the place of one which had gone to pieces early in the night, the weather being tempestuous. This employment of the Crew, it is supposed, prevented the master from Standing off and on, and unhappily at four of the morning the Vessel struck. The Master after fruitless attempts of the Soldiers, at his request, to keep the pumps clear, was solicited to get the boats out, but he declined it, insisting that the Vessel could be got off, even after the water had gained considerably in the hold. After some time he ordered the Boats out. The cutter being got out, he ordered four Seamen to keep her at a distance, till the long Boat would be got out, but unfortunately after she had gone into the water the mainmast falling on her suddenly, stove her to pieces. The situation of the poor people on board at this crisis became truly lamentable; their grand resource being lost the cutter and Jolly boat only remained from which they could possibly hope for safety. At this time the Ship was full of Water it must be allowed, but she was fast aground on the Rocks and every sea beat over her middle deck, but no material part had given way, the Mast only excepted. In this situation the Master ordered the Jolly Boat to be launched over the side, and, to the surprise of every body—after repeatedly proclaiming that he would be one of the last to leave the ship, he jumped into her as she went over the side, rowed to the cutter, which lay off, got into her, and after taking in a few Men who in that moment of desperation swam out to the Boat, he inhumanly pushed off for the shore turning the Jolly Boat adrift and empty in full view of the unhappy People on board, who in vain called out to him for relief, and contrary to the Solicitations of the Commanding Officer on board, who requested him to come towards the stern of the ship and concert some plan for the General safety and to comfort the poor Unhappy Souls on Board.

It appears besides, by the Testimony of officers who were taken up by a Frenchman at the bottom of the Bay (viz, Lieut Laffin, Lieut. Henley and Doctor Stafford) that the Master of the Martha had called at the settlement below and declared that he believed every soul on board to have perished, and that he rather inclined to discourage their intentions of going to look out for the Wreck to save any person who might have survived than to push them forward to so charitable a deed or to offer his assistance to effect so good a purpose.

It is further well known to the officers who survived that very many things of great value might have been saved to the Insurers by the least care or industry on the part of the Master of the Ship—as the French Inhabitants at the Bottom of the Bay and the People of Yarmouth and other settlements on the Bay of Fundy took up Cables, Anchors and many other things of considerable value.

I certify this to be an exact Copy from the original Journal or Relation of Captain P. Kenedy, Commanding the Troops on board the Ship Martha Transport.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 10th Oct'r, 1783.

My dear, gentle, pleasant tempered, amiable Friend ;—

* * * * * * * * *

My Father and family I thank God are in a fair way of being settled tolerably. The attention of General Fox, [Col.] Small and very many other persons to them has given them vast pleasure and excited my gratitude. I am determined not to distress myself about their future support altho' I acknowledge I feel some degree of anxiety on that subject. As soon as I am able I intend preparing some kind of papers to be forwarded with certificate (by way of claim) to England. Governors Wentworth and Fanning are to dictate them. The General has made the most friendly offers on this subject and I flatter myself his interest will be of some use. Until I see you Chip I will not attempt giving you an idea of the brotherly kindness and uncommon friendship which I have experienced from him. In our late tour thro' this country we have been highly delighted—he is enamoured with St. John's. He has taken Town-lots for himself, Generals Musgrave & Clark in our neighborhood at the mouth of the river, and we have fixed on a spot 130 miles from the mouth where those Gentlemen are to locate one thousand acres each* in conjunction with you and myseif who have the same allowance. The Goernor has already assured us that it shall be done. It is at the head of the township which is located for Murray's regiment, and he has directed me to make out a power of agency to improve their tracts, to build houses, &c, &c, &c. You may laugh at what I tell you as very romantic, but he affirms to me in his most serious moments that if he has interest enough to obtain a command or an appointment he will certainly remain in this province—but should he fail in this attempt, he swears that after he has been a little time in England he will come out and spend a few years here. In short it is a hobby horse that he will ride at all events. It was his wish that I should go to England with him, but on conversing with Wentworth and Fanning I have concluded not to go. They assure me that both of us have our half pay and the idea of boring them for anything else is really painful to me just now. If he gets an appointment here (and they say he certainly will, either as Governor of the Province or succeed to the appointment of Governor of Annapolis which General Monckton had) I shall stay here with peculiar advantages, and I think my Dad will have better solicitors than myself for a recompence for his losses. Gen'l Fox falls in with this idea and now thinks it best to stay.

I have long letters from Thompson, Loring, &c. My hand pains me so damnably that I can't write any more. [Hand writing, which had been cramped, in the next sentence alters to usual style and continues.]

I must touch on a subject of some importance, I submit this as everything else of consequence entirely to your decision. Major Prevost told me that Sir Guy was determined to fill the vacancies in the Provincial Corps. By the unfortunate accident of Ludlows [lost in ship "Martha"] there are many vacancies. You know how I love my Boy—If you can effect an appointment for him as Ensign in any of their regiments—the half pay will secure him an education which I am very ambitious to give him. * * * *

Gen'l Fox has been very civil to Blowers, and on looking about he seems tolerably well satisfy'd. He is appointed one of the Board of Accounts here.

Send your mare whenever you please, I can take better care of her than any man in Nova Scotia. Thompson's William lives at my house and my horses are all in fine order.

Adieu, most sincerely yours,

Edward Winslow.

Inclos'd is a lock which Pop desired me to forward to you. My best compliments to all my friends. I have received as yet no orders to insert absent officers names in the abstracts and I feel I'll be a little puzled about Thompson and Philips.

Deputy Adjutant General to Brig. Gen. Fox.

New York, 10th Oct'r, 1783.

Sir,—I am directed by the Commander in Chief to inform you, that he has given orders for a number of Stoves to be sent to Port Roseway, Annapolis, and St. John's River for the use of the Refugees at those places, to assist in securing them against the inclemency of the approaching season. I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient

Humble servant,

Fred'ck Mackenzie, D. A. Gen'l.

Capt. F. Philips to Edward Winslow.

New York, Oct'r 11th, 1783.

Dear Ned,—I wrote to you by Judge Blowers informing you of an order from the Commander in Chief by which you were enabled to receive my pay at the same time requesting you would remit it for me to England.

I was exceedingly happy to hear of the safe arrival of your Father and Family, I hope they are by this time comfortably settled. Make my best respects to the old Lady and Gentlemen and my love to the Girls.

I am at last happily fixed for my Passage to England in a transport allotted to Lt.-Col. Drummond of the Artillery, who gave me the most friendly and polite invitation to accompany him. We expect to sail in about three weeks, or perhaps not till the final Evacuation of this Place. If you can write here in that time I would be much obliged to you. It is now 2 o'clock and I dine at Hardenbrook's at three, so Adieu, God bless you.

Yours sincerely,

Fred Philips.

P. S.—When you write to Polly, give my love to her, tell her to kiss the young ones for me.

Lt. Col. Hewlett to Sir Guy Carleton.

St. John's River, 13th Oct., 1783.

Sir,—Since my last of the 29th September I have the honour to inform your Excellency of the arrival of the ship "Esther"; the "Martha" transport with the Maryland Loyalists and detachment of the 2d Battalion De Lancey's having been wrecked on a ledge of rocks off the Seal Islands between Cape Sable and the Bay of Fundy. Yesterday arrived the "Bridgewater," and this day the entire of the troops were disbanded and are getting up the river as speedily as possible. The want of small craft is the only delay they have.

We have had a great confusion among the troops in having small hatchets issued them in lieu of axes.

This will be handed to you by Major Prevost, to whom I and the officers commanding corps are under many obligations for his great attention and quickness of dispatch. Must beg leave to refer you to him for further information. I have the honour to be,

With much respect, &c, &c,

Rich'd Hewlett.

Commanding Br. & Br. Am. Corps.

Sarah Winslow to Benjamin Marston.

Halifax, October 18, 1783.

My Worthy Cousin, I am very sure, will receive pleasure from hearing his Uncle Winslow and Family are once more so Bless'd as to be together. My Father, Mother, Sister, and myself safely arrived at Halifax the fourteenth of September. Our voyage was a tedious one. We set sail with every flattering appearance, but in a few hours after the wind came contrary and continued so the whole way, which rendered it a disagreeable fifteen days. From the evening after we left New York untill the day we landed at this place, not one hour good weather had we. Very sea sick and extremely frightened were we all except my Father who, good man, was neither sick nor afraid of anything, except that he should not get victuals enough to eat—which was rather an unnecessary concern, for no others of the party had any inclination to partake of his delicacies. His continuing well and our being favoured with one of the best ships in the Garrison of New York, and the kindest and most obliging man in the world for a commander was our support. Greatly are we indebted to our friend the Commissary General* for giving us a thousand advantages that no other family has had. His friendly attention continued to the last.

*Brook Watson.

He hurried us away, thinking it was the season to avoid storms, gave us an excellent Vessell, without one passenger but those we chose ourselves, which were only Mr. Blowers and family. We embarked in a most beautiful morning. Friend Watson came off a little way with us for the pleasure of a sail, returned delighted with our prospect—but contrary to his wishes and opinion when he left us, instead of having no storm we had a sort of one all the passage. The Ladys had anticipated every horror, but I confess my heart was so deeply wounded at parting with a number of tenderly beloved friends that I thought not of the distresses of a voyage Numerous were the friends that we left, but with thankfulness I mention that we find some wherever we go.

I have now the gratification, my cousin, of seeing my Father's mind more composed than for some time past. Before we left our delightfull retreat at the Bowery, his mind was greatly perplext to know what to do. We were sweetly situated there about two miles out of the City. Our very valuable Friend Doctor Bayley, with many others, were extremely anxious for our remaining there the winter; my Brother was equally desirous for our going to England. What was best to be done the good man could not tell; finally we determined to come to this place. We were a little disconserted at not finding Edward here, but his friends came immediately on board, and upon being informed he had hired a small House for an office we immediately took possession of it. We were for some time deprived of the happiness of having him with us but enjoyed the real pleasure of finding him universally esteemed & beloved. A large number of his friends gave every proof of their attachment to him by the vast attention paid my Father and the family. Every hour did some friendly one call to offer their service, and seemed vieing with each other who should do the most for us. Col. Small eneavoured to prevail with us to accept of part of his House; kindly assured us we should be as entirely detached from his family as we chose to be. To do justice to his benevolence and attention and that of many others is beyond my pen. My Brother's return has made us happy. In addition to the inexpressable happiness his company ever affords, we enjoy that of seeing him rejoicing that we are at Nova Scotia.

Greatly my good cousin could I enlarge upon the subject that has brought us all to this uncultivated country, but as it can answer no good purpose I endeavour to be silent—but must to you so far say that I do think, after everything else has been done that's horrid, than any part of the only elysium the suffering ones have should be called by the name of Shelburne* is rather too bad. Strange that after such a variety of disagreeables a matter of so little importance should disturb, perhaps you will say. * * * *

My Brother, since his tour with the General, has had the misfortune to have the gout in his right arm, it is now better but still so painful that he only writes what no one can do for him. He desires me to give his most affectionate love to you. The present report is General Fox is to be Governor of Nova Scotia, but whether it is to be depended upon is not yet known.

My Brother is undetermined whether he shall go to England or remain here this winter. By Governor Wentworth & [Col.] Fanning he received numbers of letters. His friends not only urge but entreat his going home, say it would be of vast advantage to him. Lord Percy is particularly desirous for him to be there. Should he conclude upon crossing the Atlantic how shall we support being again separated from him. * *

Brig. Gen. Fox to Sir Guy Carleton.

Halifax, 19th October, 1783.

Sir,—In answer to the private letter of the 5th of September with which I was honoured, I have now the pleasure to inform your Excellency that the fact respecting a number of persons having settled themselves on the Nova Scotia side of the River St. Croix, was not as had been represented but was rather, as your Excellency supposed, a few lawless vagrants without any fixed designs. I am therefore perfectly satisfied that there was not a sufficient cause to send a detachment of His Majesty's Troops to that place, and should intruders hereafter break into the limits of this province I am well convinced that opposing them with Troops should be the last resort.

I am sensible of the necessity of great vigilance in the Government of Nova Scotia at this time and the vast importance on her part of being a most punctual observer of good faith. * * *

In my letter of the 3rd instant I did myself the honor to inclose a proposal for the Distribution of the Troops in this District. I hope the reasons which I have assigned for stationing Troops at Cumberland, Annapolis and Fort Howe will be satisfactory to your Excellency. The season is now so far advanced that hutting for the winter is impracticable, but should it be thought advisable on any future occasion I should think the high lands about Horton the most eligible situation for the corps of

I have the honor to be, Sir,

[The original of this letter in the Winslow papers is a rough draft with erasures and interlineations written in Col. Winslow's hand, and undoubtedly drafted by him at Gen. Fox's request.]

Memorial of Edward Winslow, Sr.

[Re Compensation for Losses in the Revolution.]

To the Honorable the Commissioners appointed by Act of Parliament to enquire into the Losses and Services of all such persons who have suffered in their rights, properties and professions during the late unhappy dissentions in America in consequence of their Loyalty to His Majesty and the British Government:—

The Memorial of Edward Winslow, Esqr., late of the province of Massachusetts Bay in New England, most humbly shews:—

That for a long series of years he has served his Sovereign with fidelity and has discharged the duties of several publick stations without censure.

That when the late contest between Great Britain and America commenced he was first magistrate in the County of Plymouth, Collector of His Majesty's Customs, Registrar of the Court of Probate and (jointly with his son the present Muster Master General of his Majesty's Provincial Forces) Clerk of the Common Pleas and General Sessions of the Peace. The income from these employments together with his family estate rendered his circumstances sufficiently affluent.

That in the year 1775, on his pointed refusal to take the oaths of allegiance to the Rebel Governments, he was by their usurped authority deprived of all his offices and deprived also of any assistance from his son, who before that time had escaped to the British Army.

Your Memorialist will not trouble your Honors with a repetition of indignities and persecutions almost as incredible as they have been severe. He only begs leave to say that by his attachment to the cause of Government he has experienced a transition from the most comfortable situation to a state of poverty and distress. And that from being as much respected for his family, property and personal character as any man in that country, he has been for nine years last past the butt of the licentious and has received every species of insult and abuse which the utmost rancour and malice could invent. That worn out by their inhuman persecutions at the age of sixty seven years, labouring under many infirmities, he arrived at the Garrison in New York in the month of December 1781, with part of his family and in a few months after was joined by the remaining part of them.

That upon his application to His Excellency Sir Henry Clinton, K. B., General & Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces in North America, he granted your memorialist a pension of two hundred pounds sterling pr. Annum, also rations of provisions and fuel for himself and family, and that the same allowance has been continued to him by his Excellency Sir Guy Carleton ever since.

That upon the thirteenth of August last, upon his being well informed that the Garrison at New York would be speedily evacuated, he with his family consisting of an aged wife, two daughters, and three black servants, imbarked at New York, and on the fourteenth of September following arrived at Halifax, where he is an utter stranger.

That he has no means of support but a very trifling sum saved out of his pension from Government and which will be expended in a very little time. His age (being now seventy years old) and infirmities and the necessities of a family unaccustomed to want, which has no other dependence but upon him, makes him look forward with great solicitude and anxiety for some permanent source of subsistence. Your memorialist most humbly begs leave to suggest to honorable Commissioners a true state of his situation and circumstances at the commencement of the late unhappy war and of the losses that he sustained thereby in his property and professions without exaggerating the same.

And he doth in the most serious manner aver and declare that his propertie at that time in the townships of Plymouth and Marshfield were of the value of £1500 stg., and that the annual incomes he received from his said estate and from the professions and the offices which he sustained amounted to the sum of £300 stg., and that he was at that time justly indebted to sundry persons to the amount of £500. That soon after his arrival at N. York the whole of his property was taken and sold for less than half the value thereof, your memorialist not being suffered to return, nor any attorney that dare to appear in his behalf.

Your memorialist further begs leave to say that his continuance for seven years among insulting and persecuting enemies arose from his apprehension that the war would have been many years at an end sooner than it was, and that it would have terminated very differently from what has happened, as also from the great reluctance your memorialist had of being burthensome to Government, always relying on his Majesty's proclamations and other proclamations held out to the Loyalists, that they should be protected in their properties and professions. Altho' your memorialist has not suffered so largely as many others have done, yet he has sacrificed his all, on account of his loyalty to his Sovereign. He therefore looks up to your Honours for your aid and assistance that such compensation be made him for the losses of propertie and professions as in your wisdom you may think just, without which your memorialist must be most miserable the little time he has to live.

For the truth of the facts above stated your Memorialist begs leave to refer your Honors to the Lieut, Governor Oliver,* the Chief Justice, the Members of his Majesty's Council for the province of Massachusetts Bay, and the Commissioners of his Majesty's Customs who resided there, Richard Harrison and Robt. Hallowell the late Collector & Comptroller of the Customs of the port of Boston, who are all now in Great Britain.

E. Winslow.

Halifax, N. Scotia, 22d October, 1783.

This day inclosed a copy of the above memorial to Brooke Watson, Esqr, in my letter to him, also another to Sir William Pepperel† by the Greyhound Packett, Capt. Dunn, another to Robert Rashleigh‡ Esq'r, & a fourth to Judge Ludlow.

Lieut. Col. Allen to Edward Winslow.

Annapolis, Octo. 24th, 1783.

Dear Sir,—By Mr. Reading I send you the Commander in Chief's dispatches for General Fox. You will see by a paper enclosed that he is appointed Governor of the Province; what to think of the information I don't know as I did not hear it mentioned by the General before I left

*Lieut. Governor Thomas Oliver, a native of Cambridge, Mass., and a graduate of Harvard in 1733, was the last royal lieutenant governor of Massachusetts. In March, 1776, he went with the British forces to Halifax, and from thence to England, where he died in 1815 at the age of 82 years. His son, Wm. S. Oliver, was the first sheriff of St. John, and his grandson, Wm. S. Oliver, succeeded Benjamin Marston as sheriff of Miramichi.

†Sir William Pepperell, baronet, commanded the very remarkable expedition which in 1745 captured the stronghold of Louisburg. He was the only native of America to receive the rank of baronet prior to the Revolution. He died in England in 1759. His only son died childless, and his estate and title passed to a son of his daughter, Mrs. Nathaniel Sparhawk, whose name was William Pepperell Sparhawk. By the terms of his grandfather's will he was required on coming of age to procure an act of the legislature to take the title of Sir William Pepperell, baronet. This he did. He is accordingly the Sir William referred to above. He graduated at Harvard in 1766. Having been driven into banishment by the Americans, he went to England in 1775, and on the voyage his wife died. His immense possessions in Maine and large property in Massachusetts were confiscated. In England he proved himself the friend and patron of the Loyalists. A full account of Sir William Pepperell will be found in Sabine's American Loyalists.

‡Robert Rashleigh acted as agent in England for many of the Loyalists in drawing their half-pay and other transactions. He died about Sept., 1787, and Brook Watson then joined the surviving partners, and the firm of Robert Rashleigh & Co. became that of Brook Watson & Co.

[New] York, I can only say I wish it were true, and I assure you this report gave great Pleasure to our Friends in N. York for two reasons, as they suppose the change would be of service to the Loyalists in general and no disadvantage to you. I can assure you in a conversation I had with the Commander in Chief just before my departure, you were mentioned by him as one who must be provided for. I find you are the first upon the list with him and I believe he is not a mere man of words. I mention this for your Comfort which I suppose we all stand in need of.

I had very stormy distressing passage, but thank God have brought my family all safe and in tolerable health. Capts. Campbell* and Stelle† are come over from St. John's to spend the winter with me but cannot draw their rations here without a special order, will you procure it and send it to them. You know Mr. Williams‡ is very exact. I find my friends Barclay and Robinson‖ have got an order for Boards here. I am building at St. Johns and shall be very much obliged to you for an order on Major Studholme §for such proportion as is customary. I have made no application here as I saw my boards on my own land but have found it very expensive. One more order and I shall give you no more trouble at this present writing. My brother Will Allen came with me to St. Johns but as he is no soldier he cannot draw his rations. Will you be so kind as to speak to the General and procure an order that he may draw for himself

*The reference is probably to Captain Dugald Campbell, late of the 42nd regiment.

†Captain Edward Stelle of the New Jersey Volunteers. He settled at Kingsclear and was one of the members for York County in the first house of assembly elected in 1785.

‡Thomas Williams, ordnance store keeper and commissary at Annapolis Royal, grandfather of Sir William Fenwick Williams, the hero of Kars. He died April 22, 1789, "having served His Majesty during 45 years with great reputation."

‖Major Thomas Barclay and Lieut. John Robinson are here referred to. The latter was a son of Col. Beverly Robinson of the Loyal American Regiment. He came to St. John after a brief stay at Annapolis and married a daughter of Hon. George D. Ludlow, chief justice of New Brunswick. He was deputy paymaster of the forces, a member of the council and for many years mayor of the city of St. John. In 1821 he was appointed the first president of the Bank of New Brunswick—the first chartered bank in the province. He was also province treasurer and filled other important offices. He died October 8, 1828, aged 67 years.

§Major Gilfred Studholme was born near Dublin, where he owned a small estate and had relatives. He entered the army and in 1776 was given a commission in Gov. Legge's "Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers." (See Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia, vol. 11., p. 581). He was on July 15, 1776, gazetted a captain in the Royal Fencible Americans and rendered efficient service in repulsing an attack by the rebels under Col. Jonathan Eddy on Fort Cumberland. In the autumn of 1778 he was ordered to the mouth of the St. John river, where he built Fort Howe and remained in charge of the garrison as major of brigade until the arrival of the Loyalists. He was actively employed in assigning lands to the different corps as they arrived, his assistant being Lieut. Samuel Denny Street. He was a member of the first council of the province. As a reward for his important services he received a grant of a large tract of land in the parish of Studholm, in Kings County, to which he retired and where he died in 1792.

and one Serv't in company with Mr. Leonard. I am told the Governor is determined that Provincial Officers shall have no lands on this side the Bay, can you give me the reason? And pray let me know whether you think General Ruggles & Pemberton will keep the lands they have got an order of survey for. I suspect the late order from the King will affect them. I have made a purchase of Pemberton and should be glad to be informed how the title stands. I am not yet fairly in quarters but have some of my family and goods about nine miles up the River where we must remain for some time at one Longley's,* give me a call as you come down and I will give you a bottle of old Hock & perhaps a good Mutton chop, in spite of Chesterfield, I must say I am in haste,

Yours sincerely,

I. Allen.

[P. S.] I was desirous not to send the dispatches by express unless I met with no opportunity in the course of a week. It seems there has been one but I was looking for shelter for my Family at that time.

Rev. Jonathan Odell to Edward Winslow.

New York, 8th Novem'r, 1783.

Sir,—I know that to preface a request to you with an apology for making it would on my part be no recommendation—therefore leaving "much ado about nothing" to Benedict and Beatrice, my request is in three words, that you will speak of me in the language of a friendly partiality to General Fox, a hint from whom in my favour to his Brother (I am told by a friend in England) might contribute much to the success of my hopes respecting an appointment as Assistant Secretary to a British Embassador, if such an one is to be sent to this country. My present employment in the same station, under Sir Guy Carleton, is unavoidably to cease in a very short time, unless there should be for once an instance, rarely met with, of "detur dignissimo," in which case I dare say you will think with me that Sir Guy would himself be the Person whom, was he to accept the trust, I should have to sollicit for a continuance of that favour which has so seasonably come to my relief at the close of a seven years idle expectation, during the Command of his Predecessors. If you remain in Nova Scotia for the winter, I may have the pleasure to see you there—but wherever your lot may be, I shall "at all times and in all places," with your good leave, claim the honour of being

Your affectionate friend

& humble servant,

Jon'n Odell.

Capt. Callbeck* to Edward Winslow.

Island St. John, Charlotte Town,

21st. Nov'r, 1783.

My dear Winslow,—Forgive me for not having wrote you ere this. I should make many apologies for not having done so if your transition had been announced by yourself. Your arrival at the delectable Halifax came to me by hear say and until lately, tho' frequently enquired after, it remained a matter of uncertainty to me—A Winslow was there but I could not ascertain whether it was my friend. To congratulate you on your arrival would be in my opinion a very chilly and unmeaning compliment, the Country you have left is in every respect (but as to Loyalty) a Paradise in comparison, the less is said on these very trying occasions the better. If you should range towards this spot next year, believe me no one will be happier to see you, and if anything can be procured for you here inform me and your commission shall be attended with the sincerest pleasure. Mrs. Callbeck is well, offers her best compliments. I am with sincerity—

Ever your faithful & affect.

General Haldimand to Governor Parr.

Quebec, 27 Nov., 1783.

Sir,—Mercure,† the Acadian who came lately into this province as a guide to Mr. Bliss, having informed me that many of his countrymen wished to emigrate into this Province for the sake of enjoying their religion with more liberty, and less difficulty in procuring priests, I have thought proper to communicate the idea to your Excellency that in case you should approve of the measure we should mutually assist in taking steps to carry it into execution. My plan is to grant them lands at the Great Falls on the River St. Johns, which in time may form settlements to extend almost to the River St. Lawrence, which will contribute much to facilitate the communication so much to be desired between the two Provinces, and which may be attended with circumstances very favourable for their mutual interests. I shall be glad to have your opinion on this subject, and have the honor to be, with great regard, and most humble servant,

Your Excellency's most obedient

Frederick Haldimand.

Sarah Winslow to Benjamin Marston.

Halifax, November 29, 1783.

My Dear Cousin,—This day Mrs. Stanhope and Miss Prince called upon us. Hearing by Mrs. Stanhope that their ship* is to sail for Port Roseway tomorrow, I attended the company that dined here, at dinner and tea; have now left them very chearfully set down to two card tables, and retired to thank you for your affectionate letter of November eighth

* * * We are not only comfortably but eligabely situated in a good house upon the Parade, next door to Col. Goold, are all in health glad we are here and Happy. When I wrote you last we were in the house my Brother has for an office, and thankful were we when we first arrived to have so good a place to go to. We immediately took possession of it and remained there untill he very fortunately got this for us, which is as comfortable a one as we at present have any desire for, very warm, pleasantly situated in the most lively clean part of the Town. I leave you to judge whether the rooms are not very good when I tell you that this day week General Fox with sixteen of our Friends dined with us with great convenience.† With truth do I say to you I am not only glad but exceedingly rejoiced that we came here instead of going to Great Britain. The family all enjoy good health and a degree of cheerfulness that we have long been strangers to; have quietly bid adieu to Old and New England—and all endeavouring to add to the felicity of each other, seldome as possible reflect upon past disagreeables, and strive never to anticipate any for the future, but enjoy while we can the blessings still left for us. My good Father has not had one hour ill health since he has been in the place, we keep him generally in spirits—when we do not make a whist table for him he always can amuse himself at picket as our friend Major Murray never spends an evening from us. Every attention is paid us by all here, but we seldome spend days abroad, never when we can with any propriety get excused, for we are always certain that we shall be cheerful at home, our family being a sprightly one at present. Edward is full of his fun and spends every moment that he can possibly get with us. Major Murray and Captain Phillips still more belong to the family, they lodge with him and live with us. Our very worthy friend Murray's intention of going to England at this late season is at times a damp to our spirits.

I am more and more in love with my [brother] Edward. He would be greatly raised in your esteem, my Cousin, could you know the good he really does every moment of his life. So disinterested is he that his whole time is devoted to the service of others without any other reward than what arises from the happiness of assisting the unfortunate. I was this morning, as I very often am, highly entertained with him and his General. They are in many respects exceedingly alike, very fond of each other and ever good company.

I wish it was convenient for you to be here this winter, we all long to see you. I am sorry not to have any acquaintance with a Lady so high in your esteem as Miss C—. She did us the favour of making us a morning visit. I returned it hoping for the pleasure of seeing her and her mama but the Ladys were not at home.

No dispute have we as yet among the great about precedence or anything else; all goes on smoothly gay, Mr. and Mrs. Parr very agreeable, the Commissioners Ladys we have not yet called upon, are told they are pleasing, Miss D—* not handsome. Balls and assemblys have begun, but I have not attended the two first, am told not again to tell the reason why I did not but to you give the only one that prevented—want of inclination. I love dancing but am no admirer of confusion and dust. Brother went but joyn'd our party at home before the evening was out; believe we were full as well amused by his description as we could have been had we joyn'd the crowd. I propose attending some, but as we are to have them every fortnight beg to be excused attending all.

I am very desirous to know whether my cousin White has arrived at Shelburne, the last letter from him he expected to have been there long before this. God prevent any more misfortunes attending that unhappy family. I enclose a letter for you from my unfortunate cousin Winslow.† Poor unhappy girl; those that ought to befriend her are brutes. As an apology for neglecting her, and their own bad conduct, they have flattered her with impossibilitys. It is utterly out of my Brother's power to obtain land or provision for her while she remains there—my Father says the whole thirds of the Marshfield farm ought to be hers, but I am fearful they will be so base as to deny her any part.

Some time before our furniture was disposed of I wrote my mother requesting that the picture in our Hall with the Coat of Arms that my Sister and myself worked might be given to the care of a young Lady for me, they being very elegant I greatly wished for them for a particular purpose. When my Mother came to New York it was not in her power to bring even them. This week a letter from the Lady informs me, that about two months ago Col. Warren sent a sheriff to her with orders that she must give oath that she had nothing in her possession belonging to our family. Not daring to take the oath she gave up the article, and He had impudence enough to tell her that he tooke them for a debt which he did not recollect when he took the other things. I do believe he is the compleatest Devil that ever was suffered to live. That at this late hour he should be contriveing ways to torment his benefactor is a master piece of wickedness—I have done with him never again to mention his name. * *

My Brother and the Major have just been in to bid me good night—they say the party in the next room are breaking up, and that it is full time this letter is finished. They are monstrous saucy upon the length of it, think you must have the patience of Job to go through it, but I care not for what they say—they would either of them be glad of as long a one when absent. Ned desires I would tell you he intends to have a road between Port Roseway and Annapolis,* and many other great and wondrous things is he to do, but he talks so loud and so fast I cannot tell any more. Adieu my Cousin; success and happiness attend you wishes your affectionate Cousin.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

On Board the "Tryal" off Staten Island,

Nov'r. 29th, 1783.

My dear Winslow,—I have already written to you previous to the Evacuation of New York, but have received when ashore today at Staten Island your letters of the 9th and 15th inst., for which I thank you very much. I have been a witness to the mortifying scene of giving up the City of New York to the American Troops. About 12 o'clock on Tuesday the 25th inst, all our Troops were paraded on the wide ground before the Provost, where they remained till the Americans about 1 o'clock marched in thro' Queen-Street and Wall-Street to the Broad-way, when they wheeled off to the hay-wharf and embarked immediately and fell down to Staten Island. I walked out and saw the American Troops under General Knox march in, and was one of the last on shore in the City; it really occasioned most painful sensations and I tho't Sir Guy, who was upon parade, looked unusually dejected. The particular account of the business of the day you will find in the news-papers which I have enclosed to Blowers. I have passed two days since in the City to which I returned upon finding all was peace and quiet. A more shabby ungentleman-like looking crew than the new Inhabitants are I never saw, tho' I met with no insult or molestation. The Council for sixty days, which is invested with supreme authority for that term, is sitting; what will be determined by them is uncertain, many are apprehensive of violent and severe measures against individuals. I paid my respects to Generals Knox and Jackson, the latter is Commandant of the City; they received me very politely. I had the satisfaction also of seeing General Washington, who is really a good looking genteel fellow. Scarce any of our friends or any man of respectability remains at New York, they are principally embarked for England. I am now on board ship for the voyage. We have a good set—Col. Drummond who is very civil, friendly and polite to me; Fred Philips, who is as good a fellow as ever (I wish you had mentioned him particularly in your letter for he really loves you); Gilfillan* whose facetious character you know, a Mr. Sinclair in the civil branch of ordnance, Capt. Reid and two subalterns of the Royal Artillery, 8 in all and I assure you we make ourselves very cheerful. We expect to sail by Tuesday next.

My prospects in going to England are upon the whole as favorable as I expected. I have as I mentioned to you, the whole business of the board of claims† committed to my management, and I am not a little pleased to find that Harrison, who resigned his seat at the board some time before we left New York, obtained a warrant from Com'r in Chief for 20s stg. per day for the time he belonged to it. I think I shall be able to plead this precedent when I have finished the business. Sir Guy has given me a letter of introduction and recommendation to Lord North. Thompson, who means to pass the winter upon the Continent of Europe, writes me he has left a very particular recommendation and introduction for me to Lord Sackville, so that upon the whole I live in hopes of going to Halifax next year with a bold face. I consider the present by far the most important period of my life, and am determined to exert every faculty to get myself forward. I shall most anxiously expect the letter you promise me by Gen'l F. I have been explicit, be you so also in communicating your views, hopes and prospects. I need not repeat to you that your welfare and happiness is equally dear to me as my own; my principal anxiety is for us to get together again with some chosen friends and I think we should be happy in a desert.

I immediately communicated your letters and enclosures relative to Cochran and little Weeks‡ to Mr. Watson and Major Upham. Coffin this day tells me the business is satisfactorily settled for both. Greet Mr.

‡The reference seems to be to Rev. Joshua Wingate Weeks. In the year 1783 he was chaplain to the King's Orange Rangers, then stationed at Halifax. Before the Revolution he was rector at Marblehead, Massachusetts. At the close of the war he settled in Nova Scotia, where he died in 1804.

Weeks for me and in my name, he is a worthy good Fellow and I both love and esteem him.

I intreat you my dear Ned let me know by every opportunity how you are and what is going forward in Nova Scotia. I shall not lose sight of that as my determined place of resort and shall of course be very anxious to know all the particulars about the settlements, locations, &c, &c.—

To Tom Coffin—indisputably the very best fellow in the world, and to Townsend* who really loves you and speaks most affectionately of you I refer for all further particulars both of a public and private nature. Adieu my dear Fellow you shall hear from me the moment I arrive in England. God bless you with all good and make you as happy as you desire and deserve, prays most fervently and sincerely, your unalterably devoted & faithful friend,

Chip.

To Father, Mother and Sisters, say that Chip thinks, dreams and speaks of them perpetually with the warmest friendship and affection.

"Ceres"—off Staten Island, 3d Dec'r, 1783.

My dear Sir,—Our evacuation of New York took place on the 25th ultimo without any appearance of disorder, and the town, we hear, continues in quiet under the American military. The season being so far advanced, I have postponed my intended voiage to Nova Scotia till next Spring, and am going to pass the winter in England. The Commander in Chief having done me the honor to invite me to a passage with him makes this voiage the more agreeable. If I can render you any service on the other side of the water, be so good as to command me without reserve.

Two musters pay, as Chaplain of the King's American Dragoons, I understand have been received for me either by you or Major Murray. The balance due to me, whatever it may be, will be very welcome in England. You, or the Major,, will therefore greatly add to past obligations if you favor me with an order or Bill for the money, payable in London, which I hope to receive by the month of March next. Direct for me at Mr. Kempe's, No. 116, Jermyn Street, St. James's.

Wishing you all possible happiness in your present and future prospects, I am, Dear Sir,

Most sincerely yours,

J. Odell.

Sir Wm. Pepperrell to Edward Winslow.

Wimople Street, Dec'r. 4th, 1783.

Dear Sir,—The Packet sails so much sooner than was expected that I have only a minute just to acknowledge the receipt of your obliging letter of the 24th of Octo'r last, with your good Father's memorial, which I lost no time in delivering to one of the Secretaries to the Commissioners for his perusal and approbation. I have not yet been able to see Mr. Forster since he read it, but I should have heard from them before this, if it had not been properly drawn; I shall see him in a day or two when I will do myself the pleasure of writing you again. I imagine that you know already that the lodging the memorial in the Commissioners office will answer no other purpose than just to save the time limited by Act of Parliament, for their receiving claims, and that they cannot enter upon an enquiry in any one's claim till the claimant personally appears before them. My time forbids my enlarging at present farther than to beg that you and your family will ever command my best services, and to assure you I am with real esteem and respect, Dear Sir,

Your faithful friend and most obed't serv't,

W. Pepperrell.

Do remember me to Col. Fanning, Blowers and all other friends. Please to send any letters, papers, &c., for me under cover of Evan Nynan, Esq., under Secretary of State for the Home Department.

St. Johns ye 14th Dec'r 1783.

Sir,—Some time ago a Letter was given me directed to Lt. Col. Hulett or Officer Command'g the British American Corps on the River St. Johns wrote by Gen'l Fox's Brigade Major. As Col. Hulett was not present I was induced to open the Letter, wherein I found an order for Com'g officers of Corps to make returns for 165 days Bate & Forrage money, it having been granted by His Exc'y the Com'r in Chief, also another return of Officers with the Rank &c, &c. I immediately transmitted these orders to such officers as were here.

I am still here, where I have built a small House, for the present. I have not been up the River yet, indeed the block No. 11. which our Regiment has drawn* is so far up that am totally discouraged. The Numerous family I have demands some Attention to the Education of Children; at such a distance they never can hope for any, and I should think myself highly Culpable, were I not to endeavor to settle nearer to the Metropolis, or some place where I can attend to this necessary duty, I shall therefore leave no Stone Unturned in Sollicitting my friends to procure me if possible some Lands nearer Hallifax. Pass McQuady† am told would be an Elligible situation; if through your Interest I Could be indulged to have a grant there sh'd think myself very happy, or any other place you thought would answer. Excuse the Liberty I take; your wish to serve with your very kind expressions to me and mine, have in some degree emboldened me to take this Liberty, and to think you'll serve me if in your power, and you may rely that I shall ever retain a due Sense of any favours or indulgences you may procure me. God knows my Losses have been great & my endeavors to forward the Service, with my exertions as an Officer, are in some measure known to you, and my Zeal and attachment to Government, is I hope Generally known, therefore, when these are Considered I make no doubt they will induce you to do all you can to Serve me.

I have ye honor to be Sr.

occasions. We are now making regular arrangements for the Winter's amusement—Whist Club—Saturday's Club,—&c, &c, &c. I refer you to Murray & Philips for all circumstances of that nature while I proceed to a more serious subject.

I have wrote you in my Letters to New York how perfectly satisfied I have been during my residence in this place—all attempts to describe the attention & kindness of General Fox would be vain. When I exert my talents I sometimes can collect a number of strong expressions and make a sentence tolerably emphatical, but by Heaven on this subject I am literally as the sailors say all aback.

You—Ward Chipman, never engaged with more warmth of affection to relieve me from distress than He has done. You never exerted yourself with more affectionate zeal to render services to all my friends, than he has discovered. And you were never more apparently & sincerely gratify'd at any event that increased my consequence or afforded me satisfaction than General Fox, has been. You must of course—as you know my heart and that it is certainly a grateful one—be able to judge what are my sensations at parting with him.

I am really most keenly distress'd—but I must tell you that I have made him particularly acquainted with the cordial friendship that has subsisted between us. I have told him, what is true, that I am more anxious for your success & welfare than I am for my own, and I have entreated him to become acquainted with you immediately on his arrival in England, to make the same confidential friend of you as he has of me. He means to solicit a Government & if a separation takes place & a new government is formed at St. John's† he will prefer it to any other. In effecting this he will have occasion for the exertion of all your talents—he is perfectly competent to give the necessary information on the subject, and is in possession of maps, papers, &c, but it will be necessary for you to digest the business. His own private affairs are also much deranged by the death of Mr. Powell, and he will have occasion for your advice & assistance. He has asked me particularly to request it,—and I have most solemnly assured him that you will attend him as soon as he arrives and that he will be spared the trouble of an explanation to you. I have added —that your spirit is too independent to admit of any offers of reward for such services. I've told him that your object in England is to close some important public business with credit to yourself — and if possible to obtain some Law employment. I have communicated the principal part of my conversation on this subject, I need not dictate a line of conduct to you. At all events I was determined you should be acquainted. I know what consequences must follow. In the hum of his Departure I cannot write much.

I inclose you a Memorial for Land. I refer you to the General for all particulars respecting the business, he'll describe the scandalous impediments and shameful delays of the public officers here. If you do not exert yourselves in England to effect some material change in the Government here, I mean the officers of it, the Country will never be settled to all eternity. If you see Col. Innes relate to him the difficulties attending an application, assure him that I have not been inattentive to the orders of Gen'l Abercrombie & himself, & that I shall presevere until I effect the business.

I have an infinite variety of things to say to you, but in the present state of mind I can add nothing more. I will write a folio by the next conveyance.

Adieu,
Everlastingly
Yours
Ed. Winslow.

I inclose you a number of very rough minutes respecting our new country. I cannot write to Philips. I will next time.

Bernard Graham to Edward Winslow.

Halifax 5th January, 1784.

Sir,—I hope you will pardon the great liberty in writing you and giving so much trouble about so small a matter as my provisions in the late Royal Fencible American Regiment; and as I know your honor has greater affairs to attend, yet I am really distressed & I am well informed the distressed always find relief from your goodness.

I have served the King since the year 1756 in the 45th Regiment, Shirley's, and in the Royal Fencible Americans. I was at the Seige of Louisburg, the taking of Newfoundland and at the siege of Fort Cumberland. I am now an old man, and a taylor by trade, but my eyesight begins to fail me—however I can work a little at my trade & as I have an acquaintance with Mr. Bacon above Fort Sackville I mean to go there and spend the winter. And my request is, honor'd Sir, that you will be pleased to order me to receive my six month's provisions at one draught, or monthly should it seem best to your honor, as if I receive it weekly I cannot go to the country and come in once a week.

I hope when your honor looks at my gray hairs and my long services you will not be afraid I will sell my provisions or make a bad use of them, as my experience in life tells me other ways. Your honor's granting my request will essentially oblige an old man, who while he lives will pray for your honor.

I am Sir, Your honor's most obedient, very humble and obliged servant,
Bernard Graham, late Soldier R. F. A.

Lieut. Col. Isaac Allen to Edward Winslow.

Wilmot, January 6th, 1784.

Dear Winslow,—The bearer Capt. Beeler will deliver your letter, which has been long wrote in answer to your's respecting your Father's Grant. Col. Delancey was to have taken the letter, but he has disappointed me, and I have been confined by a violent pain in my back in addition to my other complaints & misfortunes.

I can make no further discovery as yet respecting the land. Mr. Robertson made two mistakes in receiving the Bate & forage. Mr. Cornelius Thompson, who was struck out of the Return, came with the Battalion and is now at St. John's, and poor old Jenkins,* who is there with a wife and three children and commands the Major's Company, should have had the Company money. Suppose I was to send a new return including Thompson & giving Jenkins that money, could the mistake be rectified?

Capt. Beeler was of the Militia in Georgia, a Loyal active man, you will be convinced I answer'd your former letter pretty soon, as the one I now enclose you has all the marks of antiquity about it.

Yours &c.

I. Allen.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax 7th January, 1784.

I am now my dear fellow in a snug room by a good fire and determined not to be interrupted. It is the first time I have been able to make such a declaration for several months past. The variety of business which

*The reference is to Lieutenant John Jenkins, who received his commission in the 3rd Battalion of the New Jersey Volunteers, February 10, 1777. He was at one time adjutant of the corps. He served gallantly throughout the war, and at the peace of 1783 settled on his farm in Kingsclear, York county. He was afterwards an officer in the King's New Brunswick Regiment, and in 1793 commanded the post established at Presq'Isle, on the St. John river. His son was Capt. John Jenkins, who greatly distinguished himself in the war of 1812. He married a daughter of Col. Edward Winslow, and we shall learn more of him in the pages following.

I have been obliged to perform has embarrassed my mind, changed my pleasureable pursuits, and almost forced me to forget my Friends. * *

When I was called to my present employment I was surrounded by a set of the most unfortunate men that ever Heaven permitted to assemble. Chagrin & Despondency predominated. An uncommon flow of spirits—a kind of dependence on Providence (or something else) supported me, and that Faith—(for Faith I know not what else to call it) made me anticipate events which should extricate me from my difficulties. You know the state of my finances when I left you and you will of course acknowledge that my confidence in Heaven was put to a severe test. When I received your information of my appointment with General Fox * * * I formed a resolution not to be diverted from my duty by any temptations and this I religiously kept. On a nearer scrutiny of the character of the man with whom I was serving I was not only confirmed in my first opinion that his conduct would be dictated by an independent spirit and the most honorable principles, but I perceived that all his decisions were the result of strong sense and sound reasoning and that they were unalterable. I also found that his benevolence extended to all orders of persons. These grand traits being discovered a scope was given for the indulgence of my own ambition. The boldness of the measures arising from the conscious rectitude of his intentions rendered it perfectly safe to give him an opinion, because (if right) it was sure of prompt execution and the darting penetration which he possesses secured him against dangers from errors which the rashness of my judgment might in some instances have exposed him to because he always saw and corrected them.

I shall pay myself the highest possible compliment when I say that a similitude of sentiments on almost every important subject produced an implicit confidence, and we literally were jointly and constantly employed in detecting the frauds of villains, long accustomed to cheat the public, and in relieving the distresses of miserable & meritorious objects. You who know my heart better than any man on earth can best imagine the degree of satisfaction I must have experienced from such a connection. I forgot all my private distresses, the mortifications which I experienced all vanished. They were succeeded by a kind of enthusiasm such as one feels in the midst of military triumph only more rational. God knows that I have no mercenary ideas, I therefore did not look for any pecuniary benefits. The approbation of the General and my own conscience were the only rewards I wanted, but I had in addition the blessings of the unfortunate. * * *

I am preparing for a tour to Annapolis & am manoeuvring for Tom Coffin to go with me. I have been too long from my family, but I could not help it. They are in the enjoyment of more comforts than ever they possessed, and the mind of your friend Mary is relieved from all its distress. The General and Williamson* will be able to give you a particular account of my habitation & domestic arrangements, to them and to Philips and Murray I refer you. * * *

The old folks are delighted with Halifax, they receive every civility and attention—the Girls have a larger circle of their friends than they have been accustomed to since they left their home, they all remember you most gratefully and affectionately.

I am very anxious to hear what will probably be the fate of my Father's application in England. With advocates so powerful as General Fox, Mr. Watson and the rest of you, I think he must succeed.

When you see Judge Sewell tell him how sincerely and cordially I esteem him—don't let him find fault with me for dropping a correspondence which afforded me infinite pleasure—explain to him my situation my embarrassments & perplexities and swear for me (if you dare) that I will commence my operations anew in that way. Remember me most kindly to Mrs. Sewell, she has not forgot me. If you ever see Bob Hallowell and his family say every affectionate thing for me. I received a letter from Commissioner [Benjamin] Hallowell respecting a tract in this country. Tell him how impossible it is to effect any business under the present system but that I will do my best. Assure Col. Innes that I will be attentive to his matters. I have had great pleasure in rendering some services to the officers and men of his corps† since their arrival here and I shall be always gratified at every opportunity of evincing how sincerely I respect him.

I flatter myself that before you receive this you will be on terms of intimacy with my General; cultivate that acquaintance with all possible assiduity. Strike out something for yourself under his patronage and you'll never repent it, and then we'll be sure of being together which is one of the first wishes of my heart. Let me hear from you Chippy by every opportunity. I have positively wrote myself blind. Tomorrow evening I shall devote to my other friends.

* * * May God's best blessings cover you all over prays

Your faithful & affectionate

Ned.

Governor Parr to General Haldimand.

Nova Scotia, Halifax, 14 Jan. 1784.

Sir,—I have the honor of your Excellency's letter of the 26th November by Mercure, and lament excedingly that the Dispatches brought by the "Greyhound" were not immediately forwarded from hence by land. They were sent the moment the commanding officer of His Majesty's ships on this station gave it as his opinion that it was too late for her to proceed [to Quebec].

I am happy to find that you persevere in your Idea of opening the Road from Kamouraska; our part of that business is entirely by water. Some honest men have already been recommended to me to be settled at the several post houses. I have submitted the whole [proposition] to Major Studholme's judgment, from his being more immediately upon the spot and being better acquainted with the proper stages for Post Houses, &c, than I possibly can be.

I have made Mercure very happy by giving him the Island* he so much wished for; it gives me pleasure to have it in my power to assist men of merit, and those who behaved well during the late Rebellion, but particularly those recommended by your Excellency. The number of Loyalists who have lately arrived in this Province from New York and other parts of the continent is very considerable. They amount to about 30,000 souls. * * * I have the honor to be with great esteem

and most humble servant,
J. Parr.

My dear Chip,—Since I finished my 12th page † I have seen a letter from Col. One of his arguments is that the proprietors of large grants would if regularly called on be obliged to pay the quit rents due or re-

If the rents are paid government is benefited by the money—if the land is forfeited by non-payment it may be regranted and will accommodate good subjects. * * * It is an office so exactly calculated for me that I long for it—it would give me such an opportunity of revenging myself on the nabobs of this country for their infamous opposition to the whole corps, that I should triumph in a faithful execution of my duty. * * *

Mongan* will show you a production of Mr. Aplin's.† Do Chip be industrious about the business of Nova Scotia; collect & exert all your talents—effect a removal of the present Governor & procure other alterations. Write 'em down. You will have all the materials and you'll get much information from Mongan. Whatever I have written upon that subject is intended for the information of all my friends. I therefore don't write to Upham or any of 'em—get 'em all together—adopt vigorous measures.

Benjamin Marston to Edward Winslow.

Shelburne, Feb'y, 6, 1784.

Dear Ned,—The Bearer of this is my Friend John Miller. You have already some personal knowledge of each other. He wishes to be

*The Rev. Charles Mongan is here referred to. He was chaplain in the 3rd Battalion of the 60th (or Royal American) regiment. He went to England at the peace. In 1781 he was chaplain to the lord lieutenant of Ireland.

†Joseph Aplin was a Loyalist who played quite a prominent part in the agitation of the division of the old province of Nova Scotia. Under date March 6, 1784, he wrote a lengthy letter to Chief Justice Smith, an abstract of which appears in the Canadian Archives for 1894, pp. 414, 415. In it he says that policy should have pointed out that the utmost attention should have been paid to the loyal adventurers. He had found great uneasiness at St. John on account of the people not getting their lands. About 1,500 framed houses and 400 of logs afforded shelter, but the people had no legal right to the ground their houses covered. The greater part of the Loyalists in the town at the mouth of the river never meant to fix themselves there, but to settle on their lands elsewhere and apply their money to building farm houses, purchasing live stock, &c. He speaks severely of the motives which had led the Nova Scotia house of assembly to vote £500 to Governor Parr and Chief Justice Finucane in connection with the business of settling the Loyalists. The assembly he asserts had lost the confidence of the new settlers; it had been called for six or seven years and had lasted fifteen. He remarks on the inequality of the representation; also on the mission of Chief Justice Finucane to the River St. John to enquire into grievances. Finucane's character is described by Aplin in unfavorable terms. The people at St. John had been betrayed into stronger symptoms of discontent than prudence would justify, but were grateful for what Sir Guy Carleton had done for them.

In 1790 Joseph Aplin was appointed attorney general of Prince Edward Island, a position from which he was compelled to retire in 1798 in consequence of a quarrel with Lt. Gov. Fanning and his council. See Canadian Archives for 1895 under P. E. I., pp. 74-77. See also under date 27th Oct., 1800, in this book.

better acquainted with you and I have given him this to be a means of bringing you together. The Ccmmon nonsense of these occasions I shall not use with you. I will only say "that should ye get better acquainted I think ye'll not dislike each other," and I think that is saying a good thing of you both.

For myself, I am in as perfect good health as a reasonable mortal can wish for. But almost dinn'd to death for Town lots & Water lots, for 50 acre and 500 Acre Lots. My head is so full of Triangles, Squares, Parallelograms, Trapezias, & Rhomboidses that the corners do sometimes almost put my eyes out. Howe\er I thank God that they are there. Had it not been for them I should have by this time starved to death, or what is ten times worse have been the burden and pity of my friends.

I hope you and your good family are well. Remember me to them most dutifully and affectionately. Adieu, God bless you is the ardent wish of Charles Morris* to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 6th February, 1784.

Sir,—I have made a return for a Grant to your Hon'd Father, of One Thousand Acres adjoining General Ruggles's to the Westward; it is bounded on the rear of the lotts, Thirty seven, Thirty six, and eight rods on Thirty five, in Wilmot, and extends to the Bay of Fundy; Course North ten degrees West. The grant will in all probability pass before this reaches you. I did advise him to wait until the Land could be fully examined, and that I would send directions to my deputys to do it while you were present, but he declined this and rather chose to have the Grant hurried thro' immediately and take his chance. I hope it will turn out a good Lott. Mr. John Harris, Jun'r, survey'd Gen'l Ruggles' and fixed a bound at the same corner where your Father's begins, being the North Eastern corner of Lott number Thirty seven. If you think it proper, you may call on Him to fix the other Western corner of this Lott and examine it.

I have the Honor to be, Sir,

Your most obed't Humble Servant,

Charles Morris.

He was at one time a representative of the old County of Sunbury in the Nova Scotia house of assembly. There is much concerning him in Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia. See also published volume of N. S. Archives, p. 293. He was a most upright and capable official.

Benjamin Hallowell to Edward Winslow.

London, 10th February, 1784.

Dear Sir,—Not having an answer to my Letters which I did myself the pleasure of writing to you on the 30th July and 1st August last, I am afraid by some accident they miscarried. The purport of them was to condole with you on the loss of America by Treachery and base management both at home and abroad, and to congratulate you that there was left an asylum for yourself where you could render services to other unfortunate sufferers—and I thanked you for the attention you were so obliging as to show my son at New York, and acquainted you that the young man has a grateful sense of his own obligations to you. I also acquainted you that Commissioners were appointed by Parliament to examine into the claims of the American sufferers, and then made as I now do, an offer of best services in any manner found to be of use to you. I also informed you that His Majesty in November, 1765, granted to me 20,000 acres of land in Nova Scotia, that it was surveyed to me in the Eastern part of the Province, that Mr. Desbarres the Kings Surveyor, now here, informs me that it is some of the best land in that Country. The conditions of the Grant not being complied with, I have wrote Governor Parr & Governor Wentworth, who have the management respecting the Grants and escheating the lands, where the terms have not been attended to, that I might have further time allowed me to make the settlement. I have wrote to Mr. Buckley Secretary of the Province, who is also Secretary to the Commission lately issued to the two Governors for granting and escheating, requesting his interest in my behalf. Lieut. Gov. Fanning, Mr. Buckley and Mr. Winston have copies of the letter I wrote to Governor Parr, and I have requested of those gentlemen to further my wishes in this business. Col. Williard now here, and Mr. George Leonard at St. John's River have promised me their interest. What may be a proper encouragement for persons to hold lands under me in so desirable a part of the Country as Gedebucta Bay* where the land is so proper for Cultivation, and the shores for carrying on the business of fishing, I cannot pretend to say; therefore I must leave the management of the business to my friends on the spot, and what they may do for me I am confident will be for the best, therefore their acts shall be confirmed by me in the full as if you had my power of Attorney. Mr. Leonard writes me the 12th December from St. John's River that people were applying to him almost every day for land to settle upon, and that he had wrote you in consequence of my mentioning that I had requested your interest in getting further time allowed me for making the settlement and getting the lands settled.

*Chedabucto, in Guysborough County, N. S. See this book under date 27th Feby., 1785.

I am very happy to find that General Fox, who is just arrived in England from America, considers and puts a proper value upon your merits. The General's Brother, who is now forming an administration in which he must be in a high department, will have it in his power to be of the greatest service to the General and his Friends, and if I am rightly informed you are one of the very first upon the General's list. Such a prospect as I think you have, not only makes me but all my family very happy.

The revocation of the Patent appointing a Board of Customs in America having taken place some time in November last, the Commissioners who composed that board in consequence of the confused state of Public Affairs, are not only destitute of what salary is due to them since April last, but have not any farther provision made for them. We are taught to believe that we shall be treated with Liberal hand. The unfortunate people who have come to England and thrown themselves on Government have been dealt to with a very sparing hand, and others who come at this late hour I am sure will not fare better.

I have been confined to my house with a severe fever since the last day of the old year, and not been able to quit my chamber before Monday last, a circumstance that has prevented my being able to see many of our friends lately from New York and Halifax.

Your worthy friend Bobby* continues still at Bristol on account of the cheapness of living, and being amongst a number of friends who use every means in their power to be of service to him, the little money which he has been able with great industry to pick up added to the allowance of £120 a year Government, he is able to rub along. A scheme by one of his friends had it succeeded would have made my brother very happy indeed. The failure of which has sunk to his friend about £12,000 in less than two years, and is still a heavy tax on the proprietors shoulders, owing to the villiney of the head manufacturer, which ruined the whole of the scheme.

Mrs. Hallowell, the Lieut, with the other branches of my family join me in best regards to you. You will also remember me verv kindly to your very worthy father and family, and if I can be of any use to him or them here you will please to say they may command me.

I am dear Sir, Your most obedient, faithful &c, am about to offer. I must therefore trust to your goodness for pardon, and beg leave to request you to present the enclosed memorial, and (as I am an utter stranger to the Governor) use your good offices to facilitate its success. Colo. Deveber informs me that he has obtained a grant of a thousand acres at the same place, and we are very desirous of being neighbors.

I drew Block No. 10 for the Corps under my command, which commences 48 miles above St. Annes, so that whatever becomes of me, it would be wildness to think of carrying my family there for the present. Should the prayer of my Memorial meet any hesitation, if you think Col. Small's interest would be of service, I beg you would acquaint him, I have wrote him on the subject, and I am confident he will do anything in his power that way to serve me. I would wish to know the success by the return of the bearer Mr. Peters.

I am acquainted by Colo. Deveber that your charge against those corps for whom you acted as Agent is £10 each, but that having regard to our numbers you have reduced our proportion to five pounds; for my own part I think the charge very moderate, and shall cheerfully endeavour to collect it as soon as possible and remitt it to you or pay it to your order here.

I am with very great esteem, Dear Sir,
Your most obed't Hum'l Serv't.

Thos. Menzies.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

London, March 7th, 1784.

My dear Winslow,—Your letter by Gen'l Fox gave me infinite pleasure; that your situation with him was so pleasant and his friendship so effectually secured are circumstances peculiarly fortunate and agreeable in themselves and I doubt not will hereafter be productive of the most solid advantages. I have attended him almost every day since his arrival and have been of some little service to him in a few trifling instances. The material change in the ministry must have deranged his business and views as much as of all the rest of us. There is not a doubt, he informs me, but there would have been a separate Government at St. John's had Lord Legion. He settled in the parish of Lancaster, St. John County, N. B., where he died at 1831, at the advanced age of 98 years.

North remained in office, and he candidly confessed he should like to have had the Government. The present administration, even if convinced of the propriety of the measure, dare not adopt it; their continuance in office is so uncertain that they will undertake no business but what turns up in the common routine of office every day. You may easily imagine how disappointed I was upon my arrival to find in what a distracted state this Country was. All my views and prospects in coming to England vanished at once—at least were totally suspended for the present. Sir Guy Carleton went into the Country, my letter to Lord North became of no avail, I could receive no directions with respect to the business of the Board of claims, and I have been waiting here in London till this day expecting a change in the ministry and some permanent administration to be formed to which I may make an application with respect to my business, for I will not yet despair. Should Fox come in again I think you and I might revive our expectations and hopes and yet see the objects we have so much at heart accomplished. Until this happens or some permanent ministry is appointed, we shall not be able to stir to any purpose in the business of a separate government.

Yours of the 7th Jan'y by Mr. Mongan I have received and thank you for it more than I can express, I really began to despair of ever receiving one of those old fashioned long friendly reviving epistles from you which always delight me so much, and am rejoiced that you at last found an hour of relaxation from the severe attention to business in which you have been so deeply involved to gratify me. Indeed after all the bustle of life, however consequential or lucrative our pursuits may be—however ambitious our prospects and whether we are successful or otherwise, one hour snatched from engagements of this kind and devoted to the social enjoyments of friendship and affection is worth them all in point of solid and rational happiness and satisfaction—this I have richly experienced in the pleasure the perusal of your letter has afforded me. The description you give me of your situation under General Fox is gratifying beyond measure, —the satisfaction resulting to yourself, the advantages derived to your friends and your usefulness to the public while with him are surely objects of the first magnitude and attention. You ought not I think to give up the expectations you suggest of a further connection with your friend, altho' the prospect of such an event is at present a little removed, so strange and so sudden are the changes in this life that we are often nearest the completion of our wishes when the objects of them are apparently at the greater distance. Altho' the representations now made with respect to the offices of Government at Halifax may not be so effectual as may be wished, they will doubtless be productive of some good, and you may rest assured that we are here forming a plan of application as soon as the ministry is established that will meet your fullest wishes, and if exertion perseverance and opportunity are of any avail to secure its execution, they will not be wanting. The hints and papers with which you have furnished me, have been of great consequence, and I most earnestly request you will not cease the fullest communications on the subject. As soon as anything is done here, or we have any prospect of success, you shall be made informed of every particular.

General Fox desired to have, and I have given him a copy of that part of your letter which relates to the conduct of your Governor and the other officers, he means immediately to show it to Lord Sydney, the present secretary of state for the home department.

I have written to your Father on the subject of his concerns. I do not doubt but Mr. Watson will effect all his wishes, he is seriously and warmly interested in the business and I suppose writes to your father on the subject. I am rejoiced to find he is so comfortably situated for the present; to him, your mother and the girls repeat the assurance of my most affectionate remembrance.

When you sort the cases of Muster Rolls I hope you will take care to check all improper discharges and see that none are borne upon the strength but effectives, and recollect the non-effectives are not to be continued at the second muster. I fancy you will not have the same difficulty in calling the names, various as the colors are of the uniforms, as you had in mustering Baron de Diemar's party colored Hussars.*

I have not yet seen Judge Sewell—in fact I dare not leave Town lest some alteration should take place and I should lose an opportunity of benefiting myself or friends—he is however well, as are the family. I will do you justice to him and swear anything you please to him, Bob. Hallowell and all your Friends.

You ask if the business of the half-pay is settled. I think there can be no doubt of it, tho' it is not yet specifically voted; but let me suggest one thing, if you receive pay as Secretary from Government I am told it will deprive you of your half pay for the same period; and this I believe you will find to be the case.

Thompson† is one of the wonders really of the age. He has made the tour of Europe since last September; by some strange good fortune

*Baron Frederick DeDiemar's Hussars were in 1781 attached to the Queen's Rangers. They seem, judging by the muster rolls, to have included a number of Loyalists, who probably joined the corps as recruits, or were draughted into the troop from other mounted corps, hence the variety of uniforms. The German names doubtless made the roll call a difficult matter for the muster-master.

†See biographical note under date 8th June, 1783, in this book, on Col. Benjamin Thompson. He had been the commander of the late King's American Dragoons, and Ward Chipman had been the paymaster of the corps as well as Col. Ludlow's battalion in DeLancey's brigade.

has been so introduced to the Duke of Bavaria, Elector Palatine, one of the first Courts in Germany, as to be appointed his principal Aid de Camp and Adj't. General; has jumped across to England to get the King's leave to go into foreign service, has obtained it, retaining his rank and pay in the British service, has been knighted as a testimony of the Royal approbation and recommendation, and Sir Benjamin Thompson is now preparing to figure at the Court of Manheim with one of the most splendid equipages in Europe; he sets off in about a month.

I have written so much and so many letters to my other friends that I have not patience to proceed any farther at present. To those letters I must refer you for such particulars as I have omitted in this—particularly to Tom Coffin for the history of my Brother.

Adieu my dearest Fellow—write to me by every opportunity and believe me most sincerely, affectionately & unalterably yours,

Chip.

I am very much gratified that your family at Annapolis are so comfortably situated, and that you have at last found leisure to make a visit there, let me be most particularly and affectionately remembered to Mrs. W. and the little ones.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

London, 13th March, 1784.

Dear Winslow,—Things begin to wear a much more favorable aspect respecting Nova Scotia. The present ministry begin to find their situation more stable and permanent. Your representations by Mongan have had their effect. A committee of the Council has been sitting on the business two or three days, Sir Guy Carleton has been sent for and is come to Town to give his advice and assistance in the business. Col. Willard, Dr. Seabury,* and Major Upham, as Agents for the Loyalists,—have presented a memorial stating all the grievances complained of. Lord Sydney has said "Nova Scotia shall be made the envy of all the American States."

I am authorized to say, in confidence, there is no doubt a separate Government at St. John's will be established, and that all your wishes will be carried into effect. Odell, who is with Sir Guy, whispers this to me for your information and desires a most friendly and affectionate remembrance to you. I do not think it improbable at all that Gen'l Fox will go out Governor of St. John's. It is in contemplation to have a Governor General over all the British Settlements contiguous,—if so, Sir Guy will be the man if he can be prevailed upon to go out. Ponder upon these things and act accordingly. Take care of our Lands, they must now become very valuable.

I was yesterday morning with L'd Sackville; he wished to see your letter respecting Nova Scotia and spoke very handsomely of you. I sent him that part of the letter and the hints of arguments you enclosed by General Fox for the separate Government at St. John's. Upon the whole I think all will go well. Sir Guy is warm for the new Government and his opinion will have very great influence; entre nous I fancy Judge Ludlow will apply for the Chief Justice-ship. He says I had better get the appointment of Attorney Gen'l if I can, &c, &c, but not a word of all this for a thousand reasons. Whatever you may have in contemplation write immediately to all your friends. Write me such another letter as your last it will be of great service to me as well as you. You are held up as a man of the first consequence and intelligence in that country, and I have the honor tc be mentioned as your particular and confidential correspondent.

I hope now to get my own matters, I mean the Board of claims business, upon some footing or other. Don't forget my half-pay agencies I beseech you. Adieu once more my dear Fellow and believe me unalterably your affectionate

Chip.

Rev. Chas. Mongan, Chaplain to Late 3d Batt. 60th Regt. to Edward Winslow.

London, 23rd. Mar. 1784.

My dear Sir,—Capt. Cook 37th Regt, just now called upon me to say that he sails for Port Roseway tomorrow morning, and tho' I have nothing absolutely certain to communicate, yet I cannot deny myself the pleasure of assuring you that I bear in constant remembrance the great satisfaction I have experienced in my acquaintance with you and your good family. This Country has been in such a confused state that no business of any kind has been thought of till within these few days—And I have the pleasure now to tell you that the papers &c., which I gave to the ministry (added to Gen. Fox's representations) have been the means of rousing the government towards Nova Scotia, and I have now some foundation for hoping that matters will go on well.

Sir Guy was sent for upon the business, and I find that his opinion upon that subject will be the prevailing one. So far at least things look well. This morning I saw your friend General Fox; he was just then summoned to attend the Council upon the same subject. He was in vast good spirits about the matter, and I think you will have him with you very soon and in the very situation you wish to see him. The arrangements are not yet formed or rather not divulged. It is supposed by the knowing ones that Sir Guy will go out as Governor General of the three Provinces. The present Ministry seems very anxious about the welfare of that Country. In a conference with L'd Sydney upon that subject, I must acknowledge that his sentiments were very liberal and full of tenderness towards the Loyalists. As nothing is yet absolutely declared certain, I can only give you reports some of which are that Gov. Parr is to be recalled, his successor not named, but Col. F. to be left in the management of affairs for the present. Col. Fox to be Governor of our province, and Sir Guy to superintend the whole. The Council & Assembly (I mean the present) to be thoroughly purged and the outcasts to be succeeded by honest Loyalists. In short my dear Friend I now begin to feel myself convinced that Nova Scotia will yet be the seat of happiness and the residence of honest Fellows.

I hope to see you in June with many others of my friends. I am perfectly tired of England, it is a cursed place at present.

Pray make my best respects to Gen'l Campbell; his things will sail about ten days hence, when I hope to be able to write you with more certainty. In the interim I beg you will remember me with great affection to the good old Folks and give my very sincere love to the girls. I promise myself much pleasure to come in their society. Capt. Cooke is waiting for my letter. God bless you, and believe me,

Very sincerely yours,

Chas. Mongan.

Major John Coffin to Edward Winslow.

Parr Town, 24 March, 1784.

My Dear Ned,—Your letter has this moment come to hand, I have indeed taken all opportunities to abuse you for not answering my letter with respect to your Father's land. Delays are dangerous and I am distressed at thinking that it will prove so in this instance. Some hundreds of applications have been made for it, among the many a Cornet Merrit of the Queen's Rangers.

By the next opportunity I shall write you very fully, in the mean time I must acquaint you that Nase has informed me you have a Nett or Seine, which is lent out to every person and is going to the Devil. I want one and am seriously distressed for it. My circumstances will not admit of my going to the expense of it. If you can spare it I will make a handsome return in salmon for it or will send you the amount when able.

I am in great haste and De Veber is waiting, therefore make my best and most affect'e compliments to your father and the Girls. With my best love to Polly,

I give you joy on the birth of a Daughter.

God Bless you,

Sincerely yours,

Jh. Coffin.

Annapolis, 28th March, 1784.

Dear Winslow,— * * * I am unhappy to hear that the Lt. Governor* has given up all Idea of a Settlement with us here. I have written to him on a Subject that will be entirely useless as I suppose he does not purchase Rice's farm. * * *

I have received a most impertinent letter from Capt. Hutchinson.† The case is this: five men of his Company came to this Province with me in the Peggy; for those men he rec'd six months pay at New York, which remained in his hands without any steps taken to remit it to them. I therefore ventured to stop his forage money in my hands for the payment of those men which I have actually paid to them—the money was not sufficient to pay them off. * * *

Every body well at your house. Compliments to Coffin & all friends,

Yours

St. De Lancey.

London, March 28th 1784.

My dear Winslow,—I not only embrace, but thank the opportunity that offers for opening a correspondence with a valuable friend. When you are at leisure be assured you'll make me happy by writing to me, especially if you'll inform me that you are well and doing well. Our friend Mongan gives me pleasing accounts of your situation. I flatter myself it will be better with you all before it's worse. The very ill treatment of the worthy Loyalists hitherto has given me much concern.

This letter will be delivered you by Lieut. Georges of the Navy. Mr. Georges is the son of a particular friend of mine; he is a very worthy young Gentl'n, as such I beg leave to introduce & warmly to recommend him to you & your friends. Every civility and friendship you shall be good enough to shew him, be assured I'll give you full credit for. Mr. Georges is pretty well versed in the politics of this Country; to him I beg to refer you for a more satisfactory account than I can write.

This hugh unwieldy Town swarms with Americans grumbling and discontented; in two or three years it is said, we may know what Government will, or will not, allow us for the loss of property, for services, &c, &c, &c.

Mrs. Cruger desires her best respects to you. I beg to be kindly remembered to Mrs. Winslow and rejoyce in the little holyday you have made in heaven, whose munificence I sincerely pray you may partake very fully of, for I am with the greatest Regard & Esteem, affectionately, My good Sir,

Your friend & humble servt.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

London, 13th April, 1784.

My dear Winslow,—I was in hopes before this time to have congratulated you upon the decided arrangement of the new Government of Nova Scotia, an event which I do not however think very far distant. The separation of the Province into two Governments is determined upon in the Cabinet, that of St. John's which is to be called New Ireland,* has been offered to Gen'l Fox. Halifax it is said is to be given to Gen'l Musgrave. A Governor General over these Provinces and Canada with almost unlimited powers, to prevent the necessity of applying for instructions here on all occasions, is to be appointed. This very important appointment is offered to Sir Guy. Gen'l Fox is this day to give his answer to Lord Sydney: he tells me he means to make his acceptance conditional upon the going out of Sir Guy. I do not myself at all doubt that they will both go: A very pleasant circumstance to me is that Sir Guy, in a very free and confidential conversation with Gen. Fox, mentioned Judge Ludlow, Upham and myself as persons whom he wished to provide for in the Line of the law. The Chief Justiceship is fixed for Ludlow, Upham is to have a seat on the same Bench, nothing specific is proposed for me, but I know of no office that will be worth my acceptance in that line but of Attorney General, and here I fancy I shall have many competitors. I shall however patiently await the event. As to yourself, Gen'l Fox will be amply attentive, he tells me he means to write you a line by this opportunity. These however are all secrets which you must not mention till you hear them from some other Quarter.

*The name eventually chosen was not New Ireland, but New Brunswick, in honor of the royal house of Brunswick. In the year 1780 William Knox, a Georgia Loyalist then in England, formed a plan to divide Maine and to give to the territory between the Penobscot and St. Croix rivers the name of New Ireland, and to give the administration thereof to Thomas Oliver as governor, with Daniel Leonard as chief justice. The proposal met with favor on the part of the ministry, but nothing at that time was done. Wm. Knox was afterwards for many years the agent of the province of New Brunswick in England. The proximity on either hand of New England and Nova Scotia (or New Scotland) undoubtedly must have suggested the name of "New Ireland" for our province, and it was evidently seriously contemplated at one time thus to designate the new province. Had such a name been chosen there is reason to believe that the Irish immigration to our shores in the "forties" would have assumed immense proportions.

One thing of the last consequence I can mention, that it is determined upon not to relax the Navigation Act in favor of America, and there will probably be one or two free ports in the new Government.

Great exertions are making by some of the Refugees here to secure one of the new Governments to Franklyn,* but these will prove abortive. His influence, owing to many causes, is at a very low ebb. My own affairs yet remain in statu quo. I have an application now depending before the Treasury by Sir Guy Carleton's direction, for instructions whether to proceed and compleat the business of the Board of claims. I am promised an answer in a week or ten days and in the mean time intend to steal off to Bristol to see the Judge† [Sewell] and his family, having not yet seen one of them.

Mongan told me you wished to have a table service of the best yellow ware with a blue border, and that you had written to me respecting it. There is nothing of that kind in any of your letters I have. However, from his description of the kind you want, I purchased a service and shipped them on board the Tamerlane, William Miller, directed to you at Halifax—an invoice of them is enclosed. They are the best of the kind.

I have no news to write; the dissolution of Parliament has engaged the whole nation in electioneering. Charles Fox is moving heaven and earth to secure a seat for Westminster, but it is generally tho't he will fail and must come in for some Boro' at last. The new Parliament will give a strong majority to the minister, so that Fox must again exert his abilities in a minority—how unaccountable is the change of popularity: a man a few months ago the idol of the people now one of the most unpopular men in the nation. And the whole Kingdom, strange to tell, engaged on the side of Prerogative. No man more popular now than the King. I send you the News-Papers.

14th April. Col. Fox has this minute given me a letter for you which I suppose explains the present situation of the Nova Scotia arrangements. It will not I hope be long before the business is settled. A part of your letter I find has been tho't too violent particularly that respecting the instructions to the Regiments to settle upon their lands at all events, and to oppose by force any attempts to dispossess them. Col. Fox communicated this to me and desires me to caution you particularly upon this head. Nothing so suddenly alarms Government, now grown very skittish, as the idea of an opposition to the measures of its servants. So sore are they with the event of the late contest, that they instantly connect the idea of rebellion with any such enunciations: Sat. verb. sap.

Tom Coffin will I suppose be on his passage from this place by the time this reaches you, and our friend Townsend on a Matrimonial voyage to New York. To your father, mother & sisters, Blowers and family, to Brinley and all my friends with you make assurances of my particular recollection and friendship—Direct and forward the inclosed letter if you know where: it is about half pay agency.

Adieu, Yours most affectionately, and unalterably,

Chip.

Brig. Gen. H. E. Fox to Edward Winslow.

London, 14th April, 1784.

Dr. Winslow,—In the first place I must talk to you about the last Letters you wrote here: you are too warm, & your idea of the Loyalists and Provincials defending their Lands on the Saint John's River was by some means communicated to Sir Guy Carleton & at first I believe much displeased him. But everything has been set to rights by your Friends with him.

What I told you in my last has happened. Lord Sydney some days ago sent an express to me, being with my Regiment at Stafford, & offered me the Government of the New Province (which by the way is to be called New Ireland) & informed me at the same time the Government General was to be offered to Sir Guy Carleton. My answer was that my own affairs, in which were involved those of my Nephew, were in such a critical situation that I could not decide for a few Days. This was really the case at that time—besides I wished to know what Sir Guy's intentions were, which to this moment I cannot find out. I returned to London yesterday

& this day informed Lord Sidney, after thanking him for his offer, that if Sir Guy went I should be extremely happy to attend him. Lord Sydney then surmised if no Governor General was sent would I accept of it; which I gave in to provided Sir Guy or myself named the Principal Officers, or at least I should have the power of putting the Negation upon any proposed. All this tho' not absolutely promised seemed agreed to. As from the hurry of Election no council will be assembled for some days, I asked Lord Sidney if he had any further commands, as I wished to return to my Regiment which he agreed to, saying he would send an express to me when anything was determined on.

I own, unless Sir Guy Carleton goes out Governor General, I do not see much prospect of its going on well. I think myself they will tempt him to go out, tho' he at present does not seem inclined to it. At any rate if I go Judge Ludlow goes as Chief Justice, that I settled with Lord Sydney this morning, & from conversation I have had with Sir Guy Carleton—Upham, Blowers, & Chipman will be thought of. There is also an out of doors report that if Sir Guy Carleton does not chuse to go, the Government General will be offered to Gen. Vaughn or Christie, in either which case I stay at home. The one I know nothing of, the other I know too well. But this I believe is not true.

In case of this [my acceptance] taking place, I trust to what you promised me when at Halifax of your acceptance of the Secretaryship of the Province which I have accordingly settled with Sir Guy Carleton.

Notwithstanding all this, do not be too sanguine, as there are a thousand things may happen to prevent the intended arrangement taking place, particularly if Sir Guy Carleton does not go out as Governor General. I for one am determined not to go without him, unless everything is so arranged before hand as to have a prospect of success. I had omitted in the beginning to tell you Col. Carleton is thought of as Governor of Quebec, & Musgrave for Halifax as soon as an appointment equal to the present Governor's abilitys can be found for him. If all this takes place I certainly go in good Company.

Billy Bayard has opposed all this & has handed about an intended memorial for all Loyalists to sign requesting Governor Franklin might be appointed Governor; but it met with so little encouragement from them that he dropped it the second day having got only three or four names to it. For Heaven's sake keep the whole of this Letter to yourself, & be not too sanguine or violent untill something is determined upon: I will write to you the moment it is.

If we go out to you I believe I shall commission you to buy me some Hovel at Maugerville for immediate use. There was Perlie's, near Glasier's house, a little below Peabody's: if he would sell I think would do very well. But nothing of this can be thought of at present.

Yours most sincerely,

[There is no signature, but the letter is endorsed as from Gen. Fox.]

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

April 17th, 1784—London.

My dear Winslow,—I have written to you two days ago by the Tamerlane, Capt. Wilson, in which Vessel your Table Service of Crockery was sent. There is nothing new to communicate since that time, but as Mr. Green is going in another ship I cannot omit scribbling a line. Gen'l Fox is gone out of Town, but is to be sent for by Lord Sydney, as soon as a Cabinet Council shall be held, to receive the terms upon which he will accept the Government of New Ireland, which will probably be in a week or ten days. I find it is doubtful whether there will be any Governor General, unless Sir Guy Carleton will go out—but it seems fixed beyond all doubt that General Fox will be the Governor at St. John's and Judge Ludlow Chief Justice; no other part of the arrangement is yet determined upon.

Gen'l Fox has again and again suggested his hopes that the triumph you must naturally feel upon these new arrangements will not betray you into any unguarded expressions of it at Halifax. It will be of consequence that the least possible irritation should take place on the part of the officers of Government there, and the less is said upon the subject the better, till we find ourselves established in our new Government, and able to defy the attempts of our enemies to injure us. I need not enlarge on this subject I am sure: your friendship will excuse my saying so much. I thought it necessary to put you upon your guard.

Tomorrow I set off for Bristol. I am heartily tired of this country and anxiously wish to take you by the hand in our Land of promise the New Canaan.

Adieu my dear Fellow. Tell all my friends I remember them most affectionately and long to be with them.

Your unalterably devoted

Chip.

P. S. There is a letter from Gen'l Fox for you inclosed in mine on board the Tamerlane.

Major John Coffin to Edward Winslow.

Carleton, Ap'l 20, 1784.

My dear Ned,—I have rec'd your letter by Major Barclay who has been with me three days past, he arrived just in time to see little Hughes put in the ground. Pray what do you think of my asking to be Clark of the court, or County, and Judge of Probates? * * * Both offices at present are very ill attended to; Simonds* is Judge of Probates, who holds so many posts and has so much money that he's crazy half his time, and the other is vacant.

Barclay informs me your father is coming here immediatley, you must inform the old gentleman it never was my intention he should come here until the middle of summer. By that time my house will be comfortable and his place† on the River in same order—. No time is to be lost in sending round a power of attorney—to me if you please or any other friend —to take possession immediately as it's daily receiving very great injury; the old Gentleman must also say what must be done to the place and his plans shall be put in execution on as cheap a footing as possible; I am very near to him and will pay him every attention.

I am a little disappointed about the seine‡ and wish much you would endeavor to get one among some of your friends that left [New] York. At this juncture I can not purchase and I shall have no fish this season without one. On enquiry I find the season lasts as long at Annapolis as it does here, and it would be robbing Polly of the advantage of it on that side. I should not have asked for it, but Nase represented that it could not possibly be of any use to you.

* * * When the annual Ships arrive I must beg you will let me hear fully from you what we are to expect. We shall be very uncomfortable if not separated from Halifax. Mr. Finucane§ is very busy attending to the complaints of those rascals—who by G— deserve halters to a man. He is a prejudiced man, or I have formed a wrong opinion— in a few days you will hear of his proceedings. I like his appearance, but his brother should be hanged for his looks. We shall have a keen eye on

*The County of Sunbury at this time included the greater part of New Brunswick. James Simonds was judge of probate. This gentleman was the pioneer settler at St. John, and his biography is contained in the articles on "Portland Point" in the New Brunswick Magazine for 1898-1899.

†The place here referred to was on the River St. John, near Westfield, where Col. John Coffin himself resided. The removal thither of the elder Edward Winslow was prevented by illness, followed by his death, at Halifax on June 9, 1784. His family then took up their residence at Portland Point.

‡Col. Coffin had written to ask for the use of Winslow's seine, but it was doing such good work for the latter at Annapolis that he could not spare it.

§Chief Justice Finucane had been sent by Governor Parr to the River St. John to investigate a variety of complaints that had been preferred by the lower orders against their agents, and other matters. Elias Hardy, an attorney of much ability, was the champion of the democracy, and as a consequence incurred the wrath of Col. Coffin. The chief justice was accompanied in his tour by his brother, Andrew Finucane.

them & they will be acquainted with our sentiments if he does not walk very upright.

God bless you. I scarcely know what I have wrote, being in great haste. My best love to your good Father & family. Don't forget me.

Yours most affectionately,

Jno. Coffin.*

Chief Justice Finucane's Investigation at Parr Town.

The Honorable Bryan Finucane, Chief Justice of the Province, having arrived from Halifax to enquire into the complaints made by Mr. Hardy in behalf of a number of People. The first business his honor proceeded to enquire into was the complaints against the conduct of those who had the distribution of Town Lotts, twenty nine charges having been exhibited and delivered him in the hand writing of Mr. Dickinson, brother-in-law to Mr. Hardy, and given to Mr. Leonard by his honor—which has since been returned with answer to each charge.

Charges.

List of Persons, supposed to possess Lotts in Parr Town, larger or more in number than their just proportion.—

1. Mr Leonard a large Lott beginning at the point of a Rock, and running east about 600 feet; 100 feet wide on the water, the other side something shorter; on the longest are four Tenants, viz, Thos. Jennings, Mr Smith, Capt. Kingston and Mr Barker.

*John Coffin was a native of Boston and a decided Loyalist. He served as a volunteer at the battle of Bunker Hill. In the early part of 1777 he raised a company of fifty men for the King's Orange Rangers; his commission as captain bears date Jan. 19, 1777. His company was engaged in the action of Fort Montogmery. On July 19, 1778, he exchanged with Capt. John Howard into the New York volunteers, and went with that corps to Georgia the same year. He saw hard fighting at Savannah, Hobkirk's Hill, and at Cross Creek (near Charleston). On various occasions his conduct won the admiration of his superiors. At the battle of Eutaw Springs he was brevet major and greatly distinguished himself. At the close of the war he retired with the rank of major to New Brunswick, and settled on his property at the Nerepis, which he called "Alwyngton Manor." He was active in political life, and represented Kings County in the house of assembly. He was a warm partizan: in 1783 he fought a duel with Col. Campbell; on Feb. 25, 1797, he fought a duel near Fredericton with James Glenie, and on Aug. 13, 1803, he fought a duel near Fort Howe with Capt. Foy, a stepson of Lt. Gov. Carleton. In the year 1797 he attained the rank of colonel in the army, was advanced to that of brigadier general in 1799, major general in 1803, lieutenant general in 1809, and general in 1819. In the war of 1812 he raised the New Brunswick Fencibles, in lieu of the former Fencible regiment, which on Feb. 4, 1811, was incorporated in the line as the 104th regiment. General Coffin took an active part in public matters, such as education, improvement of highways, &c. He was appointed superintendent of the Indian schools established in the province by the "New England Company," so called, for educating and Christianizing the Indians. A pretty full biography of Gen. Coffin is given in Sabine's American Loyalists. A very unreliable one was published by his family. His descendants attained distinction in the army and navy. He died at his home, "Alwyngton Manor," on the Nerepis, in 1838, at the age of 87 years.

2. Mr. Harding one Lott of 100 feet in front on the water and 400 feet deep.

3. Rev. John Sayre one Lott 100 feet in front on the water and 400 feet deep.

8. Mr. Dibblee 100 feet front on the east side of Water street, 400 feet deep to Germain Street, joining the water, out of which two common Lotts were given to Munson Jarvis and Samuel Jarvis.

9. Col. Tyng one large Lott 100 feet front on the east side of Water street and runs 400 feet and fronts on Germain Street. Also 100 feet on the west side of Water Street extending to the water.

10. A lot of equal dimensions, reserved for Col. Upham now in England, lately transferred to Capt. Camp, before held 5 Lotts for self and two sons, one of which Lotts Mr. Camp sold for 30 Guineas, and part of said Lott given to Mr. Norroway.

11. Mr. Street's Lott 50 feet in front on water, also a Lott on the east side of Water Street 50 feet front and 400 feet deep.

12. Mr. Arnold, Town Clerk, one Lott 50 feet front on Water Street. Also a Lott on the east side of Water Street 50 feet front and 400 feet deep. A Mrs. Hacket bought one half of a Lott 50 feet by 200 of Mr. Arnold for which she paid him fifteen Guineas.

13. Col. De Vebber a Lott 150 feet front on Germain Street and 200 feet deep.

26. Elias Wright a number of Lotts.
27. William Wright a number of Lotts.
28. Mr. Lester 2 Lotts.
29. Major Menzies 3 Lotts, 1 purchased for his son and another drawn.

April 23, 1784.

The answer of Mr. Leonard, one of the Directors for distributing the Lotts in the Town of Parr, to several supposed Grievances presented to the Honorable Chief Justice in an anonymous Paper.

No. 1. Mr. Leonard having by a fair and legal draft of Town Lotts drawn No. 58 & 59, (being then but one Lott and the most valuable in the Town), he having a principal direction in settling and forming the town—to avoid the appearance of Partiality—exchanged his Lott for one at the extremity of the Town, 1600 feet deep and 100 feet in front, many of same size being drawn by others. The arrival of more people from New York than was expected induced him with others to reduce their Lotts from time to time as the fleets arrived with Loyalists until he was left with only 100 by 250 feet, fifty feet only being on the water. There are three Tenants on Mr. Leonard's Lott instead of four mentioned in the charge, who are all provided with Lotts in the best and most conspicuous part of the Town and have therefore no cause for complaint. His situation and improvements hath now become the object of envy of a few malicious men. He is however ready to give up his Lott with all the improvements, which cost him 500 guineas, on the following condition, viz., to return him back the sixteenth part of his former Lott, which he became lawfully possessed of—or more, if desired by a sixteenth part of the Gentlemen and others (who have any pretentions to Town Lotts or any bounties of Government) who have been knowing to his exertions in promoting the settlement without a prospect of compensation. These are the simple terms by which he will with cheerfulness resign his lawful right, obtained in a fair and honorable way, and on no other conditions but by an order from the Governor and Council.

2. Mr. Harding one Lott 50 feet by 200, never owned more.

3. Rev'd John Sayre, with two sons in trade, owners of two Lotts only, 50 feet by 200, and a Clergyman his brother [owner of one lot] they having given up the remainder of the 100 by 1600 feet.

4. Mr. Beadle arrived in the first fleet, drew with the first class, 100 by 1600 feet, but has long since given up all except 100 by 200 which is subdivided between Joseph Beadle Esq, Joseph Beadle Jun'r, John & Paul Beadle, who are all present and entitled to Lotts. Has also given permission to a baker (who holds a good lot of his own) through a particular desire to serve the man. There is another man in the House of Mr. Beadle who are all the Tenants mentioned in the charge.

5. Capt. Allison has one Lott 50 feet by 200, with a small spot on the water of 25 feet front, having drawn a Lott 100 by 1600 feet.

6. Mr. Peters has but one Lot, 50 by 200 feet and the water in front, having also drawn a Lot 100 by 1600 feet.

7. Col. Allen drew a Lott 1600 feet deep, afterwards it was reduced to 200 feet, when he had three dwelling houses erected, and now sold to Mr. Horsfield.

8. Mr. Dibble having drawn a Lott 100 by 1600 feet resigned all but 100 by 200 feet which he afterwards divided with a Mr. Campbell, a Merchant, who left this place late in the fall for Europe to bring out a quantity of Goods, reserving also a steep bank oposite to the Lott being of little use.

9. Col. Tyng having no water Lott; the back part of his Lot of little use, being a steep high rock.

10. Col. Upham has no Lot, the one reserved for him became forfeited with many others in November last, one half of which was given to Capt. Camp, 50 feet by 200, who has no other room for a house. He has beside a small piece of land on the bank below the Lott unfit for any use but a store. Capt. Camp sold no lot belonging to himself. The other part of Major Upham's Lott was given to Mr. Norroway who has no other.

11. Mr. Street having drawn a Lott of 100 by 1600 feet has with others given all up to the number of feet mentioned in the first charge.

12. Mr. Arnold having drawn one Lott 50 feet by 200, disposed of one half to accommodate a Friend; the rest of the charge against Mr. Arnold is preposterous to the last degree.

13. Col. De Vebber having drawn only one Lot for himself, one for his son. The other is a present made by Capt. Maxwell to his Family, of which he has informed the Chief Justice.

14. Major Murray drew a lot 100 by 1600 feet all being disposed of [to others] in the month of November last, except 50 feet by 200. Major Murray left this place for England in November after doing everything to promote the settlement by employing a number of men* in clearing the streets at the first formation of the Town.

*The men employed by Major Murray were soldiers of his regiment, the King's American Dragoons.

15. Capt. Hallet one Lot 80 feet by 100, the rest of the Lotts mentioned were for the people present who applyed with him when he drew his own.

16. Capt. Jones drew one Lot for himself and three for three men belonging to his company who are now here and entitled to Lotts.

17. John Colville drew one Lot; also twenty five feet on the water was given to him to build a wharf much wanted by the public, and as an encouragement for others to begin so necessary an undertaking for the preservation of Boats and small craft.

18. Charles Loosely drew one Lott and one was given him in another part of the town for the purpose of its being occupyed for a Tavern, much wanted at that early period, which lot is now considered as the public's and he has no right to dispose of it, only the improvements.

19. Thomas Elms drew one Lott and became possessed of another by the death of Martin Lowick who died in his debt.

20. Capt. Menzies, being Capt. of a Company of Refugees, returned his company to Mr. Leonard for Lotts, who is not able to say concerning the distribution of them at present; believes he has only one Lott reserved for himself.

21. Nathaniel Horton has only one Lott. The other mentioned in the Charge belongs to Mr. Seymour, who left this place this winter after improvements were made on the Lot for the West Indies, is hourly expected with a cargo.

22. Bartholomew Crannell purchased a house and Lott on his arrival to shelter his Family, and afterwards drew one in in his own Name.

23. Thomas Clark, but one Lott entered on the list; what he has purchased Mr. Leonard is unacquainted with. He lives opposite the Chief Justice.

24. Mr. Leonard is unacquainted with the circumstances of Capt. Dunbar's having two Lotts and he being present can answer for himself, only one Lot entered on the list for him.

25. The only Charge founded in Truth, except Mr. Street's, Capt. Campbell having one Lott in Carleton and one at Parr.

26. Elias Wright, drawn one Lott only, what he has purchased, Mr. Leonard is unacquainted with.

27. William Wright, one Lott for himself. He drew thirty eight for his Company, which were justly, as he says, distributed to them.

28. Mr. Lester drew one Lott and purchased another to put a bake House on, that it need not endanger any building near it.

29. Major Menzies one Lott purchased for his son, another drawn for himself.

Tertullus Dickinson to Chief Justice Finucane.

To the Honorable Bryan Finucane Esq'r, Chief Justice of his Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia, &c, &c;—

The memorial of Tertullus Dickinson sheweth:—

That your Memorialist, whose Loyalty & Losses will appear in the certificate enclosed, arrived at Parr Town from New York with his family in November last and applyed to Mr. Leonard, who conducted that business, for a town Lott, which he could not then obtain and was therefore obliged to hire a house for himself & family.

That a lot has been since offered him but in a situation which is not convenient for trade or navigation.

That as he proposes entering into business extensively as a merchant he humbly requests your Honor to grant him a Lott more conveniently situated out of those which he expects will appear to be supernumerary in the hands of the present holders.

And your Memorialist, &c, &c,

Tertullus Dickinson.

George Leonard's remarks on above Memorial.

Mr. Dickinson arrived late in November when all the most valuable Lotts were disposed of except the one offered him, which being centrical & in one of the best streets and but a short distance from the water, No. 78* as appears on the map. The suggestion of being obliged to hire a house is absurd in the memorialist as it is well known the season would not permit him to build one, besides the shortness of the time after he had applyed before he had a Lot appointed him. Many who propose and actually are in trade, whose pretensions are equally good with Mr. Dickinson and who have done everything in their power to promote and facilitate the settlement, do not unjustly expect the priviledges and property of others taken and bestowed on them.

Geo. Leonard.

Parr on the River St. John, April 23d, 1784.

N. B. Mr Dickinson did & said every thing previous to his leaving New York, which was late in November, to counteract the good intentions of Sir Guy Carleton in sending the Loyalists into this province. He reprobated the Idea before the first fleet sailed and continued to discourage every person of his acquaintance untill he left New York himself for this place in a small vessel on a trading voyage only, but finding that money may be obtained here in trade concluded to stay. This is the short history of Mr. Hardy's brother in law, which the Chief Justice has paid a particular attention to in giving him two valuable lots, one on the water in the centre of the town and another a few yards distance.

*Lot No. 78 was on the west side of Germain street, near Queen street.

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

Parr, April 30th, 1784.

My dear Sir,— * * * The Chief Justice has arrived here for the purpose as he says of enquiring into and redressing grievances. Unfortunately the complaints are greater and the breach wider than before he arrived—which had totally subsided, the malcontents had acknowledged their folly and absurdity in attending to the suggestions of a Mr. Hardy, who has returned here with him and has scarcely left his elbow since he arrived to the exclusion of a number of gentlemen (who had no complaints preferred against them nor they against others) who would have readily advised with him in any matters that concerned the Settlements in this part of the Province. This would have gained him popularity, and would have supported the authority of the place, so necessary at the first forming of a new settlement, and his conduct might have been in this consistent with perfect justice. He has unfortunately lost these advantages, and has thrown the Town into confusion by attending to the illiberal insinuations of that man Hardy. The feelings of the gentlemen are hurt and many of the undeserving people, which are Hardy's connections, are benefited by his partial decisions.

Those who have hitherto had the direction of matters here are in a strange and indelicate way sent for before him, and in the presence of that Man charged in the language and tone of a Bashaw with wrong and partial conduct, without any regular mode of enquiry into it.

The Town Lotts, which are the present subject of dispute, have been divided and subdivided on the arrival of almost every Fleet, to accommodate the Loyalists as they came, who were more numerous than was expected, until the Lotts of those who came first (who had gone to the task and expence in forming the Town) had been reduced to one sixteenth part of their former number of feet—which they had obtained by a fair and legal draft. At last a few of Mr. Hardy's connections arrived, late in the fall, and are now endeavouring to push back those who are justly entitled to their Lotts, and themselves come in on the front of the Town near the water. On the above principle of Mr. Hardy, supported by the Chief Justice, we must on the next emigration from New Gate, or elsewhere, divide and subdivide again and again. I will if I have time to have them copied, enclose you 29 of their charges and answers to each. I will venture to say there is not three gentlemen that approves of the least alteration in the place, but wish that fellow to the D—l and all his party (meaning Hardy).

For God's sake let us have in our new-expected Province a Chief Justice that will not give credit to every idle report from Barbers and Grog shops, as this man has done since he has been here. The enclosed letter and answer will shew the credulity of the man. His instability also is inconceivable—he condemned the measure of having any part of the Town that lay on the water occupied by Individuals, claiming that it should have been reserved for Public uses, when Wharfs were so necessary for Trade and for the preservation of Boats and small craft. He ordered a Hand Bill to be put up in several parts of the Town prohibiting people from going on with their improvements. He was forewarned of the consequence, he however said he would try the matter, but was by the experiment soon convinced of the impropriety of the measure and ordered them to be recalled. * * *

My dear Sir, why was not that good man Lieut. Governor Fanning requested to go on this important business, if it was thought of such importance by the Governor. The decrees of Colonel Fanning, right or wrong, would have been well received from the great opinion we have of him here.

You will see by the 14th charge the observations on Major Murray's Lott and my answer: notwithstanding which the Chief Justice has given it away as also yours. Murray's is given to a Mr. Melvin,* Secretary to a committee of correspondence that Hardy had here during the time he was at Halifax. He was a Sutler to the army at Kings Bridge, was turned out of the Camp and his Hutt burnt for bad conduct. * * * Poor Murray, who had cleared the Lott had done more in clearing the streets at the first laying out of the Town than all the people in the Town at that time besides. This shews the strength of his prejudices in favor of Hardy and his attention to his recommendations. To a Mr. Dickenson, a brother in law to Hardy, he has given two valuable Lotts—one on the water and another along side of the one that was yours.

How far the Law will condemn me for being so free with the character of the first Magistrate you are the best judge, I should notwithstanding be happy to be called to the proof of what I have related and to many other matters that are equally absurd in him during the time he has been here.

I am &c.,

Geo. Leonard.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 26 April, 1784.

You are not to start at the appearance of this letter. I feel that it will be a long one. The importance of the subject will justify even circumlocution and prolixity. Writing to you is like having a tete-a-tete with myself. I am not shackled by any vulgar rules, I throw aside all ideas of method and connection and perfectly satisfied that you will find out my meaning I give you the unadorned language of my heart. You know how zealously I have express'd myself on the subject of dividing the province of Nova-Scotia and forming a government on the north west side of the Bay of Fundy. * * *

*The person referred to is probably David Melville, who in the "Royal St. John's Gazette and Nova Scotia Intelligencer," of Sep. 9, 1784, prints an elaborate prospectus headed "Proposals for printing by subscription an accurate history of the settlement of his Majesty's exiled Loyalists on the north side of the Bay of Fundy, formerly called Arcadia, on the River St. John." The prospectus shows David Melville to have been in sympathy with Elias Hardy and his party.

I have seen, my dear Chipman (in the country which I have formerly described to you), a vast collection of valuable men of different orders,—men, respectable for their conduct, with their families and the little remains of their property—unattended to, and ungoverned. I saw all those Provincial Regiments, (which we have so frequently mustered) landing in this inhospitable climate, in the month of October, without shelter and without knowing where to find a place to reside. The chagrine of the officers was not to me so truly affecting as the poignant grief of the men. Those respectable Serjeants of Robinson's, Ludlow's, Cruger's, Fanning's,* &c., (once hospitable yeomen of the country) were addressing me in a language which almost murdered me as I heard it.

"Sir we have served all the War. Your Honor is witness how faith"fully. We were promised land, We expected you had obtained it for "us,—We like the country—only let us have a spot of own, and give "us such kind of regulations as will hinder bad men from injuring us.—

Think you Chipman that it could be possible for me to retreat from a scene like this? Or do you think affecting as it was, that it would discourage me from exertions—No! It had a contrary effect—it stimulated me to propose to General Fox (who was also witness to their distress) the plan of forming a separate Government, as the only possible means of effectual relief—and to contribute to that relief was my ambition and my motive.

That matter being settled I shall go on.

You have already received all the arguments (in favor of this plan) which arise from local considerations. Since our first proposal vast numbers of settlers have arrived in that country. Almost all the people who composed the Garrison of Penobscot, are now at Passamaquoddy. The late Fencible Americans, D'cr. Paine with a large party; Sam Bliss† with another party—are there, in short the numbers are astonishing. All these men are waiting with the most eager impatience for some regulations in their favor. All agree that nothing short of a separate Government can effectually serve them. Surely it must happen. It must be for the interest as well as the honor of the British Government, to save from despair so many of its faithful subjects. Consoled with this idea we are determined to expect it. The encouragement given in your letter has revived us beyond all description. For Heaven sake don't suffer us to be disappointed.

*These corps, viz., the Loyal American Regiment, DeLacey's Brigade, and the King's American Regiment, were composed almost entirely of the Loyalist yeomanry of the old colonies, and included many men of excellent reputation.

†Samuel Bliss was of Concord, Massachusetts, and a brother of Daniel Bliss, who settled in Sunbury Co. He died at St. George, March 5, 1803.

It has been a question here, and perhaps may be the subject of enquiry in England—Whether the British West Indies can be supplied with the articles they want from Nova Scotia. I have occasionally, since my arrival here, had much conversation with merchants and other well inform'd Gentlemen on this subject, and I am perfectly satisfied in my own mind, that the Countries of Nova-Scotia and Canada can supply the British West Indies with every article they want. But as an ipse dixit, in a business of this sort cannot be satisfactory, I will endeavor to give some reasons for this opinion.

The articles usually exported from the American Provinces to the West Indies are Lumber, Fish, Horses, & some Provisions.

To form a judgment of the quantity of Lumber which the country produces, consider what has been the last year's consumption in this province. The towns of Shelburne, Digby, and those on St. John's River, and many inferior towns have been built in the course of last Year and they now contain many thousand houses. The materials for building those houses have been supplied without any great assistance from the New Settlers, and the importation from the States has been very inconsiderable, because in most of those places the New Settlers have (injudiciously) refused to traffic with them. It is fair reasoning to say—If such considerable quantities of Lumber could be supplied (on an emergency) by the former inhabitants (who God knows are not remarkable for their industry) Surely it will increase immensely when a multitude of spirited men shall find it an object worth their attention. The fund of timber is literally inexhaustible. Take the plan of the River St. John's, trace it from the Entrance, observe the prodigious branches from it, the vast lakes in the vicinity of it, from whence those streams run, Consider the extent of country between that & Passamaquoddy, and the other way to Pitcoudiac. Realize that the borders of those lakes & rivers are covered with timber of almost every kind, and that the interior country as far as has been explored furnishes timber in the same proportion. Look also at Passamaquoddy Bay and the rivers which empty into that.

Omnipotence cannot effect the creation of more perfect streams for mills than are to be found in all these places, and the transportation of lumber from the places of sawing to the places of Export is rendered perfectly easy because the currents always sett towards the latter. There was nothing wanting but labourers, to procure almost any quantity of lumber. The late acquisition of inhabitants—obviates that difficulty. The kind of lumber which is used for building, and which is most essential, such as Frames, Joists, Plank, Boards, Clap-Boards, & Shingles will be exported in great abundance from hence—immediately. And so will Hoops, the Birch-hoops it is agreed are as durable and valuable as any in the World. Staves, are the only article about which there is a doubt, & staves I am told may be had in Canada. In my observations on this business you'l recollect that I have confined myself principally to the propose'd new province, and you will take it into consideration that there are many places on the peninsula of Nova-Scotia from which large quantities of lumber have been usually exported, and that the exports from those places will increase in proportion to the increase of inhabitants. Saw-mills are erecting & other improvements making in places where the old Nova-Scotians never trod. A Capt. Taylor, of Stephen Delancey's regiment,* has commenced his operations at St. Mary's Bay, and he now supplies all the people who are settling about that Bay & the Sissiboo river. New Mills are building in the neighborhood of Annapolis and Granville,—& almost in every other considerable town.

I shall say but little on the subject of Fish because it must occur to every man of common sense, that if the New-England Traders could find a profit in sending their vessels to this coast for Fish,—those who inhabit its borders can carry on the business to much greater advantage. The exertions now making are very spirited and I have no doubt that the exports of Fish from Shelburne & the other new places added to the former usual exports from the old ports will be an ample supply for the West-Indies this year.

Horses are reared with more facility in Canada & about St. John's than in any country I ever saw, and they are the best Hacks in the world.

Beef & Pork is produced in great abundance on the peninsula of Nova-Scotia, more than is necessary for the inhabitants. Witness the quantities that were brought to us during the siege of Boston.

I cannot speak or write of that country about the river St. John's without making use of such extravagant expressions as have a tendency to lessen the weight of my testimonies in its favor. I acknowledge myself to be a little romantic, but I will appeal to General Fox & others who have observed it without being so much in raptures, whether they ever beheld a more delightful grass country, better cattle, or better grain, or more abundant crops.

What then in the name of wonder should hinder us from supplying the West-India Islands with all the articles they want especially as the privilege of doing it is effectually secured to us by the navigation-Act. There has been an idea sported here that there would be either a suspension or a relaxation of that act but this I think can never happen. I cannot imagine on what principle of politics such a measure could be adopted. If the apprehension of inconvenience to the islands from the operation of the act is the argument in favor of relaxing it, it must have been suggested without due consideration. For (if the necessary attention which the new settlers are obliged to give to their private matters during the first Year, prevents any great speculations) the islands can't suffer. The Americans (if advantages result from the traffic) will bring their commodities to our ports sell them to us—or make their vessels British-Bottoms—give a spring to our commerce, and not greatly enhance the price of the articles at the final market. This consideration will hold good with respect to any other article which in future we may not be able to supply. All these circumstances considered it appears to me there can be no danger even of a relaxation of the act. Such an event would greatly check the progress of our settlements.

Let me impress on your mind, my dear fellow, the necessity of the immediate exertion of every friend to this country to effect the new government. You can have no idea of the strange situation which those people on the St. John's side are now in. The difficulties which attend a communication between that country & the present metropolis have been severely experienced this season. The unfortunate Provincial Officers* & others, who have from a concurrence of unaccountable accidents been prevented from the possession of their lands, and have business of other kinds to negotiate with the officers of Government here, have been led into expenses which has deprived them of the small remains of their hard earn'd money, and many of them who have been obliged to make the tour, are reduced to distress from the necessary expences: Some of 'em reside 100 miles from the mouth of St. John's, they have of course (after performing that journey) to pass the Bay of Fundy and to travel by land from Annapolis 130 miles more, and they arrive at a place where expences are enormous, and the worst part of the story is that they have generally returned without effecting their business. They invariably complain of the want of an efficient and regular system of Government—they say,

*The Loyalists were prevented from getting settled on their lands for reasons thus summarised by Col. Robert Morse:—"First, their arriving very "late in the season; second, timely provision not having been made by escheat-"ing and laying out lands; thirdly, a sufficient number of surveyors not having "been employed; but lastly and principally, the want of foresight and wisdom "to make necessary arrangements and steadiness to carry them into execu-"tion."

"their property is insecure & the spirit of enterprize check'd." They also say that there are suggestions of claims in consequence of former assignments of lands, and the people are frighten'd at the idea of fixing a residence on a property which is liable to contest. There are no attempts to remedy these inconveniences—the feeble effort of sending the Chief Justice with a Mr Elias Hardy to enquire into their grievances, can't possibly be attended with any salutary consequences. In short Chip, the relief must be speedy. The clamour is now so great that (altho' not warranted by the information I received) I thought it necessary to send off an express to Coffin & my other friends, to acquaint them of the prospect of a government being established there. Late letters received from men not accustomed to enumerate grievances, are filled with such melancholy anticipations that I could not avoid endeavoring to relieve them.

As I don't care how long my letter is, I'll introduce another argument in favour of dividing this province, which (if not of equal weight with others) is of some consequence. You will I think enter into the spirit of it. A large proportion of the old inhabitants of this country are natives of New-England, or descendants from New Englanders, they, from their situation, never experienced any of the inconveniences which resulted from the violence of political animosity, they remained quiet during all the persecutions in the other provinces—they retained a natural (perhaps laudable) affection for their country. The rebel party were more industrious, and their doctrines and principles were more greedily adopted, than those of the other side, by degrees the Nova-Scotians became firmly persuaded of the justice of their cause. Of this complexion are the public officers, generally. On our side the principal people are men who have served in a military line—irritable from a series of mortifications—scarcely cooled from the ardor of resentment—jealous to an extreme, some of 'em illiberally so. Either of these kinds of men may form useful societies among themselves—but they can't be mixed—separate them, and this very difference of opinion will increase the emulation and contribute to the general good; together—wrangles and contests would be unavoidable.

Lord Sydney's declaration quoted in your letter, "That he will make Nova-Scotia the envy of the American States," has excited a kind of general gratitude, I cannot describe it. Other ministers and Great men have by their patronage of new settlers, relieved individuals from distress, and rendered services to their country, but it is a Godlike task that Lord Sydney has undertaken. Such an event as the present, never happened before—perhaps never will happen again. There are assembled here an immense multitude (not of dissolute vagrants such as commonly make the first efforts to settle new countries,) but gentlemen of education—Farmers, formerly independent—& reputable mechanics, who by the fortune of war have been deprived of their property. They are as firmly attached to the British constitution as if they never had made a sacrifice. Here they stand with their wives and their children looking up for protection, and requesting such regulations as are necessary to the weal of society. To save these from distress, to soothe and comfort them by extending indulgencies which at the same time are essentially beneficial to the country at large, is truly a noble duty. By Heaven we will be the envy of the American States. The obligation which we—St. John's men feel for the proposal of giving us a government is greatly enhanced by the consideration that the man proposed to be placed at the head is perfectly calculated for the performance of the duty. General Fox is of a character so dignify'd—he is so truly respectable for his services—has discovered such brilliant abilities, such an enterprizing spirit & indefatigable industry, that we anticipate the most important benefits from his exertions. When the people of the neighboring states shall observe our operations—when they see us in the enjoyment of a regular system of Government—protected by the mother country—not sadled with enormous taxes, and compare their state with ours, Will not they envy us? Surely they will. Many of their most respectable Inhabitants will join us immediately. You have abilities my friend of a superior kind, if there are yet obstacles in the way, exert all your talents to remove them. The nobleman whose heart suggested an idea so benevolent, cannot be inaccessible to men of sense. See Lord Sydney, expatiate to him on the importance of the object—convince him by fair reasoning, of the necessity of adopting the plan. I am so confident of your success in the business that I have been enquiring where will probably be the boundaries of our province. I find there are three opinions on this subject. With respect to the western & northern bounds there can be no doubt—the first will be wherever the American line is determined to run—the other will be the Canada line, so that the difference of opinion arises only with respect to the southeastern boundary. Some assert that the peninsula of Nova-Scotia should run nearly in a straight line from the Bay of St. Mary's to Tatamagouche Bay in the Gulf of St. Lawrence—this would throw all the country to the west of Onslow into the new province, & leave all the southern part of the peninsula & the island of Cape Breton in the old province; and this 'tis said would be sufficiently extensive, and will leave them more than an equal proportion of navigable harbors. Others say that the line should strike across the narrow isthmus which runs between the Bays of Verte & Chignecto, & (by including the island of St. John's) sink the expence of that abortion of a government. If the metropolis of the new province is fixed (as I presume it will be) on the river St. John's, the communication from Cumberland & the places in the vicinity of it will be as convenient as the present communication with Halifax. Others contend that the river Peticoudiac should be the boundary, and that Cumberland & the other places must remain in the old province. One or the other of these three will probably be the line.

I have presum'd that the seat of Government for the new province will be on the river St. John's, because that river must be nearly centrical, and I should think it perfect good policy to establish the metropolis as high up the river as St. Ann's point.* It would have a tendency to extend the settlements & enhance the value of the land above, it would facilitate communication with Canada, which is a grand object. The situation is delightful—exalted above all Freshets and directly opposite to the beautiful River Nashwaagh. The country about it is inconceivably fertile, and the navigation for small vessels not only practicable but convenient. The great town of Maugerville is in its neighborhood, and so perfectly cultivated, even at this time as to afford an immediate supply for your market. A communication with Passamaquoddy over land is easily effected, & the distance not very considerable. All these circumstances render it a very eligible situation. If the towns at the mouth of the river become great the Governor may prevent inconveniences to them by an occasional residence there.

You see how serious I am in my arrangements. Don't dub me an enthusiast—these sentiments are not the effect of giddiness—they do not arise from reveries or a propensity to castle-building—they are the effects of deliberate consideration. They may not be well expressed—if they are intelligible I shall be satisfy'd.

Rely on't Chip—once more, that if the plan suggested takes place—If Sir Guy Carleton comes out Governor General—a separate Government form'd—and some changes take place in this—Nova-Scotia will rise in importance beyond the expectation of the most sanguine of its advocates. Pray will Mr. Watson's election to represent the City† prevent him from making an excursion? I hope not.

It is so painful a task to censure as a Governor a man whom one esteems as a gentleman, that I will transfer the duty of relating the strange absurdities which are committed here, to our friend Coffin—he has had the same opportunity that I have, to make his observations—and he will communicate them with that freedom & impartiality which marks his character.

Are you tired? you have courted this kind of dissertation—make the best of it.

*Edward Winslow's advocacy of this site largely influenced its selection by the governor and council. There can be no doubt of this in the mind of any one who reads the correspondence in this book.

†The reference is to the recent election of Brook Watson as a member of parliament for a London constituency.

Now for a matter of a little consequence to myself. From whence arose the idea that I shall lose my half pay while I am serving as Secretary to Gen. Campbell? Surely it would be extremely unjust to call me from my private pursuits into a scene of expence and complicated labor, without any allowance. My friends have been employed in erecting houses & improving lands—and have been in the uninterrupted enjoyment of their domestic comforts. I have been separated from my family, I have lost a whole year's exertion on my land. I have no house built—or improvement made, but I've been constantly confined to this expensive uncomfortable place. I will not boast that I have been industrious. I leave it to my friends to describe the scene of business in which I've been involved, General Campbell, in consideration, allows me 10s. per day, & it's paid not by warrant, but out of the contingencies of the army. It never can be supposed that a temporary employment like this is what's meant by "holding an employment under Government." If it's so construed I am once more ruined effectually, for except my 10s a day I'll be hanged if I've made a farthing, with all the economy I'm master of I am in debt 70 or 80 guineas. Gen'l Fox will advise you how to manage this matter. It would be too barbarous to deprive me of my half pay.

Well done Sir Benjamin! The next news we hear will probably be that he has mounted a Baloon—taken his flight from Bavaria—and is Chief Engineer to an Aerial Queen. I hope he'll not take a position over the river St. John's, for fear of accidents.

The old Gentleman writes you. You will hear of his late misfortune. I need not say anything to stimulate my friends to afford him their assistance.

I congratulate you Chip upon finding and saving an unfortunate Brother. It is a pleasure that will last you a great while.

I thank Lord Sackville for mentioning my name. I have a great respect for Lord Sackville. I intended doing myself the honor of writing to him—and if I thought it would afford him amusement, I would certainly write.

As I shall write you tomorrow I will make no apology for the conciseness of this, only the ordinary one—hurry of business &c. &c.

If the Devil was at the door among the other memorialists he should not divert my attention from anything that could contribute to your interest or pleasure.

Most cordially &

uncommonly yours,

Ed. Winslow.

Dr. William Paine to Edward Winslow.

April the 26th, 1784.

Dear Winslow,—By this opportunity, I have the Pleasure of informing you, that I have been particularly fortunate in locating my land at Passamaquoddy. The Harbour of L'Etang where it is proposed to build a Town, is decidedly the best in America. It is shelter'd from all winds, and accessible at all seasons of the year. Last Winter was the severest Season ever known in America, yet at this Place I was informed by Mr. Bliss and Grant, (two half pay Officers) who remained here with their Familys, that they never saw any ice in the Harbour. This is an advantage that cannot be estimated. I have reconnoitred the adjacent Country, which at present is an immense Forest, with the greatest care and attention. It exceeds any part of New England that I am acquainted with. After leaving the Sea Coast for two or three Miles, you open a Country free from Stones and covered with very fine Wood. You meet with a great variety of Trees in this Place, but the White, and Yellow Pine, Rock Maple, Black, Yellow, and White Birch, Spruce, Fir, Ash, and Elm, are the principal Trees, that will make Lumber for exportation. Of these we have an inexhaustible Fund. Our situation is equally eligible for carrying on the Fishery; as a convincing proof of this, there is at this time not less than Twenty Sail of Fishermen in this Bay, industriously employed in catching Fish, from New England.

The inclosed Letter from my Friend Mr. Pagan, at St. Andrews, will make you farther acquainted with the Advantages of our Bay.

I am so much engaged, that I cannot at present, be more particular, but expect to hear again from me.

Adieu, and believe me,

Your sincere Friend,

William Paine.†

*This island is now called Calef's or Frye's Island. Its situation was greatly admired by Colonel Robert Morse, who speaks in the warmest terms of the adjoining harbor of L'Etang. It is indeed a fine harbor, though the anticipated town has not yet been built in that locality. The letters that follow in these pages were designed to support the efforts of those who were at this time working for the division of the old province of Nova Scotia and the formation of a new province on the north side of the Bay of Fundy.

†Doctor William Paine of Worcester, Mass., is here referred to. A short biography of him will be found in the Collections of the N. B. Historical Society, vol. 1, p. 273. He was the first clerk of the house of assembly, and was energetic in the promotion of education. As early as 1785 he was a prime mover in the establishment of a provincial academy. He settled at Le Tete (or Calef's) Island, the situation of which he deemed so admirable that he expressed his conviction that it would ultimately become the principal port in British North America. It is said that at a dinner party given by Dr. Paine in Worcester shortly before the Revolution, some of the Whigs refused to drink the King's

Halifax 27th April, 1784.

Dear Sir,—Hearing from our worthy Friend Col. Winslow that You are in England, and that 'tis suggested a New Government is likely to be formed on the River St. John's, of which you will probably become an Inhabitant, I think it but candid and friendly to inform you, that You may acquaint Br. Gen. Fox, whom I hear is to be appointed Governor of it, that there is a Commerce commencing from thence with the West Indias. That thay have actually loaded six large vessels with inch Boards, White Oak Staves, Hoop poles, &c., for the West Indias. And Several Capital Merchants of this province have lately expressed to me their readiness and Wishes to contract to supply all the West India Islands with Lumber for Twenty Years to come. Much Publick Benefit & National Advantage may be reasonably hoped from an Encrease of such a Communication, if a proper encouragement is given to the Inhabitants of His Majesty's remaining Colonies, and a wise restriction laid on the Commerce from the American States to the Islands. Notwithstanding the immense demand of the New Settlers on the St. John's, the Boards shipped in the above mentioned, was purchased there for thirty, & five and Thirty Shillings a Thousand. Enquire for Mr John Maclellan at the New York Coffee House for further Information on this Subject.

I have only time to request You to present my Compliments to all our Friends with You & to assure You that I am, with much Esteem & Regard,

D'r. Sir, Your most Obed't Servant,

Edm'd. Fanning.

Col. Beverly Robinson to Edward Winslow.

Mortlake (in Surrey) Apr. 29th, 1784.

Dear Sir,—I wrote you the 19th Instant inclosing some Letters & Newspapers for Beverly.* I also wrote you the same day by Mr. Goodall, recommending him to your notice as a friend of mine; he is a Merchant in London & is gone to Canada to settle some matters there & will visit Halifax about Aug't next when he will deliver you my Letter.

I now again take the liberty of troubling you with the inclosed letters health until John Adams advised them to comply, saying we shall be able to return the compliment. Accordingly, Adams, when asked to propose a toast, gave "the Devil." Doctor Paine was very indignant, but his wife with ready wit turned the laugh on John Adams by saying, "My dear, as the gentleman has been so kind as to drink the health of the King, let us by no means refuse to drink to his friend." After a few years' residence in New Brunswick, Dr. Paine returned to Massachusetts, where he died in 1833, in his 84th year.

for my boys, and beg you will be so good as to forward them. The large package, marked newspapers, you are welcome to open & peruse if you have none by any other Channel so late. What can I say to you about Politics? I can say nothing but what you will see in the papers, and therefore must refer you to them, and they contain nothing but about Elections. The Election for Westminster has now been warmly contested for 25 days. Lord Hood carrys it hollow, but the Struggle is very hard between Mr. Fox & Sir Cecil Wray: for the first two or three days Fox was ahead, the next 12 or 14 Sir Cecil lead, for a week past Fox got ahead again & was yesterday 41 before the Knight, and most people think he will carry it, mearly by Industry and Good Management; at any rate there will be a Scrutiny demanded let who will be foremost at the close of the poll, & that they tell me will take up six months, and in that case none of the three will sit in Parliament the next Session. The members of the last Opposition have lost their Elections almost everywhere, and it is thought Mr. Pitt will have a great majority. I hope he will not take Lord S[helburn]e into the ministry which has been talked of for some time.

The Affairs of the Loyalists* goes on but slowly; these troublesome Elections have taken up the time & attention of the Commissioners for some time but they are going on again: they seem to take great pains and pay attention to our unhappy situation, but they have a troublesome and difficult task to go thro'. Many very Extraordinary Claims are given in, such as you would be astonished to see. I have not had my hearing yet & don't expect it in less than two months, so many there are before me; but what appears very extra'y to me they will not enter upon Examination of any Claims given by Attorneys, but say every person who makes any demand on Government must apply in person. However they rec'd the claims into their office in order to keep them alive, that they may not be totally excluded according to the Act of Parliament, and the matter of hearing them by the Attorneys will be determined hereafter, which they certainly must do, there are so many claims given in by Attorneys that it would be a very unjust thing to throw them out unless the principal came here. As the matter is like to be so very tedious, the Commiss'rs have recommended, I believe, most that have applyed for a temporary support from £40 to £200 a year, which is the highest they can go. I have been under the necessity of asking for such a support and they have allowed me £200 a year commencing ye 5th of Jan'y last in addition to my half pay, which makes me nearly full pay.

I have the pleasure to tell you we are all hearty and well and join in Major Barclay to Edward Winslow.

Wilmot, 30th April, 1784.

My dear Winslow,—I have the pleasure to assure you, your dear Mary and Children are well; on my return home, I waited on her to know if she had any commands, but she had already sent them to Captain Thompson who will deliver them.

The Chief Justice, I fancy, has found most of the complaints at St. John's frivolous, and many groundless. The only one he attends to is the extent of the Water Lots. He by no means pretends to dictate and carries himself much better than I imagined he would. His wish is to reconcile parties; an impossibility, and in the pursuit of which he will displease both.

The death of Mr. Hughes (Sam Hughes) the Evening of our arrival, gave me immediate possession of my office (Collector of Excise at St. John's.) From his papers, no knowledge of the Business of the Office can be obtained. Will you be so good as to make yourself Master of it, by applying at the Office, and send me a detail, as circumstantial as possible. The worthy Col. Goold* will afford you every assistance. I wish my return to this place may not be mentioned untill the Chief† arrives by whom I shall write most particularly. I have made Col. Tyng my deputy untill my return, which totally must depend on a Letter from you. Mary told me the contents of your last letter. Should that wished for event take place, I shall move bag & baggage immediately; without which the world would not induce me to reside there. If an immediate Government is not established at St. John's, every species of disorder and confusion will ensue. The Justices, unexceptionable as their Characters are, do not command sufficient respect, and superior Courts are so remote, they laugh at the Idea of a citation from them. Pray write me by the first conveyance, and on what ground your hopes of seeing General Fox stand. I am so unwell with a head Ache, I write this in bed. Believe me dear Winslow,

With the sincerest Affection

Ever Yours,

Tho. Barclay.

P. S. When will the Brandywine come round.

May, 1784.

Dr. John,—I may have led you into a scrape, but terminate how it will my intentions were good.

General Campbell has discovered that the most infamous frauds have been committed and the most scandalous impositions attempted in the Returns for Rations from the Disbanded Corps & Loyalists, and he has determined to put an end to those abuses if possible, and as the readiest way to effect a reformation he has ordered that all the Corps and Classes shall be immediately mustered, and he has appointed very respectable gentlemen to superintend the business and assigned to every one his district. He has given them ample powers and furnished them with particular instructions.

He desired me to name a man to perform the duty in the district of Annapolis and I have taken the liberty of mentioning your name. As it is that kind of an appointment which cannot interfere with your half-pay, and as it is really confidential and important, I flatter myself you will have no objection to accept it. The allowance will be 10s. a day while on duty. My advice to you is that you proceed immediately to Annapolis and have a consultation with Mr. Williams† and the Officer commanding, to whom you will communicate your Instructions; that you divide your district into four or five tracts and after fixing your route, publish your advertizements in succession.

I shall inclose you a number of memorandum books which you will use for the different classes and after having collected the several Lists you will consolidate 'em into one general Return. Your instructions will point out the intention of the appointment. By them you will see that the General's principal wish is to obtain an accurate account of the number and description of persons who have settled in the different districts and I am sure you will be able to give it. You cannot be too minute. You will have it in your power to do justice, &c, our new Settlement a visit. You will find us in a state of infancy, but when it is considered that there was not a single house erected till last October, you will not think light of our exertions.

We have now about Ninety Houses up, and great preparations making in every quarter of the Town for more. Numbers of Inhabitants are daily arriving and a great many others are hourly looked for from different quarters. Agents are now here from the neighboring States on the look out for Lands for a number of valuable Inhabitants who wish to emigrate here being tired of their new Government.

I have not been in your part of the Bay, but from information the Lands are Good. I early this Spring made one of an Exploring Party. We went all round Oak Point Bay, and up Scudock* River as far as the Indian Settlement a little above the Falls. These are part of the Lands laid out for the Associated Loyalists from Penobscot, and I can with pleasure assure you that the Land in general is very good, abounding with large Quantitys of hard wood, all kinds of Pine Timber of a large growth and very handy to the water where most vessels can safely anchor. There are a number of Falls of water where Saw Mills can be erected, but only two on Scuddock yet up. The Mill Privilidges on Oak Point Bay have been lately sold to defray the charges of the Town, the purchasers are making preparations to erect Saw Mills. The Timber is very handy to the Mills and no end to the quantity.

There is a large growth of White Pine fit for Masts & Spars of any dimensions. In fact from my own observation and from the information I have had from undoubted authority I am fully convinced that the Grand Bay of Passamaquoddy alone can supply the whole British West India Islands with Boards, Plank, Scantling, Ranging Timber, Shingles, Clap Boards and every species of Lumber that can be shipped from any part of New England, oak staves excepted. Masts, spars and square timber, suitable for the British Market, can be furnished to any extent from here, and nothing prevents all these articles from being now furnished in the greatest abundance, of the best quality and on at least equal terms with any other part of the Continent, but the want of Inhabitants and Saw Mills, in both which we have the most promising prospect of cutting a very respectable figure in the course of this year.

The [easy] navigation to this Town exceeds any I have seen; no person of any observation will want a Pilot after being once up, and we are accessible at all seasons of the year.

The Fishery in this Bay you are no doubt sufficiently informed as to the great extent it can be carried on.

Excuse the liberty I have taken in giving my opinion of our new Settlement. I know you are interested in its prosperity and will be pleased with the accounts I have given, espetially when I assure you that I am not governed by my own opinion alone, but also by the opinion of every person who has taken any pains to explore this part of the country.

Should your time not permit you to pay us a visit now, I am in hopes to have the pleasure of meeting you at St Johns where I shall set out in a few days on my way to Halifax.

I am dear Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

Will. Pagan.

Fort Howe the 3 May, 1784.

Dear Sir,—I rec'd your favour 20th April; am very happy to find that General Fox will be Placed at the head of a new government on this Side of the Bay. I hope it will be very soon.

Every information will be collected with Respect to Lumber &c., for the West Indies by your Friends at this Place & forwarded to England to Prevent the navigation act from being Repealed. I have not the Least Doubt but there will be sufficient of Every kind after this year if there is proper encouragement.

I am Dear Sir,

John Coffin to Edward Winslow.

Carleton, 5th May, 1784.

My dear Ned,—I have received your letter of the 20th Ap-l, the one from Upham did not attend it as mentioned, but I can easily form an opinion of its contents. Every thing in my power shall be done. I cannot boast of many friends in power at home, but old Sir Guy shall have an address from this Town with as handsome an invitation as we are capable of penning. And as to the Act mentioned I cannot suppose our friends at home ever will suffer it to be repealed; it's an absolute fact that we can supply the West Indies with what Lumber and fish they can consume, excepting staves which are to be got from Canada in great abundance. The prospect of our becoming a separate Government has elated me to that degree as to render me totally unfit for any kind of business. By the day our letters and papers are ready for England a vessel will sail from hence for Europe. Mr. Campbell has informed me he has some direction about your Father's place. I wish he had been a little more explicit in his directions to me. One Merritt is at present on the place and will leave the buildings that he has erected for fourteen guineas. It's a great price for them, as they will only serve for out houses, and not for any length of time. But the Refugee that drew the lot had agreed to give that sum, so I don't know how the old Gentleman can be off. As the season is now advancing very fast, and as there is about ten acres of Land clear, I have concluded to hire a man to plant by the halves and quit the place in the fall. During this time a house can be erected and made comfortable for him and the old Lady against the winter should he chuse to reside there at that season. Give my best love to him and the old Lady with the Girls. Request him to write me fully what he would have done together with the size of the house and, as I mentioned to him before, my attention and utmost exertions shall not be wanting to make him happy. * * *

My business is settled with Mr. Hecht,* and I have no doubt it will appear as I have represented it. I have been with Mr. Finucane and understand your lot and Murray's are taken from you in part. If I dare give you a detail of his conduct I would, but what I have already wrote about matters here to your quarter has taken such a turn that I dare not at present say anything. The time I hope is not far distant when I expect to see every thing undone and Mr. Hardy thrown neck & heels, with his party, into the River. Its infamous and disgraceful to a degree.

Pray my Dear Ned see if you can't hear of some letter from Nath. [Coffin] † for me. * * *

Our good friend Thomas has left us ere this. I should have wrote him a very long letter but was up at the farm. Pray make our most affectionate regards to him should he be with you, which I much doubt. I shall write him fully by the vessel that sails soon from hence.

With our most sincere love to the old Gentleman, Lady & Girls, We are forever, Yours, John Coffin.

P. S. Return our sincere thanks to Mrs. Cotnam for her kind remembrance of us.

Major Studholme to Edward Winslow.

Parr Town, 9th May, 1784.

Dear Sir,—Being absent when the Lands of Conway were drawn for, Mr. Street* forgot a memorandum of reserve I left in the office respecting the part of those lands joining Glazier Manor,† which were directed to be reserved for your Family, and the bearer Mr. Dalzel has drawn those lands, and as he is a very good and useful man I have recommended him for a Grant some where else and shall thank you for your assistance in procuring it for him. I beg you will excuse this trouble and attribute this mistake to its true cause and not to any neglect or inattention of mine. The impatience of the bearer leaves me only time to congratulate you on the late good news we have had from England and to assure you that I am with true esteem,

Dear Sir,

Your obliged and obed't Humb'l Serv't.

G. Studholme.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 12th May, 1784.

My dear Fellow,—The inclosures are this instant received from St. John's. I forward 'em because they will give you the best idea of the present State of matters here.— The operations of the Chief-Justice have terminated exactly as we expected—the hauteur and parade which distinguished him had not the intended effect—such men as our old friends Hewlet, Deveber, Coffin, Leonard, Tyng, &c., are not easily dazzled by such superficial nonsense, and they have treated him with perfect contempt I have endeavored to soothe these men by repeated assurances, that a Government will be immediately established there, & I verily believe that unless that event takes place immediately, that Country will exhibit such scenes of desperation & distress as were never before read of.

*Samuel Denny Street, here referred to, was an Englishman by birth and a lawyer by profession. He was gazetted a lieutenant in the Royal Fencible Americans, and rendered important services during the Revolution. At the close of the war he was at Fort Howe with Major Gilfred Studholme, and assisted in the settlement of the Loyalists on the River St. John. He took up a grant of land in Sunbury County, near the Oromocto River, which he named the "Elysian Fields." He represented Sunbury County for some years in the house of assembly. His son, George Frederick Street, became a judge of the supreme court, and another son, Hon. Ambrose Street, was a prominent legislator and attorney general. The Rev. Samuel Denny Lee Street, for 41 years rector of Woodstock, N. B., was his youngest child. He died at Burton in 1830, in his 79th year, having outlived every member of the first council of the province, as well as every member of the first bench and bar.

†Glasier's Manor was, in the first instance, granted to Lieut. Col. Beamsley Perkins Glasier of the 4th battalion of the 60th, or Royal American, Regiment, on Oct. 15, 1765. He sold it to General Coffin. The manor included about 5,000 acres, lying on both sides of the Nerepis river.

I do not write to any other person, there is no passenger going in the Camel to whose care I can commit my budget, I therefore address to Mr. Watson.

I cannot help indulging the hope that General Fox is by this time preparing to come out—He cannot realize how important it is to be expeditious in this business. My anxiety increases every hour.

What in the world are you about?—not a packet arrived—a General without Commission or Instructions—37,000 people crying for provisions —Magazines empty—& no provisions at Market. That's the situation of the Country at present. Add to this a Governor without abilities—a Council of Republicans—combating with every weapon in their reach the whole corps of Loyalists, & embarrassing them by every possible impediment.

This is a pretty picture, but alas it is a true one.

I hope before this reaches you, you will have embraced our friend Coffin. I miss him terribly. God forever bless him.

I really feel too dull—to attempt writing anything for your amusehent. I am extremely agitated and shall continue so until I hear from you. Write for Heaven's sake.

All your connections here & at Granville are well.

Adieu,

Affectionately,

Your Ed. Winslow.

Major John Coffin to Edward Winslow.

Carleton, May 15, 1784.

My dear Ned,—Some days past I wrote you a long letter to which no answer as yet has arrived. The refugee that drew the lot your father has got, left Town a few days past for Halifax in high Dugeon about its being granted away. * * *

Would to God, General Fox was arrived as we should then recover from our present confusion. I gave you a sufficient hint how matters were going on in my last. I need not inform you that your lot with Upham's, Murray's and many others are given away, as I know you are informed of it—one of the Damdest Rascals of the set has received yours and I am informed a grant is to be given to him immediately. After the fatigue and trouble Studholme has been at for the settlement, to have this Chief with Brother Toady,* lay violent hands on everything and condemn every body he thinks proper and derange all our affairs without a candid hearing is too much. However Studholme I trust has both spirit and ability to rectify matters, if you and your General do not relieve us before that should take place. At present I am on very good terms with the Chief: do not let what I have said on this subject take air, other ways the Governor, together with yourself may probably conceive I am going to raise another insurrection on the River. (I have you there my boy.)

Our memorials are going forward with all the expedition we are masters of. I have heard that Mr. Hardy† is forming a party against it, and have no doubt will throw everything in its way. He is I assure you a very troublesome fellow, but I hope we shall soon unhorse the Dog. My best love to your father, mother & sisters, also to Mrs. Winslow when you write her, I wrote some little time past but have had no answer, hope she's well. God Bless you my dear fellow and am

Truly yours,

John Coffin.

Representation of the Inhabitants of St. Andrews.

St. Andrews, 26 May, 1784.

Gentlemen,—We had the honour to receive your favor of the 18th current with the inclosures and have laid them before the Inhabitants of this town at a Meeting called for the purpose of considering the same.

We have the Pleasure to acquaint you that the Meeting were unanimous in the opinion of the inconveniency and disadvantages arising to the Inhabitants on the North side of the Bay of Funday by the distance from Halifax, the present seat of Government, and sensible of the great advantages which would attend the Establishment of a New Province to comprehend all the settlements on the North Side of the Bay, and they

*The reference is to Bryan Finucane, chief justice of Nova Scotia, and his brother, Andrew Finucane.

†Elias Hardy was born at Farnham, in Surrey, England, in 1744, and was admitted attorney and solicitor at Westminster Hall. He came to America, and in 1783 was in law practice at New York. He was an active opponent of the designs of the "Fifty-five" petitioners who strove to obtain grants of 5,000 acres each in Nova Scotia, in consideration of their services to the Crown. He was employed by the government of Nova Scotia to promote the escheat of unsettled lands for the accommodation of the Loyalists. He became to some extent a leader of the democracy, and gained in consequence the ill-will of the provincial officials. He was chosen a member of the New Brunswick house of assembly for the County of Northumberland at the first election. As a lawyer, tradition says that Elias Hardy was well nigh without a peer. He and Ward Chipman were usually opposed to one another in important cases. Hardy was an active Free Mason. He died in St. John in 1798, at the comparatively early age of 54 years.

earnestly wish that the application for that purpose, which appears to be the general voice of the Inhabitants, may be attended to by the British Legislature.

We have likewise the satisfaction to acquaint you that in the Grand Bay of Passamaquoddy alone a sufficient Quantity of Board and other Lumber can in a short time be furnished to supply the greatest part of the British West India Islands: likewise large quantitys of masts, spars & other Lumber suitable for the European Market. Altho' the first of our Settlers only arrived here in October last, yet we have already sent a number of Cargoes of Lumber to the West Indies and several ports in Nova Scotia, and as more Saw Mills are now erecting our Exports of Lumber will rapidly increase.

There being no doubt that the Province of Nova Scotia & Canada can amply supply the British and West India Markets with all the kinds of Lumber generally exported from North America, all our Inhabitants earnestly wish that the British Legislature may in their wisdom think proper to continue to these provinces the exclusive priviledges of supplying the British West Indies with Fish and Lumber, and also grant to them Bountys on the Exportation of those articles, which will greatly add to the encouragement of our Trade and Fishery.

We have wrote you thus fully at the unanimous desire of the Inhabitants of St. Andrews at their Meeting this day, Cornwallis, 28th May, 1784.

Sir,—I have long since wanted to communicate to you my Friend, sentiments you may think salutary (perhaps otherwise), that a sufficient number of Issuing Commissaries should be appointed and paid by Government to distribute to the disbanded Officers and Soldiers under the denomination of Refugees settled in this province, to give out provisions agreeable to Order or discretionary, which will in all probability not only forward the settlements but answer every purpose of the King's Bounty. I have been well informed that at St. John's River numbers have sold their six months provisions for a trifling sum, as well other places, consequently must become persons of Charity or addicted to bad courses injurious to the public at large and not answer the intention of Government.

Any business you may have this way command me who has the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,

Thos. Brown.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

London, 6th June, 1784.

My dear Winslow,—I have just now received yours of 12th May with the inclosures, by the Camel, and am seriously, most seriously distressed at the description you give of the situation of matters on the St. John's, the more so as there are such unaccountable delays in compleating the arrangements for the new Government.* Everything is at a stand here. Whether administration have yet any doubts of the expediency of a separate Government there or whether they must have the sanction of Parliament before the matter is divulged I know not, but alas from these delays another year will be lost and from your letters I fear the most fatal consequences to the settlements from such a circumstance.

I will communicate all your intelligence in such channels as will most probably have a good effect to expedite our views and wishes, but indeed such is the situation of things here, so undecided and indeterminate the conduct of ministers that you can depend upon nothing; so important however to this nation is the object now in contemplation that it is not to be supposed but that it will finally be adopted.

Gen'l Fox went out of Town a week ago, he had been there three weeks during all which time not a syllable was said to him respecting the new Government by the Minister. He will come to Town again tomorrow when I will have free communication with him and let you know the result if possible by this opportunity.

Some time ago I made a specific application to the Secretary of State for the Office of Attorney General in the new Gov't. I was told those offices (meaning I suppose of Att'y & Solic'r Gen'l) were already disposed of to Persons taken from the same line—from this I imagine Blowers, thro' the interest of Sir Wm. Pepperell, is appointed Att'y Gen'l,† but I understand Blowers will not quit Halifax, in which case Sir Wm. promises to use all his influence and interest to get the appointment transferred to me. This or something else I must obtain immediately, my stock is nearly exhausted, and I have totally failed in all my pursuits and prospects in coming to England, most heartily regret that I did not go immediately to Halifax from New York. Of all countries in the world this is the worst to be in without a great deal of money and even then has not half the rational social enjoyments and pleasures that our own Country affords, or rather of an American Society such as we have been used to. I am greatly relieved by Coffin's* arrival. We take lodgings together tomorrow, and I shall of course make myself tolerably happy till I embark which God grant I may speedily do. * * *

Murray and Upham are in Wales at Col. Murray's,† but are expected soon in Town—the former I believe has not been successful in any of his applications here, what they were I know not. He is very much embarrassed and distressed poor Fellow, and what he will do to extricate himself I know not.

Judge and Col. Ludlow have taken advantage of this interval of delay in the arrangements for our new Country to make an excursion to see the manufacturing Towns, &c. I am however to summon them immediately back if anything requires their attendance. I will now close this to save the opportunity by Col. Brownlow if possible. If he does not go I will write you again tomorrow. Adieu. God bless you forever prays your faithful and devoted,

Chip.

*Thomas Aston Coffin, a native of Boston. He was a warm personal friend of Ward Chipman and of Edward Winslow. The latter named his second son Thomas Aston Coffin after his friend and comrade. Thos. A. Coffin graduated at Harvard in 1772. He was private secretary to Sir Guy Carleton. In 1783 he was at Halifax as paymaster of army contingencies. He visited England and returned soon afterwards to Halifax. He was afterwards with Sir Guy Carleton at Quebec. Here he filled the positions of secretary of the province and comptroller of accounts. Returning to England, he was knighted and became a baronet. He was influential and wealthy. See Winslow's references to him under date 7th June, 1806, and Chipman's reference under date 20th May, 1810. He died in London in 1810, at the age of fifty-six.

†Colonel John Murray of Rutland, Massachusetts, is here meant. He was at this time living in England. He was quite a remarkable personage. In height about 6 feet 3 inches, well proportioned and of fine appearance. His portrait by Copley is now in possession of J. Douglas Hazen of St. John. He was four times married and had a very large family of children. His estate, abandoned in the old colonies and confiscated by the Americans, was valued at £23,367. He came to New Brunswick, where he died in the year 1794. Two of his daughters married respectively Judge Upham and Hon. Daniel Bliss. His son, Daniel Murray (who with Joshua Upham is mentioned in the letter above), came to New Brunswick in command of the King's American Dragoons: he was one of the members for York County in the first house of assembly.

Major John Coffin to Edward Winslow.

Carleton, June 1784.

My dear Ned,—This is my third or fourth letter. There have been many direct opportunities to this place but not a line from you or your Father. My House has been vacant these ten days for his family.

* * * The sight of his place just now would increase his health & spirits to that Degree as to enable him to take hold of the plough. Mr. Hazen who delivers you this will inform the old Gentleman particularly. He brought trout caught at the Landing weighing two pounds and more. Salmon he will have in the greatest abundance.

We have all exerted ourselves to the utmost in forming and forwarding the letters and memorials to our good and worthy friends. Why don't you give me assurance of our new Government's being fixed, you are not explicit enough on that head. * * * Our Town (Carleton) are in raptures with the plan and bore me to death for news. You must know my good fellow that I am of some little consequence among the vagabonds. No people in the world could have behaved better than they have during the late disturbance which I hope will induce our new Governor, God Bless him, to reside with them. I know your partiality for that side of the water, apropos—prepare your Father & Family for the house they are to come into when they get here. * * * My best love to the Girls, your Mother and the old Gentleman with all other friends. Pray has Aplin led himself or me into a scrape?* Write me fully my dear friend on that head. Dr. Payne can inform you fully of the circumstances of my conduct. Compliments to all friends. God Bless you,

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

16th June, 1784.

My dear fellow,—When I began my letter of the 9th inst my good old Father was very ill. The inclosed paragraph will convey to you the melancholy tidings of his death,† but my distress & that of the Family cannot be described. Chipman! What shall I do?

Excuse me to my friends, Coffin, Mr. Watson & every body. I cannot write. I thought I could bear anything—but by Heaven this is too much.

Adieu my best of Friends,

Yours ever,

Ed. Winslow.

*Joseph Aplin had made some strong accusations against the Nova Scotia officials, charging them with neglect and partiality in their conduct towards the Loyalists. He associated Col. Coffin with himself in the matter. The latter did not appreciate Aplin's action, and would not assume responsibility for his utterances.

Whereas in a Protest published in the Publick News Papers of the 8th June, 1784, at Halifax, it is suggested, That the plan of forming a new Government on the River St. Johns was made by a small Number of the Inhabitants of Parr-town not duly authorized for the Purpose—That they refused to take the Sense of a very numerous Body of the Inhabitants—and That they obtained signatures fraudulently & without acquainting the Subscribers of the nature of the Business. We beg leave to inform you that from our general Acquaintance with the Inhabitants at Parrtown on the River St. Johns, & at Passamaquoddy, we look upon ourselves as competent Judges of the Sentiments of the body of the People, and We are convinced that there is no Person of any consideration or consequence on the River St. Johns or at Passamaquoddy who is not perfectly satisfied of the absolute necessity of forming a new Government on the other Side of the Bay of Fundy, as the very existence of the Settlements there depends upon it.

And We beg further to assure you that we know the Inhabitants of that District of Country in general to be highly pleased with the Steps taken by you and your Friends towards the attainment of so desirable an object, from a full conviction that you have in every instance studied the Publick Welfare of the Settlements there and been unwearied in your endeavors to serve them. We further know the Address mentioned in the said Protest to have been dictated agreeable to the general Sense of the Inhabitants of Parr-town on the River St. Johns, and at Passamaquoddy, that the Officers present represented the Corps which they formerly commanded, and that it was signed by upwards of one thousand respectable persons who were fully acquainted with its Nature and Contents.

In behalf of the Settlers on the River St. Johns and at Passamaquoddy we request you to accept our sincere thanks for your spirited exertions in our behalf. And we hope that the triffling opposition of a few obscure,

Thomas Knox to Major Gen. Campbell.

Fort Howe, River St. John, 24th June, 1784.

Sir,—The late arrival of a number of Families from the American States, who profess an intention of settling in this part of the Province and most of whom produce certificates of Loyalty to the King, has brought upon me many applications for the Royal Bounty of Provisions which I could wish to have evaded until I receive your orders concerning them. But upon a Representation of their extreme indigence and a strict inquiry into the merits of their claims I have been induced, as a temporary relief to their necessities, to give my certificates on the Commissary for fourteen days Provisions in favor of 69 men, 18 women, 21 children about ten, 16 children under ten—named in the Returns accompanying them. They have been mustered by me in separate classes, and I have given directions to the Persons commanding them to detain the Provisions in their own hands until a certificate is produced from each family according to a form which I have given them (a copy of which I inclose) and to account with me for the whole quantity when I return from the River. I shall then have more leisure to enquire into their claims individually.

I also take the liberty to interfere in behalf of Children who have been born since the arrival of the Loyalists in this Province. Their numbers are few and the necessities of the new Settlers require every aid—I have included them in my Returns to the Commissary, who, I am informed has refused to allow them.

Having closed my Business at Parr & Carleton and the Settlements in the Neighborhood, I shall set off tomorrow for the River St. Johns. From the dispersed state of the People and the necessity of seeing every Individual it is not possible to say what time the duty on that River and its different Branches may require. I shall use every exertion to accomplish it in as short a time as the nature of the business will allow.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

T. Knox.

Major Gen'l Campbell.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 8th July, 1784.

My dear Sir,—The inclosed letters came in the Resource—8 weeks & 5 days from Spithead. I can learn nothing of public arrangements; probably none were completed for this Province, Neither will much be done untill late in June. Mr. Fox has carried his election for Westminster. A passenger, last from London, says, it was reported that Changes were still expected, and a junction of partys in contemplation.

Sir Charles Douglas's voyage to Quebec, begins to be very doubtful. I shall embark on board the Bonetta for St. Johns river, on Sunday next, wind & weather permitting.

Forrest arrived to day from New London; Mr. Wilkins & 20 in family arrived yesterday. A Ship with many refugees arrived from Florida. No other news.

As to public business here—I fear it progresses from bad to worse. Every succeeding day, furnishes new cause of astonishment to me—of complaint and resentment to others. I cordially wish the arrangement for St. Johns was effected, and that district in possession of the good Government we wish, for their sakes. In truth I have enthusiasm eno' to forsee that Province rescuing the honor of Gov't from Prostration—and flourishing thro', or by means of, a well directed administration.

Your Kitchen Furniture is arrived, it was packed in two cases, for the convenience of travelling; I hope it is as good as I ordered, and will meet your approbation. It is sent to your House in this town.

Your sincere affect. Friend;

J. Wentworth.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

London, 9th July, 1784.

My dear Ned,—I intended to have devoted this forenoon to writing to you but have been interrupted so frequently that I am now confined to half an hour. Coffin, however, who is in the same lodgings with me, has been writing to Mr. Townsend, and between us both you will get what intelligence there is to communicate. I shall confine myself to one subject, the only one which has taken up my attention for a long time, as it so materially effects us both, I need not say it is the new Government on the River St. Johns. We were all very much disappointed in Col. Fox's refusal of the Government—his reason was that he found a Governor General was to be appointed, tho' not immediately, and that Sir Guy Carleton, was not going out, he would not therefore risque there being appointed a General Vaughan or any other officer under whom he would not serve, which would create a necessity of his resigning perhaps within a very short time of his going out. He therefore told Lord Sidney he would accept the office if Sir Guy was to be appointed Governor General, otherwise not. The Government was then offered to your Friend Col. Musgrave, who declined it assigning the same reason and making the same declaration to the Secretary of State.

Col. Carleton, Sir Guy's brother, is at length appointed and has accepted. The arrangements so far as they are known are, Judge Ludlow Chief Justice. Col. Putnam* Major Upham, and Lt. Col. Isaac Allen, Judges on the same bench: Jonathan Bliss, Attorney General, and Sir Guy told Mr. Watson that I was put down as Solicitor Gen'l. Had either Fox or Musgrave accepted the Government, you would have been the Secretary with the concomitant offices. But Mr. Odell has this appointment under Col. Carleton. I am at a loss indeed to determine whether it would have been prudent for you to resign your half pay, as you must have done, for the emoluments of that office. You I understand are one of the Council. I am now to tell you a secret not by any means to be again mentioned, which I have in confidence from Mr. Watson this morning, with permission to mention it to you only, in a very private letter. Col. Carleton's is but a temporary appointment, he goes on Governor to Quebec and will take Mr. Odell with him, both Sir Guy and Mr. Watson say that Col. Fox will yet succeed him as Gov'r of New Brunswick,† (the name of our new Province) from which I conjecture, I think with great reason, that Sir Guy is still to be the Governor General. Sir Guy and Mr. Watson have concluded upon your appointment as Secretary in that case, if worth your acceptance, which will be in some degree ascertained by Odell's experiment of it. The place was unsolicited by Odell, but you may easily conceive that Sir Guy felt himself obliged to provide for him‡ and there was no other way of doing it. I believe Judge Sewell will be one of the Council. I confess for myself I am not a little disappointed with respect to the office of Att'y General, tho' Bliss is certainly a very good Fellow, but as he was receiving a pension of £150 per ann. this is saved to Government by appointing him—there will be no salary to the Solicitor General, at least none that will be equivalent to my half pay. I shall therefore depend upon my practice for support.

*James Putnam of Worcester, Massachusetts. He was a graduate of Harvard in 1746. He was banished and proscribed on account of his loyalty. He was considered by his contemporaries as an exceedingly able lawyer. John Adams was his law student and boarded in his family. He died at St. John in 1789, aged 64 years. There is a handsome monument over his last resting place in the old grave yard. In the Putnam vault are buried also the elder Jonathan Sewell and the Rev. George Bisset.

†This plan evidently was seriously contemplated, but was never carried into execution.

Col. Carleton kisses the King's hand this day on his appointment, and I should suppose the whole arrangements will be out in a few days and that we shall all be hurried off very suddenly. Col. Ludlow talks of taking passage in the Adamant, which sails the 1st Aug't. It is not improbable that I shall accompany him. Tell Mr. Townsend I shall in that case certainly avail myself of his very friendly offer of Quarters for a few days. I have failed altogether in my expectations from the Board of Claims, the business of which remains unnoticed to this moment. I have expended nearly all my money, and am heartily sick of this country. We shall at least have a good society and live chearfully in our new Government if we are poor. Won't my half-pay Agency pursuit come to something in time?

I am called upon for my letter. Remember me most particularly to your Father and the Girls, tell them they will now soon be delighted with my warbling some of the most improved airs. To your dear Mary and the little ones make my most affectionate remembrances, there is no circumstance about which I feel more anxious than seeing them, a pleasure which I hope will not be much longer delayed. I presume Murray will be on his passage very soon don't fail to send him. Coffin will take care of him in my absence. Adieu, God Almighty for ever bless you prays most sincerely,

Your friend,

Chip.

Thomas Knox to Edward Winslow.

St. Anns, 25th July, 1784.

D'r Colonel,—You can't condemn me so much as I do myself for not having wrote to you before. I have been engaged it is true, but I had predetermined not to let any engagements prevent my acknowledging the civilities I received from Mrs. Winslow; the truth is I expected from daily Reports to have seen you on this side the Bay.

I am proceeding by slow stages thro' my present journey, God knows when I shall get thro', I meet with difficulties as unwelcome as they are unexpected. I have finished I hope at Saint Ann's the Settlements above and the Naashwaake. The impossibility of assembling the Corps at any particular place, which would be attended with so much inconvenience to the Families of Women and Children, and their importunities so great to be seen at their own Houses, that I have been obliged to consent to take account of them wherever I met them. This has induced delay and will prevent my return as soon as I hoped.

I have received from Capt. Ovens, late commanding officer at Fort Howe, and Capt. Balfour the present, every assistance. Capt. Balfour was good enough to order me the Boat, without which I should have been put to great difficulties in coming up the River. The business will now I hope be done effectually; every man will have justice done him and at the same time I have reason to believe many thousand Rations will be saved to Government.

The officers of Disbanded Corps make great complaints against me for striking off nominal servants, which they say was an allowance made them by Sir Guy Carleton in his arrangements for settling this Province and afterwards by Major Provost when the Regiments were disbanded. As I am ignorant of any such allowance and consider the Rations of Provisions as promised only to Persons who settled in the Province, I have allowed only such as came under the description pointed out in my orders, and no servants but those who drew in their own right. * * * Notwithstanding all attention to prevent impositions I have no doubt many people will be fed by Government, who do not mean to settle in the Province, and many I believe have already left after having partaken of the Bounty. * * * * I would be glad to be informed by you whether I am to go to Passamaquoddy—it is reported that the people there have been mustered. I at the same time wish to know whether Merrimashee is considered in this District. If I go there I cannot expect to return in less than a month; at all events I must finish the business on this River before I think of it, and by that time I hope to hear from you.

I am sorry to find the Settlers on this side the Bay warmly engaged in opposing each other, to the great detriment of the Province as well as themselves. They go on building notwithstanding. Both Parr & Carleton exhibit proofs of industry scarcely to be related, but very few have got upon their Lands. I have been 40 miles above St. Anns but am sorry to say that few of the Soldiers have reached the Lotts laid out for them. They generally complain that they are neglected, and express a strong desire to have their Lotts pointed out to them, when they say they will immediately go upon them.

The Town of St. Anns is marked out but no house as yet makes its appearance.

A report has been lately circulated that Governor Fox has arrived at Halifax. It gave great pleasure to every body here. I wish it may soon take place as the Settlement of this River requires more and more the assistance of an able manager.

The Governor [Parr] condemns the measure of carrying the New Corps so high up the River, says the idea was born and bred at New York & carried into execution by their Agents. I have a copy of his letter to shew you.

I hope to leave this place tomorrow on my return to Parr. I have a number of People to see below Majorville which I hope will not delay me more than ten days.

I am, &c.,

T. Knox.

Colonel Winslow.

Gregory Townsend to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 29th July, 1784.

Dear Sir,—Your kind favor from the Mount,* of the 19th, found its way to me yesterday. The intelligence from home respecting your Government, being so uniform from every quarter, gives great reason to confide in the hope of seeing the separation take place to your wishes.

The Major† and his coadjutors have declared war against the G[overnor] & C[hief] J[ustice]; are to have a pitched battle tomorrow in the Council Chamber. Fanning is the Hero of your party, and as I think the cause he has engaged in is just, I most heartily wish success and redress may crown their laudable endeavors.

Poor Adam and Eve,‡ does Adam's anxiety lessen his Diameter. Your social friend the Major and some of the comforts from the Maria will afford great consolation. If Morris has not disposed of himself as you premise, he ought to be here in a few days. Solitary woods is the most dangerous situation that a man so far gone can place himself in. Where there is such a Damp on the spirits the poor Victim, among such a choice of Limbs, may be tempted to choose one to hang himself up to dry.

I fear your small stock of choice Madeira will suffer by your being so great an economist of your Port, keep some of that in case of sickness or other misfortune such as the visit of an old Commissary, &c., such things may happen. Make haste back, your family* here want much to see you. Mrs. Winslow will amuse herself with your little fat Tribe and readily forego the satisfaction of your company while you attend so amiable and necessary a duty. Where is New Ireland to be placed? is that to be the name of your new Government? I hope the new settlers will not encrease so fast but that we may have all the Posts† well supplied for the winter before Nov'r. What has yet arrived does not exceed 4 months and a half for our numbers. Not a word yet of Vessels from Cork. Two Vessels are gone to Quebec for another Cargo and two others it is said are yet expected. I think another year's full allowance, and half for next, would put the new settlers on their legs, at least all that deserve to stand.

*Winslow facetiously called his place in Granville "Mount Necessity."

I wish heartily to see the growth and prosperity of this Country. It will certainly be the happiest part of North America if not Dam'd by bad men & bad measures.

Daniel Bliss will call to see you with Dr. Prince and party. My respects to Mrs. Winslow. I want to know Mr. & Mrs. Williams and must come to Annapolis. My compliments to Hailes,‡ tell him I have tapped a pipe of Madeira better than the last—shall be happy to give him a taste.

Your faithfull Friend,

G. Townsend.

Thos. Aston Coffin to Edward Winslow.

London, 4th Aug't, 1784.

My dear Ned,—Mr. Watson has this moment informed me that a Paquet will sail tomorrow morning for Halifax, and has desired me to acquaint you that he had received your letters but thro' the hurry of business cannot write you at this time. He with me sympathizes with you in the loss of the good old Gentleman for whom he had obtained an allowance of £120 p. ann., and was fearful that with him it would have ceased. He however has obtained a promise that £30 stg. p. ann., each, shall be continued to your mother & sisters till the American claims are decided upon. This being unprecedented, as the whole family are on the other side of the Atlantic and no one of them having been examined here, Mr. W. begs it may not be communicated.

*Referring to his mother and sisters.

†Supplies were sent to various outlying posts, as, for example, St. Anne's Point, for distribution to the Loyalists.

‡Harris W. Hailes was fort major in 1784.

‖Captain Addenbrooke was aide-de-camp to the general commanding.

§Hugh Mackay Gordon was at this time major of brigade.

Colonel Carleton has received his Commission and taken the oaths and I suppose will leave this about the end of the month. Chip, Judge Ludlow, &c., will embark about the same time. Colonel Ludlow has taken passage in the St. Lawrence which sails in about a fortnight.

The Letters and Representations from your good Friend the Governor* and his virtuous Council will make no further impression. The business of the division of the Province having been settled before Mr. Andrew Finucane arrived; the official people here have other things to attend to than the Chief Justice's petty disputes. Besides Halliburton having arrived first, stated the whole business before the other one got to Town. * * *

Remember me to Blowers and family and all Friends. Adieu and God bless you says, Your affectionate Friend, Thos. Aston Coffin.

Edward Winslow to Jonathan Odell.

[August, 1784.]

D'r. Odell,—There is not a man on earth who more sincerely rejoices at any event that contributes to your advantage than myself. I therefore cordially congratulate you on your appointment to the Secretaryship of New Brunswick, and although I had anticipated the same appointment for myself and had made arrangements for the comfortable enjoyment of it, I declare I feel no regret that it has fallen to a friend for whom I have so great an esteem.

This is "multum in parvo."

Tired of the province of Nova-Scotia—its Governor—its inhabitants—&c, I had seriously determined to remove my family to St. John's this winter and had hired a house of Mr. Hazen for that purpose. I cannot relinquish the idea without very disagreeable sensations. But there is a bar, which need not be insuperable if my friends exert themselves. I am literally extremely poor. The two families which I have been obliged to support have involved me very considerably, and I depended on some appointment in the new province to assist me in their future support. I cannot help flattering myself that my friend Gen. Fox may have mentioned me to Col. Carleton in such a way as to make him my friend. Now as I cannot reconcile myself to a separation from the society of my old acquaintance I mean in great confidence to request of you, that in the first arrangements of civil employments I may be considered. There will be various offices in the gift of the Governor and Council—such as Provincial Registrar, Judge of Probate, &c., &c. These are offices which I formerly held in my own country and for which I boldly say I am qualified, and will dash across the Bay of Fundy the ins't an appointment by which I can exist is announced to me.

I acknowledge, and I'll take the credit for it, that I have other motives for wishing to be early at St. John's. I have with great pains explored the country, I have collected the most particular information respecting its inhabitants, soils, productions &c. My former appointments with the Provincial Army gave me an opportunity of knowing the principal characters among the officials now settled at St. John's.

All these circumstances give me a kind of knowledge which may render me useful there, more so than almost any other individual, and I am anxious to contribute everything in my power to forward the settlement of it. Having, as I observed, expected to be employed in the office which you now hold, I had formed a kind of system which I wish to communicate. [Breaks off here, the letter is a rough draft without signature.]

Brig. Gen. H. E. Fox to Edward Winslow.

Dear Winslow,—My only excuse for not writing to you sooner is that I did not know what to inform you of as determined. I will now begin from my last Letter, soon after the writing of which Lord Sydney sent to me & told me the Province [Nova Scotia] was to be divided and offered me the Government of New Brunswick. * * * It was then generally understood that Gov. Parr was to come home & Musgrave to be appointed Governor of Halifax & Col. Carleton of Canada. Gov. Parr's friends (I believe Lord Shelburne) have averted his being recalled.

About six weeks ago Lord Sydney sent for me again & acquainted me that the Government of N. Brunswick was arranged in Council and made me the offer of it, observing that Sir Guy Carleton was not to go out, that no Governor General was for the present to be appointed but in time some one would be found that would be agreeable to every body. I found also that Gov. Parr was not to be recalled nor Gen'l Haldimand from Canada. It is necessary to mention in the mean time I had found it absolutely necessary for my Nephew's affairs and my own for me to take out Letters of Administration to my Father's will.

* * * This consideration, and the very different situation I should find myself in, Sir Guy Carleton not being Governor General, induced me to decline it, upon which it was offered to Musgrave, who also declined it, and then to Col. Carleton who at first did the same, but has since accepted it, as I understand, upon a promise of his going to Canada next year; but, however, next year is a long while.

Upon determining not to go myself, I immediately thought of your interests, but found that Mr. Odell was fixed upon by Col. Carleton at the recommendation of his Brother. Sproule had before been appointed Surveyor General and there was nothing your friends could think of for you that was not already filled up. Odell goes to Canada when Col. Carleton does. I have had some conversation with Carleton and have talked much of you, indeed I found him already prepossessed in your favor thro' Odell, who I believe is much your friend.

I have received a letter from Governor Parr in very civil terms but at the same time he appears very much hurt and accuses you of being the author of a foolish advertisement of Mr. Aplin, who I must own I should have been better pleased with had he not made use of my name or brought me in his squabble. I have answered the Governor's Letter, saying in pretty near as plain terms as he accuses you that I hope and believe he is misinformed with respect to you. I hope he will shew my letter as it at least will give full testimony of my opinion of you, which believe me, dear Winslow I shall ever retain the highest and hope fortune will still by some means or other bring us together again. Pray let me hear from you, and if by any means I can do anything for you in this country pray command me. * * *

Please to direct to me at my Brothers in St. James Street, London, and believe me

Most sincerely yours,

H. E. Fox.

William Chew to Gideon White.*

Maugerville, August 23, 1784.

D'r White,—I am now settled in the above mentioned Township about 80 miles up the river St. John's, the Country equal to any I ever saw. You speak highly of Shelburne but Mr. J. Seaman, who had the goodness to pass a few days with me, says there is no comparison between the land of Shelburne and the Township of Maugerville. Your Town exceeds ours I believe in size, &c, but what's a fine house without something to put in it. Give me leave to tell you, we have a fine crop at this time of wheat, oats, pease, corn and potatoes with every other vegetable as good and in as great variety as any place I ever saw. This place is capable of being made the first Township in the Province, the land up the river equally good when improved, which will soon be the case as the officers and soldiers are very industrious.

*Gideon White was a native of Plymouth, Massachusetts, and a cousin of Edward Winslow. He took part with the British as a volunteer at the battle of Bunker Hill. Later in the war he held a commission as captain in the Duke of Cumberland's Regiment, commanded by Lord Charles Montagu. The corps was composed of Carolina Loyalists. They arrived in Halifax from Jamaica on Dec. 13, 1783, and were hutted for the winter. The next spring they were sent to the lands at Chedebucto, Guysborough County. Capt. Gideon White was assigned lands there with the others of his corps, but in the muster of settlers made on June 20, 1784, by General Campbell's order, he is returned as "at Shelburne with his three servants upon business." He, however, did not return to Guysborough, but remained in Shelburne, where he became a leading citizen; was a magistrate and elected a member of the house of assembly. He died in 1833 at the age of 81 years. His sister Joanna married Pelham Winslow, a Loyalist.

Captain Atwood* of the Kings American Regiment, was at my house a few days ago and informed me that he had cleared forty acres of land thirty miles above St. Anns and says the land is as good if not better than below.

Captain Haws Hatch, Lyman and Maxwell, of the Prince of Wales, are up the Nashwalk and have very good farms. I have no doubt but this will be the first place in the world for half pay officers if it should be made a separate Government.

General Campbell and his suite have paid us a visit. Colonel Winslow was with him. The General has ordered a Captain's command at St. Ann's, also barracks and provision store to be erected there. * * * Captain Ryerson and his brother are here. I think you had better cŏme to this country and settle your affairs. I should be particularly happy to see you at my house for the winter or as long as convenient to you. I am happy to inform you that I and my family are well. Nothing will add more to my happiness than hearing of your health and welfare, which I hope I shall by every opportunity and believe me D'r White,

Yours most sincerely,

Wm. Chew.†

*Captain Isaac Atwood was in command of a company in the King's American Regiment in 1776, and served through the war. His was a company of Dragoons, though nearly all of the regiment were infantry. He was the senior officer of the corps who settled on the St. John River. The tract assigned the King's American Regiment lay between the Poklok and Eel rivers. Captain Atwood was a New Jersey Loyalist. He was elected a member for York County in the first house of assembly of the province. He owned a tract of 700 acres at the mouth of the Eel River, also the island called Fall Island, now known as Brown's Island. Like many other Loyalist officers, he became involved in debt. An old newspaper contains the advertisement for sale by public auction, on Monday, Oct. 1, 1810, at Gabriel Van Horne's tavern in Fredericton, the mortgage title to the late Captain Atwood's property, consisting of Belviso Fall Island and his estate at Maductic. He probably died this year in the United States. The name of his estate seems to be perpetuated in "Belvisor Bar," well known to the lumbermen of the St. John River.

†William Chew was a lieutenant in the 3rd New Jersey Volunteers in 1777. He served through the hard campaigns in the south with much credit and was severely wounded. (See letter of Edward Winslow to Lieut. Gov. Wentworth under date 4th August, 1793.) He settled in New Brunswick. On the organization of the King's New Brunswick Regiment he received a commission in it. He died at Fredericton in 1812, aged 64 years.

Thomas Knox to Frederick Wm. Hecht.

Fort Howe, Sept. 1st, 1784.

Sir,—Major Gen'l Campbell having submitted to my decision the propriety of victualling children (of the Disbanded Corps and Loyalists) born in this Province—you will be pleased in future to issue half Rations of Provisions to all such as may be certified by me, commencing the 1st July, 1784, excepting where particular dates to the contrary are specified.

I am, sir, &c,

Thomas Knox,

Dy. Commissary of Musters.

To F. Wm. Hecht, Esq
Asst. Comm'y Gen'.

Mrs. Catharine Reading* to Edward Winslow.

Granville, September 2, 1784.

Dear Sir,— * * * It is not in my power to make amends for the daily favors from your hand, still I shall watch with attention when it may in any way be in my power. Your wife and dear little ones are all well. As for Miss Pen she is still sweeter every day. Mrs. Winslow's happiness would be compleat had she but you with her. * *

I must beg the favor of you to admonish Austin in his Duty in every respect, as being among strangers and no one to caution him. Our family are all well and join in affection to yourself.

I am Sir,

Your affectionate Friend,

Catharine Reading.

Gregory Townsend to Ward Chipman.

Halifax 3d September, 1784.

Dear Chipman,—* * * I have some doubts of this finding you in England and it is my earnest wish & hope that you may be on your way to some good appointment in New Brunswick. General Fox's not coming out as Governor is a great disappointment to Ned, tho' I endeavor to console him with the assurance that Sir Guy will influence his Brother in his favor and procure the place he expected. We hear Mr. Odell is Secretary, but our sanguine hopes have construed that into a private secretary. I shall be heartily mortified if he should be left unprovided for. * * *

G. Townsend.

*Mrs. Reading was a friend and neighbor of the Winslow family when they lived at Granville. Her son Austin seems to have been under Winslow's supervision.

I cannot at this time enter upon the subject of our Son so largely as I could wish. But only tell you in general terms that I love him as ardently as yourself & that I am perfectly convinced of the goodness of his disposition & the other good qualities which you enumerate with so much maternal pleasure; these considerations make me anxious for his future and induce me to exert myself to the utmost to place him where he can obtain that greatest of all blessings (a good education) and altho' it grieves us both to part with him; yet let us for a moment anticipate the pleasure of seeing him return to us a few years hence a fine accomplished youth. How happy will we then be at the recollection of the hour when we consented to part with him. He has behaved with perfect propriety and, if you could see him now pacing across the parade between the General & Addenbrooke, you would be more than delighted with him. He has already been over half the town & visited all the people in it. His Scotch Boy attends him like a shadow, moves when he moves and stops when he stops. * * *

Don't grow too vain on the compliments I pay you. All the eloquence of Mr. Brittain could not prevail on me to attempt to sign my name, even to a paper of importance, but when the idea of writing you entered my mind, I instantly contrived a bolster to rest my hand, & I've already filled a number of pages. I have wrote John Robinson to request his assistance in fixing the house. It will be absolutely necessary to have some male friend to superintend the business, and I think he will exert himself.

I shall send some cloathing and other matters round which may be of some use.

My Mama & Sally are already so attached to Blacky* that I shall be as much puzzled to separate him from them as I have been from you. His Aunt Pen is on a visit to Dr. Haliburton's and has not yet seen him— altho' several pressing messages have been sent: it is rather too far till he is more rested. Think of the rascal's telling me "That He did not come to Halifax to read. It's time enough for that (says he) when I get to England."

Morris thinks he shall stay here about a month & I'll keep Murray till then. You may rely on it that he shall not stir without every comfort which your fondness can wish him. I hope before he embarks to see Chippy, and that we can together make every necessary arrangement for him. Mr. Byles* presents compliments. He will send another piece of ribband by next conveyance. Remember me to Blowers—be very civil to him.

Adieu, most affectionately,

Yrs. Edward.

Halifax, Monday 20, Sept'r. 1784.

What do I care whether it's the fashion for men to write long letters to their wives or not. No man on earth looks with more sovereign contempt on what's called Common Customs than I do. In matters where my own feelings are concerned I will not be shackled by any of the rules which bind the generality of mankind. I have said that in my present state of inaction I cannot enjoy a pleasure equal to that of writing to you, and that's sufficient reason for writing. If other men do not experience the same sensation they have not the same degree of sensibility nor the same degree of affection. Let such inanimate wretches be content with writing. "These few lines come hoping &c." I'll enjoy the superlative satisfaction of scribbling whole volumes. If from the feeble state of mind or body they should be dull or unentertaining, they will at least serve as proofs of the sincerity & fervency of my love for you.

Mentioning the word fashion at the beginning of my letter has unaccountably brought to my mind a dissertation upon the present Fashions in England which was read me from a letter from my celebrated friend Mrs. Coare (formerly Nancy Lechmere) and which does so much credit to the present taste that I will endeavor to give you as much of it as I can recollect. She says "The prevailing rage is to be perfectly plain. Caps are "not worn, except by elderly ladies, and feathers & all such kind of "Trumpery are totally laid aside. The younger ladies wear plain, deep "crown'd hats. Muslin & Chintz Gowns with plain long muslin aprons "are worn by all ladies of taste; even the first Duchesses dress in this way "except at Court, and it will probably continue until winter when silks

*Mather Byles, jr., was the eldest son of Rev. Dr. Byles, who was rector of Trinity church, 1788-1814. At this time he was a clerk in the military offices in Halifax. He was very intimate with the Winslow family; was born in Boston in 1755. A few years after the above letter was written he went to Grenada and was commissary there. He married, June, 1797, Mary Bridgwater, eldest daughter of the chief justice of the island. He died at Grenada, Dec. 17, 1802, at the age of 38 years. His grandson, Mather Byles, visited St. John in 1889 as commander of H. M. S. Tourmaline.

"will be substituted. Hoops are entirely out of fashion." How different is this from the fantastic figures which have been exhibited here this summer. Some of the females who have lately arrived at this place from London, seem to exert all their talents to daub and finify those parts which require no ornament and to expose to view such other parts as nature seems to intend that every modest woman should conceal.

An immensity of False-Tops False Curls, monstrous Caps, Grease, Filth of various kinds, Jewels, Painted paper and trinkets, hide and deform heads of Hair that in their natural state are really beautiful. Rouge & other Dirt cover cheeks and faces that without would be tolerable, whilst the unfortunate neck and breasts remain open to the inclemency of the weather & the view of the World. The other parts of Dress are equally preposterous. A long party-colored Trail flows over a Hoop (that covers a rotundity of Hips sufficiently large without it) and sweeps along the ground behind, while the poor legs and knees are chilled with every blast which blows.

Take a woman rigged in this way, & she certainly is the most ridiculous thing in the world. Were the indulgence of this Fancy (as it's called) confined to those women that * * [5 lines missing.] But alas, it pervades other orders of women. Examples like Mrs. W——— & Mrs. B——— will be followed by the vain and giddy as well as by the vicious, perhaps in some instances without evil intentions. Among the errors which are committed in this world there is none more unpardonable than that of a modest woman's attempting to imitate the * * * [5 lines missing.] I have often thought and I believe it to be an absolute fact, that men (altho' they have not so much cunning as women) have more knowledge of the foibles of females, than the ladies have of theirs, and I certainly know that a strained attempt to exhibit or rather expose their charms is among the number of faults for which they are ridiculed with extreme severity.

Could a lady of good sense mix Incog, in a party of licentious and debauched men & listen to their conversation on this subject, she would be convinced that even these hold in derision such foolish women as attempt to gain their affections by putting on an appearance of wantonness & indecency. And she would also find that libertines reverence the external shew of innocence and virtue and (altho' they do not stammer at blasphemy and treason) they cannot speak with disrespect of a truly amiable & modest female character. If then these ladies are the objects of disgust with sensible men and the objects of ridicule with men of pleasure —their conquests must be confined to old Fools—young Fools & very empty coxcombs—and these are surely not worth the trouble.

Now I think I hear you exclaim—"What the deuce can have put my "husband all men in the world into this train of writing."

I'll tell you my precious Wife. First, negatively—(as the clergy say): It is not from an idea of increasing your abhorrence of such flirts. That I know to be impossible. I sometimes think your Ldayship errs a little upon the opposite extreme to that which I have described. From sixteen years old to the present time you have literally set your Cap at no creature on earth but me. Regardless of Fashion you have only endeavored by uniform cleanliness to make yourself desirable in my eyes, but I am not contented with this. I love you so well that I am always gratified when I see other people admire you, and (if Providence ever puts it in my power) you shall be as much distinguished for the elegance of your dress as you are for your constancy and fidelity.

That vagabond Murray has fairly disconcerted me by his impertinence.

"What are you writing?" (says he).

"A letter to your Mama."

"What, in that book?"

"Yes."

"You'd better stop your nonsense, I think."

"Why," says I, "don't you think Mama will be glad to read a whole book-full from me?"

"I don't know," he says, "Too much of one thing is good for nothing."

Did you ever hear such a varlet? Lest you should be of his mind, I'll leave off for a little.

Tuesday, 21st.

Mr. Dight has just called to acquaint me that he shall not set off till tomorrow, I gave him a letter of introduction to you yesterday. I'll endeavor to send this by him.

I am yet confined to my room, my right Foot & left arm in constant and violent pain. I shall come out one of these days so fair, so delicate, & genteel that I shall hardly be known by my old acquaintances. I never in my life experienced so severe a fit of the Gout. I however hope it will secure me good health for the remainder of the winter.

Master Murray made one of a party of pleasure yesterday a fishing, & he's taken cold and it's laughable enough to see the fuss that's made with him—one says, "The dear little creature's oppressed at his stomach" —another says "He's feverish," &c. If they don't hurt him by their nonsense I shall be glad. He is exactly as you have seen him a hundred times, stuffed at his stomach & wheezes, but I am sure that a drink of whey or something warm when he goes to bed will answer all the purpose. The rascal's laughing at them now.

You always thought My Mary that I did not love this precious boy so much as I ought to. How grossly are you mistaken. The idea of parting with him is as painful to me as yourself, and I almost tremble when they tell me a ship will be ready to sail for England in a week or ten days. Yet I must and will be reconciled. When he is indisposed I cannot be at ease for a moment, and altho' he has now only a trifling cold, I cannot suppress my anxiety. Indeed Mama I will not allow that your affection for him is greater than my own. Since his arrival here he has quite captivated all his relations. For (altho' he will not be sociable in large parties of ladies, but acts on such occasions just as he used to,) yet whenever a company retires and the family & two or three friends form a circle of themselves, he is sure to afford a monstrous deal of real entertainment. He has this evening amused his aunts with a history of the whole family, and has given a character of all the children and servants & of almost everybody in the neighborhood, and he certainly does say some of the most extraordinary things that ever enter'd into the head of a child of his age. But I will not indulge you any farther on this subject, you are already too partial to this little Micmac. I'll now tell you a circumstance which I did not communicate in my last, because I thought it would give you some airs of triumph over me. I acknowledge myself mortify'd. I also acknowledge that you were right in some of your conjectures. After this concession you ought not to tieze me. I have been obliged to dismiss my friend Mr. Presley with his fair lady &c., and have taken into pay Mr. Tobias or George Oakman to take care of the horses. If I like his behaviour I'll keep him this winter, but he really seems a stupid creature. I however hope he will not cheat me. I hope you will very soon begin your preparation for carrying on the business which I chalked out in my last. Should I receive information of any appointment to my satisfaction at New Brunswick even after you have collected materials for repairing our house, we certainly could not lose much by them.

If events take place to prevent my going there, I shall first propose to General Campbell to permit me to spend the winter at Granville, because if I go with his leave I shall retain my pay of 10s. p. day, which with the emoluments is, in my present circumstances, a very great object. In that case I probably may not see you till the first of November. But should he refuse this request, I'll take French leave of him directly. Everything depends on my next intelligence from England. I yet do not despair (under the Rose) of going to St. John's this winter. But this idea must not hinder your utmost exertions about the House, for should we be disappointed we shall be in a terrible Box. [Four lines missing.]

Sally Miller (of whom he* is excessively fond) has not left him one moment. Dr. McIntire gave him some castor oil, which he says is the best thing in the world for Worms.

*Meaning little Murray.

Wednesday Morn'g 22d.

Murray is perfectly recovered; he is now deliberating where he shall dine today among a number of invitations. [4 lines missing.]

Mary, cannot you among the other improvements contrive to make a cellar or hole for vegetables? they are very convenient. I should think a very excellent one might be dug under the bank near where the first kitchen hut stood. It could not be attended with much labor or expence, it must be close sodded—there's plenty of sods all round, two or three men would finish it in a day. Try it. I find that the articles of Clothing &c., which I have purchased & procured here will fill eight or ten large packages. If I send 'em round what will you do with them? Is there room in any part of Mr. Redding's House? If there is not I'll let 'em remain here till Spring—altho' I would rather have 'em at home. Write me word whether you can stow 'em safely.

Austin Redding was here last evening he seems to be perfectly satisfy'd with his place & Prince is pleased with him. I inclose letters for his Brother & Sister. Murray desires his love to Dick & Tom & Katy & Sam & Ferdinand & Mama Redding & all of 'em—to be sure he's begun rather at the wrong end. Make mine at the same time. Give my love to Jack Robinson & Wright—tell the latter I hope he manages to keep that unfortunate servant of Hardenbrooke's a little indisposed yet. It would be a melancholy thing if she gets perfectly well.

Fearing that all other sources might fail I have sent 10 guineas by Mr. Dight. Manage it with extreme care. He informs me that he'll not be off till Fryday. What a strange business. I calculated to close my letter at 12 o'clock this day—& my whole book is finished. I swear I'll not write any more—but I solemnly swear that I am your devoted, faithful & affectionate Husband,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to His Wife.

[Letter written in book similar to preceding but double thickness. Cover and first six pages missing.]

[Halifax] Sept. 24, 1784.

What do you think of your young man Murray? I wrote for him a letter last evening. He has just been whispering in my ear that he wishes I would write another letter for him to his Mama. I told him I would tomorrow night. "Ay," (says he) "I don't want such an one as you wrote last night. I want one in a book—a whole book full, such an one as you write."

"Why," said I, "you pup—what have you to say to fill a volume?" "Get a book (says he) & I'll tell you. I have as much to say to Mama as you have, and I love Mama as well as you do, I'm hang'd if I don't."

Upon my honor I'm often puzzled to get rid of the fellow. I must send him off as soon as I can for the longer he stays, the more sincerely and affectionately am I attached to him.

I have had a very handsome present from Colonel Morse; a beautiful writing box with all the materials &c., &c., so convenient that I shall certainly keep it to myself.

I have had a tet-a-tete with old Forrest and he has expressed himself in such warm terms of friendship toward your ladyship that I am perfectly reconciled to him, and have lent him my Horse to ride half way to Windsor.

If you should be obliged to procure cloaths for John before you receive cloth from me, let 'em be of the colour I proposed in my last. I shall send by the ship a quantity of unmade green cloaths & white waistcoats which will last a great while & I dislike frequent changes of livery.

Gordon has this moment announced his intention of sending off an express tomorrow & I've just discovered that I have begun my letter in a double book, of course it can be fill'd.

Morris has paid a visit to Commodore Sir Charles Douglas this morning, and He has politely offered him a passage in either of the Transports which are now preparing to sail, and Gordon has also waited on him in behalf of Master Murray and he has made the same answer with respect to him. I am exceedingly gratify'd at it, and I have dispatched Morris to propose the matter to the Captain of the Sally, a fine large ship in which go as passengers, Col. Moore, Col. Brownton, Major Horne, & several others of my particular acquaintances. I have requested Robinson to make a bargain with the Captain to have a berth built in his own State Room, and that I will pay any expenses that may attend it. Every preparation is making for him to embark. I shall lay in every kind of stores, Wine, &c., and I have procured a servant to attend him on the passage, and I shall send with Morris money sufficient to answer all his purposes at his first landing. I have wrote particularly to Mr. Geyer* & Mr. Coffin and have requested their attention to him. I have also pointed out a method by which the expence of his education will be annually defrayed. The Gentlemen passengers have all in the genteelest manner proferred their services, especially Col. Morse; I shall hold myself eternally obliged to him for his uncommon civility on this delicate occasion.

Thus arranged my dear wife is this very important matter, and I now feel a kind of consolation which is peculiar to a tender & affectionate parent and of which I wish you to partake, and which you will necessarily enjoy because it results from a consciousness of having performed a serious and important duty. You have parted with a precious boy—a son who not only contributed to your amusement, but who really discovers an uncommon degree of sensibility and gratitude. His manners and disposition attach even strangers to him. Were he of a contrary character there would be no merit in relinquishing him for a time. With all these good qualities I acknowledge that it requires great philosophy to reconcile one's self to a separation from him. And yet the consideration that he possesses them, makes it doubly incumbent on us to do him justice in his education. Should your motherly tenderness or weakness have prevented this sweet fellow from availing himself of the advantages now held out to him, and for want of proper attention to his education have turned out a Blackguard what remorse, what stings of conscience would you have felt.

We have now done all that God and our own consciences can require of us. If accidents happen to him we have nothing to answer for. Therefore Madam instead of fetching a sigh, join me in wishing him a good passage & let what will happen we will bear it handsomely. There's Christian like doctrine for you and faith Mary (whatever the world may say of me) when put to a severe test—I am a Christian. * * * [Mss. torn.] I (to be sure) once in a while leap the bounds of prudence and commit small irregularities, but I'm hang'd (as Murray says) if I don't do all the good I can. * * * [Mss. torn.]

Ed. Winslow.

My dear Mama,—

I love you dearly. How I shall long to see you when I get to England. I shall never forget you my dear Mama. I shall sail next week in the ship Sally—all my things are pack'd up. Papa has bought me a charming chest and Grandmama is to bake me a whole parcel of gingerbread and pyes, and they are to be put in the chest and my servant is to keep the key.

The Gentlemen will all be kind to me, and I shall be very comfortable. I wrote you last night and so I have nothing more to say—only my love to Pop and Tom, & little Pen & Kitty James.

I am, dear Mama,

Your loving & faithful son

Daniel Murray Winslow.

[Signature made apparently by pen in child's fingers guided by father.]

I relate these little dialogues almost word for word as they are spoken, and altho' one half the world will laugh at the nonsense & folly of such repetitions yet you my beloved wife will receive some pleasure from them. Parents who feel as we do will naturally experience agreeable sensations at the relation of every circumstance which concerns our dear little ones, however trifling they are in themselves.

Miss Kitty Taylor (who is one of the most amiable girls in the whole world & is vastly fond of Murray) has been for an hour almost, endeavouring to prevail on Murray to kiss her, which he has steadily refused; at last under a pretence of whispering to him, she has given him a very loud smack. "O hang it," says Murray, "Tis not so bad as I thought it was, now you may kiss me as much as you have a mind to." The whole company are now in a roar laughing at him, Marston among the rest, whose fondness for Murray has made him dearer to me than ever. Murray is with him half the day and he is constantly collecting nuts, apples, &c, for him.

I am monstrously anxious for the arrival of an express, not a word from you since Murray's arrival. Thompson has not yet determined when he will return. I will if possible prevail on him to wait until a packet arrives, which must be within a week or ten days unless the Devil's in 'em. I have been hourly in expectation of Mr. Matthews. He certainly must have sailed at least 8 weeks ago. And by Chippy's letter, Ludlow and him were to sail early in August; they also certainly must be along soon. There has not been an arrival from any quarter since I wrote you by John (except from New England). All the great people of Halifax, men and women, have been and are still flocking to the states to visit their rebel brethren and I dare say their congratulations and embraces are very cordial. The Devil kiss 'em all together.

Mama. This is really an omnium gatherum kind of an epistle. I don't care, you'll be so good as to peruse all your volumes very attentively and forward to me plain & unequivocal answers to all the questions contained in them. I don't mean that you should imitate me in prolixity. I will not permit any man or woman on the face of the earth to equal me in evincing my affection. It is as much superior, as much purer than the common run of people's, as my letters are longer than the cold short letters of transient acquaintances.

I am yet confined to my room with the Gout, and altho' I am surrounded by a multitude of friends, and incumbered with an infinite variety of business, I steal my opportunities and dash away page after page to you my best loved and amiable Wife. I do not regard how incoherent—how incorrect they are. You love to hear me talk, altho' a portion of my conversation may not be entertaining, & I am sure that you have some pleasure in reading every line I write.

I have this day for the first time this fortnight ventured to put on a coat and shoes—my leg and arm continue very much swelled but I am prodigiously relieved, & anticipate the pleasure of enjoying the fresh air in a very few days. Really wife I have had a terrible time.

Good night

God bless you

Friday. 25. Sepr 1784.

It is not possible for any pen or tongue to describe the variety of wretchedness that is at this time exhibited in the streets of this place, and God knows I am obliged to hear a large proportion of it. This is what we call a board day, & the yard in front of my House has been crowded since eight o'clock with the most miserable objects that ever were beheld.

As if there was not a sufficiency of such distress'd objects already in this country the good people of England have collected a whole ship load of all kinds of vagrants from the streets of London, and sent them out to Nova Scotia.* Great numbers died on the passage of various disorders—the miserable remnant are landed here and have now no cover but tents. Such as are able to crawl are begging for a proportion of provisions at my door. Two other ships were loading with the same kind of cargoes. Heaven only knows what will become of 'em. As soon as we get rid of such a sett as these, another little multitude appears of old crippled Refugees, men and women who have seen better days. Some of 'em tell me they formerly knew me, they have no other friend to depend upon and they solicit in language so emphatical and pathetic, that 'tis impossible for any man whose heart is not callous to every tender feeling, to refuse their requests.

Next to them perhaps comes an unfortunate set of Blackies begging for Christ's sake that Masser would give 'em a little provision if it's only for one week. "He wife sick; He children sick; and He will die if He have not some." I am illy calculated for such services. These applications make an impression on my mind which is vastly disagreeable. I cannot forget them. It is not possible to relieve all their distresses. I long to retreat from such scenes. My views are humble, I ask no more than a competency to support myself, my wife, and children decently and to live and enjoy them I care not where. This has hitherto been out of my power but I flatter myself that the time is not far distant when I shall be gratify'd in this first wish of my heart.

Among the most persevering solicitors which I have met with is your old Townsman, fellow passenger & friend, Thomas Edwards Esq: As regularly as the day comes—comes Thomas Edwards, and he always prefaces his application by telling me what a wonderful affection he has for you and the children; and then he hopes the Colonel will order him cloaths, shoes, provisions, blankets, medicines, &c, &c, &c. I have this morning sat down by him with a pencil, and have taken down the several articles which he requests, and I have told him that I would give him an order to receive every one of them on the single consideration that he should not on any pretence whatever make me another visit till he embarks for England. To this he has solemnly agreed, and we have shaken hands and I have most sincerely wished him a good and quick passage, and that he may find such a reception in England as will effectually prevent the necessity of his returning to this country.

By the way, since I am on the subject of Rations, you have heard that by the late orders the Loyalists are to receive only two thirds allowance of provisions from the first of last May, but the disbanded officers and soldiers are to receive a full allowance to the 24th of October. In the settlement of your account with Mr. Williams* you are to consider yourself as a disbanded Muster-Master-General, & of course will draw full rations for yourself and family to the 24th of October. There can be no difficulty on the subject, but I would settle with Mr. Williams to that period after which you will share the same fate as your neighbors and be at two thirds allowance. * * *

Robinson & Gordon are now employed in fixing Murray's berth and regulating matters for his passage. If he had been Gordon's own and only son he could not have been more engaged and interested for him.

1 o'clock.

We have this moment heard of an arrival at Shelburne. I'll be in the fidgits till I hear particulars.

What can I have written in fifty pages? I swear I would not read it for 50 shillings.

Our sister Sally says that that painted ribband would be a most elegant trimming for a White Shawl. If you think so I'll buy one and send you.

Adieu my dearest Mary,

Everlastingly Yours

Ed. Winslow.

William Garden to Edward Winslow.

St. Ann's, 25th Sep'r, 1784.

Dear Sir,—I have lately received two letters of Instruction from Mr. Brinley couched in such a manner as gives me satisfaction & for which I will suppose myself indebted to you. I want words to express the sense I have of all your favors—be assured I shall ever remember them with gratitude.

The General's appointment* and Mr. Brinley's letters, leave me in the dark as to my pay, will you have the goodness to fix that for me?

I have wrote to Mr. Brinley by this opportunity that I have employed Mr. Monson Hayt as Clerk, and a man as cooper and issuer, and I hope he will make a generous allowance for them. The public buildings are in great forwardness, one of the provision stores will be fit for the reception of Provisions next week. We are greatly mortified that General Fox is not coming out Gov'r. I beg my most respectful compliments to General Campbell and Cap'n Addenbrooke, & I am, Dear Sir,

Your most obd't & much obliged humble serv't,

Wm. Garden.

Thomas Knox to Edward Winslow.

Fort Howe, 25th Sept., 1784.

Sir,—I enclose you a General Return of the numbers of Persons of all descriptions who have been mustered by me within the District of St. John's River, and to whom I have given certificates on the Asst. Commissary Gen'l at this Post for the Royal Bounty of Provisions as Settlers in His Majesty's Provinces of Nova Scotia, which I beg you will be pleased to lay before the Commander in Chief.

From this Return some deductions will be made by me as unworthy the favor of Government.

I wrote to you by Governor Wentworth and enclosed copies of two letters to Mr. Hecht with some general regulations to be observed in settling with the different Corps and Classes. This business is nearly finished, but it has been attended with great difficulty on account of overdrawings by former Returns, and has occasioned my long delay; a delay

*That is William Garden's appointment as commissary at Fredericton. He lived on the corner of Queen and Church streets (opposite the Cathedral); the house is still standing, and occupied by Robert G. Wetmore. Wm. Garden was in business partnership with William Donaldson of St. John. They supplied those engaged in lumbering, &c. Mr. Garden's property in Kingsclear—where he lived later—was just above Judge Winslow's, rather more than a mile above Phyllis Creek. On a little stream there he built a mill. In the old plans in the crown land office this is marked "Pierre Paul Creek." The Gardens brought with them from New York an old slave named Dinah. William Garden died in 1812, aged 63 years. His son, Hugh Mackay Garden, married a Miss Gale, sister of the late Mrs. Wm. H. Needham. Another son, Nelson Garden, married a Miss Cunliffe of Woodstock, and a daughter married a Dibblee. All these, with their mother, are buried in the old parish church yard at Woodstock, not far from the last resting place of their old friend and neighbor, Sheriff Winslow.

which I hope will not impress the Commander in Chief with an unfavorable opinion of my assiduity and exertions to close the Business on which I was sent, and which must have been left in a very unfinished state had I returned before. * * *

My business being so far closed I shall take the first opportunity that offers for Annapolis to cross the Bay and return to Halifax.

I am sir, &c.

Thomas Knox,
Dy. Com'y of Musters.

Edward Winslow to Captain Frink.

Halifax, Sept'r 30th, 1784.

Sir,—I received your letter of the 15th instant, with the memorial inclosed.

It is now reduced to an absolute certainty that the St. John's side the Bay of Fundy is formed into a Government, and since Governor Parr has received official intelligence of that event, he has repeatedly declined making any new arrangements, or giving any new grants in that district. I therefore thought best to return your memorial that you may avail yourself of the earliest opportunity to make your application to the new Governor, who may be expected every hour at St. John's.

Indeed I should have been but a bad advocate for you with the present Governor of Nova Scotia, it not being any part of my ambition to be ranked among that order of men who are distinguished by marks of His Excellency's favor.

I shall always with alacrity embrace any opportunity to render services to any of my old friends of the Provincial Regiments.

I am, Sir, Your very humble Servant,

Ed. Winslow.

Capt. Frink,

Edward Winslow to Major John Coffin.

Halifax, October 4th, 1784.

My dear Fellow,—I do not deserve abuse for not writing you since my return to this place. The strange variety of reports which have prevailed here since the last packet arrived have rendered the news respecting the arrangements for this country so inexplicably mysterious that we know not what to depend on. At first it was supposed an indisputable fact that Col. Carleton had embarked with his subordinate civil officers agreeable to the list which I sent you. * * * A letter from Chipman hints "that the present arrangement may not be permanent." Accustomed as I am to plain English language, I am unable to construe these enigmatical, political conundrums, and I literally do not know who is Governor, Secretary or anything else. It is however agreed on all hands that you are to have these kind of officers immediately. And at this I acknowledge myself gratified, and with the same degree of candour I confess that I shall be disappointed unless they have pointed out some decent employment for me, because it is the first object of my wishes to settle among you. If it turns out otherwise, and in this as in former instances I have beat the Bush for others, I will make myself tolerably easy, for altho' my present situation is not perfectly agreeable to my mind, it has its advantages.

Until I hear further I must suspend all serious operations on your side the Bay. I cannot think of building a house there for my mother & sisters unless I am to reside there myself. You shall have the earliest information of an arrival, and of the news when its reduced to a certainty. I will send an express to you and you must take your measures accordingly. A multitude of people are coming out, and by all accounts there are a great number of candidates for almost every office that's worth holding. * * *

I thank you cordially for the warmth with which you express your desire for us to take up our residence in your country. I have not (for twelve months past) built a castle or anticipated a pleasure but what has centered there, and my predilection has arisen principally from the consideration that I should there enjoy the society of those friends for whom I have the greatest affection.

I am perfectly of your opinion with respect to our friend Aplin, but having already given him my sentiments explicitly on the subject without any effect, I must leave him to pursue his own plan. * * * Altho' he is a good fellow in some respects he certainly is a very poor devil in others.

Accept my best acknowledgments for a late instance of attention to my wife. I regret on her account that I do not remove to St. Johns this winter—because I am sure it would be more agreeable than her present situation and (however unfashionable the sentiment may be) I am not ashamed to affirm that to make her comfortable is an object of the first importance in my mind. To my shame she has had a larger proportion of mortifications than she deserved, and by Heaven she shall never feel another if I can prevent it. My boy Murray embarks tomorrow for England in a ship with Col's Morse, Brownlow, Armstrong, Major Horne and Morris Robinson. He's to be put to school in the country.

Hazen announces his intention of setting off this evening, to him I refer you for any further news. Sister Sally writes Mrs. Coffin—remember me affectionately to her and the young Buck, and believe me

Most sincerely yours

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Charles McEvers.

Halifax, October 4th, 1784.

Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 13th of June reached me while I was on a tour to the outposts, and before I returned to this place your friend Mr. Wilkins had gone to Shelburne, which prevented me the pleasure of paying him that attention which his merit and your recommendation entitle him to. Should any future opportunity offer to render a service or shew a civility to him or his family I shall embrace it with alacrity.

In answer to your kind enquiries respecting my present situation I have to tell you that I hold the appointment of Military Secretary for the district of Nova Scotia, an employment not so enviable for its emoluments as for the frequent opportunities it affords of relieving the distresses of the unfortunate. I have been obliged to reside principally at Halifax, and I had the consolation to provide a comfortable shelter and support for my good old father and his family until God Almighty was pleased to take him from us. My mother and sisters yet remain here.

My wife and family are in a snug box at a place called Granville near Annapolis. I have leased a farm there in a delightful situation & a good neighbourhood, and I spend as much of my time there as my business will admit. Your old friend Mary is as happy as I can make her. I lost my sweet little boy "Chip" soon after my arrival in this country, and I've had a fine daughter since. My eldest Buck, Murray, embarks tomorrow for England.

We are in daily expectation of the arrival of a Governor and the other civil officers for the new province formed on the north side the Bay of Fundy, called New Brunswick. As soon as the business is fairly arranged I shall, I hope, take up my abode there. I have explored the country very faithfully and I am perfectly satisfied that it must become of great importance. We have certain intelligence that the Judge [Ludlow], Col. Ludlow, D. Matthews,* Upham, Chipman and many others are preparing to come out. I hope when we are all collected that you will be anxious to pay us a visit. I am sure it will contribute to your health, and I flatter myself that you will find a jolly set of fellows, who (if they do not enjoy immense wealth) are neither oppressed by enormous impositions, or insulted by impertinent Black-Guards.

Let me assure you (after presenting my respects to your family) that there is not a man on earth who would more sincerely rejoice to see you, than your faithful and affectionate Friend,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Mrs. Frances Ludlow.

Halifax, October 4th, 1784.

Madam,—A long absence from this place has prevented an earlier acknowledgment of the receipt of your letter. As soon as possible after I had perused its contents I sought & found the modest unfortunate Mr. Clements, and permit me to assure you that I have experienced a peculiar and a double satisfaction in my endeavours to alleviate his misfortunes from a consideration that I was not only performing an act of benevolence, but was at the same time obeying your command. I have secured the Bounty of Provisions to Mr. Clements and his Family, and I have advised him to remain in his present situation until the arrangements for the new province are compleated, and then to make application for a grant in that country, where I hope men of Integrity & virtue will be more certain of rewards than they are in this.

Late letters from England give me cause to anticipate the pleasure of seeing Mrs. Colonel Ludlow & yourself in this country, in which I flatter myself you will be agreeably disappointed.

May you long enjoy without interruption the society of your family & friends is very ardently the prayer of Madam

Your most obed't, h'ble servt,

Annapolis Oct'r 4th, 1784.

Dear Colonel,—You may depend upon my giving Mrs. Winslow all the assistance in my power in repairing the house. I hope we shall be able to make it very comfortable. We have agreed that grates will not answer; the only coal you can get here is from the Commissary which is exceedingly bad, and you cannot burn it in the kitchen. We intend to make false backs to the fire places in the house and to build an oven out of doors. The kitchen chimney I am afraid must come down.

I am very sorry that you have had so disagreeable a companion as the Gout, and hope ere this you have got rid of him. My compliments to the Major and Byles.

I am, Dear Sir,
Your most ob't Friend & Servt.
John Robinson.

Edward Winslow to George Leonard.

Halifax, 5th October, 1784.

D'r. Leonard,— * * I acknowledge that I enjoy the chagrine which is apparent in the countenances of the Nabobs of Nova Scotia on this occasion. They have (until official letters reached his Excellency) affected to ridicule the idea of a separate government as absurd and romantic; they are now certain it is a reality and to their confusion they find that its limits extend to the County of Cumberland & that the most valuable part of that county is included in the province of New Brunswick. A remonstrance (patronized by his Excellency and signed by a class of gentry not remarkable for their Loyalty, viz, Uniacke the Solicitor, Mr. Cochran, Allan and other absentee proprietors) has been transmitted to England setting forth the inconvenience that will arise from this boundary. It has been managed in the same secret, silent way in which business of this kind has been usually conducted in Nova Scotia, and (altho' I am perfectly satisfied that the boundary is irrevocably fixed) I have taken some pains not only to counteract these men—but to characterize them. * * *

Present my best respects to Mrs. Leonard & the young Ladies and believe me,

Very sincerely yours,
Ed. Winslow.

London, 11th October, 1784.

Dear Sir,—I hope this will meet you safe arrived with his Excellency (Gov. Carleton) after an agreeable passage, and that you find everything to your liking.

Mr. Coffin has sent out in the "Hermione," Captain Carge, Col. Winslow's Father's grave stone* to him under care of Mr. D'l Hammill. * *

Memorial of Stephen Jarvis.*

To His Excellency Thomas Carleton, Esq'r, Captain General and Governor in Chief in and over the Province of New Brunswick, &c, &c, &c.

The Memorial of Stephen Jarvis, Lieutenant in the late South Carolina Royalists, Most Humbly Sheweth:—

That your Memorialist after being disbanded at Halifax in November, 1783, embraced the first opportunity of going to New England for his family. That after his arrival in that country he was Mobbed, his family ill treated, and he obliged to relinquish his business and return to this country leaving his family dangerously ill from the insults of the Rebels. That on the fifth of October, 1784, he made a second attempt and after encountering many difficulties he arrived with his family at St. John the beginning of May last.

Memorialist on making application to Mr. Knox for provisions for himself and servant it was refused him on account of the scarcity of provisions then in the province. Your Memorialist most humbly prays that as he has been a great sufferer for the promotion of the settlement in this Province, he may be allowed provisions for himself and servant from the first of November, 1784, to the first of May, 1785; and Your Memorialist as in duty bound will ever pray.

S. Jarvis.

Thomas Knox to Major General Campbell.
Mr. Knox's Report.

Halifax, 3d Nov., 1784.

Sir,—I have the honor to inform you that immediately on receipt of your Instructions to repair to St. John's River and Muster the Disbanded Corps and Companies of Loyalists in that District, I lost no time in preparing to execute the Business.

On the day of my arrival there I posted up in the most conspicuous parts of Parr and Carleton, printed advertisements as the most effectual means of publishing the purpose for which I was sent, and invited the Commanding officers of Corps and Captains of Companies to consult with me in what manner the Business might be effected with most conveniency to the People.

From the very dispersed state of the new Settlers and the occasional necessity of going considerable distances to see Individuals whose former condition in life, ill health, or domestic avocations would not admit of their attendance on the days of Public Muster—I was soon convinced of the impracticability of assembling them in regular corps, and that no delay on my part might encrease the distress of the People, whose calls for a supply of Provisions were immediate, I determined to proceed in the muster of such as were able to attend in the Towns of Parr and Carleton (where the Majority then were) and give orders for their Provisions before I embarked for the River and its Branches, leaving till my return the task of inspecting and correcting the abuses which had been practised on Government, and which already appeared numerous.

As soon as this was effected I proceeded up the River St. John, sending forward advertisements specifying the Districts and, as nearly as the nature of my conveyance would admit, the time when I should attend. The removal of whole families [to the place of muster] occasioned great inconvenience to the Settlers and in some instances expence. I therefore submitted to themselves to appoint the place in a District of every five miles most suitable to their own convenience. And in order to contribute every facility to the future mode of drawing their Provisions and to remove the necessity of their attending Individually on the days appointed for them to attend in Town, which had occasioned great loss of time to the injury of the settlement, I took upon me to remove them from the Companies to which they before belonged & classed them in Neighbourhoods under men of character of their own nomination, by which means the attention of a few only became requisite to execute the business of the whole.

I found on the Main River from the entrance to St. Anns Point, a distance of near 90 miles, a very considerable number of new settlers intermixed with the old—and many even for a distance of fifty miles beyond it. The inconveniences to which they were subjected from the necessity of drawing their Provisions at the mouth of the River had determined me to extend my Report to the particular hardships of their situation, and the general injury sustained by the settlements; but that intention is now superceded by your late order to establish a Magazine of Provisions at St. Anns Point, which from its situation will not only accommodate the settlers on the River, but the numerous Branches which lead from it in the neighborhood of that Post, and must, at least, have the effect of removing every ground of complaint on the part of the People.

I now enclose a General Return of the total number of Persons of all descriptions who have been mustered by me on the River Saint John, and who have received my certificates on the Asst. Commissary there for the Royal Bounty of Provisions as Settlers in His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia.

As soon as the business of mustering the People was finished I applied to that of examining my Returns, and on comparing them with those by which Provisions had been before issued, I found that it was in practice with many of the officers of the Corps to draw for nominal servants ad libitum, that many among the Refugees as well as Soldiery had practised and still claimed the right of drawing for absent families who were expected in the Province—and that a considerable quantity of Provisions had been drawn for Persons in double capacities. * * * I enclose a Return of some of the Disbanded Corps by which Provisions were drawn before the muster, which when compared with my General Return of those corps will shew an essential difference. It is not possible to exhibit the differences as regards the Loyal Refugees in the same comparative view, on account of the frequent interchanges among them, and the irregular manner in which Provisions had been necessarily issued to those who were not enrolled in companies.

I enclose a list of Families to whom I have granted two months Provisions as a donation from Government. They consist of old Inhabitants who from involuntary causes have been reduced to circumstances of great distress. Certificates of good character, supported by favorable recommendations were in these cases required by me, and those only who were able to procure them were admitted to consideration—of this number are many who have been some years settled on the River and who have lately been obliged to relinquish their possessions and improvements in favor of Refugees to whom they are allotted.

In the whole of my Proceedings I have endeavoured to preserve the Rights of the People and to guard against impositions to which Government was exposed. Such only as were entitled in their own right have received my certificates—among these I considered disbanded officers & soldiers without a question, and Loyalists who from an attachment to His Majesty's Government had abandoned the United States and decided to continue his subjects in this Province. Every other description of Persons have been rejected by me as having no claim.

In the anxious expectation that my earnest endeavours to execute this Business with fidelity and despatch will secure to me your approbation.

I am, &c.,

Thos. Knox, D'y Com'y of Musters.

Note by the Editor. The two returns that follow afford material for some interesting comparisons. The summary at the bottom of the second table shows that of the corps sent to be disbanded on the St. John river quite a number were excluded from the royal bounty of provisions as not being settled upon their lands. Of the men, about 200 were struck off the list for this cause, and a lesser percentage of the women. There was, as might naturally have been expected, a small increase in the number of children under ten. The muster master, however, made his chief saving to government by striking off the roll a large number of servants, many of whom he declares were only "nominal." Those for example in the 1st Batt. New Jersey Volunteers were reduced from 35 to 9; in the 2nd Batt. of same corps from 36 to 14; in the 1st Batt. DeLancey's Brigade, from 37 to 15; in the Loyal American Regiment, from 46 to 8.

Halifax 5th November, 1784.

Dear Sir,—I avail myself of the earliest opportunity to acknowledge the receipt of your letters by Mr. Chipman. Before his arrival we had heard of your determination to decline the Government of New Brunswick and I had anticipated the reasons (in my own mind) and reconciled myself to the event. The arrangements made for that country are so perfectly judicious, and the public officers appointed there are men of such unblemished integrity and capital abilities that it cannot fail of becoming the envy of the neighboring states, and the consideration compensates me for any personal disappointment which I may have experienced.

I shall refer you to my friends Judge Ludlow, Mr. Odell, &c, for the particulars of my own conduct — to them I appeal with confidence, and I flatter myself that they will do me the justice to acknowledge that I have persevered with unremitted industry & disinterested zeal.

Your friendly answer to the illiberal insinuations in the extraordinary letter addressed to you [by Gov. Parr] has excited the most grateful sensations. I will not make use of any harsh expressions on the occasion; I only regret that a man in an exalted station could descend to such indecent and unjust suggestions. The polite attention which has been shewn me by Gov'r Carleton convinces me that no disagreeable impressions have been made on his mind. He has suggested a wish that I would attend at the opening of the Council at New Brunswick, and I have (with unfeigned alacrity) consented. Chipman, Hailes & myself will set off as soon as the St. Lawrence sails —My sister takes passage by her.

I suppose General Haldimand has ere this arrived in England — possibly that may forward the arrangement as at first proposed. Should Col. Carleton be removed to Canada I presume (from various circumstances) Mr. Odell will go with him, and in that case I hope for your friendly exertions to obtain the secretaryship for me. I will still indulge myself in the pleasing expectation of seeing you in this country. I will not pretend to advise on a subject of so much importance. Allow me to offer the most cordial and grateful acknowledgements for the repeated instances of friendship & attention which I have experienced from you, and to assure you that I am most devotedly & faithfully

Yours,

Ed. Winslow.

[P. S.] I have delivered the Roan to Governor Carleton. If he does not incline to take him across the Bay I will keep him at Granville. He is in elegant order.

The Hon'ble Col. Fox, 38th Reg't.
London.

Edward Winslow to Brook Watson.

Halifax, 5th Nov'r, 1784.

Permit me once more, my dear Sir, to offer my most grateful acknowledgements for the uncommon attention and friendly assistance which you have afforded to my late father's unfortunate family. In pursuance of your advice my sister Sally will embark in the St. Lawrence and will take such proofs, documents, &c, as you have recommended. By her I shall write fully.

You are right sir, with respect to the arrangements at New Brunswick. I affirm (without any affectation of disinterestedness) that they are perfectly satisfactory to me, and I flatter myself that the gentlemen who have lately arrived here are satisfied that my zeal & exertions have not abated in consequence of my failing to obtain what I acknowledge was the first wish of my heart. On the contrary I have persevered in endeavors to collect every species of useful information relative to the country and have frankly communicated it to Mr. Odell & my other friends. I am now preparing, at the request of Gov'r Carleton, to set off for New Brunswick that I may be present at the first attempt to organize the Government. In this important work I shall exert every talent I possess, and I shall be fully compensated if my conduct shall meet your approbation.

I have taken deliberate & I hope effectual measures to attain such authenticated accounts as you require in your letter. As soon as I can collect 'em they shall be forwarded. At any rate they shall be sent in season to be made use of in the important business which you with such patriotism and zeal have engaged in, and on the result of which (in my idea) depends the fate of this country. The sudden departure of the Bonetta prevents my enlarging.

I have taken the liberty of inclosing a General Return which I have collected with some pains. By my sister I shall forward my remarks & a number of other papers.

Allow me to subscribe myself

Your most obliged & obedient

Friend & Serv't,

Ed. Winslow.

Brook Watson, Esq., M. P.

London.

Lieut. John Robinson to Edward Winslow.

Granville, Nov'r 6th, 1784.

Dear Colonel,—After many disappointments we have at length got the chimney altered. We should not have been able to effect it, if Capt'n Parker had not lent us a mason at Major Thompson's request. We hope to have everything done before your arrival here which we expect will be in a week at farthest. * * *

All the family are well. I am Dear Col.

Most sincerely yours,

John Robinson.

Edward Winslow to Brook Watson.

Halifax, 12th November, 1784.

Sir,—In my last by the Bonetta I enclosed a General Return of Disbanded officers & soldiers & other Loyalists who have lately become settlers in the province of Nova Scotia & New Brunswick and who are entitled to the Royal Bounty of Provisions. I now inclose a Duplicate of that Return and a number of original letters from the muster-masters of the different Districts.

Before I proceed to any particular remarks it will be necessary for me to communicate certain facts respecting the progress of this country, and I am gratify'd that your obliging letter has given me a fair opportunity of endeavoring to convince you that my conduct has been regulated by principles of honour & zeal for the public service.

Among my various duties none has been productive of more perplexity to me than the establishment of a system for the proper distribution of the Royal Bounty of provisions to Loyalists, &c. Every man who arrived in this country called himself a Loyalist and presumed that he was entitled to the Rations of provisions for himself & his family, and they applied for orders without an idea that any scrutiny could possibly be made either into their circumstances or character, or supposing any conditions required on their part.

General Fox, whose decrees were dictated by justice in every instance, considered that it could not be his Majesty's intention to extend his favors to the wealthy or to the vicious & indolent. He therefore peremptorily decided against issuing provisions to persons of those descriptions. When General Campbell succeeded to the command he pursued the same idea and instituted a Board for examining the claims of persons applying for the Royal Bounty. The order for their appointment with their Instructions is No. 1 of the inclosed papers. By the exertions of this Board many abuses were corrected and all the idle vagrants, who had been loitering about the streets of the metropolis & were daily committing irregularities, were by being precluded from the bounty of provisions forced to take possession of their lands, & on producing certificates of their being actual settlers they were restored to the enjoyment of their rations.

No. 2 is Instructions to a second Board with some improvements on the plan. At this Board I volunteered as a member. A few days experience convinced me of the necessity of extreme caution in the discharge of this duty. I feared that a rage for reformation might lead us to harsh and unequitable decisions, and I saw that we were deceived by false & erroneous returns from the distant settlements. In this dilemma I suggested the method of parcelling out the province into districts and appointing persons of activity & judgment to muster all the men, women & children who had actually become settlers. I considered that, exclusive of the object of detecting abuses, they would make discoveries sufficiently important to Government to recompence for the small expense incurred by the appointments. That they would find out the precise number and disposition of settlers & their present situations, and as no steps were taken by the civil authority to ascertain these facts I thought it doubly incumbent on the General. The Returns of the several muster-masters are I believe as accurate as possible & altho' the observations contained in their letters may not be very important, still they may afford some information. By these papers you will see, Sir, that I have endeavored as far as possible to make the Bounty of Government subservient to the purposes of assisting the civil magistrates — encouraging industry, and contributing to the settlement of the country. * * I communicate these details from the same principle that I have related every other transaction of importance since I had the pleasure of knowing you — simply to give you proofs that I am honestly devoted to the service of my country & have thereby some claim to its protection & favor.

The Muster-masters invariably take notice of the extraordinary delays in making the grants to the new settlers. To investigate the causes of those delays would be an invidious & unpleasant task, but the consequences are serious. Had the lands been laid out immediately on the arrival of the settlers (and this was certainly practicable) fifteen of the thirty thousand people who are now receiving rations of provisions would [The remainder of this valuable letter unfortunately is wanting; four leaves having been torn out of Winslow's letter book at this point.]

Leave of Absence & Instructions to Edward Winslow.

Head Q'rs. Halifax, 13th Nov'r, 1784.

Sir,— His Excellency Colonel Thomas Carleton having represented to me that your attendance at the opening of His Majesty's Council at New Brunswick, of which you are a Member, will be very beneficial for the service, and being desirous to do everything in my power which may promote the good of that Province, I do hereby grant you leave of absence for that purpose and you will return to this place as soon as the nature of your duty will permit you. And I am to request that during your absence you would endeavor precisely to ascertain the extent and limits of such lands as have been originally reserved for the crown, or have been purchased from the inhabitants by Government for publick uses at the different outposts which you may have occasion to pass through, and if on enquiry you find that any encroachments have been made on such lands, or that the rights of the crown have in any instance been evaded, you will report the same to me.

You will also enquire into the nature of the expenditure of the different departments at the several outposts, and if you perceive that any unnecessary expences are incurred, or any irregularities committed, you will make me acquainted therewith. And you will from time to time report to me such circumstances as you may think worthy of communication.

You will act as a member of the Provision Boards established at the several places, and you will suggest such methods of reform as you shall think expedient for the good of his Majesty's service. And you will also endeavor to obtain from His Excellency Governor Carleton a grant of land for the proprietors of the land occupied by Government at Fort Howe, conformable to the agreement entered into with them when I was at St. Johns.

Given under my Hand at Halifax this 13th of Nov'r, 1784.

John Campbell,
M. Gen'l.

Edward Winslow to Benjamin Marston.

Mount Necessity* 24th Nov'r, 1784.

Dear Marston.— After thumping, swimming, wallowing & tumbling for four days, I landed at my home on Saturday evening, & was amply recompensed for all my fatigues & perils by finding my wife & little ones in perfect health.

A touch of the Gout has confined me to my room ever since, but I am now recovering & expect to embark the last of this week for New Brunswick. If Sproule† is arrived there I will settle your matters with him — If not, with my friend Odell — at any rate I am sure of succeeding. I would however advise to another application to Gov'r Wentworth & know decisively what his intentions are. When you have concluded on your measures you will give me notice. Interested in everything which concerns you, I shall feel anxious until I know your final determination.‡ I shall get your letters safe if forwarded by Express-Men.

I hope before I return to be possess'd of such materials as will enable me to answer Mr. Watson's letter to his satisfaction. I have made some progress on this tour. Give a spur once in a while to Byles — make him exert himself.

The Man waits. Adieu,

Most cordially & affectionately Yours,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

Mount Necessity, Nov'r. 27, 1784.

Dear Sir,—The excessive fatigues of our journey have produced so severe a fit of the Gout that both Chip and myself are now confined to our rooms. We however hope to embark for New Brunswick in a few days.

*Edward Winslow's residence in Granville, N. S.

†George Sproul of Long Island, N. Y., settled in New Brunswick and became surveyor general and a member of the council of the province. He was a most efficient official and an estimable man. He died in Fredericton in 1817, aged 76 years.

‡That is his plans for the future. Marston had fallen out with the governor of Nova Scotia and had been dismissed from his position as chief surveyor at Shelburne. He had many friends, who believed him to have been unfairly treated.

Hailes has forwarded to Mr. Taylor a St. John's Gazette wherein is contained the address* to Gov. Carleton, his answer, and the proclamation. They will of course be published in the Halifax papers. The language of the address I suppose will give offence to the great men of Nova Scotia, but having a predilection for plain English I am glad to see it on this occasion. The proclamation seems to be cautious and calculated to prevent any altercation respecting the principles of decision which the Judges may adopt previous to the completion of the Legislative body. I shall, as opportunities offer, give you information of such events as I think important.

In my tour through the peninsula I have been astonished at observing the improvements lately made; the number of houses built, and above all the increase of Saw mills — no less than nine have been erected within a few months in the neighborhood of Annapolis, including three at St. Mary's Bay; preparations are making to set up other mills on almost every stream that runs into the great Bason of Annapolis; a remarkable one is just set a going by a Mr. Thorne from Long Island and now saws night and day at Broad Cove on the Granville side, and I am told it is surrounded with a fund of timber that cannot be exhausted for many years and so contiguous to the Cove that the lumber is put afloat in it with the utmost facility. These exertions, which extend to the other side of the Bay, afford a fair proof that our favorite position will be established and that large quantities of lumber will be immediately ready for exportation. The operations of the new comers have excited something that resembles emulation in the languid wretches who formerly inhabited the country. Shame has produced a degree of industry that never was discovered before. The neighbors of a Mr. Willet and Mr. Davids have put up fences, and those who live near Mr. James and Mr. McKown have cut down several trees, one man has actually begun to erect a dyke and I have no doubt that in a few years, after they have been eye witnesses of the advantages, they will build chimnies to their houses and barns for their cattle. * * *

I am, dear Sir,

Your obed't & devoted Friend & Serv't,

Ed. Winslow.

*See Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia, Vol. III., p. 38. The address contained pointed references to the grievances of the Loyalists and to their treatment by Governor Parr and his council. They designate themselves as "a number of oppressed and insulted Loyalists," say that they were formerly freemen, and again hope to be so under his auspices. They congratulate Governor Carleton on his "safe arrival to this new world, to check the arrogancy of "tyranny, crush the growth of injustice, and establish such wholesome laws "as are and ever have been the basis of our glorious constitution." The address refers to the services of Col. Carleton as "commander of the 29th regiment in the late rebellion," and speaks of him as "the brother of our illustrious friend and patron, Sir Guy Carleton." The new governor replied to the address in modest and in moderate terms.

Penelope Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, November 28th, 1784.

Dear Chippy — for I chuse to begin the correspondence with all possible affection for a reason that I shall give you before I rise from my chair — but first of all my wishes are that you have safely crossed the Bay of Fundy, that you have recovered the agitation & Gloom that must have attended you with the Idea of a lasting abode in the new World of Trees & Stumps, & that this scrip will find you in health and spirits. The Taylors & Haliburtons are so good as never to leave me alone, one or the other constantly grace our fire side. We talk much of the [New] Brunswickers — a sigh is sometimes wafted that flatters you not a little. The dancing Partys are kept up with great — Violence, I had like to have said, but Spirit is a better word. Miss Duncan gives a Ball on Monday evening, Miss Brenton on Friday, both of which I shall give you and Mr. Hailes an account of as soon as I receive it from my faithful aide Camps. The last Assembly was amazingly brilliant, the Ladies Dress superb beyond what the New Englanders had seen before. Mrs. Wentworth stood first in fashion & magnificence. Her Gown & Petticoat of sylvan tissue trimmed with Italian Flowers & the finest blond Lace, a train of four yards long, her hair and wrist ornamented with real Diamonds. Miss Duncan was elegant in a fawn coloured satin covered with crepe, black velvet waiste, pearl sprigs in her hair, no feathers or flowers. She was much admired as was Kitty Taylor in unadorned White. Miss Parr looked vastly well in cream coloured satin with sable fur. Lady D—— & Miss Bayley figured in a profusion of waveing Plumes & flowers — the latter exhibited in a minuet a little in the waping style, to use the language of the Brigade Major: Capt. Dalrymple had the honor of her hand but swears he will never be caught in another such scrape. The evening was altogether approved of. The Room is new papered & new lamped. Mr. Taylor distinguished himself as an excellent manager. There is a Town assembly began last Thursday, no Navy or Army admitted, Messrs Uniacke and Dight managers. It is said to be in opposition to the other Party.

Mr Townsend & Will Coffin are not yet arrived. We have expected them every hour the last week, now begin to wonder. Judge Brenton tells me Mr. Townsend had engaged the cabin of a brig for himself & Lady. I do not mean to alarm you my good friend, but this is the report. It is certain he has seen Jannett, as Mr. G. Spooner, who left Boston a few days ago, informs us. (Mr. Spooner has come to explore the country. I have advised him to go immediately to Brunswick, take a house in the neighborhood of you & Col. Winslow — the charming Loquacity of him and his Wife would prevent time hanging heavy). But Chippy suppose Mr. Townsend should be accompany'd by the fair Janett or the still fairer Miss Moore, of what consequence can it be to you if the intelligence I received yesterday be true. It must be immaterial who you Welcome as Mrs. Townsend. The story's so interesting to us both that I am in haste to tell you that our all important all knowing neighbour, with intelligence & curiosity marked in every feature, attacked me without any preface —"& pray Miss Winslow, how happens it that you are going to steal a march upon all your friends & acquaintance & not trust us with your confidence ?" "Me ! Madam, I must confess I have not any such design." "Come, come, don't deny what I know to be a truth that you are soon to be married to Mr. T[aylo]r, & it is as certain that Miss Kitty [Taylor] is to have Mr. Chipman, the Solicitor General of New Brunswick & that Mr. Chipman is to be at Halifax early in the Spring & take his fair Partner to St. Johns."

This positive assertion & the idea of being your "Mama" struck me so forcibly that for my Life I could not forbear laughing heartily —which was confirmation of her opinion strong as proof of Holy Writ. I have since in Vain attempted to undeceive the good Lady.

Now Chippy this near & dear connection of ours (that is to be) intitles me to the pleasure of hearing from you as often as is in your power. Consider "my Child" how interesting every event of your life is to me & believe me that I am now anxious for a line from some one of the Trio*— The Colonel & Mr. Hailes have a share in my concern.

Adieu, rest assured that I am, with every friendly sentiment and "Parental affection,"

Yours sincerely,

Penelope.

If this should reach you near Coffin's Manor, offer my love to the Major & his Anna — tell them I intend to make a good neighbour to them when I get to their Dominions on my estate at Elm Grove — or whatever name you incline to christen it.

Winslow's Commission as Surrogate†

Mather Byles to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, Tuesday — [Nov. 30, 1784.]

I return you many thanks for your kind favour of November 24th, which reached me on Sunday, and congratulate you on your safe arrival at Mount Necessity. As your touch of the Gout is one of those obedient attacks that only last while they are convenient, I don't suppose it gives you much pain or anxiety, though I think now you have a right of exemption from all attacks for one year at least. It's a hard case if one month out of twelve won't excuse you. * * *

Previous to the receipt of your letter I had wrote Lieut. Charles Stewart* and Lieut. Fraser, inclosing copies of the extract from Brook Watson, and requesting every information in their power, and I shall continue to bore them once a month at least, till I receive their returns. I enclose you one from Captain Legget,† at Country Harbour which is the first that has been received; and shall regularly embrace every opportunity of gaining intelligence from the different settlements. Mr. Brittain is making his report of the settlements about Chester and says it will be ready in the course of this month. Mr. Marston has wrote on the subject to Shelburne and has given me leave to take up and open his answers when they come.

I am extremely obliged by your kindly offers of service: In case anything should turn up in my favour at New Brunswick, will you forgive me if I venture to say a little on this subject? The friendly manner in which you have treated me, makes me regard you as a parent, and as such I wish to explain to you my situation.

I have lately received letters from my father* he informs me he shall be out here early in the spring. My mother being unwell, and the family being unable to do without some person to provide for them and do a thousand little things for which a man is constantly wanted, I should prefer (if it could be done) to remain with them till he returns. The principal pleasure which I promise myself at New Brunswick is to be with you, and render myself of service to you. If therefore you delay settling at New Brunswick till the Spring and can then find an employment for me, it would suit me better than going there this winter. At the same time my circumstances are such I must embrace the first eligible opportunity of putting myself forward in life — and God knows I have no future prospects but through you and your friendship. Let me my worthy friend in this as in every other instance, rely on your protection, and commit the affair wholly to your management. I will abide by your decision and am confident that you will act for me better than I could for myself. * * *

I am pleased to find that the Commissary's† abilities continue to unfold themselves. His talents at composition are certainly very great, But while I was at Granville he exhibited principally in the "Sublime"— from your letter I should imagine he has added the "Beautiful"‡ and I suppose his exertions in this new stile may be partly attributed to the absence of Murray, as he must find less difficulty in obtaining from Mama his allowance of smoked beef at breakfast which was often the occasion of one of his grum sallies. I hope that Poppy‖ recovers her complexion as the cold weather comes on, and that Pen is less leaky than formerly. Tell them that Murray has arrived safe in the Downs, when the Sally was spoke with by the Hermione, which arrived here last Saturday

*The Rev. Mather Byles, D. D., is meant. At this time he was in England, but came out to Halifax soon afterwards and became chaplain of the garrison until he was appointed rector of Trinity church, St. John. His biography is given in G. Herbert Lee's History of the Church of England in the Province of New Brunswick.

after a passage of twenty five days. * * Mr. Harcourt arrived here in the Hermione, he has brought out the stone for your father's tomb, which when landed will be taken into custody by Mr. Taylor. Mr. Watson is using all his influence to obtain for Mr. Brinley the appointment of Commissary at this place, and it was supposed his application would be successful. Who do you think was his rival ? Andrew Finucane ! * * My father has had his final hearing before the Commissioners — they have said many civil things to him, told him that his charges were reasonable, that they were well supported, and that they had no further occasion for his attendance. This was all perfectly handsome & he began to enquire what compensation might be expected & when it was to be applied for. But these arcana of the cabinet were not to be divulged & he is yet ignorant what will be the result. He begs me to repeat to you his assurances of gratitude for the kindly attention you have paid to his family during his absence. * * *

Dr. Calef,* who came passenger in the Hermione, says, that the Board for examining the claims of the Loyalists will get through their business by the next meeting of Parliament in January and it will then be ascertained what compensation they are to receive for their losses.

The Governor has received a letter from Gov'r Hancock, communicating a resolve of Congress that it appears from surveys which have been taken that the Eastern-most river in the Bay of Passamaquoddy is the true River St. Croix alluded to in the treaty of Peace, & requesting that he would order those persons who have encroached on the territory of the States to retire peaceably within the limits of the Province. This letter has been communicated to the General and I suppose will occasion a fresh requisition for troops, though it is not now in his Excellency's district, so I suppose the matter will be settled on your side the Bay.

Monday, December 6th, 1784.

Mr. Marston has just given me a return which he received from Barrington and I enclose a copy of it. The original I will keep here for fear of accidents. Mr. Marston goes in the morning and will take charge of this. The Board of Accounts have put off their final decision respecting the Departments to this day owing to some difficulties they have met with from Mr. Brinley.

*Doctor John Calef, formerly of Ipswich, Mass., was an active Loyalist. His wife was a daughter of the Rev. Jedediah Jewett of Rowley, Mass. Dr. Calef was one of the pall-bearers at Whitefield's funeral. He was a surgeon with the royal forces at the capture of Penobscot, and he has left us a graphic account of the siege of Penobscot by the Americans. (See Article II., St. Croix Courier Historical Series.) He was sent to England by the Penobscot Associated Loyalists to urge the fixing of the boundary between the British provinces and the United States at the River Penobscot. He was afterwards surgeon of the garrison at St. John. He will be frequently referred to in the papers that follow. He died at St. Andrews in 1812, at the age of 87 years.

Captain White* has just returned from Chedabucto and has collected materials for you which he will get ready for me in a day or two. Mr. Shaw is also hard at work and thinks that he shall do the business very compleatly and will write you himself when his returns are ready, interspersing a variety of curious and interesting observations respecting the privilege given the Americans to fish on the coast.

Your good mother is very well and sends her love. Sister Penny has a bad cold which occasions a slight fever. She is now recovering but will not be able to write by this conveyance. Miss Millar waits for the ceremony of a first letter. Billy Coffin has accepted the office of Superintendent General of the family in the absence of Mr. Marston. All your circle of female acquaintances are well except Fattelinda who has been confined by a bilious disorder but is recovering. Colonel Goold is fighting hard with the Gout which hangs about his stomach and may probably be too much for him. Sophy and the old lady are well. Major Upham's disorder has terminated in his favor and he is now recovering fast. Major Murray 'tis said has sailed directly for N. B. in a vessel which sailed about the same time with the Hermione. * * *

London, 2 Dec'r, 1784.

My dear Ned,— I wrote you per the Adamant acknowledging the receipt of your letter of September 2d p. the Brothers, & announced to you the safe arrival of your Boy.† He stayed a week or ten days at Geyer's and after rigging him out with a new suit of cloaths, with hat, stockings, &c., compleat, he went to school last Thursday, and tho' going among perfect strangers behaved very manfully. He is placed at Cheshurst where Geyer's son Frederic was and his son Tom now is. Inclosed are the terms of the school — the Master however consented to take him at 20 Guineas p. annum instead of £25. The Christmas holidays will soon begin when he will return to Mr. Geyers, where he receives every sort of attention and care — the more I think of it, the more I am convinced of the Propriety of sending him here for Education. The expence will be well bestowed, nor will it be very great in addition to the price of schooling. His cloaths and other incidents will not amount to much. I don't wonder at Polly's being distressed at parting with him, but she will in the end be thankful for it, as the want of the advantages resulting from it we have every reason to believe could never be compensated.

*Gideon White, as already stated in these notes, had lands at Chedebucto, where his old corps had settled. Col. Winslow at this time was engaged in collecting information through his friends respecting the condition and resources of Nova Scotia. He embodied this information in his own admirable fashion in a report which he transmitted to Brook Watson for that gentleman's information. Brook Watson was considered, by reason of his great interest in the Loyalists and his position and ability, to be their best champion in England. See Brook Watson's letters to Edward Winslow under date 6th March, 1785, and 26th August, 1785.

Your friend Doct. Jeffries a few days ago made an aerial Excursion with Mons'r Blanchard in a baloon*. They ascended amidst a vast concourse of people and received their applause. I wish you had been present you would have enjoyed it much. The next Vessel from Halifax must inform us of the St. Lawrence's arrival. I am very impatient for letters after Chip and all of you have met. I know of nothing material to acquaint you with and have only to offer my respects and best wishes to the old Lady and Girls, to Polly and the Children. Adieu, God bless you for ever & ever. T. A. Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax 7th Dec'r, 1784.

My dear Sir,—I embrace the few minutes while Mr. Marston is putting up his papers to say God bless you and yours. I have appointed our friend to be my Deputy† in New Brunswick, and have wrote to Gov'r Carleton recommending him and Davidson. As it is my wish to expedite the public business which depends on my office, and in the manner most agreeable to Gov'r Carleton, I shall be much obliged in your advice and any information to Mr. Marston that will aid us herein. I have the fullest reliance on his discretion and shall trust much to his judgment. I have given M. a pamphlet for you — it is severe enough. I hear from London that my letter was handed about to many persons, and that Fanning, you and I were opposing this Gov't with a view to effect a change. My answer is, that I have not any knowledge thereof — altho' probably such an event would be useful to prophet, priest and King.

The packet sailed today. Governor Desbarres is under way for Cape Breton in the Fecility, C'pt Bouterich with him. We have no news. I shall be much obliged if you will send me the public papers containing any proclamations that are made, &c. Also the boundarys of New Brunswic. I hear the Congress claims Magadavick — if they succeed they will cut off one of our most important reservations particularly mentioned in all my instructions, and reported by me. It is not improbable that I may get over the Bay soon after this but it is uncertain, so I don't declare for the route.

Pray make my regards to our good friend Mr. Hazen and his good family — also to Hailes, Balfour, Lambton* &c.

Adieu my dear Sir, a merry Xmas to you and every happiness is the cordial wish of your unfeigned friend,

J. Wentworth.

P. S. Mardonogh writes me late in October that Sproule will not be able to embark until the Spring. Possibly Marston might be a good person to assist him.

2 1-2 P. M. Since my letter was sealed I have received yours pr. Mr. Wright. Many thanks & many wishes for your & Chip's being again on good footing. The Gout is a sad enemy to Travellers. Mrs. W. desires her thanks. I shall not wonder to see her take a rove to New Brunswic. The Gov'r, Council & Assembly give a Toast today, possibly the Men and Measures of N. Brunswic may come into conversation — or tonight at the Club, which is with me. I must dress for the business.

Adieu, Ever yours, J. W.

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

Granville, 26 Dec'r, 1784.

Dear Sir,—I had the pleasure of your letter by Marston. He was so fortunate as to arrive safe before I left New Brunswick. I attended him to the Governor's, who expressed his satisfaction at the appointment in very flattering terms and I left Marston comfortably settled in a mess with Chipman and Hailes at the house† hired for me where the Commissary lived when we were at St. John's.

I thank you for the pamphlet altho' I must acknowledge that it is the worst thing of the kind I ever saw. I am very sorry that a letter which I was the innocent cause of procuring should (contrary to your intention) have been so freely made use of — the other part of the London intelligence gives me no pain. They may say what they please of me so long as they continue me one of a Trio with yourself and Fanning. I don't like the expression "opposing the Government"— but "effecting a change," I have no objection to. I will give 'em a proof of my disinterestedness by persevering in my endeavors to produce that effect. A contracted man who wished to serve only the province of New Brunswick would exert all his talents to continue the present Governor of Nova Scotia in his seat, because nothing would so effectually contribute to the settlement of the rival province. But my patriotism is not confined to one side of the Bay of Fundy; I wish well to the Province of Nova Scotia also.

With respect to the Boundaray of our Province nothing new has taken place. Governor Carleton has no doubt that the river Scoodiac was the intended boundary between us and the Massachusetts, and he proceeds accordingly, regardless of an ambiguous epistle from Governor H[ancock] forwarded by Governor Parr. Allen,* the drunken partizan, has thrown out some threats that he will employ the Indians to remove the people settled between Magadavick & Scoodiac, but Mr. Campbell, Bliss and other discreet men lately from Passamaquoddy say they are under no apprehensions from him or his adherents.

The proposed plan of incorporating the new towns at the mouth of the River and forming a City by the name of St. John has prevented a serious representation from the people. The town on the east side was christened (by Major Studholme and others) in consequence of a letter from Gov. Parr to Major S. wherein he makes the request pointedly but says, "That the idea originated in female vanity." The rude inhabitants of this new country have not yet acquired a sufficient degree of gallantry to indulge that vanity any further, and they were evidently uneasy — they are now satisfy'd.

Assure Mrs. Wentworth that the ladies of New Brunswick are literally and absolutely in the enjoyment of a variety of rational amusements. That determined enemy to dancing, the Gout, prevented my personal attendance at the assembly, but I have been assured it was pleasant and agreeable. The next will probably be more numerous. The room is much superior to that at Halifax.

John Hancock and Samuel Adams.

[Note:—The reference to John Hancock, governor of Massachusetts and first signer of the Declaration of Independence, which is found in the foregoing letter, has recalled to the mind of the Editor of this book the severe strictures of Edward Winslow on Hancock and Adams, written apparently at New York during the Revolution. The exact date is uncertain, as no date is to be found in the original paper which, it may be added, is a rough draft with interlineations and erasures. It was undoubtedly written at a time when the feelings of the contestants were wrought up to the highest pitch of animosity and is quite characteristic of the spirit which prevailed between the majority of the Whigs and Tories of that period. The intelligent reader will, however, be able to judiciously balance the strictures of either party in the contest, and, in view of the fact that the panegyrists of John Hancock and Samuel Adams are numbered by the score, it would seem but fair that in this instance the good old motto should prevail, "Audi alteram partem." Winslow's strictures follow.

At a period so critical as the present, even anecdotes of individuals who have figured on either side become important, and the man whose name is often mentioned is necessarily a subject of considerable inquiry: What was his origin—his former situation—his general character? etc., etc., are questions that naturally occur. If the object be a member of the American Congress, and we are told that previous to his exertions on the side of rebellion he was a gentleman of probity and that he had sacrificed property to principle, the most sanguine Loyalist, if his temper is ingenuous feels himself in some degree interested for the fate of such a man.

These observations have arisen from reading the "Notes in the history of the present war in America." The two men there characterized are Sam. Adams and J. Hancock.

Samuel Adams is the son of an obscure malster in the town of Boston, who by extraordinary exertion was enabled to educate his son at the college at Cambridge in New England. Too indolent to pursue any of the learned professions, he at the death of his father took possession of the tools and became a malster. A propensity to dabble in the politics of the town caused a neglect of business and he sank into extreme poverty. His natural disposition to cabal increased with his distress and he was sure to be concerned in every little attempt to stir strife in the neighborhood or sedition in the parish. Deliberately cunning in his measures and specious in his reasoning, covered also with an external sanctity, the ignorant vulgar listened to him with some degree of attention.

A family suffering for want of the common necessaries of life was the argument by which his friends obtained for him the employment of examiner [?] of taxes for the town of Boston, the legal commission on which amounted to about £60.

Hitherto his ambition had aimed at nothing higher than occasionally disturbing the peace of the town in which he lived: an opportunity soon after presented for exerting his talents on a larger scale. A man by the name of Hancock had risen from a bookbinder to a merchant and had by contracts, made in the last war with the King's Commissaries, amassed a fortune of £60,000 or £70,000 sterling. At his death he left the bulk of his property to his nephew, the present John Hancock. In this state of affluence—ignorant, awkward and unsuspicious, he fell into the hands of Adams. Flattery was a novelty and pleased him. He began to suppose himself of consequence: he was introduced to private committees, caucus clubs and all the variety of meetings where mischievous men hatch and nurse sedition. His cash was useful: he was reimbursed with honors—he was appointed a Select man. Adams continued his political guardian, made his speeches and furnished him with matter, etc. They were inseparable companions till an unlucky event had nearly put an end to their connection.

Very considerable sums collected by Adams had never been paid into the treasury—the deficiency occasioned clamors and a process [of execution]. It was reduced to a certainty that Adams had defrauded the town and expended the money. What could be done? Even Hancock detested the conduct; but all his secrets were deposited in the breast of his friend; he might be betrayed—and he could not yet go alone in politics. He therefore concluded to pay the deficiency and save as far as possible the credit of the tax gatherer.

It would be unentertaining to trace these men thro' all their windings to their present consequence. It will be sufficient to observe that Hancock by scattering his money among a crowd of lazy politicians acquired a temporary influence and obtained seats for himself and Adams in the General Assembly of the Province [of Massachusetts.] Here they distinguished themselves by a uniform opposition to government and by most persevering exertions to increase the confusions of the country, until this insignificant malster began to anticipate the establishment of an Independency. They became members of the Continental Congress, their conduct since is generally known.

I only mean to fix these few facts — in order to correct the mistakes of the author of "Notes in the history of the War in America"—viz: that Adams was low bred—poor—and a cheat—and that Hancock was his dupe.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 12th January 1785.

My dear Sir,—* * * I am much obliged in your kindness to our mutual friend Mr. Marston. He will do us both credit. The Governor has not yet entered upon my letter, but I think must perceive my sincere disposition to co-operate with his views and add every honor and facility to his administration that personal or official influence can afford. Little as either or both are, they are equally honest and firm.

Our worthy friend Colonel Fanning is at the table with us. He was Mrs. Wentworth's* beau at the Assembly and staid with us last night. He begs his regards to you. Wrote you a few days since.

Mrs. Wentworth longs to shake her shoes in New Brunswick — has given me a thousand, I believe more, things to say upon your gouty foot, dancing, &c., and sums all up by saying, "I wish we could have him here or we be among them."

I rejoice in your success at New Brunswick and so I shall heartily in every addition to it. We have no news but are talking much that your side of the Bay will want provisions. I hope not for many reasons besides my affection to New Brunswick. If you do not suffer and complain; envy, hatred and malice will feed on some breasts here, where it evidently lodges.

My best regards attend you and your family. Many, many happy New-Years to you and to them, is the continual prayer of, my dear Sir,

Your affect'e faithful friend

J. Wentworth.

*Mrs. Wentworth was a remarkably clever woman, and the story of her life is a very romantic one. Her maiden name was Frances Deering, and the towns of Francestown and Deering in New Hampshire are named in her honor. She was a Bostonian by birth, very accomplished and gay, and possessed of great tact and ability. She was a cousin of Theodore Atkinson, jr., and also of Sir John Wentworth. Her earliest attachment was for Wentworth, but while he was absent in England she married Atkinson. The latter was secretary of the province of New Hampshire and a member of the council. He died at Portsmouth on Saturday, October 28, 1769, at the age of 33 years, and was accorded a state funeral. Just two weeks later his young widow was married in the same chapel, beneath which the first husband was buried, to Governor John Wentworth. There was much gossip at Portsmouth about the three cousins at the time, founded on the facts here related. The only son of Sir John and Lady Wentworth was Charles Mary Wentworth, who was born at Portsmouth in 1775. He succeeded his father as baronet. Lady Wentworth went to England in 1798 and was presented at court, where she was greatly admired by Queen Charlotte for her elegance and manners, and received the appointment of a lady-in-waiting, with permission to reside abroad and receive £500 a year salary. Lady Wentworth was a charming hostess. On the occasion of a ball at Government House in Halifax, Dec. 1792, the Nova Scotia Gazette contained a most elaborate description, which, although savoring of fulsome adulation, was no doubt intended to express the hearty good will generally felt for the governor and his good lady. The following extract is quoted:—"That "ease, elegance and superiority of manners, which must ever gain Mrs. Went- "worth the admiration of the whole community, and that hospitality which so "distinguish the character and conduct of our beloved and adored governor, "never shone with more lustre than on this occasion." Edward Winslow was always a prime favorite with Lady Wentworth as well as with Sir John. See letter of Daniel Lyman under date April 7, 1800.

Monson Hoyt to Edward Winslow.

St. Ann's Point, January 12th, 1785.

Sir,—I did myself the honor to write you in October last, since which I have had frequent conversation with Major Armstrong on the subject of Captn. Cook's* land, but finding he argued the impropriety of locating land for persons not in America, and there being no Precedent for it, I wrote him officially on the subject. * * *

The Major being hurried, on the receipt of my letter apologized for not answering it then, the next day I saw him when he observed that he was assured no grant could be obtained for land in the name of a person in England; that on the arrival of Capt'n Cook he would be accommodated and doubtless to his wish; that, as the new Governor had lately landed, he had reason to suppose such regulations would shortly take place as would enable him to determine on the matter, but that at present no person knew better than you that Captain Cook could not be accomodated with land.

Governor Carleton is expected at St. Ann's in the course of the winter, it is very probable I shall then be able to ascertain the propriety of enforcing the matter and be assured nothing shall be wanting on the part of, Sir,

Your most devoted humble Servant,

Monson Hoyt.†

Mather Byles Jr., to Edward Winslow.

Tuesday 25th January, 1785.

We have an abundance of distressful stories from Shelburne, Passamaquoddy, St. Mary's Bay, &c, complaining of the shortness of provisions, & the danger they are in of starving. Gov'r Carleton has informed the General of his having purchased a quantity of flour at Passamaquoddy and *Captain Thomas Ive Cook of the Queen's Rangers Cavalry.

†Monson Hoyt was a lieutenant in the Prince of Wales' American Regiment in 1777, and quartermaster of the corps. He was the secretary and registrar of the board of directors appointed for the laying out of a town at St. Anne's Point. The following is a sample of the location tickets or certificates issued by the board:—

"I hereby certify that Lieut. Zachariah Brown is the proprietor of Lot No. "72 at St. Anne's Point, by virtue of a general draft made on the 22nd day of "June last.

"By desire of the directors.

"(Signed) MONSON HOYT, Registrar.

"St. Anne's Point, August 25, 1784."

Monson Hoyt afterwards removed to St. John, and engaged in business there in partnership with the celebrated Benedict Arnold. They quarrelled, and Hoyt publicly accused Arnold of burning his warehouse, whereupon he was sued by Arnold for defamation of character. In the trial that followed Ward Chipman was counsel for Arnold and Elias Hardy for Hoyt. The jury awarded the plaintiff 2 shillings and 6 pence damages.

St. John's for the supply of the Loyalists — however as the quantity was small it didn't cause much alarm in this quarter, and his Excellency is informed that the money will be paid whenever applied for. A sloop laded with flour from the Adamant sailed from this yesterday for St. John's, and another is to follow her in a few days. The proprietors of St. Ann's Point* have written an address of thanks to the General for his attention to that place in establishing a post there, and building a magazine. It is signed by Major Armstrong,† and a polite answer to it goes by this express.

A circular letter has been wrote to the Commissaries at the different outposts directing them to inspect the returns of the Muster Masters and strike off all those who have died, left the settlements &c. since the muster and to issue in future to such only as are actually on the spot. This is all that has been done in the official way either important or unimportant since I wrote last.

I inclose you Mr. Porter's‡ report of the district from Halifax to Shelburne, also this day's paper, a letter from Mr. Coffin, & a letter from Col. Robinson. Your News Papers I shall forward by this conveyance. Your sister doesn't write as she is affronted with the whole set from New Brunswick to Granville inclusive, and she thinks by not writing she is silently pursuing a favourite maxim—Reverence thy-self. It seems you all owe her a letter. The family are well. Miss Miller has made her appearance at the Assembly [dances]—cut out the whole circle of Belles — has become a reigning toast and is allowed by your connoiseurs in beauty to beat Miss Polly Prince all hollow.

Major Upham has had a return of his disorder and is now very low.

Mr. Brittain‖ tells me that your gout is still hanging about you. I hope it does not carry on the attack so violently as to prevent your amusing yourself with your sleigh, or sporting at the Annapolis Assemblies; indeed I can't help flattering myself that it is only a political touch which is predestined to keep you at Granville till the Spring. Gordon pretends

*St. Anne's Point had not yet received the name of Fredericton, nor had it been fixed upon as the capital of the Province of New Brunswick, but it had been laid out in lots for a town, and these lots had been granted.

†Major Richard Armstrong of the Queen's Rangers is here referred to. He entered the corps in August, 1776, as captain of the Grenadier company, and in October 25, 1778, was promoted major. He was a distinguished officer during the Revolutionary War. At the peace in 1783 he received a large grant of land at the mouth of the Nacawick Stream, where he built a saw and grist mill. Some years later he retired to Fredericton. He was advanced by successive promotions to the rank of lieutenant general in the army. He died in 1817 and was buried on his own property in Upper Queensbury.

to expect you soon; the General says not till March. Which do you think is right?

Tell Mrs. Winslow that Balloon hats are grown quite obsolete and now no lady ventures to show her nose without it's half covered by a Lunardi* Bonnet, Red powder for the hair, and a Lunardi Handkerchief for the neck.

Extract from a letter wrote by Willm. Donaldson† to Thos. Newland, Esquire, Merch't in London, dated the 9th Feb'y, 1785, and sent pr. the Medway, Capt'n Miller, for London; viz.—

"Sir;—After the peace finding no good business to be done in the States and a prospect of things being worse, besides having all my life-time lived under a British Government I must confess I have not only the strongest attachment to it but would wish to end my days under one. These considerations, with some little business, induced me to visit this Country when after exploring it almost thoroughly, I sat myself down at the mouth of the River St. John, west side of the Bay of Fundy. You will I hope pardon my saying a few words about this new Country.

The summers here I find exceedingly pleasant and healthy and the winter by no means so cold as I expected it; it is more steady, and I think not so cold as at New York. The River St. John's, up which I have been about 120 miles, is pretty well settled and since the arrival of our new Governor, is settling fast. The lands are exceedingly rich and good and the River is the noblest I have seen in America, and I have now travelled in it almost from the extremes of the South to that of the North. It is navigable for vessels of considerable burthen as far as St. Anns, about 90 miles up. St. Ann's is an old cleared spot and is the most centrical and beautiful situation for a town I ever beheld. About it and near it on both sides the River is the land allotted for the Officers and Privates of the Disbanded Corps, who are making rapid progress in their new settlements and think themselves amply paid for their toil by the generous increase. This River is navigable for small craft to the Great Falls, about 150 miles above St. Anns.

To view this Town in so short a time would astonish every stranger as it would to see the improvements going on in the Country. The number of Saw Mills erected are very great, and can only be imagined

*Lunardi was a famous balloonist, and his exploits were all the rage in society at this period.

†William Donaldson was a Virginia Loyalist. His losses consequent upon the Rebellion were estimated at £3,000. He went at first to Shelburne and afterwards to St. John. He was extensively engaged in business and William Garden of Fredericton was a partner. He became financially embarrassed and was forced to leave the province. He died in 1797.

from the noble prospect this Country opens for Lumber, and which is not to be equalled in any of the States. The only wood that is scarce is White Oak; red and gray Oak there is in abundance, and the most convincing proof I can give you of the fair prospect there is in this article is, that a few days ago in consequence of proposals I received from a merchant of eminence at Halifax to load two vessels here in the Spring, I sent him an answer lately what I could contract for, and every article in this infant country was considerably below what he could be supplied with in New England or any of the States, and in a few days I expect his answer to conclude the Contract for upwards of 2,000 tons timber, consisting of white, red, and grey Oak, Elm, Beech, Birch, Pine, Spruce, Black Birch, & Rock Maple timber for ship-building, assorted as Spars, Masts, Keel pieces, top-masts, yards, plank, barrels and staves.

Ship-building where every material is, or may be, got on the spot, cannot fail to be an article of great importance in this Country. Many vessels large and small are now building on the River, and as the materials are of the best sort, it may be expected that vessels will be lasting and durable and have a preference at foreign markets.

The preparations also making for the fishery is very considerable, and if encouragement is given, which I hope and doubt not will, no country bids or can bid fairer soon to be the pride, envy and admiration of her neighbors.

As for a grazing country nature has been so bountifull to this, that it cannot fail even with common attention, to be the first or among the first on this Continent.

As I am informed Brook Watson, Esquire, has the interest of this country much at heart, and tho' I know that Gentleman yet I have not the honor of corresponding with him, I will therefore trouble you to communicate that part of this letter to him that respects the Country as I know it will give him pleasure, and I will send another copy of it to my worthy friend Edward Winslow, Esquire, now at Annapolis, who is as much interested in its prosperity as any man existing, and who disinterestedly has taken more pains and done more for its happiness and interest than any man I know.

Excuse my saying so much but I could not well say less in justice to the people and prospects of this promising Country.

One thing I had almost forgot, and which is highly necessary to mention, the fallacious idea that has crept into Lloyd's Coffee House about the danger and difficulty of the navigation of the Bay of Fundy. This doctrine must have been set up by some designing people and is so notoriously false that it hardly deserves a serious answer. The Harbour is a very good one, many excellent wharves are raising, the navigation of the Bay is safe and easy, and it abounds with a number of commodious bays and harbours. As a proof of this hardly an accident happens in a Twelve-month to the numerous shipping that have come here, and our harbour has this further advantage that it is open at all seasons of the year and we have arrivals during the whole winter. As I hinted before. I am fully convinced that this ill natured report has been propagated with a view to injure the settlement so I am equally sensible that it will of itself speedily fall to the ground, having no foundation in truth."

to Monday the 21st 1785.

Dear Ned;—Yours of 18th Jany, came to hand two days ago with blanket rug & suit of cloaths, for which I thank you.

I have endeavored to secure the land on the Gore between your sister's land & the manor of Coffin but have not been able to succeed. * *

I shall give Coffin the scantlins for your frame immediately and when Dogget arrives he shall be taken care of immediately and set to work.

The Governor has been up to St. Anns. I did not go with him. The party was the Gov'r, Hazen, Odell and Knox.† I did not see any room to insert myself conveniently into it so made no offer. But next week Lambton and myself set out for a tour upon a much larger scale. We go to St. Anns, cross the country to Schudiac, then down to St. Andrews, thence cross the country to ye St. John's by the Orramucto, if we can find it, & so home.‡

While I think of it, it is necessary that Penny and Sally's‖ grants for

*This seems to have been the name selected for the house where Marston lodged with Chipman and Harris W. Hailes. See Chipman's letter under date 20th March, 1785.

†This was Thomas Knox, who was deputy muster master of the Loyalists and disbanded troops on the St. John River in 1784. He was afterwards joint agent with his father, William Knox, for the Province of New Brunswick in England.

‡Benjamin Marston in his diary speaks of this trip as equal to a "campaign." The route traversed by Lambton and Marston is shown in an old plan. The plan, which is in the Public Record office in London, is dated 1796. There is on it a dotted line with the inscription: "The dotted line describes Mr. Lambton's path from the River Saint John to Saint Andrews, Passamaquoddy Bay, in 1784." The route is not identical with that outlined by Marston in his letter of Feb. 18, 1785, but as Marston had a very imperfect idea of the route, this is not an important discrepancy. The fact, however, remains that the map states the journey of Lambton was made in 1784, whereas his journey with Marston was in February, 1785. Dr. Ganong suggests two explorations that are distinct, but I am disposed to identify them. An exploration made in the winter of 1784-5 might be marked on the map by the draughtsman in 1786 as "Mr. Lambton's path in 1784."—W. O. R.

their lands be returned to the Secretary's office to be registered. * * *

'Tis now Monday, & I have sent the Major [Coffin] up a list of scantlins this morning. * * As I expect to set out on my Sylvan expedition in a day or two any matters of business must be directed to Chippy. We are well. Last Wednesday we exhibited at the Hall, under the auspices of General Chippy, a monstrous great Ball & fine supper to about 36 Gentlemen & Ladies such as Governours, Secretaries, Chief Justices, Chancellors & such kind of people with their wives and daughters. We ate, drank, danced, & played cards till about 4 o'clock in the morning. We had everything for supper. It is difficult to conceive how his Gen'lship could collect such a variety of luxurious viands together in such a place as this. * * *

The River is as solid as the Everlasting Hills but your Beans have not yet arrived from St. Anns.

I really participate with you in your present enjoyments of domestic happiness. 'Tis a consolation to find that such a thing as Happiness is passing, one may hope some time or other to get a little of it one's self. I thank Mrs. Winslow most heartily for her kind reception of my good wishes. She is one of the few that I think entitled to them. God bless you both and may ye long be happy together is the fervent prayer of

Your affectionate Cousin,

Ben.

Benjamin Hallowell to Edward Winslow.

London, 27th Feb'y, 1785.

My dear Sir,—The weather very early set in cold this winter and not having much very pressing business abroad, I have on account of my health kept much at home since the beginning of November, and living at some distance from all my American acquaintances, I did not hear of Miss Winslow,* your sister's being in England until two days before I received her note wishing my attendance at the American office to give evidence to your worthy Father's character &c., &c., to support the claim made by the family for support and compensation, about a fortnight since. After which my daughter, (Mrs. H. being indisposed), and I took the earliest opportunity that the weather would allow me to be abroad to call on Miss Winslow but was not so fortunate as to meet her at home, and I was several times in that unlucky situation of not seeing her, though not always disappointed. I lament that it has not been in my power to shew that attention that I ought to have done had my health permitted and I known of her being in London. Miss Winslow attended by her faithful friend Mr. Coffin* did us the honor to call yesterday which was all the time she said she could possibly give us, as the Ship left the River on Saturday last in order to be in the Downs as soon as possible after clearing at Gravesend. The letters that I have received from my good friend Governor Fanning are very pressing that I should be in Halifax as early as possible this spring for the security and managing my property in Nova Scotia;† before such intimation I was getting as fast as possible ready to leave this Country and was in hopes before this day I should have embarked, having nothing to detain me in England. * * * In the meantime I must intreat you and my other friends to use your interest to prevent any mischief happening to my property and to request the continuance of that friendship to get settlers on the premises on such terms as you, Governor Wentworth and Governor Fanning, may think proper, all which I will confirm, which will add to the many obligations I am already under to you. I am, dear Sir,

*Sarah Winslow, who went to England with certain documents to prove the confiscation of her late father's property by the Americans, with the view of obtaining compensation from the commissioners on the Loyalist claims.

Your most ob't and faithful much obliged Humble Servt,
Benj.Hallowell.

Samuel Goldsbury to Edward Winslow.

Edinburgh [N. S.], March 1st, 1785.

Sir,—Agreeable to your request I here send you an account of the Growth of Timber, number of saw mills, Quantity of fish taken the last year, preparations making for this, number of Vessels, Quantity of Cattle, &c, &c.

The Town of Edinburgh is situated at the Mouth of the River Sisibou, which empties itself into the Bay of St. Mary's on the Western side the Peninsula, the Lands around the Bay and River exceedingly good and afford encouragement to the Farmer, are plentifully covered with Large Timber, such as Birch, Beech, Rock Maple, Spruce, Pine, and Ash, and in several Routes I have taken for exploring the Western part of the Peninsula I have seen Very considerable quantitys of Fine Oak Timber, which may by means of Lakes and Rivers be easily conveyed to the sea. We have plenty of Streams of Water and advantageous situations for Mills. Four saw-Mills are already erected, and a number more erecting, all contiguous to the Bay and River. There was taken and exported from this place the Last Year 1200 quintals of Cod fish, besides a considerable quantity consumed by the Settlers, most of which Fish were taken in Log canoes and small Boats. There undoubtedly will be four times that quantity taken this year, as the Settlers will not be necessarily employed in Building. We have at present but few Vessels, and those Small, except a Brigg of 120 Tons and a Sloop of 80 Tons, which are now employed in the West India Trade.

There is on this Bay & River more than one thousand Head of Black Cattle besides numbers of Horses and Sheep. It is difficult to affix a price for Lumber even for the present year, owing to the great call there has been among the new settlements. I am of opinion that a large quantity of Lumber may be shipped at this place the present year at the following prices, viz, Boards & plank at 36 shillings Sterling pr. thousand feet; and Square Timber at 22s. 6d. pr. thousand feet carried into Board measure.

The Settlers are generally Poor but industrious, their exertions cramped for want of Provisions, but should Government continue their Bounty a little longer, I am persuaded the fertility of the Soil, and the advantages derived from fish and Lumber would soon restore them to those agreeable Circumstances they Sacrificed in consequence of the Late War.

I have the Honor to be, Sir,
Your most obedient &
Very Humble Serv't,
Samuel Goldsbury.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Granville, March 2nd, 1785.
Wednesday Noon.

Dr. Chip;—The receipt of Marston's letters relative to my land matters have given me infinite concern and the more because I am this inst. preparing to step into a sleigh to set off for Halifax.

When I candidly and openly communicated to Mr. Odell the papers relative to Prince William — I told him there was a strip of land containing 3 or 4,000 acres, and including a small River* at the upper end of Prince William, which had been applied for by Gen'ls Fox & Clarke, and that Gov'r Parr had given the most positive assurances to Gen'l Fox and repeated 'em to me, that the Patent should be made out for them, but that Gen'l Fox from principles of delicacy would not avail himself of the Gov-rs offer until Patents for others were obtained, nor indeed until it was determined that Gentlemen of the Line were considered as entitled to Grants. As his agent, I acted from the same principle, and I suggested to Mr. Odell that if Gov'r Carleton decided against giving grants to absentees (which I thought he ought) I would apply in behalf of myself and several of my friends as real settlers in the country for that very tract, but that I could make no formal application as Mr. Davidson was absent and I could not describe the premises with any degree of accuracy, I however requested, as no material inconvenience could arise from suspending the Grant of that tract until my return, that he would postpone the consideration of the business, and from his answer I supposed there was no risque of its being granted. Mr. Odell will also recollect that I mentioned a stream called Gowac* on the other side the river where I proposed building a saw mill with Mr. David Eason, formerly Superintendent of Indian affairs on the river St. John's, a man of merit and who has rendered essential services to Government, that I begged in his behalf to state his pretentions and solicit a grant on that river. I also gave Mr. Odell a pencil'd memorandum of the names of the place which he say'd he would place among the other papers and was very explicit in saying that he thought nothing farther on my part was necessary to be done. I have accordingly stipulated with some degree of solemnity with Mr. Eason. I have procured all my materials, and have made a written contract to build the saw mill. Eason is preparing to take passage by the next packet in expectation of obtaining such licence as will enable him to go on with spirit and security in erecting the buildings. If the land which it is necessary to possess for that purpose falls within a Block assigned to a provincial Corps — it is a matter of notoriety that there is a large overplus for each regiment, and I should think a work of such public utility will be encouraged, and that the regiment or settlers would not oppose a Grant within their general limits for a business of so much importance to the vicinity. I however (as this has become a very serious matter to me) have earnestly to request that you as my attorney will on Eason's arrival form an application for the tract which he will point out, as my proportion of land as Muster Master General, &c., and that you will also draw for him a memorial stating his pretentions.

My dear Chip, I cannot enlarge — I do request that you would take Eason by the hand instantly on his arrival — that you would enter most zealously into this business — that you would spare no pains — that you will consider it as of the last importance to me. He is perfectly intelligible, sensible and plain. If for want of any form or nonsensical ceremony I fail in obtaining land on which I can commence my exertions, I shall be the merest mumchance at New Brunswick. I shall at the expiration of another year be precisely where I was at the end of the last, indeed I cannot afford to change my ground on any other idea than that of being immediately employed. My office* there is evidently of no consequence — I have very little money; my expenses must increase there and I give up a certain and considerable income here. All these considerations vanished like smoke while I anticipated a fixture there and a chance of exerting on a very large scale, but the impediments have disconcerted me, and I shall wait with the most eager impatience at Halifax until I know the result of Eason's negotiation. Surely it must be secund'm form'm for you to apply in my behalf. I repeat my hopes that the disagreeable nature of the business will not deter you from pursuing it.

Point out anything that can be done by me. Had not my long absence from head quarters rendered an immediate return necessary I would have made another trip across the Bay without hesitation, but this is impossible. Or had an idea been suggested to me that my presence was necessary to effect this business I would not have left the Country until this hour.

I wish this matter to be a secret, only that you would converse with Odell, and as yet not suggest that I feel distressed at his inattention and indifference in this matter. I had begun a letter to him, I found myself incapable of finishing it. I may be wrong in my conjectures, but at present I think I have not been fairly dealt with.

All the other parts of your letter shall be attended to, I have waited 3 days for Dalziel's† arrival. Thompson is now so importunate and pressing that I must desist. Continue to write me — the expresses pass every week. My promised letter shall be ready by the very first conveyance.

Every circumstance worth knowing shall be most faithfully transmitted from Halifax.

Make apologies for me to Donaldson and Hailes, I write 'em both.

[Remainder, if any, missing.]

Daniel Hammill to Mrs. E. Winslow.

Windsor, Saturday Evening, 5th March, 1785.

Madam,—I am happy in having an opportunity to acquaint you of the safe arrival of your Dear Partner at this place, accompanied by Major Thompson: they this day set out again for Halifax, where they intend to arrive Tomorrow. It is well they have got so far on their journey for there is every appearance of a Thaw.

I am bound in point of Gratitude, as well as a firm promise to Mrs. Hammill, to return you our most sincere thanks for the many marks of Friendship, favour and attention, which you have on all occasions been pleased to shew to her, during my long absence, and more especially the situation she was in by being so long in that disagreeable Cottage.

*As surrogate of the province.

†See Major Studholme's letter under date 9th May, 1784.

Mrs. Hammill laments her not having had an opportunity of seeing you before she left Granville. But rest assured you have her hearty wishes for your health, happiness and success wherever the sport of Fortune may toss you or herself hereafter. She and the children arrived here after a pleasant journey of three days all well and she is much elated with the change of her situation, and would think herself happy she says had she but three families from your neighborhood viz; Yourself, Mr. James and Mr. Williams.

However this seems to be a very good neighborhood, and all the first families in this place have been to see her, and been very kind.

You will accept the united and kindest wishes and regards from Mrs. Hammill and myself Madam,

Your much obliged

Humble Servant,

Daniel Hammill.

Brook Watson to Edward Winslow.

London, 6th March, 1785.

Dear Sir;—By your good Sister I sit down to write in answer to your obliging letters of November the 6th & 13th, the latter I thought proper for the perusal of Lord Sydney and gave it to his Secretary for that purpose, and have but recently received it back. The papers which you obligingly sent me have proved useful; thank you for them and for the general information contained in your letters. The particular Return which you promise will be very acceptable in a public view. I am inexpressibly gratified by Gov'r Carleton's proclamation, and the fixed resolution which, I am told, my Loyal friends of that Province have come to, not to suffer any commercial intercourse with any of the American States. These points firmly adhered to will infallibly secure prosperity to the Province and honour to its people; it has ample capability and demands nothing but wisdom and resolution to make it more desirable than any of the revolted countries. Could a staple article of commerce between it & England be there produced the most solid advantages would thereby arise, and methinks Hemp & Flax might be cultivated with success. Could the Flax of New Holland be introduced and accord with your soil, 'twould be better than the mines of South America to Spain, but there is not now a plant or a seed of it in England, or it should be sent you. China Hemp is also very fine. I have sent a gallon by the St. Lawrence directed to Gov'r Carleton — it's in a small bag; most desirous I am it should be sown this Spring for should it remain over to the next it will probably perish.

Your sister will inform you what has been done towards proving your Father's losses, and procuring something towards the support of your Mother and Sisters; which altho' not equal to my wish comes up to my expectation.

I am dear Sir,
Your faithful H'ble Serv't
Brook Watson.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

6th March, 1785.

My dear Winslow;—I have only time to acknowledge the receipt of yours by Dalziel and to assure you that I will exert myself in attending to all your commands. By the next conveyance I shall write you fully. I am much perplexed, I have much to say. I wish I could see you, but this is in vain.

I hope you are safe in Halifax and find everything to your mind. I want a long, serious, particular, old-fashioned, circumstantial letter from you. You must write, I have nobody to talk to and am ready to burst.

Do you know a certain Miss Penn Winslow? If she remains in Halifax, tell her she had better take care of herself, her neglect of her friend Chip is intolerable, bad as he is. However tell her, your Mama, and that little enchanting rattle-headed Sall. Miller that I long to see them. Adieu. God bless you forever, Amen, prays

Chip.

P. S. If you have an opportunity, send me a little assortment of stationery. I am distressed for some and can purchase none. Odell often reminds me of some more blank books to come from you.

William Tyng to Jonathan Odell.

Prospect Farm (Gagetown) 9th March, 1785.

Dear Sir,—I take the liberty to inclose a paper containing two valuations of the same lotts — those lots were in possession of old inhabitants and were by order of Governor Parr numbered and drawn for by the Refugees. When the Agents were in Halifax the Governor gave directions that the improvements should be valued and paid for by the refugees who drew them. We accordingly appointed two discreet persons on behalf of the loyalists and the old inhabitants chose two for themselves. When they went upon the business they very soon differed in their prices and nothing conclusive took place.

It is I think very evident that the appraisers for the old inhabitants have been unreasonable in the value they have set upon some spots. I cannot conceive any improvements upon this river can be worth £5. 10. per acre besides the first cost or value of the land.

I am dear Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

Wm. Tyng.

Joseph Chew to Edward Winslow.

London, 10th March, 1785.

My Dear Friend,—This will be delivered to you by your good Sister who I really have not seen so often as I earnestly desired. * * * I hope soon to have all my matters finished so as to leave this country, which believe me I am most sincerely tired of, and where that Hospitality I have ever been used to is possessed by very few. I depend on you my dear friend not to lose sight of my Interest about the Lands, Nova Scotia being my object, and a near neighbour to you your sisters and family my hope. I shall endeavor when I leave this, first to come to Halifax, but as the arrangements for Canada are not made I cannot absolutely determine, however, this I am sure of, every assistance and good office that can be will be done for me by Sir John Johnson, who is greatly pleased at the part I took in behalf of his claims on my arrival in London, which prevented his being excluded, as many others are, (unless some new act is passed for receiving them). This is a strange world, what think you of the new appointment of a Consul General and of the Person appointed ?

As our friend Mr. Coffin sends you the Papers, I refer you to them for the Squabbles in the House of Commons. The outs long to come in and those who are in long to keep their places, while luxury, dissipation, &c, prevail amongst all classes.

I will only once more request you — indeed I know you will take care of my Interest. I will repay you with thanks and information in the line of Gardening, &c. * *

I am my dear Sir,

Your faithful friend and Affectionate H'ble Servant

Jos. Chew.*

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. Johns, 20th Mar. '85.

My dear Winslow—Eason is arrived and I have been ever since industriously executing your commands respecting his business. I memorial'd for the Gowac [Coac, in the Parish of Queensbury] Creek in your name, and an enquiry was immediately directed to discover whether the place was granted — fortunately Davidson the Surveyor was here & told us the creek you meant was a much better one Poqueyuck [Pokiok] Creek within Gen'l Fox's Reserve, that he had often conversed with you on the subject. I called a meeting of Davidson, Eason & Mr. Hazen, we pro'd it & con'd it [discussed it pro & con] & unanimously determined at last to push for this stream. The difficulty was, that the Reserve had long been determined not to be kept & several applications were made for the whole of it. I at once determined to dash in a new memorial, & stated that you went up the River in 1783 on purpose to explore this Creek, that in consequence of assurances of having it granted you, you had at great expense & pains got every necessary implement prepared for erecting a Saw Mill, had contracted with several persons to carry on the business, who were now waiting only till you would get the land assigned to you, & that any delay would be ruinous. This memorial I presented, informing the Gov'r & Council that I had mistaken the boundaries in the first memorial, which I beg'd leave to withdraw. A warrant of Survey was ordered for your 1000 acres within the Reserve, including the Creek — it is made out, Davidson has it in his pocket & goes off this day to complete this business & make his return, he promises to take every pains to please you. Eason & he have settled it between them. I tho't it best at any rate that you should have the right of soil where the mill was to be placed in the present instance, indeed nobody but you could have obtained the spot. Eason has of course suspended any application for lands for himself, as he can only obtain 200 acres at furthest for the present. He has however desired Davidson to enquire who has drawn the Gowac Creek, it has fallen to some of the Queen's Rangers, Davidson thinks Privates, in which case Davidson (if he can make a very cheap bargain & thinks it worth while) is to contract for it. And now my dear Winslow, knowing your very enterprizing spirit and as your friend in your office says, your delight "in grand systems," I a little fear you will run too fast. What sort of a bargain have you made with Eason? are you to advance money, to get the business on? if so, depend upon it it will not answer. Is he altogether competent to the purpose? It seems to me he does not like work much himself. I know nothing of this matter, but I know you have sometimes been mistaken. Sat. Verb. Sap.

I have a thousand things to say to you but I dare not, will not, commit them to Paper. Some of them with fear and trembling I have already hinted. When do you intend coming here, or do you mean it at all? I am most heartily tired of the present system of house-keeping, and could not stand it a day longer but in the hope of speedy relief*. If you mean to remove your family, it will be best to write a line yourself to Marston & Hailes suggesting the time, and the inconvenience of their continuing in the house, also to Hazen intimating such alterations as you may think necessary in the house.

I can't help recurring to the subject of your engagement with Eason. I have talked with Hazen & Major Coffin on the business of Saw Mills—they are clearly of opinion, that with all possible industry & exertion it will be a number of years before the first expense of setting the mill a going will be cleared, that this can never be done but by a man who is upon the spot himself & will work like a horse. Coffin says his Creek† is more advantageously situated than any one in the Province, that the land about it abounds in Timber, that a vessel of 50 tons can lie at the Spot, that he has minutely calculated every expense necessarily attending it, & that was it not at his door almost, where he can see to every thing himself, he must sink money by it, that when he has every advantage in the Stream, no Damm to make or banks to level, the least expense of erecting his mill will be £200. That Nase‡ who will work like a horse himself is to be jointly concerned, and that the utmost profit that can be calculated upon with all these advantages is £100 a year between them both.

I understand from Eason that he has engaged a Master workman who perfectly understands the business, so that he is himself to be Superintendent only. I really feel very anxious about this undertaking of yours, and unless your engagement with him is for you to be at no further expense or advance & to take a proportion of the profits I do not believe it will answer —and in that case I fear you will barely save yourself from being involved by the concern. I know nothing of Eason, but he does not appear to me to be the man. I make no apology for all this my dear Winslow, you know my heart & my motives, and you after all are the best Judge.

I have written you several scraps of letters. I pray your attention to them all—the objects they refer to are serious.

22nd. Mr. Andrews returned & not a line from you. I am glad to hear you had been safe in Halifax four days when he came away.

Adieu. God bless you forever, prays

Chip.

Why did you not let me know Penn‖ was dead?

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 25th March 1785.

My dear Fellow,—By the schooner Halifax Packet, Captain Fullerton, I send a small assortment of stationery, per invoice, which I hope will reach you in good order. If this vessel arrives before Mr. Deblois don't suspect me of inattention or breach of promise, by him I will write fully & freely. He will set off for New Brunswick in a few days.

In the box with your stationery is a venerable Coat of Arms* which I authorize you to present to the Council Chamber, or any other respectable public Room, which you shall think best entitled to it. They (Lyon & Unicorn) were constant members of the Council at Boston (by mandamus)—ran away when the others did—have suffered—are of course Refugees, & have a claim for residence at New Brunswick.

Blowers acquaints me that he ships a quantity of Blank books for Mr. Odell so that there can be no occasion for my sending any.

Cordially yours,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 27th March, 1785.

Dear Chip,—I never was more embarrassed than at this moment. When I gave you assurances that I would write an opinion relative to the enormous Grants in the Province of New Brunswick, I thought myself master of the subject, and that I cou'd advance arguments which wou'd be in some degree satisfactory to you; but on making a serious effort such variety of difficulties crowded on my mind, as effectually disconcerted me. I will however, endeavor to throw together such observations as have occurred. I shall do it without form or order—without taking any pains to select expressions, and without regarding whether my remarks are new or not.

* * * * * * *

The irregular manner in which Grants have been made increase the difficulties which attend the detection of fraud. The Patents, I am told do not (in many instances) carry on their face any reason for the Grant, but it appears to be of the mere motion of the King. This I am also told is the case in Spry's grant. Yet I shou'd suppose this circumstance wou'd not preclude an enquiry, and if my position is right, I think Mr. Spry is palpably liable.

*This famous coat of arms was at first placed in a building on Germain street, where John McMillan's residence now stands. The building was fitted up as a church, but not consecrated. The courts of justice met there, also the city council. After the erection of Trinity church the coat of arms was placed upon its walls. It was saved at the time of the great fire in 1877 by Captain Frank B. Hazen, and is now fixed over the west door of new Trinity church.

Remember Chipman I mean this letter for a bold deposit of my own sentiments in the bosom of my friend, the subject is important to my Country and I spurn the idea of ambiguity.

To obtain such a tract of land Mr. Spry* must have assigned some reason. No other cou'd have been induc'd but his services. It is too invidious a task to anticipate an enquiry on this head, and I wou'd carefully avoid a ludicrous observation when writing on a subject so serious, but 'tis necessary to observe that the rank† Mr. Spry held before the late War was too inconsiderable to found a claim for such a reward. It must therefore have been his services during the late War. And what were these? 'Tis a fair question. He was Chief Engineer in a Camp of Repose. He never heard a Cannon but at a public Salute. He erected a Citadel‡ which was calculated to annoy only the Chest which paid for it. He amass'd immense wealth, liv'd like a Prince, and retir'd like a Nabob.

In a Country where the principle prevails that Equity is the foundation of Law, can it be possible that land thus bestowed may not be deemed forfeit on enquiry? especially at a time when hundreds of the faithful and Meritorious servants of the King are literally suffering for want of Bread which that ground wou'd produce in abundance? I am aware of the variety of perplexities that must attend this kind of investigation— they are in formidable array before me. It remains with men skilled in the formalities of Law to devise the method—I have no capacity for that service. There are various other species of Deception which in my opinion must operate to the same point. A man applies for land, and gives a description; he avers that it does not interfere with the general settlement of the country, but that a compliance with the stipulated conditions will redound to the public benefit. He has villainy to propose and interest to furnish a bribe to a mercenary surveyor, who reports a much less quantity than is in fact contain'd within the limits, meaning that the patentee

*Captain William Spry, during the time he was chief engineer in Nova Scotia, procured for himself extensive grants of land on the River St. John in the vicinity of Gagetown and on the opposite side of the river. He became a brigadier general, and eventually derived substantial advantage from his estate in New Brunswick, although a part was forfeited for non-performance of the conditions of the grants. See "Portland Point" series of articles in the New Brunswick Magazine for interesting particulars relating to these grants.

†That is the rank of captain.

‡This was at Halifax.

shou'd avail himself of the general clause "more or less." He describes the situation to be such that it will not militate with the King's Instructions. On investigation it appears that the grant effectually bars the settlement of the District—that it is a monopoly of the good land, and renders the adjacent country useless. Of course the object of government (which was not the aggrandizement of an individual but the general good) is defeated, and by the rascality of the applicant, and the connivance of the surveyor, the individual possesses a much more extensive and valuable territory than was intended. This must be cause of forfeiture not of the surplusage only but of the whole, because as no particular part can be ascertained as overplus, of course no particular part can be described as forfeit. The Grant must be invalid. If the Grantee has just pretensions to any proportion it may be described and re-granted. Whenever a process in equity is instituted against Spry's grant I believe you will find proof:—That the application was deceitful—that the survey was false—and that the grant was injurious to the Country and repugnant to the King's Instructions. Its repugnance to the King's Instructions, ought alone to work it's damation. * * * *

A lunatic Governor may in an hour of frenzy convey all the sea coast to a single person, but surely (without a republican idea, which God knows I abhor) the public have such kind of control over the actions of their officers, as to prevent the unsalutary effects of such dementation. The general principles of the Constitution will interfere to prevent Injuries so gross. Without this controul (I don't like the word) the Government wou'd be absolute indeed. Suppose the King instructs his representative to lease a particular tract and the Governor instead of leasing aliens and conveys the fee simple, Will the deed be good? Suppose he exceeds in quantity to particular persons—Will the King support, and the Constitution justify it? Forbid it Reason! and (if the blasted term had not been perverted and become offensive) I wou'd add—Forbid it Liberty!

The observations here made will apply to some of the grants recently passed, more forcibly than even to Spry's. In the instance of Hauser,* the Governor of this Province cannot justify the Grant in any other way than by an explicit acknowledgment of the Deception, both as to the rank and character of the man, and the circumstances, situation and quantity of the land. If that acknowledgment is not made on a process in Chancery and the facts thereby proved to the satisfaction of the Court, I will venture to affirm that a regular representation and complaint will be exhibited in which certain facts will be stated and proved. They are of a nature too tender to be touch'd by me, at present.

*Frederick Hauser was an agent for the Loyalists who came to Annapolis, N. S., in October, 1782. From thence he came to New Brunswick. He surveyed many of the Loyalist grants, and procured for himself on June 22, 1784, a grant of 809 acres at Gagetown. See under date 19th June, 1784, for biographical note.

The Chief Justice's Grant of Sugar Island* is in some respects similar to Hauser's, only that there is one circumstance peculiar to that. The Island was indisputably included in the general location of land to the provincials—drawn for, and in the actual possession of particular Corps. A Deception must of course be acknowledged, or something worse. This grant has already been the subject of my animadversions, and Mr. Odell has what I call an honest state of facts respecting it, and 'tis painful to repeat 'em. It is melancholy indeed that two such instances should have happened. Integrity blushes at the recollection of 'em, and the most intrepid Friend to Government will shudder at the indignation which arises on contemplating the probable consequences of such iniquity—but enough under this head, I wax warm.

It has been a question even in this Province [Nova Scotia], where they "swallow camels without a hiccup", whether the grantee by non-compliance with the conditions within the time limited, does not forfeit, even if the conditions at the issuing of the scire facias are actually fulfilled. I believe it has been determined here that the land is not forfeited in those cases, but there's such costiveness in the professional gentry that one cannot obtain any information, and there's such pliability of temper in some of 'em that their opinions seem the effect of complaisance rather than of reason. I understand that the Attorney-General has wrote you on this subject. It's one of those unfortunate questions where much may be say'd on both sides, but it appears to me that Justice leans towards a forfeiture unless sufficient cause can be assign'd for the delinquency of the Grantee. Various considerations will also arise relative to the manner of Compliance. A Grantee conditions to cultivate a certain proportion of the land, to settle a certain number of inhabitants, &c. These he neglects, but a number of people driven by necessity, led by mistake, or from other adventitious circumstances take possession, and (although Trespassers) cultivate and improve the soil and are thereby the involuntary causes of a compliance with the conditions. The question (of course) is whether the Patantee shall avail himself of this accidental settlement, in which he has neither agency or merit, and thereby secure his property. The law-givers I suppose cou'd not anticipate such events, and may not have pointed out remedies in such cases, but it must be allowed that the original intention of Government is perverted. When Government stipulates with an Individual, as in these patents, it certainly expects to be benefited by the personal exertion of the Grantee. I don't mean the mere manual labour—but the settlement shall be formed under his immediate direction, and at his particular expense. Without this, What does Government get by the bargain? or rather what does it not lose? Settlers that would otherwise extend the cultivation of the Country, are by a sort of finesse, made the instruments to confirm the title of land already granted to indolent patentees, and government is at once cheated of its land and of its settlers. This cannot be right. Again—The Grantee agrees to clear a certain number of acres—to erect buildings, etc. When the enquiry commences it is evident that the land is not cleared (agreable to the spirit and intention)—a few trees are felled, but there's no serious efficient operation of Agriculture—logs are piled together to form something like an house, which drops perhaps without ever being inhabited. Is Government (pardon the expression) to be humbugged at this rate? and shall titles be confirm'd by such shameful evasions?

*Chief Justice Bryan Finucane, when investigating the complaints of the Loyalists in connection with their land grants, seems rather inconsistently to have obtained for himself a grant of Sugar Island, the largest island in the Keswick group, above Fredericton. His title was disputed by Col. Isaac Allen and others. There was litigation, and the Finucanes lost. See Lawrence's Foot Prints, p. 59; see also James Glenie's rabid utterances in Canadian Archives for 1895, under New Brunswick, pp. 18, 19.

I am mortified, Chipman, at the recollection that this immense epistle is written to a man of great professional abilities. If all my opinions are absurd my motive will save me from censure. I feel a degree of anxiety respecting the Government of New Brunswick that exceeds anything I ever experienc'd before. The eyes of the world seem to be fixed on that country, the exalted reputation of the Governor, the abilities and integrity of the public officers have produced a universal confidence, and mankind appear to expect a detection of frauds, encouragement of industry and virtue, and an impartial distribution of justice. * * *

I have already advanced and I repeat, that the Corps who now have possession of Sugar Island, did not originally enter as Intruders, but gained the possession under the authority and sanction of the Governour, and in my idea they were by no means liable, even before his grant to Mr. Finucane, to be dispossessed by his own personal authority.

* * * * * *

It is too late for the Governour of Nova Scotia either to take an Inquest of office, or to make any new effectual Grant of this Island the partition of the Province puts both objects equally out of his power. I have no doubt of the propriety of the Governour of New Brunswick's making a new grant of the Island to the present possessors without taking any notice of the former Grant, but I do not see the expediency of such a measure, because the tenants in possession, may in the mere right of possession, legally defend themselves against any ejectment that can be brought by Mr. Finucane. I hope Col. Allen and all the parties concerned will have the same ideas of the matter, and will dispute it in the Courts of Law, by inches.

I have already say'd enough by way of apology for any incorrectness or impropriety of expression. I've only to add that I am with the most sincere affection and regard Dear Chip,

Your Faithful Friend

Ed. Winslow.

Thomas Knox to Edward Winslow.

Parr-town March 30th, 1785.

My dear Colonel;—As I lost a part of my baggage on its way to me from Windsor (which I can very ill afford since the loss of my appointment) I must beg the favour of you to inform me whether any allowance would be made me if I was to send in an account.

The inability of your Stores at Halifax to furnish us with a regular supply of provisions is not only attended with great inconvenience to all but very serious distress to many.

The Governor has taken upon himself to purchase a quantity of flour to secure the settlers up the River from perishing in the approaching season when the ice will begin to break up, and when it will be impossible for them for some weeks to procure assistance from hence, let their condition be ever so deplorable. The little supplies which have been forwarded by order of the General came very seasonably, but these you may easily conceive have been only a temporary support and greatly inadequate to the claims of the needy. They have however been dealt out with a sparing hand by a parsimonious Commissary, and the old business of striking off the idle, the dissolute and the wealthy is now in full practice. A great part of my time is devoted to this business of discrimination and drawing the line between those who are on their land, and those who are not. In favor of the former I have given orders for six weeks flour and two weeks pork, which it is presumed may last them till they can come down with Boats, by which time I hope we will receive a further supply, and of the latter, such only as have not obtained Grants of Land and who cannot procure assistance by any other means, are vitualled every two weeks. Every man who sold his land (and it is not attended with much difficulty to trace them by the Records) has been struck off. I am sorry for your friends of Block No. 1* who have scarcely a ration left among them. This attention has almost the effect of a second muster. I am persuaded that few casualties† have happened since the last that have not been discovered.

*Block No. 1 was that situate on the Nashwaak and below it on the River St. John, in the parish of St. Mary's, York County. It was assigned to the Maryland Loyalists.

†"Casualties"—the term used in the muster roll as signifying that a man was no longer to be retained on the roll for rations and allowance. The "casualty" might be death, removal from the district, or engaging in some trade or business, and leaving the lands drawn unoccupied instead of settling thereon.

Your friends are all well. Be pleased to pay my respects to the Commander in Chief.

I am Dr. Sir, Your most obed't Servt.

Thos. Knox.*

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 31st March, 1785.

Dear Chip;— * * * * You know I was born in a land of psalmody. For several years together there was nothing heard but old men & women bawling psalms and young men and maids screeching hymns. There was one old man who was a Teacher & Composer and I remember to have seen him in the very act of composition. He sat by a joint stool with a pen, ink & little book, & between his legs he held a half-grown kitten which he occasionally twigged by the tail or plucked by the ears. I (being a mere novice) asked what the devil he was about? With wonderful simplicity & gravity he answered that out of her squeeling he might possibly pick up a sound that would assist him in forming a tune.

Application. I'm willing on any occasion to be your kitten only I chuse to squeel without being pinched or pulled. If in the late instance there's a single note that will contribute to your amusement or assistance, you have only to stroke me and I'll squeel again.

I'll now go on to give you an account of all my proceedings since I left you. Tho' I parted with General C———† apparently on the best terms, received confidential Instructions, &c, &c, you may remember I suggested a possibility that he would be beset, and that the industrious malice of my enemies might excite a jealousy that my respect & attention was withdrawn from him and directed to another object. All this I anticipated—it however did not hinder the performance of my duty. The first express after I returned to Annapolis brought a full confirmation that I was right in my conjectures. Cool acknowledgements of my letters and implied censures on some parts of my conduct formed my packet from Head Quarters. A spirited, pointed, independent answer saved me from any further inconveniences. I determined on a line of conduct & I pursued it * * * sat quietly down with my wife & children & laughed at their folly. When I thought it necessary I returned, and I was received (as Mr. Thomas says) "with that redundancy of complaisance which men of weak minds are betrayed into by a conviction of error." I however took not the least notice of the business but returned to the same track of duty which I had formerly pursued and, to appearance, I am now in the same degree of estimation, if not higher, than before my departure, but my thermometer is so peculiarly constructed that the spirit does not circulate with perfect regularity.

*Thomas Knox was at this time deputy commissary of musters on the River St. John, under direction of Edward Winslow as muster master general. The general muster in 1784 occupied his time from about the first of June to the end of September. He gave the sum total of the Loyalists on the St. John River as: Men, 4,131; women, 1,719; children, 3,068; servants, 441; total, 9,359.

Even at this early period some of the Loyalists had abandoned their idea of becoming farmers and had deserted their locations.

Yet I am not in a situation to make my bow. The very great expenses to which I have been unavoidably exposed, without being guilty of one extravagant action have embarassed me so considerably that I cannot immediately quit. If Sally succeeds in England I shall be relieved of what (was I able to support 'em) would not be considered a burden, but in my present situation is a weight which added to my own family fairly sinks me. On her success depends in some degree my operations. I cannot leave these unfortunate friends,* and cannot remove them without assistance. If we are fortunate in our application I shall sound a retreat instantly and I have no fears if I can relieve myself from present embarrassments but that with proper industry & economy I shall live like a [word indecipherable.]

From news that has lately arrived from England it has been confidently asserted here that a new arrangement of officers will take place in your country & there has been a report by the way of the west that Gov. C† is certainly appointed to the Province of Canada. If so I may be secure in the appointment originally intended. I however have my doubts upon the subject. As some events may take place of great importance to me, & the military Commandant may be relieved or recalled, in which case 'twould be dishonourable in me to leave him till the final close of his command—I mean if near at hand. His next letters may contain a disapprobation of his conduct, and from various considerations I feel engaged to vindicate him. [Remainder wanting.]

friendly affection and delicate attention. The interested part you have taken in the happiness of our unfortunate family, the tender attachment you discovered for my dear departed Father by innumerable methods to relieve or lessen the inquietudes of his wounded mind—can never, never be forgotten till this heart of mine ceases to beat—& if we are allowed to carry our passions into the other World of Love and Gratitude sure I am my sisterly tenderness and grateful sentiments of you will rest with me above the stars.

You express an anxious wish to know what our views & intentions are; shall I confess my weakness by assuring you I feel myself a mere machine. I have not judgment to learn what step to take that will be most for our peace; my resolution is miserable, my spirits at a low ebb. With becoming firmness I supported our first great reverse of fortunes. I bid a long farewell to an elegant house, furniture, native place and all its pleasures with but little emotion save wounded pride. From a great share of vivacity & a tolerable good disposition I was not only reconciled but happy at New York. The banishment to this ruder World you are a witness I submitted to with some degree of chearfulness, but alas the shaft of affliction had not then reached me—the final separation from my Father, friend and Companion * * * At times Life is indifferent to me & to pleasure I am a stranger. But what a tax am I imposing on you my Friend. My complaints I acknowledge are but a poor reward for your friendship, will you forgive me? From the idea that you will I am more collected & will assure you that in my rational hours I exert every faculty of my mind to know what plan we had better pursue. The original one of building a House on our land near the Manor, I think will be attended with many great inconveniences. * * My inclination leads me to prefer Carleton to our rural Retreat—from only this belief that My Mother, Sally & myself cannot be of the least advantage in cultivating lands. We are ignorant & unequal to the undertaking, & my brother now seems to be of that opinion & wishes a small house might be put upon his lot at Carleton. But will not building be too expensive, or can it be done without involving ourselves and friends? * *

You wish to know how we have spent our time this winter. We really have enjoyed many Blessings; our House is the most comfortable of any one I know; Edward's office has generously supply'd us with Fuel for three rooms—& don't think I have secluded myself from visiting & receiving my friends on the Parade. I assure you I sometimes give dinners to a charming circle of Ladies & my suppers are not more humble than those you shared with us in Brewer Lane.

Mrs. Haliburton's family & ours are like one, seldom separate. Mrs. Halliburton's is the most delicate mind in the World, sensible & lively.

Mary is really a lovely Girl & a most pleasing companion—she spent the last week with me. * * * Col. Upham still continues miserable. The Rheumatism has attacked him most severely. He can only be removed from the bed to the fire & his impatient spirit renders him an object of compassion. I hope the mild air of May will have an happy effect on him. He thinks if he could be conveyed to [New] Brunswick he would be a new man.

Your other friends are well, pursuing pleasure with ardour. Feasting, card playing & dancing is the great business of Life at Halifax, one eternal round—the votarys of pleasure complain of being fatigued & want variety of amusements. The new Imported Ladies continue to be the Belles. The Princes, Taylors & Halliburtons are totally eclipsed and the Millers, Betsy and Matty Matthews, are the admiration of all the Beaus. The High Sheriff* has been sighing at the feet of Miss Miller. The world take the liberty to condemn her as romantic for rejecting his hand. The Newtonian race, who you know are connected with Mr. Green, are mortified & have advised & it is said have prevailed with him to transfer his affections to Harriet Matthews. With this he readily complyed & found her not reluctant. The High Sheriff enjoys all the pomp of this pompous Town and you would, by the style & state he take upon himself, swear he was born a Halifaxian—gives dinners two or three times a week & tomorrow evening all the Noblesse are to be entertained at his house, a Ball and supper superb. Charming doings is it not, don't you envy the gay circle? Everybody here has independent fortunes—at least of this I am sure that there is not a family in this place, that figures at all, can spend less than five or six hundred [pounds] a year. The Princes I am really distressed for—the House, the Coach, &c, is to be disposed of—the Ladies are going to New England, the Dr. to New Brunswick; what a cruel reverse. The Attorney Gen'l & Lady are at the summit of this world's bliss; they dine with his Excellency one week & his Excellency & Chief Justice with them the next. * * * Not a word from Great Britain. It is expected that the St. Lawrence will arrive in a few days. I think Sally Winslow would not dare to cross the Atlantic at this early season. I know not what to wish or expect; some important intelligence must soon reach us, to despair is impious. I will cherish the fond hope that some days of content may yet be alloted to her who is with esteem and affection, ments. She grows very tall & is thought handsome, but her name is Miller & it is the rage to admire all of that name. To Hailes offer my best wishes. Mr. Marston I hear is exploring the wilds of Brunswick. What think you of Dr. Bayley having serious thoughts of being one of your Province?

Your friend

Sarah Winslow to Ward Chipman.

[Halifax, April, 1785.]

Confused as my head and this house is, I cannot longer omit writing a line to a Friend so highly esteemed by me as Mr. Chipman—but it must only be to tell you that I have so much to say to you upon what I have seen and heard that I must leave all until I have the pleasure of a month's conversation with you. * * * All the amusements of the Great world which I as largely partook of as perhaps any other being ever did in so short a time [in England], does not alter my determination of becoming an inhabitant of your woody country. Am told the probability is we shall remove soon, which I am perfectly ready and willing to do, provided we can have a house to put out heads in. * * For my success in England I for the present refer you to Ned and a few lines I have just now wrote my Cousin Marston. They and my good Friend Murray can inform you many particulars respecting me and I will tell you the rest ere long. My obligations to our valuable Friend Coffin I must be silent upon, for all that could be said would not in the least do him justice. * * It was in his power and inclination to do more for me than the rest of my friends could. From the first hour of my getting to London until he saw me on board ship at Gravesend his every moment was employed in my business and pleasures; how he got time to write you so much I cannot imagine. * * We talked for ever about you and I have ten million things to say to you about him and a thousand others, cannot now even mention Mrs. Siddons.

My friend Murray is this moment unexpectedly called upon to go on board. I can write no more. Remember me affectionately to Mr. Hailes and all the rest of my friends. I long to see Col. Ludlow.

Adieu, Blessings attend you prays,

S. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 4th April, 1785.

Mr. Deblois is off with my Letters and Mr. James has this instant presented your's for which I offer my most cordial acknowledgements. I am vastly gratify'd at the success of your application respecting the land.

I only wish that you had applied for your own proportion at the same time and in the same place. In laying out the 1,000 acres Davidson can, and I hope will, include one of the islands which lie in front of the Gore. Lest he should not attend to this circumstance I wish you would write him. I'll relieve you at once from all your anxiety respecting Eason. I never had the most distant idea of expending or risquing another farthing of money in a saw-mill except the first cost of the irons. My intention was that he should take 'em and give me credit as a Proprietor—that he should be at all the other expense and trouble, and consider me as an owner of such part as that sum would entitle me to. If he has other apprehensions, I'm off. I am too well acquainted with saw-mills to anticipate any great profit from them, but I have experienced so many conveniences from having one in the vicinity of my settlement, that I would not relinquish the project. If Eason will not on any terms undertake the business, I can find others that will. I shall write him particularly.

The plan must now be materially altered. In our first conversation it was presumed that we were to be joint proprietors of the soil and stream, but as I am now sole proprietor, I shall make one simple proposal to him by this opportunity, which is to take all the materials at Annapolis and perform all the operations of building damming, &c, and I will consent to allow him one half the profits. This I think will be a good bargain for him and cannot be any detriment to me.

It's a devilish good method you have of telling me that you have monstrous serious things to communicate but don't chuse to, it keeps one's curiosity alive. Don't be tired of house-keeping. I'll soon relieve you if God in his wrath does not punish me for my original sin and all my actual transgressions together, by keeping me in this damnable place. You'll see by my long letter what my present situation is, I need not repeat my grievances. I think, Chippy, if I can get my family across, that (with the management of my very good wife) we shall be able to live comfortably and without great expense. The instant I can determine on the time of removal I shall notify all parties concerned in form, and (as some people are dull of apprehension and not apt to take hints) I will write plain English. I shall send my own paper closet by the very first conveyance, which you'll take possession of and keep till I call for it. When I come to New Brunswick I'll bring another. A sloop sails this day with provisions for St. John's and I have just returned from an enquiry whether I could get a berth for your closet. I find it's impracticable but I'll not let another opportunity pass. The vessel is chock full, her hatches battened and the blasted little hole of a cabin is not big enough to receive the thing and I dare not trust such a machine on deck. Mr. Byles has also returned from the Secretary's office where he made formal application for a copy of Mr. Hauser's memorial, and I send you Byles' memorandum. I have made three unsuccessful attempts to see Mr. Bulkeley* but I will persevere. If I fail tomorrow I'll write to him. I have also consulted Blowers† on the subject. He has in other instances experienced the same reluctance to give copies, &c., and he thinks Gov'r Carleton should represent to Gov'r Parr the inconveniences which individuals labor under from the repeated refusal of the public officers to perform what everybody supposes their duty. I'll begin to maneuvre tomorrow, and if that won't do I'll try another method which has generally succeeded here—that's bullying. You men in New Brunswick will ere long be convinced that patriotism is not the characteristic of Nova Scotians, and that instead of affording you information and assistance, their envy and malignity will induce 'em to throw every obstacle and impediment in your way. I am astonished that they have not art to conceal the principles by which they are actuated. Even our friend Sampson‡ appears ashamed of their conduct.

James's sudden departure obliges me to close my epistle. I hope he'll overtake Deblois. I give you Byles' memo, to save myself the trouble of telling the story. I will enlarge on the subject of the Grants when I have opportunity and will collect any information in my power.

I flatter myself, costive and cross-grained as they are, I'll get at the truth, in spite of their teeth. How can you desire me to write all my "discoveries, views, prospects, and intentions"? Why damn 'em—'tis impossible to describe 'em. My discoveries are innumerable—my views extensive as eternity—my prospects black as H— (sometimes), and my intentions variable as the wind.

Penn is not dead, at least she says so. She wrote you by Deblois I have not another moment, I therefore cannot write to Marston. Tell him by all means to obtain a lot for me at Frederick‖ He shall hear from me by the very next conveyance.

Remember me affectionately to neighbor Hazen and Family. Mr. Alexander has undertaken to furnish a set of Piano strings for Mrs. Lud-

*Hon. Richard Bulkeley accompanied Governor Cornwallis to Nova Scotia in 1749. He became secretary of the province about 1759 and continued in the office under thirteen successive governors, or until 1793, when he retired in favor of his son. On the death of Governor Parr in 1791, he was for a short time administrator of the government of Nova Scotia. He died Dec. 7, 1800, at the age of 83 years, beloved and respected by all classes of society for his amiable qualities. At his death he was judge of the admiralty, grand master of the Free Masons, and brigadier general of militia—a rank never since conferred on any militia officer in Nova Scotia.

Edward Winslow to David Eason.

Halifax, 7th April, 1785.

D'r Eason,—I have this moment received your letter, and shall see Mr. Forster tomorrow and will enquire about the saw-set, and by the first conveyance I will forward the files. I shall also send round a small quantity of provisions and sundry other articles. I have received a particular account from Mr. Chipman relative to his operations in obtaining the land & on the whole I think myself lucky. I shall leave the business of placing the mill entirely to your discretion. I shall occasionally forward such articles as I can collect here, but it is necessary for me to acquaint you before we begin, that the present embarrassment of my circumstances will effectually prevent me from advancing any further sum of money.

I have never doubted that a saw-mill in that situation will render a very handsome profit and the value will be greatly enhanced by the late determination to make St. Ann's the seat of Government. New works are going on there very soon—barracks to be built, &c, we shall be sure of a market for our lumber.

As soon as a ship arrives from England I hope to take my final departure from this place. Should you get up the river before I arrive, I will follow you. I will afford you every assistance in my power to obtain a good location of land.

I am very sincerely

Your Friend, &c,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Benjamin Marston.

Halifax, 10th April, 1785.

Dear Marston,—I am delighted with the idea of being abused for not having done justice to the River St. John's in my attempts to describe it.

I have not lain under this imputation long. I prophecy'd that Lambton & you would be pleased with your tour, but your ideas of the beauties of St. John's will be incomplete until you see it with the advantages which nature lavishes on it in summer.

I am now shipping the Boys,* Caesar, Frank & Juba, who are to take possession of the point, and carry on such operations as may be judged most beneficial to the proprietors. In the vessel with them I have sent two large casks & inclose you an invoice of the contents. I have also desired my wife to send over to Mr. Chipman a quantity of spades, hoes, axes, pickaxes & other tools, which I request may be issued to them in such manner as you may think best. Caesar is a very discreet fellow, and you know the kind of treatment he has been accustomed to, I therefore need say nothing on that head. Frank promises fair & if he pleases he can be as good a man as any in the world. Juba is a devil—for which reason I thought he would do better with them than with his mistress. I think they may be employed very advantageously in cutting wood & cultivating that part of the land which is cleared. Frank is a tolerable carpenter & with proper directions will be able to cut the timber for the House-frame. The other articles which may arrive from time to time consigned to you can be stored in some dry place. I shall endeavor to make a collection which will be useful to myself & friends, & I hope they will be carefully preserved until my arrival among you.

A case of Rum & a quantity of Salt are among the articles which Mrs. Winslow will send from Granville, which will be issued in such way as you think best.

If Mr. Eason consents to my proposal & chuses to go on with the mill business, I shall beg the favour of you to deliver him such articles as he may have occasion for, charging him with 'em—A cask of shoes will be sent by Mrs. Winslow which I purchased here some time agoe.

It will be necessary that a place be pointed out for the [black] boys to begin to cut, it requires some judgment. I don't know even the form of the point as the boundaries are now settled. I must therefore leave the matter wholly to Major Coffin & yourself.

If it's possible to procure a good Skiff without too great expence, I should be glad to get one for Capt. Caesar, indeed I don't see how they can well do without one.

&c. &c. &c.

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 11th April, 1785.

My dear Chip,—When I tell you that Sally is arrived in the St. Lawrence and that I am surrounded with letters public and private and that I've only half an hour to prepare for the departure of an express-man, you will allow for the agitation of my mind and suppose it impossible for me to write particularly. To Marston's letter I refer you for the event of her negotiation and to other letters which I enclose from your friends for all other circumstances. I fell sensibly my dear Fellow for your disappointment* altho' I cannot help hoping that it will not be grievous in the event. Coffin's letter will undoubtedly announce Bliss's appointment, and that he is on his passage. I have not a line from Col. Fox, my letter from him is on board the "John and Ann" with Dr. Halyburton. Reports in England were current that Gov'r C. was to be removed to Canada and that it rested with Fox to determine whether he would succeed him or not.

I am endeavoring to close my matters with all possible dispatch that I may be able to join you. I anticipate no impediments but I may meet with 'em. The two Murray's and their sisters were passengers with Sally. Dan is endeavoring to settle his business 'tis uncertain how it will terminate.† Young Sewell is on board the "John & Ann" as is Sproule and several others. I shall at all events wait her arrival. I enclose you my original letter from Mr. Watson, at which I am gratify'd. It may afford the Gov'r pleasure to see it. The seed referred to shall be sent if possible by this conveyance.

There's no other news of consequence that I have heard except a change of Commodores. Sir Charles‡ goes home and a Capt. Sawyer relieves him. The Commissioner is appointed one of the Commissioners of the navy. John Temple has the appointment of a Consul General in America. Colonel Morse is married and 'tis said comes out Chief Engineer to Quebec. Mr. Mann is appointed Engineer for N. Brunswick and a Mr. Aylwin, formerly a sinecure paymaster at Cape Breton, is to pay the Troops in your Province.

Sally brought a box for you which she says has parchment in it, but that Tom Coffin enjoined it upon her that she should not send it to N. B.

†From an expression in a letter among the Chipman papers written by Thos. A. Coffin, dated at London, Aug. 27, 1785, viz.: "How comes on Sally with Dan?" it would appear that a flirtation was in progress between Major Murray and Sarah Winslow but nothing came of it. See extract from this letter under date 27 Aug., 1785.

without your express orders for the purpose. I don't understand it.

I have a letter half finished relative to the papers you wrote about. I can make no addition to it now, but the instant I can fetch my breath I will have at it.

Once more believe me,

Yours, Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to His Wife.

Halifax, 13th April, 1785.

I suppose the express man will overtake Joe but I don't care. I'll write again.

Nothing has yet transpired to enable me to fix a time for my departure, but I most ardently hope it will be soon. If the General consents to make me an extra allowance for my trouble & services, which I have apply'd for, I can settle all my affairs & leave this town in one month without embarrassment, but I dare not speak of it for fear it may influence him in his decision. He (at present) does not suspect that I intend to be off so soon. Murray & his Brother will be with you in a few days—you know they love good eating & drinking therefore provide in season for 'em. Sally is busy in packing your fine tasty Cap & Bonnet in a large Band-Box which I'll send in a sloop now loading for Annapolis.

Go on with all your operations of gardening, &c., because if we move, I'll reap the benefit by leaving somebody to take care of it.

I send you the London papers to 2nd March, when you can spare 'em send them to Williams & Thompson. Buss the babies. I wish I cou'd buss the mother.

Affectionately & everlastingly Yours,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 21st April, 1785.

In my last I inclosed a memorandum from Mr. Byles relative to his application for transcripts from the public records at this place.

Since that time several circumstances have taken place which I shall endeavor to state with as much candor as I am capable of.

On finding that Byles's application was unsuccessful and that the answers to him had been evasive and in some degree rude, I thought necessary to make a serious business of it. I accordingly had an interview with the Secretary and Surveyor General together. In my exordium I stated:—That they might entertain ideas that my intentions were to perplex and embarrass them. I assured them they were mistaken. That I had no other motive but to assist in elucidating a business important to Society, and which now wore the appearance of darkness and mistery. I acquainted them explicitly that a process in Chancery would be instituted against Hauser's Patent, and that I came not to request but to demand authenticated copies of the original memorial and all the subsequent papers respecting that grant, and I presumed if I was refused that it would be done with every mark of official formality. To my astonishment they both say'd, they were uncertain whether any memorial had been presented In many instances grants were made on personal aud verbal applications, and it frequently happened when petitions were preferred that those petitions were considered as insignificant papers and were not preserved. I replied as decently as I could, That I only wanted facts relative to this particular grant. If no memorial had been presented, I wished to know in what way the patent was obtained. If by personal or verbal application —what were the peculiar pretentions of the man, and (in short) on what principles the land was granted him. I was told very politely—that enquiry should be made and satisfaction given me. Mr. Morris particularly assured me that so far as related to him, either in his private or official capacity, he would give me all the information which he could obtain on the subject.

Several days elapsed. I at length met Mr. Morris in a chearful company at his house. He with great freedom introduced the subject and told me that the original memorial was found, and that he would apply for Licence to furnish me with a copy and in confidence he showed me the memorial. I observed a Certificate from the Chief Justice setting forth the merit of the applicant, &c, and another Certificate from Mr. Morris protesting against the grant because 300 acres of interval was more than any individual was entitled to.

I told him at once that the appearance of any clandestine or secret management in a matter of this nature was extremely painful to me, that I wanted nothing but the most open communication, and that, with his permission, I would apply again for copies of all the papers. He very readily consented, and the day following I repeated my application at the Secretary's office and obtained the inclosed paper No. 1, which I considered as a very imperfect history of the business without the two Certificates, and as Mr. Morris had professed a desire to assist me, I thought it a matter of civility in turn to acquaint him that I had received a partial transcript without his Certificate, and that unless I could procure more complete state of facts, I should be under the necessity of transmitting the papers as they now stood, as I did not feel myself authorized to relate any part of the conversation which had passed between us, or to avail myself of any information which had been confidentially communicated. He considered himself obliged, and decidedly affirmed that unless he obtained every necessary paper properly attested by the Secretary he would attest the copies himself.

I presume that I shall receive all the papers from some quarter or other tomorrow. Whether they are to the purpose or not, I shall not pretend to say, nor will I comment on such undignified conduct in the principal officers of a country. * * *

22nd April. The Surveyor-General has called in propria persona and acquaints me "That he is positively forbid to furnish any information on the subject of Frederick Hauser's Grant." But adds that I shall hear from him again. * * *

The venerable Foster Hutchinson* has just called to shew me a memorial to Gov'r Carleton which will be forwarded by this conveyance to Col. Putnam,† and it is one of my serious requests that you will see it and afford him all the assistance in your power.

Don't forget Ferdinand Redding.‡

I believe by this time you are pretty sure of my existence in this sublunary world. You are an unconscionable fellow if you want to see another line this month. From your Certificate of Mr. Morris.

The Tract of the Township of Maugerville on the River Saint John was by the late Surveyor-General ordered to be divided into one hundred and one Farm Lots, extending one mile deep into the country, or thereabouts, and every grantee having one of these lots assigned him was understood to be entitled to have one thousand acres to be made up to him in an after division, and for half a lot five hundred acres; and the grants made since the general grant in 1765 have been in that proportion (except one or two Maugers‖ and the heirs of Sayer§).The General Grant was made at a time when there was a great crowd of business in the publick offices on ‖Joshua Mauger was the friend and patron of the Maugerville grantees. After these settlers had agreed on their location, and it had actually been surveyed, they were informed their lands had been reserved by order of the King in council for retired officers of the army and navy. Joshua Mauger had been a merchant in Nova Scotia, had returned to England and had been elected a member of parliament. He so effectually championed their cause that they were confirmed in possession of their grant, and as a token of gratitude they gave to their township the name of Maugerville.

In this hurry in making out the Grant they have called a Right* five hundred acres, when it was intended that every Right in that Township should be a thousand acres on account of the Grantees being the first adventurers, and also on account of there being a very great proportion of sunken lands and lakes within the limits of that Township.

Andrew Kinnear to Edward Winslow.

Particulars collected at Cumberland and its neighbourhood relative to matters mentioned in an Extract of a letter from Brook Watson Esq to Edward Winslow Esq, dated the 6th August, 1784.

Lumber. The Rivers Cocaigne and Richibucto are allowed to be the best for white pine; there is a small quantity at Ramcheg. At Petitcoodiack there are great plenty of Elm, Ash, Rock-Maple, Spruce, Black birch, and a little white pine. At Chipotee the same. The whole country abounds with building Timber and any quantity may be had either ready framed, or squared into scantling.

Saw Mills. We have only four in the whole country, and they are but indifferent, scarce sufficient to serve the home consumption, but many might be erected if encouragement was given, particularly to the eastward and northward. Cocaigne is particularly well calculated for saw mills and the lumber trade might be carried on there to a great extent.

Fish. At Merimichee the Inhabitants expected, according to former experience, to take 4,000 tierces of salmon last year, half of which might be caught on Messrs Cort & Davison's lands. Many places in the Bay of Chaleurs are allowed to be very advantageous for salmon fishery. The most advantageous salmon fishery is supposed to be in the River Ristigouch, they are not so delicate but are as large again as those at Merimiche, some 40 lb. weight. The Rivers Rishebuctoo and Phillip are famed for salmon, but no Inhabitants are yet settled on those Rivers. In the River Merimiche there are immense quanties of Shad and Sturgeon, which the Inhabitants will not take the trouble to salt. There is good authority for saying that three men in a Shallop have taken in three months, say June, July and August, 500 Quintals of Cod-fish in the Bay of Chaleurs. After August they take their course to the northward of the Island Saint John, where they may be pursued to great advantage in large vessells. The fish called Gaspereau, are to be found in immense quantities here as well as to the East.

*A "Right" is equivalent to a lot or share of land.

Shipping. None here whatever.

Cattle. Neat Cattle may be spared from the County of Cumberland this year to the amount of six hundred head, and eight hundred for the year 1786. From a hundred and sixty to two hundred Horses can be also spared yearly, with oats to the amount of two or three thousand bushells for their use. For Ballast for vessels, there are Grind stones, and Coals in abundance to be found at the Joggins, within twelve miles of Ft. Cumberland.

The above information is all that could be collected in so short a time that with safety could be relied upon. As to the prices they are fluctuating and unsteady. Good beef by a single cow or ox is now sold for 3d. per pound; in large quantities it will of course be less. Tollerable good horses from £12 to £15, others from £8 to £12. The frame of a House 40 feet by 30, may be bought here for about £30 or £35; when numbers will be wanted it is expected they will be less. Lumber is dearer here than in any part of the two provinces but that is owing to scarcity of mills. As to the price of fish I cannot get any intelligence that can be depended on.

A. Kinnear.

We have done ourselves the honor to inclose a memorial for the General, praying he would be pleased to indulge us & families with the same donations the women & children have got, and we cannot allow ourselves to doubt of your polite & humane interference in our behalf. We beg leave Sir, to say that tho' our husbands are reduced subalterns, yet we find it a small pittance to maintain our large families here tho' in the woods. Colonel Edward Winslow to His Wife.

Halifax, 29th April, 1785.

My dear Wife,—The long expected ship has now arrived and to give you some idea of my anxiety I enclose you a copy of a paragraph of the Secretary of State's letter to General Campbell, by which you will see what a narrow chance I have run of being irretrievably ruined. To save you from feeling too poignant distress I also inclose part of Mr. Thompson's letter to me; you will observe by that that my half pay is settled.

I am now my dearest Girl furnished with a fair pretence for quitting this unpleasant situation. I have this day announced my intention to the General. He bears it like a philosopher. I hope to be able to settle all my accounts in about a fortnight from this time and then—and then my dearest wife I shall fly to your arms never again (I hope) to separate. I flatter myself that with a little assistance I shall be able to quit Halifax without losing credit.

I think no time should be lost in sending across everything which we can spare. All the packages in the store may be sent by the very first conveyance, Ferdinand will have the goodness to assist. Pack up all your bottles, cyder and every other spare thing. Have you sent for the old Seine? the salt, &c, &c? You need not give yourself unnecessary trouble about fencing, gardening, &c. Everything that can be done with perfect convenience should, however, be performed because 'twill enhance the rent. If any body applies tell them that the House will be left by us before the first of June, and let them make their proposals. I do not know whether it may not be best for Ferdinand to advertize:—

"That elegant House now occupied by the Honourable E. W., one of "His Majesty's Council for the Province of New Brunswick, consisting of "four beautiful Rooms on the first Floor, highly finished. Also two spa"cious lodging chambers in the second story—a capacious dry cellar with "arches &c. &c. &c. The House is delightfully situated at Granville on "the Banks of the Annapolis River. In the summer you have every ad- "vantage from the Fogs and in the winter an enchanting view of the ice. "The Garden produces the most desirable vegetables and Fruit and there's "a prodigious fine Green-House, Goose-House, Pig-House and t'other "House. The Stables are in a stile peculiarly elegant, and there's a large "store newly erected.

"N. B. The chimnies never smoke and all the Cats will be sold with "the lease. For further particulars enquire of Macfarling Esq., Agent "and Attorney to Madam Winslow."

You must get a devilish deal of money surely for a lease of such a House.

The idea of soon seeing you has set me into a frolic. May Heaven grant that no untoward accident happens to detain me.

I have bought a suit of Baby linen for little Ned—a most extravagantly fine collection. I have also got you another loose muslin Gown made in a new stile.

29th April, Friday. You little lazy, ill temper'd jade, how dare you let the express-man set off without a line. I wish I had hold of your ear, I'd give you a pinch that would make you squeak again. Thank Ferdinand for his letters. If Mr. Macfarling will not take what you offer him, let him seek his recompence. I'll not give him a farthing more. I am vastly glad that you are satisfied with Magee and his wife. I hope they will continue to please you.

On serious consideration I think it will be best for me to hire horses at this place. The trouble and expense of sending Jack will be nearly equal to the hire.

I shall not send molasses, flour or anything else to Annapolis but will send everything to St. John's. Your little things will be put in my portmanteau. I have nothing more to say only that I am your faithful

Edward.

My mother's family will sail in about a fortnight. Let every part of the old Marquie be collected, repaired and put in the best order possible. Don't fail of this as I shall certainly want it.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, Sunday, 8th May, 1785.

My dear Chip,—I have only time to acknowledge the receipt of yours with the inclosures for England and to congratulate you that they arrived just in time for the St. Lawrence. The Governor's dispatches I have this instant delivered with the General's to Capt. Hartcup of the Engineers, all the others which came to my care I have delivered to Wyat; acquaint the Governor of this circumstance.

Now my dear fellow—; This is Sunday, Tuesday next I set off for Annapolis, where I hope to meet a letter from you informing me what success you have had in your effort to obtain a house for my mother; by that event my motions will be regulated. If you have not been able to obtain one, I must remain a little while longer at Granville; if you have I dash instantly, wife, children and everything else for [New] Brunswick. I have manoeuvred for a passage for them without expense in a fine large ship belonging to Cochran. They take with them everything of their property and a years provisions, and for effecting all this I deserve the highest rank among clever fellows. Now if you, Hazen, Coffin, Marston, Hailes, &c, &c, will procure a good comfortable Box for 'em and arrange matters so that the first impression will be pleasing you shall be placed in the second rank of clever fellows and remain there to all eternity. I acknowledge it would distress me immensely to remain any time at Granville, but I have no alternative unless they can be accomodated with a house* by themselves.

By the ship which takes them I shall send every package which belongs to you. I hope the contents of some of 'em have not been contaminated in this infernal place. I intend if possible to coax Gregory† to cross the Bay of Fundy when he comes to Annapolis. Don't fail writing me immediately on receipt of this.

I hope Hazen has repaired or is repairing our habitation. No man was ever more agitated, befluttered, and bedevil'd than,

Your Ned.

Sunday 15th May; Annapolis-Royal.

Here I am dear Chip—distressed that this letter has not reached you. I will remain here until I hear from you, which for Heaven's sake don't delay a moment. Dight‡ (who is a man to whom I am obliged, and entitled to your civilities of course)—with his friend Lawson, will tell you how anxious I am, and relate every circumstance respecting me. To them I refer you. Consider my impatience and relieve your affectionate

Ed. Winslow.

*The mother and sisters of Col. Winslow on their arrival at St. John were about to take possession of a house belonging to Col. Wm. Tyng, at a rental of £40 per annum; but the house being out of repair and unsuitable for their accomodation, Ward Chipman agreed to exchange houses, the one in which he was living at Portland Point being more convenient and comfortable.

†Gregory Townsend.

‡The reference is to John Butler Dight, merchant of Halifax, at this time acting as agent for supplying provisions, &c., to the Loyalists.

Lieut. Col. James Chalmers to Edward Winslow.

New Castle on Delaware, 15th May, 1785

Dear Sir,—Soon after I had the pleasure of seeing you I embarked for Maryland, and having had a passage of 39 days I could not before Spring arrange my affairs. I now proceed to England with vouchers of the sale of my Estate, which for this country may be termed a noble one.

As I have had it much at heart to settle in your province. I am very anxious to endeavour that the lands destined to the Maryland Corps* may be placed on such footing that an impartial division may be made to all those interested. May I be permitted to suggest that your humane and generous attention to me when I had the pleasure of seeing you at Halifax, encourages me to solicit a state of this matter to enable me to lay it before the minister, which I am determined to do with firmness. My address is No. 7, Fountain Court, Strand.

I hope to have the pleasure of paying my respects to you next October, mean time I beg leave to add that I have the honor to be with most perfect respect, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

Js. Chalmers.†

Jacob Troop's Receipt for Rent.

Granville, 23rd May, 1785.

Received of Edward Winslow, Esq., ten shillings currency, which with five pounds ten shillings received of Mrs. Winslow the 1st Sept'r, 1784, is in full for one years rent of a House in Granville with an acre of ground adjoining, late the property of Jeremiah Webbe deceased, commencing the 21st of April 1783, and ending the 21st of April, 1784.

Jacob Troop.‡

Sir John Wentworth to Ward Chipman.

Quebec, 5th June, 1785.

Dear Sir,—You will hardly expect to have a letter from me dated at this place, but it so happened that sailing from Halifax 23rd April in the Hermione Frigate, intending to land at Cape Breton, we found ourselves

*The Maryland Loyalists, under Capt. Patrick Kennedy, settled, as already stated in these notes, in the parish of St. Marys, opposite Fredericton.

†The commission of Lieut. Col. James Chalmers in the Maryland Loyalists bears date October 14, 1777. He was a man of good position in Maryland. The corps was raised through his efforts.

‡Jacob Troop was a prominent man in the early history of Annapolis County and some information concerning him will be found in Calnek and Savary's History of Annapolis. The dates in the receipt above seem to show that the house at Granville was rented April, 21, 1783, but Edward Winslow could not have arrived at Annapolis till a little later as he was in New York as late as the 18th April on or about which date he sailed for Nova Scotia.

there embarrassed with ice, & the country covered with snow. * * * We came on to this place to refit & repair. Tomorrow we sail for Spanish River, from thence to Miramichi, Tatamagouche, &c, & not impossibly by one of those Rivers into St. Johns.

In the mean time permit me very earnestly to intreat your good offices for a worthy and distressed Family in this place in procuring justice for them. Archibald McNeil, late of Boston, was too much respected to be unknown to you, his remaining family have equal merit. He relinquished a valuable property in N. England and loyally continued attached to Government. His property shared the same fate as others in similar circumstances, but he had some consolation in possessing Lot No. 3 or No. 59 in Gage Town on St John's river, originally granted to John Fenton. Mr. McNeil represented his case to Gov'r Parr, who promised to confirm his title & that it should not be escheated. Mr. McNeil goes to Quebec, and returning to occupy his land & prepare it for the reception of his family he unfortunately lost his life, as you may have heard.* The widow and children have now their greatest dependence on this property, and I hope thro your kind aid it will be recovered and established to them. My friend Col. Winslow is well acquainted with the circumstances, and I am sure, if he is with you, will readily exert his influence and abilities in a cause of the most signal humanity and incontestible justice, as this most surely is. I am sure that Judge Ludlow must be the friend of our solicitation and that Gov'r Carleton will protect it. I freely confess to you, my dear Sir, that I am exceedingly interested for the success of this matter, and will rejoice thankfully to acknowledge every exertion made

*Archibald McNeil of Boston went to Halifax with the Royal army on the evacuation of that place in 1776. He was proscribed and banished. He went to Boston on business in 1784 and was committed to jail, but finally allowed to rejoin his family at Quebec. In the month of August in the same year as he was journeying from Quebec to Halifax he was murdered by an Indian when asleep in the woods. In November this Indian was tried and convicted in the court of King's Bench at Quebec. The place where the offence was committed is described in the indictment as "near unto the village of Madawaska, in the district of Quebec, in the province of Quebec." In the Quebec Gazette of the 11th of November, 1784, there is an account of the execution of this Indian, and the case is remarkable for the commutation of the mode of execution ordered by the governor, with the advice of the council. This will appear in the following extract from the minutes of the council: There were present at the meeting of the council His Excellency Frederick Haldimand, governor; the Hon. Henry Hamilton, lieutenant governor, and ten members of council.

"His excellency the governor laid before the council a sentence pronounced "this day (Nov. 3, 1784), against an Indian named Charles Nichau Noiste, "condemning him to be hanged by the neck until he be dead, and stated that "application had been made to his excellency by the friends and relations of "the culprit, the Indians of his nation, and the Indians of other nations, to "change the punishment pronounced by the law, into that of shooting, which "is more consonant to the ideas of savages. The council having weighed the "matter and the consequences that might ensue, were of opinion unanimously "that the punishment should be changed, and that the said Charles Nichau "Noiste should be shot in place of hanged."

in their favour. As there will be Expresses returning to this place, I shall be much obliged if you will write a line to Mrs. McNeil with your advice & opinion on their case, & with such directions as you may think prudent for them to pursue. If it is conveyed under cover to Lieut. Gov'r Hamilton in Gov'r C.'s envelope, it will be safely expedited. Excuse this application but in such a case I feel myself assured that you will participate in the motives that occasion it, and most obligingly aid therein to the grateful sensibilities of

My dear Sir,

Your very faithful
humble serv't,

P. S. May I request you would be so good as to present my regards to Col. Winslow, if he should be with you, also to Mr. Marston, Ludlows, Willard, Sproule, Mr. Hazen & family, &c.

Thomas Williams to Edward Winslow.

Annapolis, 6th June, 1785.

Dear Sir,—Your favour of the 2nd gave us great pleasure to hear that you had so fine a passage and I sincerely hope your situation at St. John's will prove in every respect agreeable. You must undoubtedly be anxious for the arrival of the ship, but you need be under no apprehension for her safety as she had not left Halifax this day week. It will not be in my power to send you the Pork till her arrival, our store being quite exhausted. * * *

Mrs. Williams and Tom desire to join me in their best compliments, and I am with sincere Regard, dear Sir,

Your very obedient, humble servant,

Circular Letter to Heads of Departments.

Fort Howe, June 10, 1785.

Sir,—I am directed to acquaint you that by order of Major General Campbell a Board of Accounts, of which Capt. Balfour† is President, is instituted at this place for the purpose of examining the Publick Accounts of the Army in the District of New Brunswick, you will therefore as soon as the accounts of your department can be prepared give notice thereof to Capt. Balfour in order that the Board may be assembled to examine the same.

*See biographical note under date October 24th, 1783, in this book.

†Captain Wm, Balfour commanded the garrison at this time. He afterwards rose to the rank of major-general. He was administrator of goverment in the province for a short time in 1811. He died suddenly at Fredericton on the 2nd December, in that year, aged 52 years.

Ensign Lambton, Asst. Engr., Fort Howe; Fred Wm. Hecht, Esq'r, Asst. Commissary, Fort Howe; Wm. Garden, Esq, Asst. Commissary, St. Anne's Point; Lt. Dugald Campbell, Asst. Engineer, St. Anne's Point; Gelham Taylor, Esq'r, Asst. Commissary, St. Andrews.

Instructions to Edward Winslow Esq. appointed to muster Loyalists and Disbanded Troops, issued by Major General John Campbell, Commanding all the Forces in His Majesty's Dominions in North America, lying on the Atlantic Ocean, &c. &c. &c.

You are hereby authorised to muster all the Loyalists and Disbanded Troops settling in the Province of New Brunswick, and you will be pleased to communicate your orders and instructions to His Excellency Governor Carleton, and consult with him respecting the most effectual method of performing the service on which you are employed. Previous to a muster of any Corps or Class you will give due and public notice of the time when, and the place where, you intend to take the muster, and you will direct that fair Rolls be prepared of each Corps or Class, specifying the names, sex, age and description of every individual contained therein, and the said Rolls are to be certified by two, at least, of the officers or Principal men of the Corps or Class thus mustered.

When the muster of any Corps or Class is completed you will forward a Report thereof to the nearest Commissary and certify that the Men, Women and Children named therein, are actually present and are by the King's Instructions entitled to their proportion of the Royal Bounty of Provisions, which Report, with your signature, will be his voucher for issuing the same.

A copy of my instructions to the Board appointed to examine the claims of Persons applying for Provisions at Halifax will be herewith presented you. You will endeavor to comply with the spirit and intention of those Instructions as nearly as circumstances will admit, and whenever you find any Person or Persons who are not within the description of Persons pointed out in those Instructions, you will exclude them from your Returns. And if in the course of your enquiry any abuses are discovered you will endeavor, with the assistance of His Excellency the Governor, and the Commissary, to have them corrected and to report the names of any Persons who may have been guilty of imposition.

You will as soon as possible transmit to Head Quarters a General Return of your doings, with particular returns of all Persons mustered within your District, as well as to His Excellency Governor Carleton. Given under my Hand at Head Quarters, Halifax, the 17th day of June, 1785.

John Campbell, M. Gen'l.

H. M. Gordon to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 20th June, 1785.

My dear Winslow,—Shaw's* report of the abuses that have been committed in the issue of the Bounty of Government at Chedabuctou† has induced the General to direct a muster of the different Settlements in both Provinces. The mode pursued last year is to be adopted this. Mr. Shaw is to go to Shelburne, O'Brien to Windsor, Kenticoot, &c. &c., and I have wrote to John Robinson to request he may take his former District. The General relying on your readiness has directed me to request you may have the goodness to name some person as you shall think proper to be employed on this service in New Brunswick, who may be approved by the Governor. He will receive the same Pay as last year, and the Garrison Boat ordered to attend him. A blank instruction is enclosed you and printed copies of the usual advertisements. What stationery may be wanting will be allowed.

I do not know what saving this Muster may make in your Province, but I am convinced in this, the expense will be amply justified.

I am, most sincerely, Dear Winslow,

Your friend and humble servant,

H. M. Gordon‡

William Garden to Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, 28th June, 1785.

Dear Sir,—By the receipt of your official letter of the 11th inst., I was made happy by hearing of your arrival at St. John, and I have since heard that your family are also arrived, and that you mean to stay with us, a circumstance which affords myself and your friends at St. Anns very great satisfaction, and we are not without hope that it may suit your views to take up your residence at this place.

He was a particularly warm friend of Edward Winslow, and on the visit of the latter to England in 1805 rendered him essential service.

You have greatly served us already, and I doubt not are disposed to make us more obliged to you, and believe me the Country never wanted your help more than it does at present. All our promising views and hopes will be blasted, and the settlement must fail if flour or bread is not immediately sent up, let it come from where it may. Major Murray will inform you of the situation of the unfortunate people, and I flatter myself your goodness of Heart will induce you to become their Advocate for relief. If I can in any manner be useful to you here have the goodness to command me.

Captain R. F. Brownrigg* to Edward Winslow.

Miramichi, 29th June, 1785.

Sir,—I make bold to write to you, as I have not the honor of being known to His Excellency, to request that you will be so good as to have me included in the Grant of Lands on this River. I arrived here the 12th instant and have opened a Store for the present at a Mr. Mark Delesdernier's where I must remain until I get an House of my own. He informs me that Mr. Micheaux a Surveyor has been here and laid out the Land in 200 acre lots, whereby there are two Lots become vacant between Mr. Frederick Delesdernier and William Drisdell. About the centre of these two Lots are the Logs of an Hutt which I am getting covered for a Store, opposite to which I have put down a salmon Nett to try what success I shall have as a fisherman.

As one of these Lots is without water and neither of them Fishing Places, I hope with your assistance to have a Grant of both by which I shall be enabled to make a tolerable Farm there in time.

A melancholy accident happened here last Monday afternoon : an old man, named John Fitzgerald went out to set a Nett and was drowned. He fell out of a canoe. He was found yesterday.

I should think it very necessary to have a Coroner here as several people have been drowned and no one to enquire how. If there is not any one here or coming here that His Excellency would choose to appoint, I, for the benefit of the Public, offer my services, though as I am a Justice of

P. S. I shall not sign myself Captain now I am turned Merchant, but I beg leave to remind you that Captain White and myself served in the same Regiment.

Benjamin Marston to Edward Winslow.

Mirimachie Point, July 17, 1785.

I arrived here only three days ago and it has taken me till now to get myself stowed into a place where I can do business.

The condition of this River respecting the numbers of Inhabitants has been greatly mis-represented—to me at least. There are not above 100 families, if so many, upon it at present. They live in a sparse manner scattered along it's banks. My appointments here will be a mere sound and not much more. The emoluments of them will never make it worth my while to remain here after I have done those particular kinds of service which I came hither to execute. These I shall finish at all events.

This makes it more necessary for me to get into some other line of business for a lively-hood and not depend any more upon Government for employment. In consequence therefore of the project, which we have often talked over together, of going into the Commission business I now propose to you the putting our scheme into execution, and would have you write to Lane & Co. immediately (as I think it was from them that you told me that you had the offer of Goods to be sent out on Commission) with an invoice for £4,000 or £5,000 ster; if you think that will not be too much. You must satisfy them respecting me, as I am a stranger to them. * * * Goods may be vended at Westmorland and in the parts of Nova Scotia in its vicinity, provided beef, hay, plaster, grain, &c., could be received in pay. I should think that articles so necessary might be converted into some medium of remittance.

This place at present is scarce an object for a fixed Factorage, but a quantity of Furs might be picked up every Spring by coming hither with a properly assorted cargo and Salmon might be engaged, of all which I shall get myself better informed. * * *

The Salmon Fishery on this River is an object worth the attention of Government, but unless it is attended to it will be ruined by the ignorance and avarice of those concerned in it. It has failed very much this season, no doubt thro' the impolitic methods used to catch the Fish — which is chiefly by set nets, which are so extended from each side as to leave the fish very little room to run, and at Davidson's are extended quite across the River, to the utter exclusion of the poor savages above.

I have not been here long eno' to make many observations, but this is certainly a very fine country, covered with white clover wherever it is open to the influence of Heaven, generally level, easily traversed. To say it was equal to St. John's might be looked upon as a species of blasphemy but this I dare pronounce that Miramichie Point, & Beaubere's Island are superior in situation to Fredericton. A ship of 250 tons from Italy is now lying just by them.

Remember me kindly to all my friends both male & female — more especially and most kindly to those of your and your Mother's family. For God's sake write to me whenever you can, 'twill be a supreme consolation to me in this my retreat to know that you sometimes think of

Ben. Marston.

Edward Winslow to H. M. Gordon.

St. John's 18th July, 1785.

Dear Gordon,—Neither St. Paul nor any other old fashioned Buck ever experienced half so great a variety of difficulties & embarrassments in one month as I have in the last.

The transportation of a lusty wife, three little Brats & a large collection of lumber across the Bay of Fundy was no inconsiderable job. That over I was saluted with a very severe fit of the Gout. I found here no preparation for my reception & I was obliged to tumble Mrs. Winslow and the little ones into the crowd that filled the House at Portland-point, & before I could say "Jack Robinson" the ship Parr made her appearance and disembarked my mother and sisters who of course made a considerable addition to the party.

In this dilemma I hunted Wanton out of Tyng's house and placed my mother's family there. I collected all the Carpenters, Masons and Laborers that could be found & I have ever since been up to the eyes in mud, mortar, &c. I am now emerging from this state & in a few days I expect to see both families comfortable. Before I proceed further let me say in one short sentence & for the last time, that I feel the most cordial gratitude for every mark of attention which you & my other friends shewed to my unfortunate old mother and sisters while they resided at Halifax.

Immediately after my arrival I commenced my operations to form a Board of Accounts agreeable to the General's order. The Governor consented to the nomination of two respectable merchants, Messrs. Donaldson & Garden. Tomorrow they sit to examine Mr. Lambton's accounts. I shall do the duty of Secretary to the Board myself, as the appointment of another person would necessarily be attended with some expence. By the inclosed letters you will see that Mr. Commissary Hecht has declined submitting his accounts.

I thought best on my first setting out to give official notice to every officer of public department in the District of the institution of the Board. As Mr. Hechts accounts were of the most importance I proposed that they should be first examined. * * I know not from what quarter Mr. Hecht may have received his advice, but it appears to me that his conduct is very reprehensible. I beg you will have the goodness to assure the General that I shall carefully avoid any further altercations with him & that wherever his accounts are presented I shall endeavor to examine them with candour & impartiality. In the mean time we shall go on with the other accounts & as I transmit 'em I will report my private opinion of such of the charges as appear irregular or wrong.

Mr. Campbell & Mr. Garden are expected every hour and I shall postpone my intended excursion up the river until their accounts are settled. I have also wrote to Mr. Tailer, the Commissary at Passamaquoddy, to attend here. I have been induced to take this step because the provision which has been issued by him is generally in consequence of Mr. Hecht's muster or orders from the Commandant here, & of course his accounts may be checked by their information.

I regret Hecht's obstinacy, because there are a considerable number of people to whom he is at this time indebted who are really distressed & who cannot possibly go to Halifax for their money. I will not presume to advise relative to the mode of paying the sums due at this place, but have only to say that whatever method is adopted, I shall hold myself obliged without fee or reward to afford every assistance in my power, & that I shall as cheerfully obey General Campbell's orders after I cease to be his Secretary as I did before.

Whenever the public business will admit I shall beat my march to St. Anns, where I intend to provide some kind of a habitation for my family. The enormous rents and other expenses here render it impossible for me to halt long.

My Gout has been particularly attached to my right hand & has almost disabled my thumb. I have not been able to write a line till today & now dare not indulge too far.

&c, &c, &c,

Ed. Winslow.

Brook Watson to Edward Winslow.

London, 26th August, 1785.

Dear Sir,—The Gen'l description of the Province of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, which you obligingly sent me under date of April the 25th, is by far the most regular and perfect thing of the kind I ever saw,* it's just the information I wanted and arranged better than any ideas of mine could possibly suggest, and carries more convincing proof in its face than fifty speeches made in the House of Commons from the most respectable information. You have hereby put a Weapon, offensive and defensive, into my hands, which may eventually intitle me to the honorable appelation of "Champion for the remaining Provinces."

Mr. Lambton has also obliged me with some observations made during his march† to Passamaquoddy; by all which I clearly perceive the West India Isles will soon be amply supplied with all kinds of lumber — white oak staves excepted, and therein is indeed a great want. How it may be supplied I can't conceive, for I much fear the Pine staves expected to supply their want will be found insufficient for the purpose; should it prove otherwise, I beg to be furnished with authenticated proofs of it.

There is no reason to apprehend a free trade being allowed between the British Islands in the West Indies and the American States; the eyes of this Country have, thank God, been opened to see the destructive tendency of such a measure, nor will the duty on Foreign Oil be taken off or reduced. As it now stands it is an effectual Bounty to our own fisheries and is severely felt by the American States. They complain, and I am glad they have cause for so doing. Their scheme of placing Nantucket‡ under our Government is too flimsy an artifice to take; the Quakers must move to one of the King's provinces if they mean to enjoy the blessings of his Government and the benefits of our Commerce.

The Province of Nova Scotia have at last forbid the Americans to enter their Ports. Had this wise step been taken earlier she would not have been drained of her money as has been the case. The States complain of being treated as aliens, forgetting they made themselves such. If our Government [in England] act wisely, a Governor General will soon be sent to the remaining Provinces, who will work them to their own happiness and the good of the Empire. Their neighbors, like vinegar fretting on their lees, will soon curse the day which made them independent.

Farewell dear Sir,

Your faithful humble serv't

Brook Watson.

My dear Chip,—* * * I hope our friend Ned [Winslow] and family are comfortably settled. I wish he was rid of that old debt. How are Polly and the children? How comes on Sally* with Dan? * * *

It not being convenient to Mrs. Geyer to have Murray home all the Holidays, as her family is so large of itself, he remained a fortnight at school, which is charged at half a guinea pr. week. Ned I hope will not think that there was any inattention to the boy, but he really is so rioutous and her own boys and girls so numerous, that she could do no otherways, He is a fine spirited boy and will I dare say do well, but he must be looked after and kept within bounds. His mother's indulgences, and which Ned did not dislike, would if he had not been removed as he was have made it a very difficult business to manage him. * * *

I wish I knew whether you were married or had any thoughts of it. Eben says that at Boston it is verily believed. Why the D—l don't you tell me either that you are or are not ? God bless you forever in whatever state you may be,

Yours most truly,

Halifax, 26th Septr., 1785.

Dear Sir,—I am just returned from Merrimichee and in time to have the happiness of sincerely congratulating you on your appointment of Paymaster of Contingencies for N. Brunswick. This, Dear Sir, is as unexpected as it is pleasing, as it in some measure ensures a continuance of the office, which we did not expect. Have received a letter from our mutual friend T. A. Coffin Esq'r, full of the kindest and most friendly sentiments towards you and the Family, in particular Miss Sally, in short it is like himself. He does not know of any alteration or any arrangements making in any of the present offices in this Quarter. Tells me I may rely on your friendly offices whenever solicited. This, by the bye, I have experienced & ever shall acknowledge. My friend Ward informs me he sent your Gun, which has been at length repaired, and my letter from this per a Capt. Bell; hope they have long ere this reached you. Wrote you when at Merrimichee, and solicited thro' you a Grant of an Island called Bedde Wyn‡; if it can be effected consistently shall be glad, however I submit the business entirely to your goodness, at all events I am determined to do some business in that Quarter as my Brother means to abide there and has begun to build. Capt. Marston has been very kind to me, and will thro' you add his friendship and good offices to anything you may recommend. Inclosed is a letter from him.

This day I put on board the Maria £3,000 sterling which is sent you to defray the Contingent expences in your Province. It will be handed you as will this my letter by Major Gordon. Have not had time to learn anything in particular to inform you of. Should there have any matter turned up worthy of your notice, no doubt Mr. Brittain will make you acquainted therewith. The Brig is ordered to sail immediately and I have only to make you a tender of my best services here and to beg you will believe me to be, Dear Sir,

With Gratitude and Respect, Your ever obed't Servant,

T. Moody.

Gregory Townsend to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 26 Sept., 1785.

Dear Winslow,—I want much to hear your plan of operations, how you succeed in your Settlement, where your place of abode is to be, how much you are like to realize pr. an. exclusive of the product of your Industry, how your good partner and all her children are. I wish you joy of the addition, may you experience the maxim of old Mr. Apthorp that every child made him £1,000 stg. richer. You and Polly will be able to buy all New Brunswick by the year 1900. I hear Miss Murray is married to Mr. Wanton, wish them joy for me. I wish Dan'l could find some very rich woman young or old that wanted nothing but a Husband.

Gordon sails the first wind in the Maria. Capt. Sutherland your Chief Engineer goes with him. He will be an agreeable addition to your excellent circle of friends. My respects to all your Family at both houses; to my Friend Sproule and his. I am this day taking leave of my house, £150. pr. an. is much too high for me, and as I see no likelihood of T. A. C's* coming out to share it, I unwillingly gave it up and have bought the shell that Friars lived in at £300 where I intend to make myself as contented as possible tho' not situated quite to my mind. But I shall be more so when you break your resolution of not seeing Halifax again and take a seat at the table. Apropos, I don't go to Cape Breton this season. The story of the Government in Don Quixote is not half so ridiculous as Gordon's story of Sydney, and what makes it worse, his is (I believe) true, the other fiction. I must make haste and begin to move.

Yours truly,

G. Townsend.

Lt. Col. Allen to Edward Winslow.

September, 28th, 1785.

My dear Sir,—We are told here that Col. Robinson declines accepting the Clerkship of this County.* If the information should be true I shall thank you if you will recommend our Friend Ned† [Stelle] for that office You know his abilities and honor, and I should think as he is settled in the County, he deserves a preference. I know your friendship for him and assure you you cannot gratify him more than by giving him your Interest in procuring the Clerkship of this County. Young Clopper will willingly accept the Coroner's office which has been rejected by Capt. De-Peyster. I think he will execute the office extremely well and I have promised him to write you on the subject and request you would mention him to the Governor. As it is an office of more plague than profit I think we shall be obliged to him for accepting it. I am sorry I did not see you before you left St. Anns, which I should have done if my Friend Thompson had not disappointed me. Pray present my compliments to Mrs. Winslow, Chip and Hailes.

I am, Yours sincerely,

Isaac Allen.

Frederickton, 28th Sept'r, 1785.

Dear Sir,—I am favor'd with your Letter of the 22nd inst by which I find it is the pleasure of His Excellency that the people of Maugerville & Burton shall in future be victualled here, but previous thereto it will be necessary to have a certificate of the time they have been victualled below, which I am happy you mean to procure. Mr. Hayt‡ will send you the papers you wanted, and he has sent the Box of Papers. I have received from Mr. Hayt the muster Lists of the people of Maugerville, but those of Burton I have not seen.

*Clerk of the peace for the County of York. Lt.-Col. Robinson, in point of fact, did accept the office. The old York sessions of the peace minute book contains this note as its first entry:—

"Beverly Robinson, Jr., Esq., clerk of the said court of general sessions of the "peace, gives this court to understand and be informed that on the 30th day of last "October, 1788, the house wherein he lived in the parish of Fredericton, and in which "were deposited all the records and papers belonging to the said court, was con-"sumed by fire, and all the said records and papers were then and there lost and de-"stroyed." The Magistrates present when the above announcement was made were Edward Winslow, Daniel Murray, George Dunbar, David McGibbon and Garrett Clopper.

†Edward Stelle was commissioned captain-lieutenant (or senior subaltern officer) of the 6th Battalion New Jersey Volunteers, June 24, 1777. He was adjutant of the corps and saw much service. He held a captain's commission at the close of the war. He was a representative of York County in the first house of assembly. He left the province about 1790, and his place in the assembly was filled by Judge Saunders.

‡Monson Hayt. See biographical note under date January, 12th, 1785.

Ever since I was appointed to the office of Commissary of this district I have labored without intermission to serve the people in it and I shall not yet leave off. The people of Maugerville & Burton who have never been victualled here come to me individually, without either certificate or recommendation from the heads of their Class or any one that I know, and are very much affronted that I do not know every one of them personally and their pretensions, but this I cannot help. When any distress is made known to me authentically I take upon me to give relief.

I sincerely congratulate you on the appointment of Paymaster of Contingencies, and am happy to hear money is coming to you. It is really much wanted and I hope you will bring some up with you. I am very glad to find you still mean to join us at this place.* It is a circumstance that affords great satisfaction to all your friends, and we did not want the addition of the [money] Chest to make it so, 'tho' you need not leave it behind. I really wish you here very soon and I hope you will bring a confirmation of Mr. Watson's news—at all events the people should know soon what they are to expect.

I am happy to inform you that your mill† is about finished and doing great execution. Major Murray is so pleased with her that I do not believe he would leave her and come to St. John's to be made Lieut. Governor. It would appear she has given him a good stomach for by a letter I have received this day he says he will want about thirty six Barrels of Pork, Beef, flour and Indian meal for his winter's store, and as he seems to deserve it I have promised to get it for him.

I am dear Sir very sincerely

*James Glenie was quite a remarkable character. He was evidently well versed in his profession as an engineer. He advocated the construction of a ship canal at Chignecto a few years later. There is in the journals of the house of assembly for 1791 the report of a committee, of which he was a member, appointed to examine a plan "for fitting up a part of the church at Fredericton for the accommodation of the courts of justice and house of assembly." Glenie was the moving spirit in formulating the committee's report, which was adverse to the plan, on the ground that the church would not afford sufficient accommodation for the council and assembly, and, moreover, the expense of remodelling would be sufficient to erect a compact building with more convenient accommodations. James Glenie was elected a member for Sunbury County in 1789, in place of Capt. Richard Vanderburgh, who had disposed of his property the previous year and returned to the States. Glenie was in politics a radical, and proved a thorn in the flesh to Governor Carleton and his council. In letters written to Andrew Finucane in 1789-1790 (see Canadian Archives for 1895, pp. 18, 19), he asserts that "unless Governor Carleton be removed and Ludlow and Allen dismissed the province will soon be ruined." He uses the most extraordinary epithets in speaking of Governor Carleton and his officials—e. g., "Ludlow the ignorant, strutting chief justice," "Tommy Carleton," "Young Beverly Robinson, a man on whom nature has fixed the stamp of stupidity," "Billopp, an ignorant, uncouth Dutch Boer," &c. The governor and council had as little love for Glenie as he for them. Governor Carleton termed him a "Son of Beliol." John Coffin fought a duel with him, in which Glenie was wounded. Glenie once described Samuel Denny Street as "The little Creeper Cock," a name which stuck to him. Despite his eccentricities, Glenie was a clever man, and made no little stir in his day and generation. His abilities won the admiration of the Duke of Kent.

†Andrew Maxwell, of Maryland, was comissioned captain in the Prince of Wales American Regiment in 1777. He commanded the Grenadier company. The story related of him in Sabine's American Loyalists is evidently unfounded, since the muster rolls of his corps show no record of his having been taken prisoner. These rolls are, at present, in the hands of the writer of these notes. Captain Maxwell wrote a beautiful hand. His "Return of the people settled in the district between the Nashwaak and the Madam Keyswick," of July 29, 1785, on file among the Winslow papers, is sufficient proof on this head.

have sent after you, tho' I believe if they send Provisions agreeable to it at two thirds allowance there will be sufficient. Yet as it's right to be sure, I have in the estimate sent to Halifax & Fort Howe, asked for 2,800 Rations for Loyalists (and you may get as many more as you can) alleging, what is true, that since your muster was taken people from different quarters have come into this district, which are not included in it, and who bring claims on the store prior to it. I wish to God the Governor may consent to the completion of the distribution begun by us. With that assistance the deserving part of the settlers may get thro' the winter, but without it the consequences will be dreadful. Since you left us I have had the luck to have a return of my old friends the "Biles," which has hindered me from visiting your good family, but I hear they are all well. The Locusts from Maugerville and Burton, together with my other friends in the Ration way, give me little respite and I have snatched a moment at a late hour to say I am, Dear Sir,

Yours sincerely,

Wm. Garden.

Report of Board of Accounts.

Fort Howe, New Brunswick,

November 5th, 1785.

Present: Colonel Bruce, President; Major Forster, Captain Colvill, Mr. Leonard, Mr. Winslow.

The accounts of Receipts and Issues of Provisions at Fort Howe, commencing 24th February and ending 24th April, 1785, having been examined, they are found to be right cast, but there appears to be a large deficiency of Provisions. The Board after careful inquiry are of opinion that the Commissary was subject to great inconveniences by the peculiar situation of the stores. That from the want of a convenient deposit the provisions were exposed to frequent depredations, and there is ample proof of repeated thefts. These circumstances are in some degree an alleviation of the charge which must otherwise have fallen upon the Commissary. * *

The Board proceeded to the examination of the following accounts which were approved and recommended for payment.

(1.) Abstract of pay due clerks, store keepers and laborers employed in the commissariat at Fort Howe to 31st Oct. 1785, amounting to £69.0.10 stg. Dollars at 4s. 8d.

(2.) Pay due the expressmen of the 54th Regiment amounting to £1.2.0 sterling; dollars at 4s. 8d.

(3.) (4.) (5.) Artificers, laborers &c employed in the Engineer department at Fort Howe from 25th July to 24th October 1785 amounting to £171.7.6 currency.

(6.) Abstract of sundry accounts for articles furnished and services performed in the Engineer department at Fort Howe between the 25th August and 24th October 1785, as follows:—

(a) Acct. of Wm. Donaldson £254.8.4 currency.
(b). Do. Hazen & White £20.7.6 currency.
(c) Do. Ebenezer Spicer £90 currency.
(d) Do. Elias Skidmore £40.10 currency.
(e) Do. Alexander Fairchild £35.10 currency.
(f) Do. Thomas Jennings £11.4 currency.
(g) Do. John Sutherland £1.6.3 currency.
(h) Do. Benjamin I. Gray £0.19.3 currency.
(i) Do. Bradford Gilbert & Co. £9.15 currency.
(j) Do. Freight to sundry persons for transporting provisions to St. Anns amounting to £44.15 currency.

The Board adjourned to Wednesday the 16th inst.

A. Bruce.

James Campbell, Military Secretary, to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 19th November, 1785.

Sir,—I am honored with your letter of the 4th instant by Lieut. Gordon, now acting Paymaster of Contingencies &c., at this place, vice Whitlock deceased, and feel myself highly honored by the preamble of your letter, and gladly accept of that familiar correspondence you so frankly and so obligingly propose upon the footing of our mutual attachment to General Campbell. But here sir permit me to remind you that (unless I am very much deceived) I have already been admitted to the friendship of hospitality in your house, and to the protection of your household Gods. Some little attentions I was enabled to shew you on Staten Island when Brigade Major to General Campbell in 1777, together with your own hospitable disposition, procured me the honor of a Bed at your house in New York, and I recollect that the house you then inhabited had the year before been occupied by Capt. Powell and some officers of the 49th Regt. However, my dear Sir, your well established character, and more particularly the high estimation in which you are held by Friends for whose judgment I bear the greatest deference and respect, makes me anxiously ambitious of being admitted to your confidence and friendship.

The General is fully sensible of the delicate part you had to act in mustering the Loyalists and Disbanded Troops, and of the disinterested principles and motives that actuated you to the undertaking of it. But the exactness wherewith it evidently appears to have been taken, and the perspicuity wherewith it is stated, fully justify his opinion that no Person could have been found so adequate to the Task.

The General is concerned for the embarrassments and inconveniences that you have experienced from Mr. Hecht's unaccommodating temper and ill humor, but the more the difficulties, the more credit results from bearing with and overcoming them. The General is pleased that Mr. Garden's conduct on the contrary was so much to your ease and satisfaction.

Your conduct in taking the City muster perfectly corresponds with the General's ideas of what is right and just, in due conformity to His Majesty's most gracious intentions. For surely the Royal Arm was only stretched out to furnish relief, comfort and consolation where necessity called for and demanded them.

The General's sentiments regarding the granting of Provisions to Persons emigrating from one District to another, or from one Province to another, will be fully explained to you by the enclosed advertisement that has been published here, and which he requests you will cause to be published also in New Brunswick. For the General must conceive it to be the intention of Government to furnish a general and impartial encouragement to the settling of these Provinces; and to foster and animate the cultivation and improvement of one part to the prejudice of another part would be to pervert instead of aiding these gracious intentions.

And lastly on the concluding subject matter of your letter (the Department of Paymaster of Contingencies) the General wishes to know, in case it may prove necessary to send you more cash, whether the Deputy Paymaster General's bills could be transacted in New Brunswick on the same footing they are in Halifax (that is at a premium of 2 1-2 per cent, and the Dollars at 4s. 6d. or 455 Dollars and 30-54 parts for £100 sterling.

And for your information regarding expenditures properly authorized as extraordinaries of the Army, the General has directed me to furnish you an official copy of his orders herewith transmitted to Colonel Bruce, for your information of their purport and extent.

I have the honor to be Sir,

Your most obed't humble servant,

James Campbell, Secretary.

Lieut. Hugh Mackay Gordon to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 20th Nov'r, 1785.

My dear Winslow,—Previous to my arrival in Town, Whitlock died and the General appointed me in his room, so Brother how do you do. It is 10s. pr. diem while it lasts.

* * * * * * * * *

You will perceive by the proclamation the arrival of Dundas,* &c., and I find your claim is among the number that are brought out.

They intend to remain here until next June, when they will visit your Province. As I know Dundas well, and Mr. Pemberton being one of our Whist Party at the Generals, let me offer every service I can render you or yours on this occasion. Dundas told me the sooner the claimants came to Halifax the better as they would be considered in the first sum voted.

Campbell has wrote you an Epistle and the orders that accompany it will shew his ideas, he likes writing much better than I do.

My horses and myself were almost knocked up by the journey, D-m-n-d bad roads indeed, however, I pushed 'em. Kitty [James] desires to be remembered to the Colonel as do all his friends. Pray remember me kindly to your family. How does Oak Point get on. The General has planned a House which shall be sent the next opp'y.

Adieu, Affectionately yours

H. M. G.

(P S.) I had almost forgot to tell you Will Coffin is gone to England and I believe to endeavor to get the appointment I have. They need not keep it secret for God knows I am not avaricious. Townsend did not even mention him, he recommended Moody.

Gen'l Arnold arrived yesterday, Supercargo in the Lord Middleton, and I understand means to visit your province. Mr. Hake† and he will be good company. H. M. G.

*Col. Thomas Dundas and Jeremiah Pemberton came to adjust the claims of the Loyalists who had not been able to proceed to England in order to present their claims and apply for compensation for the losses they had incurred as provided by the British parliament. They opened an office in Halifax, Nov. 15, 1785, afterwards proceeding to St. John, and thence to the upper provinces. Jeremiah Pemberton was appointed chief justice of Nova Scotia in 1788.

†Mr. Hake was storekeeper at Fort Howe, and was charged with embezzling provisions, etc.

Secondly, Losses sustained in consequence thereof, or of the Claimant's Attachment to the British Government; a Schedule whereof is desired to be subjoined to the Memorial, ascertaining very particularly and accurately the Description and value of the Property lost.

Your Memorialist therefore prays that his (or her) Case may be taken into your consideration, in order that your Memorialist may be enabled, under your Report, to receive such Aid or Relief as his (or her) Losses and Services may be found to deserve.

N. B. The names of the Witnesses, their Descriptions, and Places of Abode, with the Particulars to which they are respectively to speak, are to be inserted at the end of the Schedule and the Documents whereby the Claim is to be made out are to be given in at the time of leaving the Memorial.

The Commissioners will require the best Evidence the Nature and Circumstances of the Case will admit.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

[St. John], Wednesday, 4th Jan'y, 1786.

My dear Winslow,—I thank you most cordially for your letter; it is really a cordial to me and revives feelings which always have and I hope always will constitute the greatest happiness of my life. You will see however by the date of this that I can have no time to give you the particular detail you wish of our operations during the Election Poll and scrutiny. Yours was handed to me last evening; the man by whom this is to go, Byles tells me, is to set off tomorrow morning, and the house is to meet at eleven o'clock today to present their speaker and hear the Governor's speech. I will however snatch every interval minute I can get during the day to answer the most essential objects of your enquiries.

I inclose you a sketch of the Charge I intended to have made at the opening of our Court here, but as Col. Ludlow* then charged the Jury it was not delivered—it may afford you some general hints. * * *

2 o'clock—I really wonder at your idea of your attendance at the General Assembly not being absolutely necessary. The Governor regrets exceedingly your and Col. Allen's absence and has told Murray so today, who assured him that nothing but your Court next week, which it was absolutely necessary for you to attend, prevented your coming. The Governor hoped that the Court would not detain you more than a day, and I am sure will be greatly disappointed if you are not in town as soon as possible. There never can be a time again when the abilities, industry and exertion of every member of the General Assembly will be more necessary, and I suppose if the Governor knows of this opportunity, that you will receive a particular message from him.

*This was probably Col. Gabriel G. Ludlow, the first mayor of St. John. The supreme court of judicature opened at St. John on Tuesday, Feb. 1, 1785, for the first time. Benjamin Marston, who was present writes of it thus in his journal:—"The chief justice gave a very judicious, sensible charge to the grand jury. The "advantage of a derniere resort for justice in all civil and criminal cases will be "very great to the people of this new province. They will find a mighty odds be-"tween having justice travelling regularly about them and being obliged to cross "the Bay of Fundy and travel 130 miles to Halifax."

The house met yesterday, only 13 in all, just enough to make a house. Owing to the stupidity of the Lower Cove Candidates in not attending the scrutiny and defending their votes the Sheriff has returned us, but our seats are to be contested by vehement petition.* As our election was a contested one it was tho't best not to choose anyone of us speaker, otherwise Bliss† would clearly have been the man. We therefore made choice of Botsford‡ who was presented and approved to-day. As there are so few members in Town the Governor recommended to us to adjourn to Monday without delivering his speech, which we have accordingly done.

Dr. Paine‖ is appointed Clerk of the house.

I have nothing from England later than the letters which Sally has forwarded to you from Mr. Watson and Coffin. It is undoubted that Sir Guy is to have a peerage and come out Governor General in the Spring, Coffin Secretary, Mr. Watson Commissary General, Bill Smith Chief Justice of Canada, and it is said Rob't Auchmucty Chief Justice of Nova Scotia.

Geyer has failed for an amazing sum. I get no letters from him and suppose the little I had in the world is now all gone. Indeed with per-

*There is quite a story in connection with this election. Governor Carleton decided that the electors should include all males of 21 years and upwards resident three months in the province. This was certainly a very democratic franchise. The contest resolved itself in St. John into one between the Upper Cove and the Lower Cove—the former representing the more professional and aristocratic element, the latter the democracy. The candidates for the former party (city and county) were Jonathan Bliss, Ward Chipman, Christopher Billopp, William Pagan, Stanton Hazard and John McGeorge, and for the latter party Tertullus Dickinson, Richard Lightfoot, Richard Bonsall, Peter Grim, John Boggs and Alexander Reid. The election was fiercely contested, according to the old style of open voting, and in the course of it a riot occurred at the Mallard House, on King street, to quell which the soldiers of the garrison were called out. It appears that the democratic party had actually a majority of the votes polled, but in the scrutiny, as mentioned above, the sheriff returned the opposite party. The election was protested and the matter heard at length by the house of assembly, where it was resolved by a vote of two to one (St. John members not voting), "That the petitioners having neglected at the scrutiny "before the sheriff to justify the votes struck off, cannot now be admitted to "prove those votes good." A curious ill-worded and ungrammatical petition was presented to Governor Carleton in connection with the business, asking him to dissolve the assembly. This the governor declined to do.

†Hon. Jonathan Bliss, the attorney general. See notice of him in Lawrence's Foot Prints at p. 27. He was of Springfield, Massachusetts, and graduated at Harvard in 1763. He became chief justice and president of the council, and died at Fredericton Oct. 1, 1822, at the age of 80 years.

plexities of one kind and another my spirits are very unusually depressed. I see nothing before me but poverty and disappointments, nor have I experienced any thing else since I came to this Province.

I wish to God I could make the excursion you suggest to your part of the Country. I am sure it would do me good—a few of our old fashioned tete-a-tetes would make me myself again, but this cannot soon happen. I shall, however, be greatly relieved by seeing you here. Remember me most affectionately to Mrs. Winslow and the little ones. I am rejoiced to hear that Polly remains free of any ill-consequences from the accident. Give my love very particularly to the Commissary* and let me know if he continues to observe my lessons at breakfast. I am afraid you and Mama will indulge him too much.

God bless you all prays most sincerely

Gregory Townsend to Ward Chipman.

Halifax, 25 January, 1786.

Dear Chipman,—I congratulate you (if it is worth it) on your getting the better of the Lower Covers. It must be better for any country, new or old, to have their public concerns conducted by men of science and principle, rather than illiterate or bad men of any class. You used to be an honest clever body enough, hope you will be better for the wear for many years to come.

Our friends at New York were well the 14th ultimo. How do Ned [Winslow] and Coffin pass the winter? I am told our friend Pen. is going to England. My best respects to all that worthy family, Mr. Coffin, the Ludlows, Putnams, &c. Say a thousand clever things for me to Mrs. Collector.‖ I hope he is well in health and spirits. What is become of Tyng?

I am ever, Your faithful friend,

He will be frequently mentioned in these pages. He was a son of General Phineas Lyman. He settled at Fredericton, but afterwards went to England, and was at one time governor of the Scilly Islands.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Fredericton, Feb'ry 21, 1786.

Dr. Chip,—As 'tis possible that you may not have seen the petition now circulating in the Country, I inclose a copy of it. The weazel varlets had the insolence to detail Oliver Bourdet and Handasyde (the kneeling man)* as a Committee to procure subscribers in this part of the country.

In my walk yesterday morning to town I was informed that they had opened a room at a public house, and were haranguing country subscribers and carrying on other operations in the true Lower Cove stile. I was also told what was the general purport of the petition, and that it was the intention of a number of our Bucks to take the Committee, petition and all, tye 'em in a sled backs to the Horses, and drive 'em to Maugerville. I at first determined to retreat and leave them to pursue their own method, but on second consideration I thought best to interfere, as I apprehended a frolic of this sort might have been attended with some unpleasant consequences. On enquiry I could not find sufficient foundation to institute a process against the Delinquents, and it was necessary to do something as the Gentry here were growing outrageous. I therefore thought best to publish the inclosed advertisement which I believe had the desired effect, as I am now informed that the gentry have abandoned their Quarters and moved off.

This is a new mode of proceeding, but 'tis concise, and I flatter myself that in some future collections of Forms it may be introduced under the title of Winslow's advertisements "de bene esse," or something like it, at any rate I'll venture to affirm that 'tis effectual in some cases. Ask the Chief Justice's opinion and Judge Allen's relative to the legality and propriety of this proceeding. If any more of your gentry shew their noses here I'll adopt, in my official capacity, a still shorter method—damn me if I don't put 'em in the stocks.

Do seize some cheerful late moment and tell me what's going forward. I feel a little anxious, and I believe if the weather comes very good I shall make another trip.

Adieu, ever & ever Your

——— Ed. Winslow.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 13th March, 1786.

My dear Sir,—I wrote you about two months since at which time I was in hopes to have taken your friendly hand before this. But the death of my Father and official business have detained me here. I am negotiating my claims at the American Office. In this vicinity there is nobody that has seen my estate at Wolfboro and I wish to get some respectable opinion relative to it that may be given to the Commissioners. I had selected the best lots of all my property in that country, which were granted in the large measure usual for such cases—4,387 acres (but amounted nearer to 6,000). These included the islands, Park, Gardens, Buildings, &c., and were most excellent choice land—more than 500 acres under high cultivation. It was subject to no service or quite rent—a shire market and fair town. The roads made. In the centre of a fertile and populous country, at the source of the Merrimac River on one side and of Piscataqua river on the other. The Park substantially fenced in about 600 acres—in it a saw mill and Grist mill complete. The House 102 feet long, 41 wide, 24 or 25 ft. posts, built of the best and by the best workmen in that Country. Two Stable and Coach Houses 62 by 40 and 24 or 25 ft. post—built for duration—glazed and painted completely. One barn framed, boarded, shingled, painted, & complete as possible, 106 or more long, 32 to 40 wide, & 18 to 22 high—a large dairy house, smoke and ashes house. Carpenter, Blacksmith's and Cabinet maker's shops with all possible instruments and tools. Cattle, sheep, horses, small stock, boats, implements and furniture of all sorts, complete and in super-abundance. The whole included, I think the 4,387 acres are undervalued at £5 sterling pr. acre.

*George Handyside was charged before the general assembly of the province on Jan. 26, 1786, with speaking "opprobious words" of the house, tending to excite sedition. Witnesses were examined, and he was found guilty, whereupon it was ordered "That he ask pardon on his knees and be reprimanded by the "speaker, and stand committed until he obey this order." The said George asked pardon of the house on his knees, was reprimanded by the speaker from the chair and discharged, paying fees.

I am sure had I put the cash it cost me into the Boston treasury the sum would have far exceeded.

The year I came from New Hampshire the produce on that Estate exceeded the consumption of my whole family and you know how we lived, and every year it became more valuable without cost.

I beg you would send me your authenticated certificate on this point. In my estimation I put the whole at £20,000 sterling. I shall be also obliged in your certificate if you will be so good as to mention your opinion of the appearance of my general establishment in town and country for Houses, Gardens, Furniture, Servants, Equipages, Horses, &c. I do not mean any appreciation thereof, but only your opinion whether they were good, plentiful, and becoming my rank in that country, in proportion to what was done by other Governors or men of fortune in America.

I shall be exceedingly obliged to you in these matters and confide in your friendship to excuse the trouble. I had rather give yours than most others judgment on these points from your knowledge and experience in them.

The Commissioners talk of removing hence in May and as they close their reports here for the year I wish for your answer hereto as soon as possible.

We have no news from England later than 22d Nov'r to me, via Quebec; says Sir Guy Carleton will be Gov'r Gen'l with full patronage, Governor C. to go to Quebec, a division of that Gov't into Two Provinces in contemplation. Many are named for N. Brunswic. Whoever comes I hope will be friendly to the people.

Adieu, and be assured I am your sincere friend,

J. Wentworth.

HUE AND CRY.

Whereas on the night of Sunday the 26th Instant, the House of Richard Bydder, on Block No. 1, or the Maryland Block, near the lower boundary of the County of York was consumed by Fire, and the Bodies of the said Richard Bydder, his Wife and five Children were consumed therein. And whereas we the subscribers, Justices of the Peace for the County of York, have received information from divers of his Majesty's discreet and faithful Subjects, that there is good reason to apprehend that the said Richard Bydder, his Wife and five Children were robbed and inhumanly murdered, And that the said House was set on Fire by the person who perpetrated the horrid deed.

And now we are further given to understand that there is great cause of suspicion against a Man who passed by the name of Pendergrass, of the following description—Rather exceeding six feet high,—Had on a light coloured Cloth Coat and Waistcoat, A pair of Brown Overhalls, and a pair of large Fisherman's Boots, A slouched Hat, his hair untyed,—He say'd that he was lately from Ireland, had been at Shelburne, and had come to this Province to settle.

These are therefore to request and require all Magistrates, Sheriffs, Constables, and all other publick Officers, And all other His Majesty's good Subjects, That they give every aid and assistance in their power towards apprehending and securing the said Pendergrass, so that this most barbàrous transaction may be duly examined into.

Ed. Winslow,
Monson Hoyt.

Fredericton, March 31, 1786.

Mather Byles to Edward Winslow.

[St. John] Saturday Evening, April 1st, 1786.

My dear Sir,—After leaving you last Saturday I jog'd on very leisurely and arrived at Say's* by sunset without any other accident than a little ducking in getting off the bank at Maugerville.

*Gervas Say, one of the pre-Loyalist settlers, was a magistrate of the old County of Sunbury. He was a man of influence, and during the Revolution very loyal to the crown. He was appointed by Major Studholme, in 1783, along with Ebenezer Foster, Fyler Dibblee and James White, as a committee to report on the state of settlement of the River St. John. Their very interesting report has been printed in the Collections of the N. B. Historical Society. Gervas Say afterwards taught the Indian school at Sheffield, under the Board of the New England Company for Christianizing the Indians.

The next morning I pursued my route on the ice as far as Grimross Island and finding the ice growing very rotten I took to the woods as far as Jemseg where I found a boat and proceeded to Long Island.

Next morning I arrived at Oak Point, the end of the navigation, dismissed my boat and went to bed with a violent headache the consequence of having got very wet by the rain. However I recruited myself well with about fourteen hours sleep and at daybreak on Tuesday set off with Mr. Jones, whom I found here. After creeping over rotten ice, skipping among the cakes, scrambling along shore where it was practicable and wading thro' the water where it was not, I arrived at Looseley's,* left my companion and struck through the woods to Major Coffins. By this time I had acquired a tolerable appetite for my breakfast and was very well disposed to accept an invitation to pass the day there. A heavy S. W. storm kept me there a Wednesday but on Thursday morning I again got under way and shook hands with the family at one. As the Surveyor General had given up the hope of seeing me till the River opened, I saved all my credit and received a handsome compliment for my exertions.

I waited on the Chief Justice in the morning, delivered my St. Ann's papers, explained your reasons for wishing the time of notice altered, and obtained the inclosed minute of Council to alter the time at St. Johns to 3 weeks and at Fredericton to the time between your receiving this and the 22d April, which is the day I have inserted as you will see by the enclosed paper. Sower† will insert it in next Tuesday's.

Marston is undetermined when he shall set off, I shall therefore get all the papers ready and send them by Dalzel who goes next Wednesday.

Chipman has seen your memorial and pronounces it without fault. I have got the approbation on Mr. Garden's account without difficulty. The accounts I left behind are of consequence for me to have here, do forward them by the first conveyance. I hope all Campbell's vouchers will be ready for Mr. Marston as he talks of the middle of this month, which I think will give us plenty of time.

*Charles Loosely kept a tavern on the Long Reach at this time. He had formerly kept tavern at New York and Brooklyn. He was quite a character—used to advertise in doggerel rhyme, &c.

†Christopher Sower, editor of the Royal Gazette, of which he was also the proprietor, was formerly a printer at Germantown, Pennsylvania. From 1778 to the close of the war he was at New York. He came to St. John in 1784, where he was postmaster and King's printer. In 1790 he moved his printing press to a place he purchased at French Village, in Kings County. Here he built a two story double log house for his residence and printing office, and printed the Royal Gazette, the Journals of the House of Assembly and other official publications. He called this place Brookville. He was an unsuccessful candidate for election to the house of assembly in 1792. He had a very uncomfortable encounter with George Leonard in August, 1795. See under date 13 Aug., 1795, in this book. He was succeeded as King's printer by John Ryan. He left St. John in May, 1799, and went to Baltimore, where he died of apoplexy July 2, same year, at the age of 43 years.

Hailes has undertaken to write you all the news and I won't bore you with repetitions, but inclose the papers and wipe my hands of it. Doctor Payne has put up some calomel for the Commissary and Pen, which I hope will operate better than the Pink root. Sally Miller has recovered—is at home and looks as well as ever, all the rest well.

Major Coffin is gone on his survey of the road* to-day, but goes no further than the Oromocto. He desires to be remembered, and says as many town lots as you can get in his name are very much at your service. Nase and myself crossed each other on the Grand Bay so I had no opportunity of speaking to him, but the Major says Nase thinks his town lot at St. Anns very valuable—if so I suppose you won't ask for it.

Mr. Daunt is in town, he sends his compliments and means to beg your acceptance of a barrel of cyder as soon as it can be got to you. Your own shall be the first object of my attention.

This is a heterogenous mass, but neither my head or my hands are in high order. It will go by Mr. John Hazen† and I shall desire him to forward it on from Oromocto by express. I have got your letter by Guin and will forward Lewis his certificate as soon as Mr. Parker returns here from Passamaquoddy, where he has gone to examine a vessel of Gilham Butler's in which they suspect he is exporting foreign oil as the produce of British America. All my Halifax friends are well and my Father begs a particular remembrance to you.

I shall commit to Mr. John Hazen a parcel for Mama of which you are only to see the outside. Give my love to her and all the little folks—tell the Commissary I long to see him in his new clothes which I am told are wonderfully superb. Do put him in the boat when you come down. Let me know how the little folks get thro' the small pox‡ for I shall feel very anxious till it is safely over. On Monday I shall get again into the beaten track and double my diligence to forward the Governor's plan. The idea of another furlough, which I shall keep in my eye, will make me pursue the task with alacrity, for the society and conversation of my benevolent friend constitute the principal enjoyment of his most affectionate

Mather Byles.

*This was the road from St. John to Fredericton on the west side of the river. It was not completed for many years after this date.

†John Hazen was a nephew of Hon. William Hazen, and came to St. John with his uncle to live in 1775. He settled after a time at Oromocto, where he built a house and store and engaged in business. He married, in 1787, Priscilla McKinstry, a daughter of Doctor Wm. Mc Instry, by whom he had a family of twelve children. J. Douglas Hazen of St. John is one of his descendants.

‡Inoculation with the small-pox matter was in vogue at this time as a preventative, but it was in danger and loathsomeness only one degree removed from having the disease in the natural way. Many who submitted to it were pock-marked for life and some died.

Mather Byles to Edward Winslow.

[St. John] Tuesday, April 11th, 1786.

My dear Sir,—Vanhorne* has just acquainted me that he setts off for St. Anns in the morning and I embrace the opportunity to forward you some newspapers, two letters from Annapolis, and one from Mr. Marston, who doesn't leave St. Johns till the beginning of next week. * * *

The Chief Justice, Captain Sproule, and Mr. Hazen set off for Saint Anns next Monday, the two former to be present at the Auction. We are all engaged here in the Cumberland road†, which is quite a hobby Horse, and a sum sufficient nearly to carry it through is already subscribed—the terms are a grant of 100 acres on the road (without expence) for every five pounds subscribed, and the officers of Government have agreed to carry the grants thro' and take their fees in land at the same proportion. The people don't enter so readily into the idea of a St. Ann's road‡ and the Council after hearing the report of Major Coffin have resolved only to carry it to Coffin's Creek‖ for the present, and determine on some future day whether the best route will be through the back country or along the shore of the river. * * *

Remember my coat the very first opportunity from St. Ann's. I haven't a coat to put on. I can't even get another coat made till I receive it for it's the latest English cut. I shall have the rheumatism in my elbows in three days if it doesn't arrive. In one word recollect your anxiety about the cyder and then recollect that similar is the distress of your threadbare friend,

M. Byles.

(P. S.) Love to every body at home. Are the little folks inoculated?

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Fredericton, 14th May, 1786.

Dear Chip,—I want at the next exhibition to open a handsome blast. I mean, if I can get materials, to start with an explanation of the general principles on which the Code of Laws for this country was built, and I intend to take the Laws one by one and convince the good people of York County that the representatives of the Country have done their duty, and that the inhabitants at large ought to consider themselves everlastingly obliged &c. &c. &c. You may laugh at the idea—and you eternally do, all of you, laugh at such matters as trivial, unimportant, and weighing nothing in the great political scale, but you are mistaken. I have watched the thermometers here with unremitted attention. I know how they fluctuate and I see the necessity of keeping up a steady course of operations. In the present instance I could do without your assistance, possibly, but I should hammer and work at a terrible rate and, probably, in the end make some mistakes. You by devoting half an hour can prevent it. At any rate, for Heaven's sake send me up, if 'tis possible, the laws in a collected body immediately, and I think your shortest way to gratify me will be to send your own notes at the end of 'em. Don't fail me at this time, I find that our next Court will be attended by a multitude of people, and that the opening of it is a matter of great expectation. You know how ambitious I am in such cases, and you know, and therefore must commend my present motives. I am involved in such variety of business that I really cannot attend with sufficient care to this matter. My engagements as a farmer, gardner, fisherman, and trustee* are very serious.

*Probably Gabriel Van Horne, who kept the leading inn or tavern at Fredericton in early times.

†This was the road leading from St. John to the head of the Bay of Fundy through the counties of Kings and Westmorland, known as "the Old Westmorland Road."

And now Chip what should hinder you from making an excursion here on the 2d Tuesday of June? You will certainly be engaged in one cause and that will give you an opportunity of shewing yourself to the people. There is really a great deal of business in embryo here, and it will come out by degrees. I feel too much interested to use all the arguments which flow upon me on this occasion. I therefore will say no more about it.

I write this helter-skelter at a Table where the Trustees are sitting. Let me hear from you as soon as possible.

Ever and Ever, Yours,

Ed. Winslow.

(P. S.) The case which I am desired to retain you in is Chew against Cox, for Cox. It is about a horse.

H. M. Gordon to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 20th May, 1786.

My dear Winslow,—The packet has this moment arrived and brought the appointment of Sir Guy Carleton to be the Governor General and Commander in Chief in the remaining British Dominions. 'Tis both civil and military, it does not effect Gov. Parr further than he is to have no more than the dignified title of Lt. Governor. My General is fixed† to go home (tho' not expected) as soon after Sir Guy's arrival as he can obtain leave, and I think him perfectly right. He has had a most friendly [letter] from His Grace of Argyle and I am sure he will not suffer on his return.

*A trustee for the laying out and settlement of the city of Fredericton.
†That is, fixed in his resolve.

I was sorry to be obliged to write you officially this day relative to the discontinuance of your appointment, but as I have a fellow feeling it became the less irksome for I'm sure neither you nor I expected to hold it so long, indeed we always thought it useless. However I have only to beg of you my good friend to forward your accounts and vouchers with all expedition, for I don't know where I am to go, but it will be somewhere and very soon, so pray don't delay if you have any regard for an old Friend.

It is not in my power to say who comes or goes yet; when I learn you shall hear from

Your sincere Friend,

H. M. Gordon.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Fredericton, 26th May, 1786.

My dear Chip,—The inclosed letter to the Governor with the examinations contained therein will explain to you a transaction which has been the source of great concern to our friend Col. Allen and myself. You will peruse the papers, seal the letter to the Governor and present it, and I expect of you that you will in our behalf urge the absolute necessity of the attendance of the Chief Justice.

The Indians on one hand are clamorous for an instant decision. The multitude (I mean the people of the country) cannot reconcile themselves to the idea that two men of fair character should be sacrificed to satisfy the barbarous claim of a set of savages. They are almost persuaded to a man that the prisoners had no ill intention. In this situation you will naturally suppose that we have an arduous task to keep them quiet. We have assured both parties that the men shall be tried fairly and (if guilty) that they will be punished. We have told them that the Chief Justice of the Province must attend and that he will set off as soon as he receives the information from us.

For fear of accidents I wish when you deliver the Governor's letter that you would, if necessary, suggest the peculiar situation of Col. Allen. The whole Corps of Indians are encamped around his house, and their rudeness has already distressed his family and made him unhappy. He has lately made a contract with them for a lot of land*, and they think they have a right to call on him whenever they please. This event has increased their familiarity and I believe if they had an idea that he possessed authority to decide in the present case, they would press him to a peremptory decision, and if it was not agreeable to them they might render the situation of the family very uncomfortable. I am not apt you know to anticipate evils, but I really suspect that the Indians would be very troublesome on such an occasion.

*Judge Isaac Allen, in 1794, purchased from the Indians 500 acres, their reserve at Aukpaque (Spring Hill), and the island called Savage Island, for the sum of $1,650. This purchase was made by permission of the governor in council. The village of Indians engaged in a very hilarious celebration of the event, which lasted until the money was all spent. Judge Allen was personally very kind to the Indians; also to the negroes, a little colony of whom lived at Kingsclear.

These considerations induce me to wish that the Chief Justice will come and that he will come immediately. I know Allen will not offer any of these reasons it is therefore doubly my duty. Impress 'em strongly on the Governor.

And now Chip let me tell you once more that I think you should come to this Country on some public occasion. Can a better opportunity offer than the present? The prosecution is a matter of natural expectation on the one side and of great concern on the other. Either the Attorney or Solicitor General must and ought to attend. Allen authorizes me to tell you that he has business of some consequence to engage you in. There are a variety of other reasons why Judge Ludlow and yourself should come. Don't fail.

Allen's gown and band is at your house. His coat and waistcoat at Judge Putnam's. Pray don't forget 'em. He's very anxious about 'em.

Yours,

Ed. Winslow.

Mather Byles to Edward Winslow.

[St. John] Wednesday P. M., 16th Aug't, 1786.

I perfectly agree with you that marble covered note books should not be disgraced with the lumber of accounts current and receipts—they should be wholly devoted to "serious love letters" and I have accordingly altered my first determination of undertaking a second volume and shall only write a long story on quarto.

In the first place about your provisions—neither peas nor beans are to be had and bread was so much dearer than flour that I didn't hesitate about taking the latter. I chose the fattest pork I could pick out from the consideration that it would go farther. Both were procured from Hayt the auctioneer, who sells much cheaper than any person in town, but sells only for ready money. I thought it better to pay now than give 20 per cent. more six months hence, when it is probable you will be full as poor as at present. Coffin had parted with every fish he could spare and I could not find any elsewhere. Rum is 3s. 6d. a gallon here and if you can get it at that price at Fredericton there is no advantage in sending any.

* * * * * * *

Carre has another barrel of crackers on board his sloop for you which I hope will reach you without accident. I stuffed into the hold just as he was setting off last time a bag containing two bushels of hair, which was all Peter Grim can muster for the present; tell me how much more you want and I will send it. Mr. Hazen says you may find in the lime he sent you abundance which is white enough for plaister or white wash, and he should not be able to find better if he picked out a hogshead.

I shall send you one hundred dollars by Donham. For heaven's sake make some settlement about the Pouquouck business as soon as possible [evidently referring to the Winslow mill at Pokiok]—it makes my heart ache every sum I pay for you now, as I fear it may subject you to future distress—'tis a key I can't touch upon but my own cheerfulness suffers as much as yours can, and will till I see you disembarassed.

Col. and Judge Ludlow are I suppose with you. I have said to Donham that he had better do nothing about the windows till I hear from you, but I have desired Gabriel to let him reconnoitre the house and make what observations he pleases. I will undertake to get your paper by the first conveyance if its in Halifax. * * *

So much for business public and private. And now for a little "marble covered" chit chat.

When Major Gordon's latest accounts are once more out of my hands I shall feel a little at leisure. I think they will all be entered and the duplicate transmitted by the middle of September. The moment this duty is over I have made my resolution to step on board Carre and pay a visit at St. Anns. It will save you the trouble and expense of a visit to the city [St. John]. We can settle the accounts of the period, make all the estimates and write all the letters in two days, and then, for four or five more at least, I will enjoy myself in the society of a friend who is next to my heart, and whose conversation is my greatest pleasure. We will talk over everything, decide on the probability of all your schemes, prove that everything must turn out right in the end, and we'll have abundance of pudding and plenty of baked beans. Lord I haven't spent such a five days this six months as it will be. I shall keep it in view and work for the month to come with double alacrity.

I love to read your affectionate paragraphs, not that they give me new ideas of you or your friendship but they revive a whole train of old ones, and there isn't a more pleasing sensation can swell the heart of man than that which I feel when I read them—it choaks one a little to be sure—something like an egg in the neck of a quart bottle if you know how that is. * * * *

Mrs. and Miss Cottnam have got settled here and open school in a day or two. The detachment of Artillery has also arrived and a Mr. Rainsford, a half pay officer of the 9th, with his family. He is appointed Receiver General of Quit rents and takes a farm on the river near Saint Anns.

There is little news at Halifax. The Nantucket settlement* goes on slowly and the whaling voyages this season have not been successful. Hinchelwood has been tried for a riot in Col. Goold's house, is found guilty and 'tis thought the fine will be nearly equal to the value of his estate.

The Commissioner has taken down his house at the dock yard and is building a very magnificent one in the same spot.

Jonathan Snelling† has been here lately and has made a purchase of Dr. Paine's Island where he removes immediately and Foster Hutchinson will go with him.

My Father mentions the College in his last letter as a great object of his wishes, and bids me thank you for the friendly offers of your assistance. The Governor and Sir John are still at Cumberland and Major Coffin sailed this morning for Rhode Island. * * *

Remember me very affectionately to the family and tell the Portland ladies it's high time they got back. Donham takes a set of new fashioned china for Polly's tea table, which is so brilliant that I'm sure it must please her.

Most affectionately yours,

Mather Byles.

Col. Thos. Carleton's Appointment as Brigadier General.

Head Quarters, Quebec,

October 25th, 1786.

Colonel Thomas Carleton is appointed to act as Brigadier General to His Majesty's Forces in North America and Newfoundland. After the departure of Major General Campbell the Troops stationed in Nova Scotia and its dependencies, New Brunswick and Newfoundland, will make their reports to Brigadier General Carleton, which he will transmit to the Commander in Chief by every convenient opportunity.

Mather Byles to Edward Winslow.

Friday Evening [Nov. 1786.]

My dear Sir,—Since enclosing my letters by Mr. Odell I have received your favours by Mr. Odber‡ and Captain Powell. I have devoted the day

*For information regarding the Nantucket Settlement see Canadian Archives for 1894 under dates May 25, July 26, Aug. 1, and Nov. 15, 1785; also April 20, May 30, and June 29, 1786.

†Jonathan Snelling of Boston came to Halifax in 1776 with the British forces. He married a daughter of Judge Foster Hutchinson. He died in Halifax in 1809, aged 51 years. Doctor Paine's Island, now called Fry's Island is near Harbor Le Tang, in Charlotte County, N. B.

‡Of the firm of Hall, Lewis, Odber & Co., who at this time had an extensive business at St. John.

to collecting the articles you have wrote for, and as the evening is pretty far advanced shall only have time to give you a concise account of my operations. * * *

The paper hanging which you sent down the pattern of was all purchased by Ward, and I was very glad of it, for I thought it precious ugly. I have got another pattern which I hope, for the honor of my taste, you will like much better. There was no room for it in the box and I have put it in Carre's cabin. What think you of the inclosed pattern for one of the small bed rooms? 'tis cheap and I fancy would look well. Ask Mama. There is no paper in the place that will do for the great room, but you don't want it immediately and I'll get it from Halifax if you don't go yourself.

All the articles of your list that were to be found here are in the box except a handkerchief which I borrowed and is at present under the care of Betty. It is too thin to steal so you shall have it next time. I heard you say you left some shirts at Merritts, there were none here. There isn't a candle in the place, nor a white wash brush, nor a mouthful of pink root. Capt. Sproule will deliver you the Elixer and Sal Volatile.

Peter Grim will have no hair before Monday and I have positively engaged his whole stock, which you shall have as soon as I can get it to you. I did not know for what purpcses the sheeting was wanted of course I acted in the dark. The piece I have sent is very cheap. Colville asked £3. 15s. for the same, Randall's was in my opinion very dear 2s. 3d.—very little finer and only yard wide.

The iron backs are on board Carre* not exactly the size you wrote for but as nigh it as I could get them. They come out in assorted sizes and were the same in all the shops.

You had better let me know what provisions you will want for the winter; by purchasing it together it may possibly be laid in to more advantage. The easy chair is an article that I am very suspicious if I shall meet with, but I have engaged Hoyt† to look out for me. * * *

Tell Mama I generally see little Mary‡ once a day; she is very well and in fine spirits. I have set her up with a whole apparatus of combs, thimbles, spelling books, &c. The novelty of the scene as far at it was disagreeable has worn off, & she has so many little companions with her that she can't fail of passing her time cheerfully. Mrs. Cottnam* wishes you would send down her steele collar by the first opportunity.

Remember me affectionately to all at home; what a house full you have!

I share in all your difficulties and embarrassments as a Son in the distress of his Father, but I think you have passed the deepest part of the slough, and giving out now would be bad as be dam'd, as the Major says.

If Captain Sutherland does not go in the morning, shall send the slips and roots by him; if he does they shall go by Carre next time. Coffin will be in Town on Sunday and I will settle something about Looseley's place, you shall know the result.

While the navigation of the river is free you should collect your winter stock of things from the City.

Once more let me assure you that every exertion which I can make to render you comfortable gladdens the heart of

Your affectionate,

Mather Byles.

Col. Thomas Dundas to Earl Cornwallis.

City of St. John, Province of New Brunswick,

December 28, 1786.

My Lord,—Although at a great distance from this part of the globe, with your attention fully occupied with other matters, I hope a few lines will not be unacceptable from one who has often experienced your friendship. My colleague and I, after having finished the business of our commission at Halifax, visited all the different settlements of Nova Scotia, which surpass anything I could expect to have seen in a climate which has seven months winter. The new settlements made by the Loyalists are in a thriving way, although rum and idle habits contracted during the war are much against them. They have experienced every possible injury from the old inhabitants of Nova Scotia, who are even more disaffected towards the British Government than any of the new States ever were. This makes me much doubt their remaining long dependent.

In the month of October we came to the province where we found very different principles. Mr. Carleton by his own attention and firmness, assisted by a well chosen council has established good government. The province contains all that part of Nova Scotia which lies to the westward of the Bay of Fundy. It contains good lands, the farmers who have fled

*Mrs. Cottnam was a widow, the daughter of Edward Howe, who was killed treacherously by the Indians in 1750. She came to St. John to try the experiment of a school about 1786. Her school was a boarding school for young ladies. After the death of her mother, Mrs. Howe, in 1793, the daughter Deborah Cottnam was allowed the same pension from the government £100 stg., until her own death on the last day of the year 1806.

from the States are well pleased with the soil. The number of Loyalists is 12,000. The old inhabitants are not 3,000 and these are a despicable race ready to sell their improvements as the Loyalists are enabled to purchase from them.

To all appearances the country will be able to furnish corn, vegetables and cattle to the West India Islands. Lumber in the quantity required they must look for elsewhere. I cannot say much for the industry of the disbanded soldiers, indeed I cannot say that I ever saw the policy of bribing soldiers of the Line to leave their regiments—it has by no means answered. All the tradesmen who would be valuable at home are starving here or gone to the States. The half-pay provincial officers are valuable settlers as they are enabled to live well and improve their lands.

Every day brings us a new account of the distracted state of America. Some say that the present wish of the majority is to return to the situation they were in before the war. This I by no means think, but I can say that the friendly disposition of the people towards Great Britain is most wonderfully restored, considering that in 1783 we were inveterate enemies.

Having had the misfortune to lose my father last summer, Lady Eleanor, finding her attention to my parents no longer necessary, volunteered an expedition across the Atlantic with only her maid and an old servant. She is now with me and desires me to offer her best compliments. She rode your old horse from Halifax to Annapolis, and thinks she has seen more of America than some of our Generals of the late war.

I expect to have finished the business in this province before the month of May next when we shall go to Canada, and we hope to return to Great Britain by summer 1788, when it will give most sincere pleasure both to Lady Eleanor and me to hear of your good health and that your situation is comfortable.

Pray remember me to Ross and Haldane.

Be assured,

&c. &c.

Thomas Dundas.

Lord Dorchester to Lt. Gov. Carleton.

Quebec, 3d January, 1787.

Sir,—I received your letter No. 1 on the 25th ult., by which I learn that the Settlers on the upper part of the River St. John are alarmed by the menaces of the Indians in that District. The measures you have taken to enable the Settlers to defend themselves, I very much approve of. When I arrive at New Brunswick, I propose to review your Militia, and hope to find them so well armed and arrayed, as to give the province all reasonable security.

At the same time that You take proper measures, for the defence and security of the province, good policy requires, that the Indians should be treated with civility and kindness. You may at a cheaper rate secure their friendship, than repel their hostilities. Besides the policy of this conduct, common justice requires some attention and some compensation to these people, whose lands we come to occupy. This I fear, owing to their distance from Halifax, then the seat of Government, has not been fully observed.

I would recommend, that on every opportunity these Indians be benevolently treated, and occasionally sent home with presents for their families. But this should be more particularly practised, and the presents should be more considerable, before any new Concessions of land, so that they may be entirely satisfied with the transaction.

The Chiefs should also be encouraged to come in, and make their complaints, when any of their tribes receive ill treatment.

It has been reported, that a soldier shot one of them, and wounded a woman*. It is said also, that the malefactor has been hanged. If so, Justice has been satisfied, but the Indians should be assured of the fact. This is the more necessary, as one of those tribes has been executed here, not very long since, for a like crime.

I detained your Messenger till I was able to send a confidential Interpreter with him. Such a one now goes with compliments of condolence, and a promise of presents at a proper season to cover the dead. He is to invite some of their Chiefs to come to Quebec next summer, and open all their complaints. He also carries a message to the Acadians, who I hear have not only been driven off their lands, but other ways ill treated. To prevent a misfortune of the kind in future, a Grant should be made out for them in due form.

I understand the high land, which runs by the great rapids† on the River St. John, is the boundary, and separates Canada from New Brunswick and the New England Provinces. Therefore all who choose to settle west of that range of hills will become Canadians; those who remain to the East are of course New Brunswickers, and will deserve your protection.

In the meanwhile, and until the business is ripe for regular Grants,

*The soldiers here referred to were David Nelson and William Harboard, late of the Queen's Rangers. They were examined on Wednesday, the 24th of May, before Edward Winslow and Col. Isaac Allen, the shooting having occurred the previous Saturday. The trial took place before Chief Justice Ludlow (Judge Allen being also on the bench) on June 13, 1786; the prisoners were found guilty, and Nelson was hanged on June 23rd, while Harboard was pardoned. This was the first trial for murder on the St. John River. It is described in No. 59 of the Editor's Historic Articles published in the Woodstock Dispatch. Justice was speedy in those days. The Indian's name was Pierre Bonwah.

they can only have general assurances, that they shall have them as soon as regularity will permit, and this promise should remain inviolate.

I am with regard

Lord Dorchester to Lieut. Gov. Carleton.

Quebec, 3d January, 1787.

Sir,—I inclose a plan for establishing a regular conveyance of Letters between Halifax and Quebec drawn up by the Deputy Postmaster General of this Province, which you will be pleased to take into consideration and report to me Your opinion thereon, for I consider a regular communication between the Kings Provinces of public utility and therefore hope for your assistance in forming that arrangement. I am with respect,

Your most obedient humble servant,

General Ruggles to Edward Winslow.

Mount Maudenit, Wilmot, April 29th, 1787.

Dear Sir,—At the time I wrote you on behalf of Elias Graves wishing to purchase 100 acres of land in Wilmot, he was considered as the most prudent, industrious person of his age in this part of the province. Before I received your answer he had got into a very unsteady way, neglecting his business and drinking excessively. I sent for him and told him if he did not reform his conduct and mind his business better I could not by any means advise you to complete the bargain, upon which he promised amendment and that he would go to clearing upon it as soon as the snow would allow of it; before that time he was raving distracted, was soon confined and remains confined under Dr. Lawrence's care. I thought if he would enter upon the land and make improvements, it might take away the pretence of your friend Morris' instituting a suit for escheating the Grant, if Graves never accomplished the purchase. But as the case now stands I am afraid you will lose the whole unless you can represent to Lord Dorchester the suffering of your Father's family and your own good services, in such a manner as to obtain his prohibition till other Grants, made years before yours, are escheated. I am told Mr. Aplin is rumageing up evidence in order to lay open the iniquitous conduct of administration ever since the peace took place. Perhaps he may find so much business for them to defend themselves as at least to damp their ordour for distressing one of the first families in New England, and who from generation to generation have done more public service in reality and from real principles of Loyalty in one year of their lives, than all the junto of publick blood suckers in Halifax from the beginning of that settlement. * *

Believe me to be, dear Sir,

Your obed't servt.

Timothy Ruggles*.

Major Barclay to Edward Winslow.

Wilmot, 3d May, 1787.

You have a right, and I know you will deem me an inattentive fellow in not answering your letter of last autumn ere this; and perhaps you go a step farther and think me equally careless of your interest. In the first you are right. I plead guilty, and throw myself on the benevolence of your disposition for forgiveness. But with regard to your Wilmot Land, I have exerted myself to find a purchaser for the whole or any part; hitherto I have found no one able. Money is not to be had, and lands are solicited to be given away.

The plan I have adopted with my own land (which joins yours) if agreeable to you I will execute with yours. I have laid out the tract in three hundred and one hundred acre lots alternately. The one hundred lots I give away on certain conditions of Improvement. The others I reserve for myself. By this means the Escheat is prevented, and by having settlers on each side of your lots, your land is encreased to ten times its value. I make no doubt you will approve of the mode; if so send me a power of attorney. I have two very good men ready to go on; one with a family strong handed, the other a single man.

By this time I hope you are comfortably settled and find everything coincide with your wishes. I feel myself interested in your welfare and am not a little pleased in hearing from everyone how universal your good offices are to all Ranks of People; and how much you are beloved and respected. I am convinced you act from principle as well as Inclination, and therefore make no doubt but you will be satisfied with the approbation of your own conscience. If you expect a return from mankind in general, you will be disappointed. Gratitude is seldom an ingredient in the human composition.

My farm begins to look civilized and yield profit. This year I hope to raise more grain than any farmer in the country, and my meadows will furnish me with forty tons of Hay. Society is all we want, and on that account I often wish myself your neighbor.

The Colonel will move over the beginning of June. Our situation will be then still more solitary. Present my best regards to Mrs. Winslow, you good mother and sister.

I am dear Winslow, with sincere affection

Ever yours, Tho. Barclay.

Lord Dorchester to Lieut. Gov. Carleton.

Quebec, 29th May, 1787.

Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letters No 9 & 10.

You will be pleased to direct the Surveyor General of the Province of New Brunswick to be at the Great Falls on the River Saint John on the 15th of July next, where he will meet the Surveyor General of the Province of Quebec for the purpose of settling the boundaries between the two Provinces. This done it will be expedient to grant the lands at the different carrying places as soon as possible, that a road of communication may be established, and the proposed plan for a regular conveyance by Post once a month between Halifax and this place (since it has met with your approbation and that of Lieutenant Governor Parr) carried into execution without delay. I am convinced that many advantages will result therefrom immediately, though the carrying place between this and Fredericton must be tolerably settled before a complete security can be expected. I purpose to send Mr. Finlay in order to make the necessary arrangements with the Post-masters of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The Military Express from Halifax, I understand has hitherto been a great discouragement to the Post office. As soon as the above mentioned conveyance shall have taken place this will no longer be necessary, except when dispatch or the importance of the letters may require a special messenger.

I am with regard,

Your most obedient

humble servant,

Dorchester.

Major Barclay to Edward Winslow.

Wilmot, 2d July, 1787.

My dear Winslow,—Your power of attorney inclosed in a very affectionate letter came safe. I shall therefore give possession to Two men of 300 acres. The conditions on which they settle are that they are to clear twelve acres to every hundred and that within six years. They are to clear at least ten acres per hundred every year and when their complement is made up, to have a Deed in fee simple.

I am not apt to be sanguine but I really think those mountain lands will be valuable. You would be pleased to see the flourishing state of the settlement on what was called Pemberton's Grant in my rear. My Grant joins that, on which I have three settlers; Yours succeeds and has the advantage of having the Lands both East and West of it improved, with very tolerable access. You may rely on my taking the same care of your land as I do of my own*.

Could I transport my farm and my family at a wish I would soon be an inhabitant of York County. At the time Governor Carleton arrived my finances would not admit of the expense of removing and building, and the office held up to me was not sufficiently promising to risque the taking up money, I therefore reluctantly gave up the idea and hardly now entertain a hope of ever being an Inhabitant on your side the Bay.

Our situation is truly solitary, but I never can think of removing unless the prospect promises advantage to my family.

The Academy† you are setting on foot would be no small Inducement, as I fear my dear Boys will suffer greatly from this retirement. I am indebted to you for your kind offer. The Gentleman you propose as your Master (or President) is an intimate acquaintance and classmate of mine. A man of the strictest Honor and Integrity, possessed of every good and amiable quality, but neither of a shining genius or favorite of the Graces. In the Languages (unless he has improved himself since he left college) hardly tolerable. And I doubt whether he knows more of Mathematics, Geography, &c. &c., than either of us. You may however depend on his attention and his exertions. Pray let no one know of my opinion, I would not have it transpire for the world, nor would I wish to injure so worthy a man, and one for whom I have the greatest regard. I wish you had communicated your design at an earlier period; there is a Gentleman in New York (who I think it probable, Judge Ludlow has forgot) who for the above purpose is equal if not superior to any man in the world; he has kept school in New York many years and I scarce think the salary you offer would have been an inducement. No money however ought to have prevented your procuring him, for really I doubt whether he has an equal in any one branch of polite literature. In giving you the character of Mr. Alexanded Leslie‡ I would not speak thus positive on my own opinion solely, but I have repeatedly heard many men of the first abilities in New York (as Jay, Varda, and Livingston) speak of him as a man of more real learning than any they knew. His character is respectable and while Usher to a large Grammar School I went to, I only recollect one fault in him, too mild a disposition; but keeping school for fifteen years has probably corrected that weakness. Whenever I send a boy of mine I would cheerfully add five pounds to the present expence to have him under Leslie.

If Mr. Harrison has not left the country ask him Mr. Leslie's character. I have freely given you my opinion from a sincere wish for the advancement of your Infant Seminary, and rely on it everything depends on the ability of your first Tutor.

Beverly* ere this is with you. A better man never existed. This is the first separation we have ever known from our earliest Infancy, and both Mrs. Barclay and myself feel the loss of him and my sister.

I hope you will give me a call in your way through; if not send me word beforehand and I will meet you on the Road. I have made my own road very tolerable this year.

Your appointment as Military Secretary affords me pleasure; it will give you an opportunity perhaps of getting something better in the civil line.

Remember me to all friends, Mrs. Winslow in particular. God bless you.

Ever most faithfully Yours

Tho. Barclay.

* * * The Town [St. John] is now pretty well cleared of the small pox and as Mrs. Winslow Sr. has been very unwell for some days past, Sally gives up the idea of going to Fredericton before the family moves. Miss Winslow is yet at the manor so that I cannot consult her.

Mrs. Cottnam is averse to Mary's having the small pox there if it can be avoided, but I suppose if she sees it necessary she can have no objection.

You have by this time heard of the arrival of Judge Sewell. He speaks of you with great affection and hopes you will make one of the Sanhedrim who are to decide upon the place of his future residence. The family dined with us yesterday and appear very happy in their removal from Bristol.

I am sorry for Mr. Hazen as his operations with his mill* & collecting wood† on the new contract make an immediate supply of money absolutely necessary. * * *

I have a letter from my father in which he mentions having wrote you. I suppose the letter went by the last express and hope you will receive it safe.

I don't know whether you recollect the two Quaker gentlemen who were here last year as preachers from Philadelphia. In the course of their tour they visited Beaver Harbor‡ and observing the great poverty of the settlers, they on their return raised a subscription among the Quakers and with the produce of it purchased and shipped a donation of coarse flour and Indian meal with some other necessaries to be distributed among them. It has arrived safe and will probably save large numbers of them from starving. Of all the private actions that ever have fallen under my observation I recollect none so extensively benevolent so genuinely disinterested. To make use of an expression of your own, it puts one in mind of the times when Human Nature stood upon its legs.

*The mill mentioned above was built about this time for grinding wheat and corn. It stood at the outlet of the old mill pond near the Union Depot at St. John. It was a tide mill and probably replaced an older mill built by Simonds and White about 1767. Ward Chipman had an interest in the mills built here.

He says in a letter to Thos. A. Coffin, written the 8th June, 1788, that the whole expense when completed would be about £2,000, which was owned at that time in the following proportions: Ward Chipman, 8-16; Jonathan Bliss, 2-16; Hazen and White, 6-16. The management of the mill was entrusted to William Hazen. There was a saw mill upon the same dam. Thos. A. Coffin became the purchaser of 1-4 interest in the mill. The millwright under whose supervision the mill was built was a Mr. Bedell, late of Staten Island—probably John Bedell, who afterwards went to Woodstock, N. B.

Sept., 1787.

Dear Colonel,—In my last hurried letter I forgot making my acknowledgements for your kind promise of paying me a visit in the course of the season. Should any Great People propose coming in your train, pray drop me a hint in time as you must suppose a Farm-house will require considerable scrubbing, before it will be fit to receive such guests.

If I could possibly hit at the time you will visit St. John's in the course of your reviews, I propose, if my Health will admit, to meet you there to make my bow on the Governor's new appointments, and to return thanks for the station allotted me in your Militia; an honor I should not have indulged myself in, if I had not a very elevated opinion of the Person from whom I received it; I think you'll not be surprised at this declaration or my being cautious how I again put myself in the power of the Great, when you recollect the vile usage I received from a certain Chief,* but God forbid you should suppose I ever drew a comparison between the two Characters, except to contrast the Virtues and propriety of the one against the Vices and irregularities of the other.

*The reference is to Chief Justice Finucane's investigation of Studholme's administration of affairs connected with the settlement of the Loyalists. A remonstrance had been forwarded, early in 1784, to Gov. Parr by some of the dissatisfied among the Loyalists, and Chief Justice Finucane was sent to enquire into the matter. This did not satisfy the discontented. Another complaint was made to the governor, specifying particularly their grievances. Upon which the agents of the Loyalists voluntarily repaired to Halifax and submitted themselves to trial before Gov. Parr, Lieut. Geo. Fanning and the council, Chief Justice Finucane being present. After a public hearing of two days, the following was the decision:—"The council are of opinion that Gilfred Studholme, William "Tyng, George Leonard, John Coffin and James Peters, magistrates and agents "on the river, having acquitted themselves in their conduct with fairness, im- "partially and propriety.

Benjamin Marston to Edward Winslow.

New York, Sep'r 8, 1787.

Dear Ned,—I arrived here about ten days ago after a passage of Fourteen days, a very pleasant one. Finding the ship an exceedingly good one, the master and his officers very clever fellows and a good ship's compass, I have kept by her and shall take my passage home in her.* She is now almost loaded and will sail in about ten days. I might have taken a passage sooner in an English Packett who sailed ten days ago, but the saving ten, fifteen, or more guineas just now is an object, and my getting home a fortnight or three weeks sooner is none at all.

After I left you I did not know but I should have been forced to give up the matter of going home altogether from the impracticability I found to raise money sufficient for the expence. In short I had once abandoned it, finding no one who had money to purchase bills or to let; till it came into my head that possibly I might sell my bills in this place could I get them endorsed by some person known here. Our friend Chippy relieved me from all my perplexities by his endorsement, I sold them at 6 pr. ct. premium for hard money and afterwards exchanged it, it being foreign coin, for heavy English Guineas at 2 1-4 pr. ct. discount so that upon the whole I got about 3 pr. ct. premium for my bills—heavy Guineas being now rated at 37s. 10d. currency. So far I think we have got on exceedingly clever, considering the many obstacles that lay in our way, having yet done nothing to a loss.

Pray write me by some opportunity that will reach me about Christmas and let me have (besides how both Families and my particular friends do) every information of your publick matters that may be useful for me to know. If no opportunity should offer from St. John, don't neglect by the way of Hlfx. or N. York you must direct to the care of Mr. Rashleigh or Wm. Coffin.

I forgot in the state of the Trade of this City to inform you that there is not one single ship on the stocks in the whole Town. Poor Divels!—tho' they richly merit every evil they yet feel and will feel, for they have many more to come yet, I can't help commiserating them a little.

Remember me very kindly to Mrs. Winslow and all friends with you. Adieu and God bless you is the fervent wish of your Hugh Finlay* to Thomas Aston Coffin.

Quebec, 11th October, 1787.

Dear Sir,—Last evening I received your note with Colonel Winslow's letter concerning Isaac Hutchinson, a person willing to settle with his family on the portage at the Great Fall of St. John's River.

In my late report to His Excellency the Governor General I noted "That if some person were settled on that spot, who would keep proper stores for supplying travellers, it would render journeying on that route much more comfortable than it is at present."

I think it is exceedingly lucky for the public that a man of so good a character has undertaken to sit down on that portage with his family. It will be of great convenience to the Couriers, and will contribute to their ease and speed. I presume Gwinn will inform me of the prospects he laid open to Hutchinson to induce him to fix himself on that spot. It will give me pleasure if hereafter it may be in my power to be of service to a man so well recommended by Mr. Winslow. I am with regard, Dear Sir, Sincerely yours, Hugh Finlay.

The following eulogy appeared in one of the newspapers at the time of his death: "As a parent, friend and loyal subject he ranked with the first in society "and his faithful and meritorious services in this province (Quebec) for up- "wards of 41 years stand sufficiently recorded to render further comment un- "necessary."

†John Rapalje, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was the son of the elder John Rapalje, an active Loyalist, who was apprehended by order of Washington and transported to Connecticut in August, 1776. He was allowed to return to Long Island on parole. Cupidity on the part of his enemies led them to confiscate his estate, estimated at £40,000 in value, by "Act of Attainder" passed October 22, 1779.

He would not have given this trouble had it not been from his attainder precluding him availing himself of the right he had in them here, but on their voluntarily going to Nova Scotia he thinks himself justifiable in selling her there. Remarks of Edward Winslow Respecting the Province of New Brunswick.

At the close of the American War, in 1783, the British American or provincial Regiments, which had served with British pay and local rank during the contest, were disbanded. The Officers and men were principally composed of refugees—or persons who had abandoned their homes and from attachment to the British Government had joined the Army. These men having rendered themselves peculiarly obnoxious to their countrymen could not return to their former situations, indeed their property had by formal Acts of the American Congress been confiscated and themselves proscribed. It therefore became necessary that Government should provide a place where they would be secure from insults and indignities and be able to provide subsistence for their families. The Commander in Chief, Sir Guy Carleton, with great humanity gave directions to those refugees who had not served in a military capacity to chuse Agents for themselves, and he sent them to Nova Scotia and Canada to explore the country and to locate lands for such as chose to cultivate, and to fix on situations for those who were engaged in the various branches of commerce and the tradesmen who were connected therewith.

*Thomas Horsfield was a well to do Brooklyn merchant. He came to St. John at the peace in 1783 and was first warden at Trinity church, in which a tablet was afterwards erected in his memory. This tablet was destroyed in the great fire of 1877 and no effort made to replace it in the new church.

†This truly is a curious address, in view of the fact that the Town of Parr had been nearly two and a half years nonexistent and that New Brunswick had ceased to be an appendage of Nova Scotia for a still longer period.

Sir Guy also ordered Col. Winslow, who acted as Muster-Master-General during the war, to proceed to the province of Nova Scotia and to explore and take up a tract of land sufficient to accommodate all the Officers and men of the provincial Regiments. Winslow assisted by Lt. Col. Stephen DeLancey and others, executed that duty and fixed on the river St. John as the only place where there was a tract of vacant land sufficiently extensive for this purpose; and in the fall of the year, so late as October, there had been between 14 & 15,000 of these unfortunate people landed in this inhospitable climate without a roof to cover 'em. Thus commenced the settlement of New Brunswick.

By Winslow's persevering solicitations at Halifax he obtained authority to lay out Blocks of land for the several Corps, and they were immediately put in possession. These Blocks commenced at Fredericton and extended 70 miles up, to the head of the present settlements a little below Presque Isle.

The following year His Majesty was pleased (in consequence of representations made) to erect into a separate Government that part of the then Province of Nova Scotia which lies on the west side of the great Bay of Fundy and extended from the St. Croix (which emptys into Passamaquoddy Bay) to the narrowest part of the Isthmus between the Bay of Fundy and Bay of Verte, and embracing all the interior country to the Canada line. Thomas Carleton, Esq'r, was appointed Governor of the new Province under the name of New Brunswick. Twelve Councillors were also appointed by commission from the King, and a Chief Justice and three puisne Judges and such other public officers as were necessary for the distribution of lands and the organization of a civil Government.

St. John's, being at that time the principal maritime port and the only compact settlement in the Province, the Governor thought it expedient to open the courts there and when a General Assembly was called he met it at that place. But when an opportunity afterwards offered to explore the country more carefully, the Governor and his Council were fully satisfied that it would impede the settlement to fix the seat of Government at an extreme point of the province. They therefore established it at the Head of the navigation of the River St. John, 80 miles from where it entered the Bay of Fundy. This place, now called Fredericton, is nearly in * * * [Remainder wanting.]

Our little room is very comfortable, entirely at your service to do business in, will give you a good bed & the man Ceaser is well enough to be altogether devoted to you. Wish to Heaven Mrs. Chipman could come but that I dare not hope for; have already too many disappointments. I wish sincerely to see you both and your little one; have much to say to you, which shall adjourn until I see you for I might as well write in bedlam as where I now am. At this moment there is in the room with me Mrs. Miller, her two little girls, Mrs. Winslow & Debby Murray all in very good spirits & Pen Winslow noisy as Satan wanting to dictate my letter to you; she is too bad to say anything about her, do make haste and tame her. Mine and my Mother's love in abundance to you all, and to Mr. Hazen's family.

If you have any newspapers or magazines you can spare Do favour me with them. I am very desirous to see something new, have nothing to read, and want to be amused as I am not going to the birth night* and have not the employment every body else has of preparing for it. I shall also write a line to Mr. Parker to beg some, any bundle directed to Mr. Clopper for me will come free of expence.

I had a letter from Canada yesterday, which our friend T. A. Coffin forwarded, but the shabby fellow did not write a line. Isaac Coffin is in fine health & spirits there having drawn up his ship in a safe place for the winter. The weather there is as it is here better than ever was known before.

Lord Dorchester to Lieut. Gov. Carleton.

Quebec 9 January, 1788.

Sir,—In my letter of the 25th June last I requested you to consult with proper persons within the province under your Government, and collect the best information you might be able to procure, whether by any reasonable encouragement Hemp could be cultivated to advantage therein and imported from thence into Great Britain, and that you would be pleased to communicate to me all the information you might receive on the subject.

The encouragement of the cultivation of Hemp in the King's Provinces is an object which the Government at home have much at heart, and upon which I shall be very glad to receive from you the communications required, together with your opinion what bounty or other encouragement might be necessary to give in order to promote the exportation of Hemp to Great Britain, and at what price it might most likely be imported into that country, including freight and every other charge. I also wish to be enabled to form some idea of the quantity which might be imported in a certain number of years.

I am with regard,
Your most obedient
humble Servant,
Dorchester.

Lord Dorchester to Lieut. Gov. Carleton.

Quebec, 9 January, 1788.

Sir,—The King having been pleased to erect the Province of Nova Scotia into a Bishop's see, and by Commission under the Great Seal to appoint the Right Reverend Father in God, Doctor Charles Inglis to be Bishop of the said Province of Nova Scotia, with ecclesiastical jurisdiction in the Province of Quebec and New Brunswick and in the Island of Newfoundland, I am to notify the same to you and to recommend him to your countenance and protection, not doubting but you will give him your hearty assistance in all things which may tend to promote piety and good morals, as well as the introduction of useful knowledge in the province under your government.

I am with regard,
Your most obedient
humble servant,
Dorchester.

Lieut. Arthur Nicholson* to Edward Winslow.

Queensborough, 26th January, 1788.

Dear Sir,—I hope you will excuse the liberty I take in troubling you with my business when I assure you that nothing but the critical situation which I find myself in, and your being so well acquainted with the nature of my first settling in this Country could induce me to it. I have made

*Lieut. Arthur Nicholson was a native of Sligo in the County of Leitrim in Ireland. At the commencement of the American Revolution he was a cornet in the 7th Light Dragoons and adjutant of the corps. He was at the battle of Bunker Hill and afterwards saw service in the vicinity of New York. When the King's American Dragoons were organized by Col. Benjamin Thompson in 1781, Cornet Nicholson was transferred to that corps as adjutant. He came to New Brunswick at the peace in 1783. He held a commission in the King's New Brunswick Regiment and in 1797 commanded the garrison at Presquile. He was "a rolling stone" — at one time we find him in Queensbury, in 1805 he was teaching school in Northampton and in 1809 he taught at Presquile. He was twice married and left descendants in the Province. The wife of the late Sir Wm. Johnstone Ritchie, chief justice of the supreme court of Canada was his grand daughter.

every exertion in my power to make a living by farming but I find it will not do. I find that unless a man does all his business with his own hands he cannot live by it. I have an idea that if the circumstance of my being in the Army twenty four years (and always employed in active line) was explained to His Excellency he, perhaps, would take it into consideration, and employ me in some business wherein I could be of service, not only to myself and family, but to the Country whose welfare I have warmly at heart. I am informed that my name has been mentioned to the Governor to do the duty of Adjutant to the Militia of this County, which I am willing to do with pleasure. Is it not probable that it is in His Excellency's power to employ me further in the business of the Militia? I don't care how much duty he gives me to do. Now Sir, as you always expressed a wish to serve me, and as I never wanted a friend more than at this present and I don't know that I have another friend in the Country in whose power it is to do anything to serve me, I beg leave to entreat you will at this time befriend me in representing not only what I have pointed out, but anything else you may see fit.

I am Dr. Sir, with much respect and esteem,

Your obedient Humble Servant,

Progress of New Brunswick* [1788.]

The progress of the province of New Brunswick, situated on the North side of the Bay of Fundy in North America, is a subject of no small degree of Curiosity.

The rapid advancement of the Province in population, Trade, Navigation and Internal Improvements since the year 1784, when it was separated from Nova Scotia, is a Subject so extraordinary and at the same time so little understood in England, that I cannot but suppose the Information of an Inhabitant of that Province, who has had very good opportunities both for enquiry and Observation, will not be unacceptable.

Among the events which are to be esteemed highly fortunate for the province is the appointment of Governor Carleton, Brother of Lord Dorchester's, to the Chief Command, a man who has shown a generous Contempt of his own private wealth and an exact frugality in the managing that which belongs to the public. Such is the happiness of those Loyalists over whom Governor Carleton presides, that if the choice of a person to conduct them in their public Councils was left to themselves their Election would undoubtedly fall upon that Gentleman. He is admired by them for his Integrity, firmness, and benevolence. It is with great pleasure I can add that the other Officers of Government are in general Men of Superior Genius and Character, and are justly disposed in places and

*There is nothing in the original manuscript to indicate the author of this sketch.

Offices of Trust and Honor for which they are well qualified. When we look back to the origin of this new province, and trace it to a short period of only four years we find it rapidly arriving into use and consequence to Great Britain. The public Academies and private Schools establishing in that province with a view of Civilizing the Indian natives and thereby making them usefull inhabitants, as well also for keeping their own youth from going into the neighboring States of America for their education and imbibing the disloyal principles of that country.

Much credit is to be given to the Honor of this nation which has been carried to a height almost unequalled in dealing out Clothing and provisions to the new settlements, and in securing to them the legal Administration of Justice. This has added a fresh spur to their industry and they are become the most happy people in the New World. And while, under the fostering hand of Governor Carleton, the whole body on any emergency may be called into the field against their envious neighbors the American States.

The City of St. John, at the entrance of a River of that name in this New Province is governed by a Mayor, Recorder, six Aldermen and twelve Council Men, Consists in near 3,000 Houses, many of which are large and spacious, being now one of the best cities in the new world.

No place in the Kings Colonies possesses equal advantages with this for becoming a place of general Trade; the River extending much farther into the Country than any other in that quarter excepting the River St. Lawrence.

The seat of Government is seventy five miles up that River from the City of St. John, where the Governor and Civil Officers reside at Fredericton, and the Banks of the River settled seventy miles beyond. Very good masts for the Royal Navy are Cut at the distance of ninety miles from the sea as large as thirty two inches diameter, which are collected by persons, appointed by Government below the falls, from whence they are shipped off for the King's dock yards in England.

The quantity of Cattle and Grain raised will certainly be great, both for home consumption and exportation, at present many Farmers having from sixty to one hundred head, besides raising from five hundred to one thousand Bushels of Wheat.

This Province has become of so much Consequence to Great Britain and increasing daily in its magnitude that no time ought to be lost in Establishing the Boundary line between the States of America. There remain yet undecided which of the three branches was formerly called St. Croix, and the head. The Americans claim the Town of St. Andrews, built since the Peace by the Loyalists, consisting of six hundred Houses, together with many valuable Islands in the Bay of Passamaquoddy, which by the express words of the Treaty are clearly within the limits of New Brunswick. The Inhabitants of St. Andrews and its vicinity amount to upwards of three thousand.

If these Loyalists should fall with their properties within the Limits of the States of America, it is necessary that they should know it before any further improvements are made by them, as I believe not one family would remain subjects to the States, being perfectly happy under the Government of Great Britain.

It is the more necessary that this enquiry be immediately made while the Indians are alive that have been called up to Boston to give their evidence, which is to remain on the records there, which River was anciently called St. Croix. They have declared upon their return that they were bribed to say the Eastermost River. And it is the more necessary while the old English and French Inhabitants who have resided there upwards of Forty years, can personally attend and give their evidence to the Contrary. I have lately been there and have examined the Rivers Islands &c., and conversed with the old Inhabitants and Indians; there can remain no doubt but the boundry we claim is just and agreeable to the Treaty.

Samuel Lee to Edward Winslow.

Ristigouche, Chaleur Bay,

14th February, 1788.

Sir,—By a person, Abel Davis, whom I dispatch to Fredericton to bring the Grant of Land given me last November, I have an opportunity of writing to you. * * * I have wrote to the Surveyor General requesting him to send Mr. Millidge to lay out the Lands here as was proposed by him last Fall. I would wish him to come very early in the summer. I have transmitted to Capt. Sproule the names of 16 or 18 persons who wish to take Lands and settle on the South side of this River and go on them in the Spring, begging he would be so good as to lay the same before the Governor & Council, that allotments may be given them before Mr. Millidge is dispatched—in order that the Lands may be surveyed by him while here, as this will greatly forward the settlement of this River, which I have much at heart. I must solicit your kind attention to it also, which will lay me under much obligation.

I shall be very happy at any time to hear from you; and if you have any new intelligence respecting a War, please communicate it to me by return of this Express.

I have the honor to be, Sir, most respectfully,

Your very Humble Serv't,

Sam'l Lee.

Lord Dorchester to Lieut. Gov. Carleton.

Quebec, 3d March, 1788.

Sir,—The State correspondence between the King's ministers and the governors and commanding officers of the troops in his American provinces being the primary object of the new post between Halifax and Quebec by the way of Fredericton, at the same time that it is and will in future still more be a matter of great general utility, every encouragement ought to be given to the institution. You will therefore be pleased to countenance and protect the same throughout the district of your command and cause all public letters to be forwarded through that channel, except in cases of emergency. * * *

Mr. Finlay, who, I am just informed by His Majesty's Post Master General, will shortly be appointed Superintendent of the Post Offices throughout the King's American possessions, and to whom I am desired by their Lordships to give the full support of my authority, will give the necessary directions to the Deputy Postmasters General of the several Provinces, who, their Lordships signify to me, shall be ordered to pay him implicit obedience. I therefore recommend Mr. Finlay to your countenance and support in the execution of his duty, and request that you will be pleased to notify his authority to the Deputy Post Masters in your government.

I am with regard,

Your most obedient

humble servant,

Dorchester.

Edward Winslow to Ephraim Spooner.

Kingsclear, New Brunswick, 19th April, 1788.

Dear Spooner,— * * * There was in the town of Duxborough in the neighborhood of Captain's Hill, two vestal virgins by the name of Seabury, who used to bring (under their black velvet cloaks) some of the most delicate white cotton and linnen cloth that ever was manufactured in any country. I suppose that those ladies are ere this, translated to a land of purity & peace (as they deserve to be) but 'tis possible that some other females may be found of equal industry & ingenuity. If there are such they must be known to Mrs. Spooner; I therefore request that you or she will procure for me (if practicable) about thirty yards of that cloth ready whitened, and send it under the particular care of Capt. Leavitt, who sails between this and Boston, & I shall pay the expence thankfully. I wrote you a few weeks ago to the care of a Mr. Reed of Boston, inclosing a letter to my friend Nathan Thomas. I am extremely anxious to hear from him. He promised that (if any accident prevented him from coming to New Brunswick this Spring) he wou'd send me a good faithful man. Relying on his word I have refus'd hiring an Overseer, altho' several have offered. For fear my letter may have miscarried, I will repeat my request, that you will have the goodness to urge him to repair here as soon as posssible, or to send me a person in whom I can place confidence. The public business in which I am engaged obliges me to be often absent, & unless I have some such Man as Thomas I must suffer very great inconveniences.

Mrs. Winslow & myself are also very solicitous to procure from your country an orderly discreet Woman, & we express'd our anxiety on this subject to Thomas who say'd he wou'd exert himself to engage such an one. I think if Mrs. Spooner could see my pretty little Flock of children it would be an additional inducement to her to assist me in this important object. Possibly there may be within her knowledge some unfortunate Widow, who wishes to change her ground, who is capable of teaching children to read, &c., and of superintending the affairs of a family. I would endeavor to render the life of a Woman of that character comfortable. I would give very handsome wages, & I would willingly pay all the expenses of her coming to me. Thomas can tell you that my habitation is a good one and that my apartments for a House-keeper & my children are warm & convenient. A passage here in the summer is neither dangerous or disagreeable, & Leavitt* would be particularly attentive to any person coming to me. Mrs. Spooner may venture to say—That my situation is not a solitude, but that I am in the midst of as chearful a society as any in the world. She may add that we are not (as some lively imaginations have represented us) in the least danger of starving, freezing, or being blown into the Bay of Fundy. I believe Thomas will be ready to swear to all this, if need be. Mrs. Spooner may therefore quiet the apprehensions of any good Woman who may suppose that we are (like our Forefathers) in a howling wilderness surrounded by savages, Bears & Tygers. She may add another circumstance which is that my Wife is a very good Woman, & that I'm ready to swear to at any time. From what I have said Mrs. Spooner will know what sort of a Woman I want—& she will render an essential service to my Family if she can be instrumental in procuring one for me.

I have not seen Gid. White since his return. When I do I shall tire him with questions. I thank you for your mentioning of my Aunt White's Family & my cousins the Howlands. It ever gives me the most lively satisfaction to hear from them. God knows my Heart that my affection for them is sincere and unabated. I hardly dare enquire about the Miss Cobb's. I heard (with great concern) that Sally was dangerously ill. If they are alive let me be remembered kindly to them. My mother & sisters & Col. Miller & his wife most pointedly direct me to present their best regards to you and Mrs. Spooner. My mother is as well as ever she was in her life. I have so many old acquaintances among you that I cannot particularly mention them. I wish them all well & would be hpapy to see 'em again.

My dear Ned,— * * * It would have gratified me much to have met old Gregorious* with you. I however live in hopes of a hearty laugh with my New Brunswick friends one of these days. I anticipate a meeting with great pleasure. Grosvenor Place, Sept. 6, 1788.

Dear Sir,—I was unfortunately from home when you called at my House previous to your departure from this Capital [London]. I had a Bundle for you of Sermons of the Rev'd George Gillmore, which I hope will reach you with this, and as a Mason & as a Native of New England I believe the sentiments of the sermon will not fail to please you—altho' he is a Shunamite, a Nazarite & Presbyterian, which some think to be a miracle in nature. Loyalty has clothed him in sheep skins and with goat skins, and left him in the Pitt, destitute of all things but £40 per ann. during pleasure of a People given to change—therefore I beg you to remember him and his household and fix him a missionary at Ardoise Hill; but if that cannot be admitted, I have advised him to move into New Brunswick & leave Egypt, provided your Honorable Board* shall see fit to appoint him their missioner with a decent support, which I hope will be not less than £50. per annum.

‡Dr. Samuel Peters was born at Hebron, Connecticut, in 1735, and graduated at Yale in 1757. He had charge of the Episcopal church in Hartford, but was obliged to leave it in consequence of the persecutions of which he was a victim on account of his loyalty to the king. He was an eccentric and singular character. He is generally conceded to have been the author of an anonymous work on Connecticut history, giving an account of the celebrated "Blue laws of Connecticut." The book is cleverly written but is more of a caricature than a true history of the times. Rev. Dr. Peters was ambitious to be chosen as the first bishop of Nova Scotia and some curious correspondence with the Rev. Jacob Bailey on the subject is yet extant. He was thrice married. He died in New York in April, 1826, in his 91st year. He was a man of generous impulses.

You know the Reasons why I have interested myself in behalf of a Presbyterian (not a Puritan, such as I was born) and I need say no more on that Head.

I cannot bear dunning, owing, or conquest, and as sundry great men have been striving against the Shunamite merely because he is not an Episcopalian, I hope you will gratify me in my wishes—for I am not so high a Churchman as to starve a Dissenter from my opinions (which may be as full of errors as his) because I remember one Sawyer, who cruelly whipped Abemileck, son of the King of Mohegan, "only because he was an Indian"—which I viewed to be unjust and shall never forget it. I was then a small boy & Abemileck my school fellow.

Mr. Gillmore carries this letter & I trust you will not have the pleasure of adding to the King's Revenue on receiving it, if you do I beg you to revenge on me in the same way.

I heard of your Bowsprit falling overboard & of your return to Dover. I hope you have now arrived safe & met your Family in Health & Happiness. I remain with esteem, Sir,

Your faithful

Captain John Munro to Edward Winslow.

[Rec'd Oct. 1788.]

Dear Sir,—Upon Col. Small's arrival in London he was pleased to inform me that you was so obliging as to take charge of my patent for the Lands that was granted to me upon the river St. Johns in the Province of New Brunswick; I cannot sufficiently thank you for your kindness in taking this trouble. I know by the Tenor of the patent I was to make Improvements on said Lands by this Time, but having been in England, prosecuting my claim before the Commissioners these two years has prevented me from making the necessary Improvements upon said Lands. I am very sorry to inform you, that this is all the property I have, the Commissioners no doubt having considered my other property within the limits of what is called Vermont Claims, who have not confiscated any part of the Loyalists Lands in that State; by this means I am deprived of my Compensation for my losses, excepting the small part which lay without that state, and will not hardly bear the expense I have been at in coming Home. Under these considerations I hope the Governor and Council of that province† will suffer no advantage to be taken of my Delinquency in making the Improvements required. Should you find any danger in this I must beg that you will be so good as to interest yourself in my Favor & to represent to the Governor & Council my losses and Disappointments in consequence of the part I have taken in the cause of Government; and should you find that there is any danger in my being deprived of the Lands you will in that case give Liberty to any persons to settle on said Lands and to take up Four hundred acres on the south side of said Tract, so as to extend back into the Woods the whole length of the patent; or should any person be inclined to erect saw mills upon the Creek which runs through the said patent called Medotick* Creek, you will be pleased to give them liberty for and during a space of seven years; as also the liberty of cutting saw logs and other timber that may be found upon said lot. Those that will undertake to settle upon said Land are to have a Deed, or Deeds, to have and to hold the same in Fee Simple on the same terms as the patent is granted to me. In order to enable you to fulfil those agreements I have taken the liberty of inclosing you a power of Attorney for that purpose.

B., at pages 48, 49.

I shall take it as a particular favour if you will be so obliging as to write me your opinion &c., of what further may be necessary in securing the Lands. Had I been able it was my intention to carry Iron works and other necessaries from this place to settle and build mills at Midotick but my circumstances now will not permit me. Please direct your letter to me at Montreal, Canada. Colo. Small, and many others of the Gentlemen here are in the same predicament with myself, with respects to their Lands in the State of Vermont.

I shall be happy to hear that your province may thrive. From the knowledge I have of that country, I flatter myself that in a few years it will become a flourishing Country.

Wishing you all manner of happiness, I remain.

Dr. Sir, Your most obedient, and very humble Servant

John Munro†

N. B. Whatever expences you will be at with respect to the above I will with the greatest Pleasure satisfy.

[Note. Captain Munro writes an excellent hand.]

*Meductic creek derived its name from the Indian fort and village adjoining (possibly the village may, on the other hand, have derived its name from the stream.) On the old French maps the name "Medoctec" is generally applied to Eel river. Medoctec, or Hayes, creek is noted for the beautiful fall 90 feet perpendicular—higher than the Grand Falls and only surpassed in the province, so far as is known to the writer of this note, by Fall brook on the S. W. Miramichi above Boiestown, which has a fall of 120 feet.

†John Munro was a Vermont Loyalist and held a commission as captain in the King's Royal American Regiment of New York, a Loyalist corps raised by the celebrated Sir John Johnson and commonly called the "Royal Greens." He claimed to have abandoned property in New York valued at £14,231, besides 6,000 acres of land in Vermont. Many of the officers and men of the "Royal Greens," with their families, numbering in all 1782 souls, were settled on the river St. Lawrence west of Montreal. Captain Munro's well known report of the state of settlement, etc., on the St. John river in 1783, is printed in the Canadian Archives for 1891.

My dear Colonel,—Ten thousand thanks for your kind congratulations; and allow me to coincide with you in Opinion, tho' but so short a time married, that among the comfortable things in this world, a good wife ought to stand foremost. The Papers relative to the Oak Point* business I shall immediately forward to Mr. Sewell. The half Fees I have settled with him agreeable to the inclosed amount. I must take the liberty now of asking you in what manner I am to proceed with respect to the Administration Bonds,† I allow six months for filling an Inventory and twelve months for rendering Accounts. The estate of poor Cosby Hunt‡ amounts to £35—and the debts brought against it to £350, as I am told. The Administratrix of which is continually boring me for Duplicates of the letters of Administration, Inventory, &c, for all which she pays liberally in Malevolence, Scandal and abuse. That indeed is trifling, but the time for rendering an account of that estate expired the 3d Feby '88, yet I have not been able to procure it, tho' I have made frequent demands in the most formal manner. I will thank you to give me your advice when most convenient on the business. The character alluded to I don't wish to injure but at the same time cannot think of neglecting any part of the duties of the Office, which you have honored me with—besides I cannot, at present, inform myself how far I may be liable to Censure.

Your generous invitation of myself and Girl to your House demands our grateful acknowledgments; long since have I been sensible of your friendship and hope it will one day be in my power to make amends—

Edward Winslow to Joshua Loring.†

Fredericton, New Brunswick, 2d December, 1788.

Sir,—Since I wrote you last I have received a letter from a friend in England advising me to come forward with a memorial to the Lords of the Treasury for recompence for the loss of offices which I have sustained by the rebellion in America.

The series of disappointments which I have experienced in former applications have so effectually depressed my spirits that it is with some difficulty I have reconciled myself to this attempt, and but for the consideration that any money which may be obtained is due to others, I would not have submitted to another solicitation. In my memorial, which I enclose to you, I have stated fairly and explicitly the facts from the beginning to the end of the Business, and I believe you will join with me in the conclusion that my case is peculiarly hard. * * *

The Memorial may be divided into paragraphs. The first relates to circumstances which took place before I joined the Army. I presume there are yet living in England numbers of my old friends who will very readily swear to all the facts contained in that part. If Judge Oliver‡ is alive (and I pray God he may be) I think he will not refuse to make the most pointed testimony in my favor. His son Peter, Mr. Elisha Hutchinson, my friends Daniel Leonard and Ben. Marston and many others were witnesses to the exertions I made in the County of Plymouth—they can say for me that I was among the first who stood forth openly.

The Plymouth protest which I wrote and patronised is a celebrated record of this fact. It is also known to all of them that the Tory Company at Plymouth was not only formed by me, but almost supported at my expence, and that by my means the town of Plymouth was kept in quiet long after all the towns in the neighborhood were in extreme confusion. The Chief Justice Oliver is acquainted with a number of facts respecting ‡Peter Oliver was appointed chief justice of Massachusetts in 1756. He was proscribed and banished on account of his loyalty to the crown. At the evacuation of Boston in 1776 he went to Halifax with the British forces, and from thence to England, where he died in 1791 at the age of 78 years. See his son's letter of Feb'y 1, 1806.

my operations which I need not relate. Mr. Robert Hallowell* was at Plymouth during some of the disturbances and knows the part I acted.

These gentlemen can also testify that I have valued the incomes arising from my offices at Plymouth and Boston within their real value.

The second paragraph which contains a history of the events with respect to myself at Boston may easily be proved by Colonel Sheriff, Col. Kemble,† and Capt. H. Rooke who were then in General Gage's family. I think they would willingly afford their testimony. Col. Small‡ is also in England, who officially waited on me after the Lexington business and offered me an Ensigncy in the 64th Regt., then vacant by the death of a Mr. Jackson. Small's heart would be open on this occasion as it is on every other where the cause of benevolence is concerned.

The original commissions of Registrar and Collector which I received at Boston are in this packet, and Mr. Hallowell or Hutton or any of the Commissioners or Robert Hallowell or Waterhouse I am sure will do me the justice to say everything that is necessary respecting my conduct as Collector. As a Registrar there was not much field for exertion, but 'tis matter of notoriety that I did at the risque of my life bring off and preserve all the publick records which were committed to my custody, and that since the treaty they have been delivered in perfect order to the Governor of Massachusetts by the Governor of Nova Scotia.‖ I think, on proper application, Lord Percy§ would condescend to honor me with a certificate of my services at Lexington or (if that is impracticable) Hutchinson or some other officer might prove the necessary facts. Your own evidence with respect to many of these circumstances could not fail of being useful. Lieutenant Governor Oliver, Richard Lechmere, John Vassall¶ and others may be called on to prove them. I remember Oliver accompanied me to Lord Percy's quarters the day after the battle of Lexington, and was present when his Lordship was pleased to declare that my conduct on that day did me great honor & that the Army were greatly indebted to me.

With respect to the subsequent transactions under Sir Wililam Howe, I feel bold in the consideration that I omitted no circumstance of duty.

§Lord Percy, afterwards Duke of Northumberland, was in command of the British at Lexington and was greatly indebted to Winslow's coolness and courage in acting as guide on the return of the expedition from Concord. See letter of Sir John Wentworth under date August 9th, 1815.

¶Richard Lechmere and John Vassall were eminent New England Loyalists. Both were at this time living in England. John Vassall's wife was a sister of Governor Oliver of Massachusetts.

'Tis notorious that my task was invidious and arduous until Col Innes* appointment. Personal quarrels and in two instances personal combats were the consequence of my exertions. There was not a man (I venture to affirm) in the whole British Army who was more unpleasantly or more frequently exposed than myself from the constant necessity of visiting all the outposts of the Army. Colonel Innes will certainly give a testimony of my industry in the execution of the duties of my Muster Master's office if it is necessary, and I presume Capt. Robert McKenzie will also recollect the serious exertions I made to correct the irregularities and detect the errors which were committed in the accounts of the Provincial Troops. Colonel Balfour will also do me the justice to acknowledge that I undertook with chearfulness many enterprizes out of the line of my duty. I also think Sir Wm. Howe would take the trouble of expressing his approbation of my conduct.

I cannot bear the idea of enlarging on these subjects. Egotisms of this kind are peculiarly disgusting to a man of any real delicacy, but justice to myself and family require that I enumerate all these events. During the command of Sir Henry Clinton, you know how I was embarrassed. It is known to General Vaughan and others now in England that the party of Refugees at Rhode Island would have gone to the devil if I had not taken charge of them. It was originally at General Vaughan's request that I accepted that command† and under an assurance from him that a detachment from the army should co-operate with us. 'Tis known to him and others that I refused to receive any advantage from the acquisitions of that party, but that I bore my own expenses, which as commanding officer were very considerable. Fanning and Leonard I believe have taken great credit to themselves for the operations of this party; I have never interrupted their pursuits. I rejoice that they have reaped advantage from their own representations, but I appeal to General Prescott, Barry and Savage, or any judicious man who served at Rhode Island, whether that party would not have sunk into contempt without my personal assistance. Sir George Collier‡ served with us on our expedition to Connecticut, and, from the civilities I then experienced from him, I think he might be induced to give a testimony in my favor. Whether certificates of this nature will be necessary I leave for your consideration. I mention names because you may know to whom to apply for the establishment of such facts as it may be necessary to prove. As a Military man I suppose I ought and I really do feel myself satisfied with the handsome allowance of half-pay.

*Colonel Innes was appointed inspector general of the Loyalist forces. See note under date 31st October, 1777.

†The expedition is referred to under "Orders Bedford Expedition," March 30, 1779, in this book.

‡Sir George Collier was admiral in the navy. In the year 1779 he relieved the garrison under Brig. Gen. McLean, which was besieged at Penobscot, and destroyed a considerable fleet of the enemy's vessels. The defence and relief of Penobscot were from the British standpoint among the most brilliant operations of the Revolutionary War.

I have introduced my Military services into my memorial for no other purpose but to evince a uniformity and consistency of conduct during thirteen tedious years. It is for the same reason I have forwarded letters of approbation from the two Generals I served with after I came to this country.

The duty pointed out for me to execute in Nova Scotia was of all that I ever performed the most tedious and unpleasant. How it was executed —how far my representations contributed to the establishment of the new Province of New Brunswick, and how far I have been instrumental since in arranging the affairs of the Government, I leave to be explained by Col. Fox (who has repeatedly offered his services to me,) by Alderman Watson,* with whom I have constantly corresponded, by Governor Carleton's letter, which is inclosed—and by the testimony of Mr. Marston who has lived here and knows all about it. He also knows my motives for relinquishing all title to my father's compensation, and in short every other circumstance respecting me. To him I have written and have requested him to find you out and converse freely with you on the subject of my memorial, and to execute any commands of yours in the writing way or any other way that you may direct. He is the nearest relation and among the dearest of friends that I have in the world, and I am sure will give you every assistance in his power.

While I was in constant expectation of an office of equal emolument and importance to those which I had sacrificed, it surely would have been improper to have solicited for other recompence. The assurances to me were from good authority—Col. Fox and Mr. Watson. They in the most emphatical language said "That the arrangement was made and that Sir Guy Carleton had acceded to it, that I was certainly to be Secretary of New Brunswick." Others of my friends in England congratulated me repeatedly on the appointment. In these circumstances could I seek for recompence? * * *

I will not add to this enormous letter by any further remarks but will only say that I cannot but hope a case so singularly hard will not be entirely unnoticed by the British Government, but that either some pecuniary allowance will be made to me or some office provided for me by which I can support myself and my family comfortably.

Sarah Winslow to Ward Chipman.

January 10, 1789.

We are greatly mortified and disappointed that Mrs. Chipman and you are not coming up next week, we depended on seeing you here. Hope the happiness is only delayed and that we shall see you both some time this winter. There can never be better sleighing than is here, you must come and dance away your gout. Everybody's dancing this winter, even Mrs. Carleton, she danced every dance the last ball. * * * The Colonel is now gone with his son Tom to see the rope dancers. Near 80 people are now in a small room to see a man dance on wire. Mrs. Carleton and her children have been. Ward may go next week for he* is going to St. John when we have done with him at the metropolis. * * *

Sarah Winslow.

Benjamin Marston to Ward Chipman.

London, Oxford Street 41,

March 21, 1789.

Dear Chippy,—I have rec'd yours of 2d Dec'r last. It adds greatly to the weight of my misfortunes to reflect that any one, especially a friend, should be put to any inconveniences by them. While they terminated all in me I cared little about them. A series of disappointments had inured me to adversity and had blunted its edge when the blow lighted upon me only; but it pierced my very soul to think of disadvantages arising to those who have made their friendly exertions to assist me, and I begin to fear I shall not be able to prevent it.

My expectations from the compensation made me by the Commissioners of America claims are totally overthrown. I know my fate there. They have allowed me £105 only. (They must have calculated nicely) and daily delays, which to me pinched by necessity seemed contrived on purpose to distress, still keeps that pittance at a distance, and when it comes it will come still lessened by the sum which I rec'd at my first arrival of £45.

*That is the rope dancer. Young Ward Chipman was at this time less than 12 years of age.

The residue will about pay off the debts I have contracted for a bare subsistance. It seems as tho' I had ceased to be the sport and had become the spite of misfortune. However one resource is left me which will I hope enable me to weather her malice. I have invented an improvement to Hadley's Quadrant by which the sun's altitude may be found when the horizon is invisible. An Optician, whom I have layed under bonds of £1000, is now preparing one for a tryal. The theory upon which 'tis constructed is mathematically true. It only remains to be tryed whether the construction, which is very simple, will counteract a ship's motion in a sea, and one experiment will determine that point, and that in all common cases, from my own experience of a ship's motion in a sea, I think it certainly will do. This invention I hope will bring me sufficient to discharge the few debts I owe, for to that purpose whatever I may get by it shall be in the first place most religiously applyed.

I have been three times disappointed since being in London of the fairest prospects of Business. The first was with a Merchant who went out to St. Johns last summer. I forgot his name. He wanted to connect with him some one acquainted with that country, bred to business and of good character. Leonard, who was then here, recommended me; he considered of it some days and finally determined to go alone.

The next was with a Company who had in contemplation the establishing of a fishing factory at Canso or N'f'land and wanted an agent for Canso acquainted with the Fish Trade. Here I was again recommended by Leonard and here I was again disappointed for they determined in favour of N'f'land and for that place they were previously provided with an agent.

The last was to come out to N. Brunswick agent for a Company who put in for a Mast Contract but were underbid. This would have lasted seven years.

I hope my friends, when they consider these disappointments, will not think that I have been wanting in my exertions to get into business after I found my original plan frustrated.

Two days ago I rec'd a letter from Joshua Loring acquainting me that two days before that, the 17th inst. & not before, he received a letter from Colo. Winslow containing memorials, power of attorney, &c, and that the Colonel mentions having wrote me on the subject. The Colo's letter to Loring was dated Dec'r 2, the same date of yours to me. Your's came to me by the penny post but from what hand I don't know nor what ship it came by. The Colo's letter to me has not yet come to hand, his to Loring was picked up at the N. England Coffee-House. I have searched both that and the N. York and Gen'l Post Office but in vain. * * *

My dear Chippy I truly feel your sympathy for my distresses and nothing is so ardently the absolute wish of my whole soul as to prevent any loss or even inconvenience coming to those who have endeavoured to serve me—'tis the first object of my attention nor will I leave a stone unturned, which I can turn, that will help me.

P. S. March 25, 1789. Since the above I have rec'd Colo. Winslow's letter which came by the way of Halifax by Mulberry Holmes, who arrived but a few days ago.

When you see the Colo tell him this and that we are preparing to take steps with his memorial. I have nothing to write him at present but the same melancholly tale of disappointment which you can fully inform him of.

I would have sent you some papers, magazines, &c, but I am obliged in all money matters to make my calculations so very nice that on no occasion can I afford to plusify them except I could in some other instance minify them equally. However there is no news at present of importance. The prospect with regard to this nation is the continuance of peace with every body, tho' Parliament has encreased the Navy establishment from 16,000 to 20,000 men.

But the greatest event, which has for some time past engrossed the the attention of the whole British Nation, was the King's illness. Happy for us he is recovered and again holds the reins of Government, for which (the last) he is undoubtedly much indebted to the fidelity and neat management of his present ministers, who have had the address to keep the business of a Regency so long in agitation that the King had time to recover. Had it once taken place there are some reasons which make it not improbable it might have amounted to a dethronement, unless the Prince Regent should have had virtue eno' voluntarily to have resigned the Government to his father whenever he should be in a condition to receive it. For as a new administration would have come in, they would have had it greatly in their power to have represented the state of the King's health just as suited their interest, for almost any length of time.

The public joy on this occasion was universal and sincere. The City of London, but not that only, and all its adjoining and surrounding villages were illuminated from the Garret to the Cellar. In every street, lane, alley, square and court from one end to the other—as it happened to be a fair night, the streets were one continuous crowd throughout the whole, of persons of all ages, sexes and conditions. From Hyde Park corner thro' Piccadilly, down the Haymarket to Charing Cross; thence thro' White Hall one way, thro' the strand the other, Pall Mall, St. James street, and part of Bond street, was one compact solid body of coaches from one side of the street to the other, who could move only at intervals and but a little way at a time. The King, Queen, and Princesses were in the crowd, not in their own coaches but incog.

What a triumph to the good old King to have such sincere unequivocal demonstration of his People's hearty regard and affection. What is very remarkable is that among this immense crowd which was several hours together in the great City, there was no Riot, Tumult, nor Disorder, not a window broken, tho' some few (Quakers) were nonsensical eno' to refuse joining in the joyful exhibitions because it was a Carnal Joy; and but one unfortunate accident, by a man's attempting to cross the street when some coaches were passing, he ran against ye pole of one and was knocked down ridden over and killed on the spot. 'Twas a glorious night for Tallow Chandlers, Oil men, Tin workers and Lamplighters, and they did not fail to make their advantage of it.

In the religious performances which have been publickly exhibited on this occasion the Jews have distinguished themselves. Their High Priest, both in his Prayer for the King while ill and his thanksgiving for his recovery, has beat the Archbishop of Canterbury (a Marble-head man* would say) out of sight.

Tomorrow is to be a very superb court, and ball in the evening, and illuminations to celebrate the Queen's Birthday, which was omitted the usual time on account of the King's illness.

The Colo. tells me you go on smoothly in New Brunswick. I regret sincerely that I am not among you lending a hand in such agreeable, rational, self-rewarding enterprizes, as making improvements in a country which you see daily meliorate under your hand. 'Tis a kind of Creation and the exercise of such power must be most gratifying to every rational, active, ambitious mind. However if I can't do it as I wish I will do what I can. I'll contribute my mite, so I send some Peach Stones, Plum Stones and Pear Seeds—and when you, with your little Chips about you, sit eating the fruit of the Trees which will spring from these stones and seeds, tell them they were sent you from London by Isaac Winslow* to Edward Winslow.

Boston, 27th March, 1789.

Dear Sir,—Your kind letter 2d Jan'y did not reach this place till beginning this month. I was then absent in the country, so that I had no opportunity of replying till Leavitt was gone. * * *

I am much obliged for your attention to my business with Col. Willard and hope he will be induced to settle it without recourse to disagreeable methods but if he does not, hope the powers sent will be sufficient and shall be obliged for your further assistance therein. If the Col. could send me a bill on England I would allow the highest exchange.

I thought I had engaged you a gardner to go by this vessell, but as I did not choose to advance him money lest he would be off, he came last night rather in liquor, which was no recommendation. He still talks of going in the vessel and another man with him, whose appearance I have a better opinion of. I have procured a box of seeds put up of various kinds by a gardner. They cost 20 shillings. I have added some scarlet beans convolvus. Next year if we live, & you desire it, I'll lay myself out to procure you some curious flowers. It is much the diversion here & there are various sorts which were unknown before the Revolution, at least to me. I send herewith a few News Papers, and am pleased to hear from you at all times. I beg Mrs. Winslow's compliments & mine to be offered to your mother & sisters and to Mrs. Winslow.

I remain, dear Sir,
Your friend and kinsman,
Isaac Winslow.

[P. S.] Capt. Howard sails in an hour & I do not see either of my chaps intend going. I am sorry at not sending, having taken considerable pains about it. There is a vessel sails next week and if I can meet with an under gardner such as you describe on low wages I will venture to send him. The seeds are on board, also a bundle newspapers under cover addressed to you. They will afford you amusement as just before election they are filled with political squabbles.

I was to have given the fellow I engaged eight dollars a month & been answerable for his passage. He had been employed in Tracy's, Deane's & some of our first Gardens, but I suppose Drink has put him out of employ, & I am glad I discovered it before you were troubled with him.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 29th April, 1789.

Dear Winslow,— * * *

We have a solemn decision in the Admiralty Court here that Indian meal is Flour within the meaning of the proclamation. Mark how the matter is managed. The whole is entered at the Custom house as Flour to avoid any dispute about its coming within the proclamation, but Flour pays a Provincial duty, therefore with the Treasurer of the Province it is entered as it really is Indian Meal. I will not believe that the Governor had an idea of permitting Indian Meal to be imported, the consequence with us must be that we must shut up the mill*—for if it is open at all we must be at the expence of keeping a miller and the little that we can grind will not pay half his wages. It is true this is grumbling to no purpose, because we cannot help ourselves—but these facts ought to be known. It can be demonstrated that to the Province it makes the difference of 30 per cent between importing the meal or the corn.

With respect to the Hessian fly there is a Captain Clements just come from New York, who I understand has taken some pains to inform himself respecting its operation, and I have been told he says it does not touch the Grain nor is communicated by it. He will be with you, I suppose, as I understand he lives in your County, from him you may learn more about it. But as to the prohibition of wheat on that account, I have always tho't it right that no risque should be run. As to the importation of Indian Meal I think nothing can justify it. * * *

Benjamin Marston to Edward Winslow.

London, November 21, 1789, Oxford Street 41.

My dear Ned,—I am very glad to hear from you, which I did a few days ago by your letter of 18th Aug't.

I am very sorry the hard hand of poverty still gripes you. I know from painful experience how unpleasant the feeling is and how much it is agravated by having those near to one suffering by its cruel pinches But it is a solid consolation which will help to keep a man warm, to reflect that what has bro't us into this unpleasant situation deserves a better fate, and there is no doubt but that it was the intention of Parliament to have offered essential relief to all sufferers under what ever form they might be so. But those who were appointed the distributors of its benevolence have in very many instances defeated its design. The fact is they are under the influence of a minister who looks upon the claims of the Loyalists rather unfavorably, because they are some obstacle in the way of his ambition which is to put the National Debt in a train of being all fairly discharged in the course of the lives of the present Generation.

Colo. Wightman* of R. Island has Colo's half-pay, a pension of £80 st. pr. ann, and temporary support, the sum I don't know; has likewise received pretty handsomely for loss of property. His services you probably know. I hear he has the patronage of the Duke of Northumberland to whom he rendered some services when in America.

Parson Agnew†, whom I hope you know before now, has Chaplain's half-pay, pension, and temporary support—I don't know their value; also a large compensation. He was a man of property. He is a native of Scotland of an antient respectable family, who have some friends in and about the Board. His son Capt. Agnew of the Queen's Rangers, has half-pay, pension £80 stg. pr. ann, and temporary support. He has his father's interest of course.

A Mr. Patterson, a Clergyman, Chaplain's half-pay, pension and temporary support; a native of Scotland and Ireland, has friends in this country.

Sam'l Mather, who was the latter part of the time Secretary to the Board of Comm'rs in Boston, reduced from £120 or more pr. ann, which Government allowed him on his coming to England, to £100. Refused compensation for the loss of his paternal inheritance of which he was dis-

*Lieut. Col. George Wightman, of the Loyal New Englanders; his corps, which was not a large one, was raised in 1777. It was afterwards amalgamated with some of the other Loyalist regiments.

†Rev. John Agnew, D. D., and his son, Captain Stair Agnew, late of the Queen's Rangers, on January 30, 1790, purchased a tract of 1,000 acres at the mouth of the Nashwaak river, originally granted to John Anderson, an old pre-loyalist settler and magistrate. The price paid was £540. Dr. Agnew is described in the conveyance as of the parish of Mary-le-bone, in the county of Middlesex, a suburb of London. The Agnew's gave to their new property the name of Monckton. Capt. Stair Agnew was commissioned to the Queen's Rangers Sept. 27, 1777, and was a highly distinguished officer. He was severely wounded at the battle of Brandywine. He is classed by Sabine as a Virginian, from which it is to be presumed the family went thither from Scotland. Rev. Dr. Agnew was chaplain of the Queen's Rangers. Stair Agnew represented the county of York in the house of assembly for 30 years. His father, though a clergyman, was at one time a member of the assembly for the county of Sunbury. Rev. Dr. Agnew lived to the age of 85 years and died at his residence in 1812. Stair Agnew was a "free lance" in politics, and was at one time thought to be in league with James Glenie. He was a leading York county magistrate and a personal friend of Edward Winslow. He died in 1820. A good account of the Agnew family will be found in Benjamin Marston's letter under date March 17, 1790.

inherited by his father merely because he had taken the side of Government, being told by the Board that he might go out to America and enjoy his patrimony. He has no friend or patron. Native of Boston. * * *

It is very provoking to think that those who have borne the burden and heat of the day in settling and organizing the Province should not only not reap the fruit of their labours but should be the worse off for their exertions. But 'tis a common case. They who go foremost generally find a place in the ditch and in some businesses they must stay there. But I hope your case is not so desperate, I hope it admits of some relief. I am sure you deserve it. * * *

It gives me great gratification to hear that the Province is getting so smoothly on, 'tis the report of every relator. Doct'r Agnew writes a very flattering acct. to his family, while he was yet only at the threshold, the City of St John.

I shall come out full of very flattering expectations, for there are in the Province some sources of direct remittance to this country which seem to be known nothing of at present—hops and red clover seed. The ordinary hops sell in England from £5.10 to £6. and upwards per C. Wt.; the best £7 to £8 and upwards. Now supposing N. B. hops to be of the ordinary sort, these prices will leave the shipper a very handsome profit. Clean well ripened red clover seed will fetch from £4.10 to £5. pr. Cr. Wt. Clover seed will seldom ripen in England and Hops commonly suffer from the abundance of wet in which that country abounds. * * *

This country is minding her own business and very effectually too. Wealth flows into it with every tide from every quarter. She reaps no small benefit from the confusions of our Gallic neighbors. London is full of French men and French money.

The King, God bless him, has perfectly recovered his health and has every appearance of a healthful old age. The last season has proved a plentiful one, but they have had a very bad seed time this fall, a great deal of corn being unsown owing to the abundant wet. This keeps the price of wheat high ab't 6s. 6d. pr. bushel, so that at present the exportation is stopped. Besides in Wales and Scotland even at this late period the Corn is not yet all reaped, so subject is this climate to wet and cold when warm and dry is wanted, I think we in America are much better off. To have one part of the year appropriated for that purpose; this makes a business of it, and a man then commonly knows what he has to depend upon the rest of the season.

For myself I still enjoy perfect uninterrupted good health and feel the same good appetite for the enjoyments of Life that I ever did. 'Tis one of the most disagreeable sensations and reflections to live so inactive, as I have done these two years, with so many abilities of body and mind which I could and should with pleasure employ to the benefit of my friends and country. But it consoles me when I reflect that my present useless inactive state is neither my choice nor my fault. I am in it not in consequence of any reprehensible unjustifyable conduct, but from events which no one could foresee or guard against, and in pursuit of a very rational object in which there was at least probability of success, and I thank Heaven the thought has enabled me to support myself free from ill humor, fretfulness and repining thro' all my disappointments. 'Tis a blessing justly intitled to our most grateful acknowledgements, that our religion teaches us. [Remainder of letter missing].

Roger Johnson* to Ward Chipman.

Windsor Road, 22 December, 1789.

Dear Sir,—I had the pleasure to receive your favor of the 7th ulto. which I should have immediately acknowledged, but I was at the time very much indisposed; I am thank God pretty well recovered.

It gave me the greatest concern to hear of the unpleasant situation of so sincere and true a friend as I have so frequently experienced in Colonel Winslow. I shall not trouble you or him at this time with professions of regard. If the inclosed Bill will put him out of the power of the wretch you mention it will give me the highest satisfaction. * * *

Assure him from me that I shall ever retain the most grateful remembrance of his Friendship, and may so worthy a man and all his family, yourself and friends enjoy many happy returns of the ensuing season is the most fervent wish of Dear Sir, Your sincere friend, well wisher, and faithful humble Servant,

My dear Ned,—I am still in the same place and much in the same predicament as when I last wrote you. That is unable to get out of it. However I have within these few days accomplished the business of the Patent for my new invented artificial horizon. But 'tis yet impossible to say how productive it will be as we have not yet notifyed it to the publick. My Partner, the Optician, who understands his business, says he must have a number made ready for delivery before the publick is advertised and that number will be now finished in the course of four or five days. I am sensible a thing of this kind, how useful soever it may be, will take time to have its good qualities known and acknowledged and till then not great demand can be expected. This instrument from my own experiment I am sure will answer accurately the end proposed, and when once it comes to be known I am confident it will get to be generally used. I shall not therefore be disappointed if at first it should not set off rapidly. * * *

I have sent you a bag of all sorts of cherry stones, peach and plum stones. These I beg you would plant out this Spring and when fit for transplanting, let them be transplanted and, if any accident should bring me up and prevent my coming among you again, let some one row be called "Marston's Row." You'll laugh at my vanity, but I have a vast desire to be remembered among you as a benefactor to N. Brunswick. If I was able I would be so essentially, as the case is the will must be accepted for the deed. I can only exert my disposition to forward the bringing on of that country in a small way.

I felicitate you on such an acquisition to the country as the Agnew family. I believe I have some small merit in directing their course to N. B. Their original plan, after they had determined for America, was to go to Canada, But from the many conversations which I used to have with them on the subject they thought it might be as well, when the Doct'r came out to explore the county, to take a look at N. B. in his way. I was well assured in my own mind when they so determined, what would be the event. I find I was not mistaken. Capt. Agnew, the son, will be the bearer of this. He brings over all the family, his mother and wife. He comes with a vast predilection for New Brunswick, which I hope no circumstance nor accident will lessen. He has a laudable undertaking in view. To lay the foundation for a large patrimonial landed estate and to raise up a family to inherit it. He is a Gentleman who has had a good early education in Brittain, has rather superior abilities and has missed no opportunities of acquiring information as he has come on in life. With such talents and so improved, joined to an active disposition, he will be a very valuable member of society, which I am confident he will ever be ambitious to serve. He was a Captain in the Queen's Rangers, was wounded at Brandy-wine by which he was I think (for some time at least) rendered unfit for field-service. His Lady is an English Woman of a family which has good connections here. She is a well-bred accomplished woman and of a very amiable disposition—she will be a real acquisition to your Lady folks. The old Lady (as is Capt. Agnew also) is a native of Virginia and practises all the good old customs of that once hospitable country. I am sure her goodness of disposition wont fail to engage the esteem of all who shall be so happy as to form an acquaintance with her. I know her tea table has afforded me many a comfortable dish of tea.

Captain Saunders* has succeeded to Judge Putnam's† vacant seat on the Supreme Bench. He is likewise lately married, a Miss Chalmers I think is the name, a native of America but her father of this country. I think it is a great happiness to N. B. to have such important places filled by people who are natives of America, who look on the country as their home, as the abiding place for themselves and their posterity. Americans used to call this country Home, but it has become a very cold home to us in general. The original connections and attachments are long since worn out and dissolved.

If I can bring my affairs to any kind of bearing in time to do it, I mean to go out to Miramichi from this to pick up what property I have there and if there is the annual ship there, which there used to be, to ship what I may collect for Leg-horn and myself with it. So you may perhaps not see me this twelve month. However as my affairs all depend upon accident, they may point a very different route. * * *

I am in perfect health and have been constantly so. The regimen which an empty purse has obliged me to observe may have contributed to my being so.

My dear Ned don't let misfortune depress your spirits. He who feeds the Moose & Caribou, the wild Ducks & Geese, the Shad, Gaspereaux, & Salmon, takes care of you & me also, & tho' we may be sometimes pinched, yet if we behave ourselves we shall be recompensed by an ample allowance of smart money. I don't say this to cultivate in you any liking to misfortune, no—fight, scratch, kick, bite, throw stones, do anything to her. I hate the very name of the Toad.

Adieu and God bless you. Remember me most kindly to Mrs. Winslow and the Children and to all who may think to ask after

Your sincerely affectionate,

B. Marston.

*John Saunders was born in Virginia, June 1, 1754. He belonged to a good family, was well educated and possessed some property. He was a pronounced Loyalist. In August, 1776, he was gazetted a captain in the Queen's Rangers, and later commanded a troop of light dragoons attached to the regiment. He was engaged during the war in arduous and dangerous services and was twice severely wounded. He was appointed judge of the supreme court of New Brunswick in 1790, but this did not prevent his being elected a member for York county of the house of assembly in 1792. He became chief justice of the province in 1822 in succession to Hon. Jonathan Bliss. He had a large estate near the mouth of the Pokiok in Upper Prince William (now Dumfries) where he resided for some years; this was long known as "The Barony"—His son John Simcoe Saunders was born here on July 13, 1792. Judge Saunders died at Fredericton May 24, 1834, aged 80 years. A handsome monument marks his last resting place and on it his biography is inscribed.

Mather Byles Jr. to Edward Winslow.

St. Georges, Grenada, 27th March, 1790.

Early in December, my dear Sir, I quitted friends in Nova Scotia and embarked on board a vessel of Mr. Taylor's, commanded by a Capt. Daniel White, who has the honor to be one of your cousins. * * * We anchored at Barbadoes on the morning of the 9th of January and Governor Wentworth's letter procured me a very friendly reception from his relative, who is in the Custom House at Barbadoes. I passed in his family the greater part of the three days we remained there, and he introduced me to the collector, who gave me a letter of introduction to General Mathew, which inclosed that I had delivered Mr. Wentworth. As the market was unfavorable for our cargo (part of which was consigned to me) we went to Dominica, where I saw Mr. Lloyd to whom also Governor Wentworth had given me a letter, but I had never placed any dependence on it, as a gentleman from the island, whom I saw at Halifax, informed me that the appointment Governor Wentworth had thought of was not in Mr. L's gift, and had been some time ago filled by the Duke of Richmond.

We stayed here only a day and then proceeded to Antigua, but the markets were everywhere alike bad and the Captain resolved next for Kingston. As this was not my route I quitted him, and was fortunate enough to find a vessel sailing immediately for this place. My stay at Antigua was of course very short, and I had not in my power to see Mr. Lavicount whose estate is some miles from here. I saw Mrs. Lavicount for about half an hour, and left your letter with her.

I arrived here after a short passage and found on enquiry that Mr. Coffin was not on the island, I learned that it was his intention to be out again from England early in the present year. As he has not made his appearance I am apprehensive that something more advantageous has offered to divert him from his West India plan. * * * My letter to Gen'l Mathew procured me a very polite reception, and I was placed by him in the Custom House in the room of a young gentleman who had been some time from the island and was not expected to return. He however arrived about a fortnight after, and I immediately relinquished to him his appointment. The General expressed himself pleased with my conduct, and has promised to remember me whenever he has anything in his gift. I have been several times at his house and hope his patronage may one day be of service to me. But in the meantime I have secured myself against so uncertain an event by taking a position in the counting house of Messrs. Shand and Conden (a principal house here to whom I had an introduction from my friend Belcher) where I draw out accounts and state Dr. & Cr. from sunrise to sunset, not much to my edification—nor at present to my emolument. I even question if I shall be a nabob these two years but I live in hopes.

The weather since my arrival has been very pleasant and the glass not above 86 which is a heat I can very well bear. My health has been as good as I ever remember it and as I get a daily allowance of old madeira or fresh claret I hope to preserve myself for some time against the whole muster roll of West India diseases. They are a pretty formidable regiment, & I was prepared for the worst by a medical book I took up by accident at Dr. Allmons, which set out by gravely remarking that in the West Indies the inhabitants died of inflammatory disorders from October to June, and of putrid disorders from June to October.

* * * There is little news among the islands. Martinique only has afforded subject for conversation. The rage for liberty has seized its inhabitants and for some time there was much disorder. The people have banished their Governor and possessed themselves of the fortifications of the place, & it is not improbable their example may be imitated in the other French islands.

I have great curiosity to know the politics of New Brunswick for the ensuing summer, and I depend wholly on you for intelligence of this sort. I hope you will not disappoint me. Tell Mama I remember her with great affection and often pay an imaginary visit at her breakfast table. I mean to give all my god-children estates, so that she may pass off Hannah as a West India fortune whenever there is a good opportunity. If you make a single improvement on the farm without describing it particularly I shall certainly be sulky for I consider every tree as an old acquaintance. * * *

Most affectionately yours,

Mather Byles.

[Note. In this letter Byles expresses his gratification that Mr. Johnson had forwarded Col. Winslow a bill for £100 & that nothing but the embarrassed state of Johnson's own affairs had prevented him from advancing the £300 necessary to relieve Winslow from his difficulties.]

Major Gilfred Studholme to William Hazen.

Studville, 20th April, 1790.

Dear Sir—Some time since I had the pleasure of receiving your favor and have watched anxiously in hopes of finding a Purchaser for this Place. Doctor Agnew has promised to come and view it this Spring and if he likes the situation (which I have little doubt about) I think he will be the purchaser; whenever that event takes place, I shall with many thanks and great pleasure pay you and Mr. White the sum I owe you.

By the very ill success of my Saw-Mills, and my recent misfortune in failing to bring the cultivation of Hemp to perfection, I have been very hard drove for money, but hope by the sale of my Lands to get out of Debt. In short every farthing I have been able to raise has been appropriated to the discharge of such sums as I have been sued for. You and Mr. White therefore I hope will excuse my not having made a tender of Payment.

I have been very ill for some time past but hope the opening of Summer and riding exercise will recruit me.

My best compliments attend Mrs. Hazen and all your family.

I remain with perfect Esteem, D'r Sir,

Your most Faithfull

and obliged Hum'e Servant

G.Studholme.

P. S.—As I have been so unlucky as never to receive any of the cuttings of Currant or Gooseberry Trees that you and Mr. White intended for me, request that you will both furnish me with a few more by the Bearer, Capt. Hutchinson.

Mather Byles Jr. to Edward Winslow.

Grenada, 19th July, 1790.

* * * Very frequently my dear Sir do I make my past connection with you the subject of many pleasing reflections. * * * General Mathew, on his return from his tour, renewed the invitation he had given me to remain in his family and has employed me as a private Secretary. * * * Mr. Coffin arrived here a few days ago but, as he is gone into the country, I have had little opportunity of particular conversation with him. * * * The weather continues very fine, though we are now fast advancing into the rainy season, how far that part of the West India year may agree with me I can't say, but hitherto I have had uninterrupted enjoyment of my health, and for this last month have been pitying the poor Frederictonians who are roasting in a heat ten degrees greater than I have yet experienced here. * * * Little Hannah I hope is acquiring the language without my assistance. She gave two or three pretty emphatic specimens of forwardness before I left her, and by this time I suppose is nearly a match for Edward. * * * Kiss Pen Miller if she is married but not otherwise, lest it should injure my reputation. Love to the Major & believe me with all sincerity and attachment &c. &c.

Mather Byles.

Benjamin Marston to Edward Winslow.

London, April 3, 1791.

My dear Ned,— * * * What will be the next scene of my Robinson Crusoe adventures, He who made me and appoints all the events of my life only knows. My present employment, which has kept me above water for these eleven months past and has enabled me to discharge the debt contracted for subsistence for twelve months before, will in a few days be at an end.

I shall then be again afloat without sail or paddle and, I may add, even a plank to swim on. But I hope that the same Good Providence that has more than once relieved me in similar circumstances will not now forget me.

But it requires some fortitude to see a situation so disagreeable without feeling anxious for the event.

Adieu. Remember me most affectionately to your mother and sisters and to Mrs. Winslow. God bless you all is the constant ardent wish of

Your sincerely affectionate

B. Marston.

J. B. Dight to William Hazen.

Halifax 4th May, 1791.

Dear Sir,— * * * From my own knowledge I well recollect to have seen Cedar on the sides of your River leading to Fredericton, and I have heard it grows in great abundance in other parts of the Province. I'm therefore to request you'll inform me at what rate you can furnish me with boards for Whale Boats of the following dimentions. In length from 10 to 18 feet, sorted as the trees best cut, Width not less than 7 inches at middle, young stuff the best. To be sawed without Gouts or thick & thin edge, but to continue throughout about half inch thick and not less. To be as free from rots & shakes as possible and the kind of a glassy nature to be avoided.

This lumber I want for my own Whalers, and if you can furnish me in large Quantities every Season on reasonable terms, I think I can make it a matter of much advantage to you.

With very sincere regard I remain, Dear Sir,

Your much oblidged and most Obed't humble Serv't,

J. B. Dight.

Edward Winslow Appointed to New England Company.

At a general Court of the New England Company, Thursday 21st July, 1791.

It appears from the Minutes that Dr. William Paine, one of the Companies Commissioners had left the Province of New Brunswick and the Lieutenant Governor having nominated Edward Winslow, Esquire, as a fit person for a Commissioner; resolved that this Court do approve, and the said Edward Winslow is hereby nominated.

Duke of Richmond to Lieut. Governor Carleton.

Whitehall, 24th July, 1791.

Sir,—I have been honored with your two letters of the 2nd of October and 20th of December last on the subject of a principal fortified Post and Depot for Ordnance Stores in the Province of New Brunswick for which purposes you give the preference to Fredericton rather than St. John. As the various Ordnance Buildings necessary to be erected will amount to a considerable expence, and certainly should be placed in that situation where they can be most useful and be best protected, it appears to me desirable that the Place to be made the Seat of Government, or at least the principal Military Depot, should be first fixed upon, otherwise, after having laid out a considerable sum of Money to form an Ordnance Establishment, we may have to begin again in some other place, or be tied down to a bad one (as has often beeen the case) on account of the Money that has already been laid out upon it.

In respect to what may be thought the best Situation for these Purposes I hope I need not assure you how sensible I am that every sort of attention is due to your opinion on account of your Local Knowledge of your Situation, and of your abilities as an Officer, and the more so as, from the long acquaintance I have had with you, I can take upon me to answer for you that no other motive than the Good of His Majesty's Service can biass your mind.

However I must confess that as far as the information I have been able to obtain enables me to form any Judgment on this Subject, the Reasons which you give would not lead me to prefer Fredericton to St. Johns as a Military Depot, particularly for Ordnance Stores.

I understand that Fredericton, though more difficult of access to an Enemy from its remote inland situation, is so commanded by high grounds as to be still more difficult to be fortified than St. John, and although it may have conveniences from its centrical Situation, and such Ordnance Stores as may be necessary for its own protection and for the supply of its small Neighborhood in the present infant state of the Colony may be conveyed up the river in the Summer Season in small craft of Fifty Tons Burthen as you state, yet as I should suppose that in fixing a Military Depot in the Province of New Brunswick, Government would have further Objects in Contemplation, it strikes me that the Situation of Fredericton would not be applicable to them. The objects I mean are, that a Military Depot in New Brunswick should be calculated not merely for the Defence of that Province but for the Defence of any other adjacent Province or other part of His Majesty's Dominions; or if necessary, for offensive operations against the neighboring American Provinces should they become enemies to Great Britain. In all these Points of view, a place ninety miles inland with a navigation only for small craft, and that shut up by the ice near half the year, seems to me ill calculated for an Ordnance Depot, which certainly must be protected against an Enemy, but which would lose one of its greatest advantages if it was not at all times to be come at for His Majesty's Use.

The transporting Ordnance Stores, which are generally of a heavy nature, from St. Johns up the River to Fredericton, would also be attended with a great and constant Expence for the hire of small Craft, and for the shipping and unshipping them so often, and if an Enemy can gain possession of the Banks of the River in any part, he may effectually cut off the Communication.

For these Reasons Fredericton appears to be objectionable as a great Military Depot. But St. John seems to be free from all the objections that lie against Fredericton, and the peculiar circumstance that you mention in its Harbour being never interrupted with ice even in the severest seasons, instead of an objection, strikes me to be much in its Favour; for although it is thereby rendered at all Times accessible to an Enemy it is also open to us either to receive Succours, or for other Purposes, and considering the Naval Superiority which it is to be hoped this Country will always preserve over every other, this Harbour being at all Times open to a Naval Force seems to me to be much in its Favour, especially as fortifications can keep off an Enemy while our own ships can have an easy access to the place.

There being a sufficient depth of water near the ground allotted to the Ordnance at the south end of the Town of St. Johns to make Wharfs, on which our Stores can be landed at once from the Ships without Lighterage, is an object of great Importance in our Service, not only from the saving of a great Expence but from the saving of much Time, which in Military Operations is of so much Consequence.

As to the fortifying this Post it does not, from the Inspection of the Plan and from what Information I can collect, appear to me to require greater or more expensive Works than most other Harbours.

I have communicated these ideas to the Secretary of State and have sent him Copies of your letters to me and also of Captain Straton's to me of the 26th December last upon this subject, which I understand was communicated to you. But I have declined at present giving any decided opinion, and have recommended that the subject should be referred to Lord Dorchester and to you, to report fully respecting the best Situation for a Military Depot, and when that Point is once settled, no Time shall be lost in commencing upon the proposed Ordnance Buildings, and should

St. Johns be fixed upon I shall readily consider of some Plan for affording to the Inhabitants of that Place the Protection they solicit.

I have the honor to be Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servant,

Richmond.

*Reverend James Fraser was the first Presbyterian minister to officiate at Saint John. He was also the first of that denomination at Miramichi. He was educated at the University of Edinburgh, and seems to have come to Nova Scotia about the close of the Revolutionary war.

Dugald Campbell* to Lieut. Governor Carleton.

Presq' Isle,† 22d Augt. 1791.

(Private.)

Sir,—I have the satisfaction to acquaint your Excellency that I shall be enabled to discharge all the people employed in the Engineer Department at this Place about the later end of this week, the Foreman and four Carpenters and two Sawyers excepted, and at Fort Carleton‡ by the return of DuPere's boat everybody will be discharged except three Carpenters. These carpenters are necessary to be continued in order to compleat the provision storehouse at this Place, and the inside work of the Buildings including Barrack furniture, the whole may then be discharged, Mr. McNab the foreman excepted, whom I hope your Excellency will have the goodness to continue for his very faithful discharge of duty at this place.

I ought not to omit to mention that a considerable part of the inside work of the new Range of Barracks is already done, and I can assert that (with judicious management) the troops quartered at the Upper Posts on the River St. John may be as comfortable as any in the Province 'bating the want of society.

I hope that your Excellency will be persuaded that I have made use of all the expedition possible to forward these works and at the same time the utmost economy. I do assure your Excellency that nothing has been neglected that could contribute either to the one or the other, and I trust that when the work is examined and the several difficulties insuperable from such an undertaking well understood, these Posts will be found to have cost as little money as any that ever were established.

I should be happy to have your Excellency's permission to go down when the people are discharged, as my remaining here longer will not then be necessary. In the hopes that your Excellency will have no objections

*Dugald Campbell had served through the war in the 42d regiment, the "Old Black Watch." He was at Fredericton in July, 1785, an engineer in connection with the erection of barracks, etc., there. He planned and superintended the erection of the barracks as Presqueisle. In 1793 he received a commission as lieutenant in the king's New Brunswick regiment. He was clerk of the house of assembly for some years. In 1803 he made an elaborate report on the state of roads in New Brunswick, which is printed in the journals of the house of assembly; it is of great interest. Dugald Campbell died at Fredericton and is said to have been buried on his property at the junction of the rivers Nashwaak and Tay. The date of his death was in April, 1810. For further particulars relating to him see Jonas Howe's article in N. B. Magazine of May, 1899, page 233.

†A military post was established at Presqueisle at this time. The barracks built here and at Grand Falls were able to accommodate 6 officers and 118 men. They were wooden buildings and in 1825 were reported "in ruins." See the account of their condition at that date as described in Peter Fisher's little History of N. B., page 42. See also remarks of James Glenie in Can. Archives for 1895, under the head of New Brunswick, page 26.

‡"Fort Carleton" evidently was the name given to the post established at Grand Falls.

I shall go down at the same time and will write to Capt. Straton to this effect.

In order to show that the demand for nails for the works here and at Fort Carleton has been made upon mature reflection, I have directed the foreman to make an estimate of the quantity necessary for the different parts of the Buildings and inclosed it for your Excellency's information.

I am Sir, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble serv't
Dug'd Campbell, A. Eng'r.

John Moody to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 28th October, 1791.

Sir,—As I am about to traverse the Inquest held on my lot of land at Miramichi, allow me with the greatest deference to solicit your interest in my favour, and to state to you some of the particulars relative to this unpleasant business.

When I was at Miramichi I had a cellar dug and a House put up ready for covering. I had also at least two acres of land cleared in a handsome manner and should have had more but my indisposition, peculiar situation, and the scarcity of labour prevented. When I went to Halifax for medical treatment, I appointed a person to lease the Lot No. 71 for three years. * * * The tenant has not done as much as he might have done, but he has put another House on the Lot cleared and improved considerable of Land which together with my improvements have escaped the notice of the Jury. * * * The friendship which you have manifested to my brother on several occasions, and the very polite attention shown to me when at St. Anns merit my warmest acknowledgments. * *

Jno. Moody.

Edward Winslow to Sir J. G. Simcoe.*

Kingsclear, New Brunswick, 29th January, 1792.

Sir,—A call of Captain McGill's† has given me a few minutes to congratulate you on your arrival in this country, and on your appointment to

*John Graves Simcoe was gazetted lieut. colonel commanding the Queen's Rangers in December, 1777. He was a brave and distinguished officer and his corps was second to none in the British service. See "Simcoe's operations of the Queen's Rangers." From 1792 to 1796 Simcoe was lieutenant governor of Upper Canada.

†John McGill was commissioned a lieuterant in the Grenadier company, Queen's Rangers, in 1776, and on Sept. 9th, 1777, was promoted captain of the seventh company, from which in October, 1778, he was tansferred back to the Grenadiers as commander. He came to New Brunswick at the close of the war in 1783, but afterwards removed to Upper Canada, where he became a person of note and was a member of the council of the province. He died in Toronto in 1834 at the age of 83 years.

the command of the province of Upper Canada, an event which is considered as of great importance to His Majesty's remaining Dominions in America and which has given additional confidence to every consistent and determined friend to the British constitution.

Immediately after the cessation of hostilities I came to this country, and have since been unremittedly employed in exertions to settle it. In various public stations I have assisted to form and organize the Government, to establish courts, to distribute lands, &c—and have had a fair opportunity to watch the progress and effects of the regulations made, and to notice the errors which have been committed.

From the knowledge I have of your character I am convinced that your system is the result of wisdom and deliberation, that it will be compact and complete as possible, and pursued with perserving energy. I am also satisfied that your civil officers will be judiciously chosen and well informed, yet it is possible that (recent experience in lines of duty nearly similar to those which they will probably pursue) may enable me to render some small assistance either by the communication of forms, or by other means, and I have particular pleasure in making through you a general tender of my best services to any of them.

Marks of your attention during the war, are fresh upon my mind, and I shall always be gratified when I can evince with what unvaried attachment, respect and esteem, I am

Your most ob't hum'le ser't

E. Winslow.

Sir John G. Simcoe to Edward Winslow.

March 5, 1792.

Dear Sir,—It is with very great pleasure that I acknowledge your letter of the 29th of Jan'y. I assure you I was very much disappointed in finding a very worthy namesake of yours in office in this place, as I had hoped that I had letters to have delivered to you, & I have much to regret that you are settled at such a distance from where my Lot has fallen.

Nothing can be more acceptable to me than your very friendly offer of such communications as your experience must render highly valuable to me. I am in the pursuit of knowledge & shall be happy, in the fullest extent, to avail myself of your assistance & beg from you the most unreserved communication to assist me in the arduous & difficult Duty which I felt it my part not to shrink from when it was unexpectedly offered to me. One hour's conversation would elucidate my Plans more than days of writing. I shall only say what is particularly applicable at present: That I wish to connect the British Empire as much as possible, & in pursuance of that Idea wish to adopt the forms & very language on all points that may bear a similitude with what the more ancient Colonies have chosen to do. Judge Saunders has sent me the Laws of N. Brunswick & you will oblige me much if you could furnish me with a list of the Posts, offices, & Salaries of the officers of that Government, particularly small ones, with any remarks you may think proper. If there be printed regulations for the grants of Lands, nothing would be more satisfactory to me than to receive them with your remarks on their defects; approbation or amendment of the system.

If in your knowledge of the Government of the United States you shall have perceived any radical defects which may be illustrated by a strong & direct contrary system of conduct in the Government of Upper Canada, nothing would be more gratifying to me than your communicating on such a subject.

The Government of Upper Canada will soon attract the notice of the Inhabitants of America, & they will be perpetually called upon in conversation & act to decide whether the present confederation of the United States with each other, or that which the British Colonies have with Great Britain, is most advantageous.

You see, my dear Sir, that I heartily & confidentially embrace your offer, & am with many an honourable recollection,

Your humble serv't,

J. G. Simcoe.

Sir John Wentworth to the Secretary of the Lords of Trade.

(Masts for the Navy.)

London, 19th March 1792.

Sir——I have had the honor to receive your leter dated the 13th inst, which I should have sooner answered but for my absence from town.

In obedience to the commands of the Lords of the Commitee of Council for Trade and Foreign Plantations, I beg leave most respectfully to submit to their lordships the following information and opinions on the Extract of Lieut. Governor Carleton's letter, dated 15th July, 1791, inclosed to me in your letter.

The prohibition from cutting White Pine Trees by 8th Geo. I, Cha. 12 enacts penalties for cutting or destroying any from 12 inches diameter and upwards and by the act of 2d. Geo. II, Ch. 35 it is enacted that the same penalties should be extended altho' the Trees "do grow within the limits of any Township laid out or to be laid out hereafter."

The wisdom of these Acts are evident. For if it is lawful to cut and destroy trees under 24 inches diameter there would soon be none left to grow so large as to be within the Limitation, & thereby the whole intention of the Legislature be defeated. It is also to be observed that Trees from 12 to 24 inches diameter are equally essential for His Majesty's Navy as those above that size, & therefore as necessarily an object of the Public care, and this seems to have been so considered in the 2d George II, where provision is made to counteract the evasions attempted at that time under pretence of such Trees growing on Lands granted to private persons. The Surveyor General of the Woods and his Deputys act under these Statutes, and happily for the Public interest, not solely under the reservations made of the Pine Timber in some Patents under the Provincial Great Seals,* which His Majesty's Ministers in their most judicious care of an object so highly important to this kingdom as masting the Royal Navy, directed should be inserted, thereby intending a forfeiture of the land granted for destroying Pine Timber. But in several Patents this useful clause or condition has been omitted, and that powerful measure in such cases lost to the Public.

Several of these Patents are now in the Province of New Brunswick by the late division from Nova Scotia. They have been purchased by individuals with a view of selling the Pine Timber with which many of them abound, quite as much as for any purpose of settlement and cultivation. Being restrained from destroying the White Pine Trees fit for His Majesty's service they have artfully imposed on Lieut. Governor Carleton's inexperience in this particular, and persuaded him to suppose the preservation of White Timber is a discouragement to the settlement, and that because the King has graciously granted the Land & other Timber, it is a Hardship that Pine Trees should be reserved. In this idea all Grantees of Land readily join, for it is admitted that they are certainly benefitted in gaining an additional property from the Public and obviously to its irreparable loss, and the more fatally so as the Pine Timber in the remaining British Colonies is now the only resource that can long be relied on. For since the restrictions of the Surveyor General's office have been removed from New England, the mast timber is nearly destroyed, insomuch that it is scarcely possible to procure a Cargo of Large masts in that country, & such as may be had are at enormous price. Many attempts were made in the British Colonies before the American Revolution to gain a right to all the White Pine Timber in a manner similar to those now agitated in New Brunswick—and by various others means, all which I effectually resisted entirely to the approbation of His Majesty's Ministers.

That the Surveyor General of the Woods and his Deputys have a legal right to seize all White Pine Trees or Timber which they find in the possession of any one, although it may have been cut on his own ground,

*For example in the grant to DeLancey's corps at Woodstock of 24,150 acres the words occur, "Saving and reserving nevertheless to us, our heirs and successors, (i. e., to the crown) all white pine trees, if any shall be found thereon."

unless he first obtains a License, and that it is their duty so to do, is evident to me. It has been so considered and often judicially determined in His Majesty's late Colonies in America where only one exception was admitted, viz., where the Pine Timber grew on Lands in the Province of Massachusetts Bay which were Private Property and so known on or before the year 1690. In all other cases it was decreed or adjudicated that the Pine Trees were reserved to the Crown, altho' the Lands on which they grew were Granted and became Private Property.

If it should be found expedient & perfectly consistent with His Majesty's instructions to his Governors in America to grant all the Lands in their respective Provinces, can it be reasonable to infer that all the Pine Timber in British America should thereby be diverted from the Crown and the Royal Navy left to the discretion of Individuals for the preservation of such timber, or to their disinterestedness for a ready supply at a moderate price, and all the Acts of Parliament relative to this service wholly defeated?

Yet these are the certain consequences which my duty to His Majesty obliges me to declare must result from the measures of relaxation or surrender of the Public Rights implied in Lieut. Governor Carleton's letter.

It has already begun to appear. The proprietors of lands granted claim the Pine Timber growing on their Lands, and have instituted or commenced suits at law against the Contractors for supplying His Majesty's Navy under Licence for cutting and taking such Timber for His Majesty's service unless they will pay a considerable price for the Trees. These actions were brought in April, 1791, and it seems they soon afterwards persuaded Lieut. Governor Carleton into their opinion, under pretence of encourageing the Settlement of the Province.

His Majesty's Ministers, benevolently attentive to the convenience of the New Settlers in the Province, furnished me with an Instruction authorizing & requiring me to grant Licence to Proprietors of Lands to cut and take away such Pine Timber as was unfit for His Majesty's Service and the standing of which was detrimental to cultivation. Upon this Instruction it was my duty to grant Licences after a previous inspection of the Timber and marking such for reservation as were fit for the Navy. This duty has been done with all possible attention to the interests and accommodation of the Inhabitants, and I may say nearly without expence to them, as there hath not been five pounds paid for all the writing and extra duty it has naturally and unavoidably occasioned for seven past years. Nor did I ever hear any complaint, and I most diligently enquired personally and on the spot (being from five to eight months every year employed myself in travelling over all parts of the Country by which means I had opportunity of information that no other person could have.) And from twenty six years experience in this office, honoured with continued approbation of my services by His Majesty's Ministers, they being able to judge between the real interest of the Crown and the suggestions of individuals for their own exclusive advantage, it becomes my duty to add that to my best knowledge there does not arise any real discouragement to the settlement of the Provinces from the operations or effects. * * * [Remainder missing. There is no signature but there can be no doubt that the author of the Communication was Sir John Wentworth. He returned to Halifax from England later in this year, and on the death of Governor Parr was appointed his successor.]

William Hubbard* to Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, May 29, 1792.

Sir,—I was exceedingly sorry that I lost the opportunity of conversing with you before you left town on a subject which I conceive of very great consequence to the peace and quiet of the country. If Sir the people who have endeavoured to impose themselves upon the Governor & Council as a regular dissenting congregation should gain so much credit as to obtain the end sought for, it will introduce into this Province more anarchy and confusion than has hitherto been known. It will I am fully convinced drive many and valuable subjects from it such as will not be easily replaced.

Hitherto the members of the Church of England have peaceably acquiesced under every act of the Governor & Council, arrogating no merit to themselves from such a conduct, tho' they have secretly complained that the Governor and Council have been imposed upon by false representations to the prejudice of the Loyal Inhabitants that have emigrated to this country, whilst on the contrary those who could not have the least right to expect special favors have insidiously obtained them. Let me ask you, Sir, whether those very people have not been the first to murmur and complain? Suffer me, Sir, to innumerate a few instances wherein the former Inhabitants have been favoured in prejudice to the latter.

*William Hubbard was a strong Loyalist and an equally strong churchman. He settled in Maugerville, where he was deputy surrogate (under Colonel Winslow), registrar of deeds and wills, a member of the house of assembly and presiding justice of the court of common pleas. At the first provincial election in 1785 the old inhabitants had as their candidates James Simonds and Nehemiah Beckwith. They attempted to elect them both, and in so doing overshot the mark, for the Loyalists noted the polling of the first day, which was by open vote, and seeing that the "old inhabitants" voted solely for Simonds and Beckwith, they by common consent voted for Hubbard and Vandeburgh, who were elected. The elections at that time lasted some days, the poll being taken from parish to parish. The contest was keen but the Loyalists won. For many years there was much friction and jealousy between the old settlers and the Loyalists, which extended to religious as well as secular matters. The letter above must therefore be read with due allowance for the party spirit then prevailing.

In the Parish of Burton nearly one half of the lots of land have been granted to the old Inhabitants who had lands granted to them before. They on finding the country likely to be populated, many of them quitted their own ground and took possession of unlocated Lands, they made but small improvements, but being in possession and it being represented to Government that they were in possession and had made improvements thereon, without being informed that their only motives were either to be paid for them or obtain grants whereby they might dispose of them to their own emolument and the distress of the suffering Loyalists. Many of them to this day hold their Lands and suffer them to lie uncultivated to the great damage of the settlers, and others to my own knowledge have immediately on receiving their Grants sold their lots at from fifty to two hundred pounds and some of them after selling them have immediately left the country.

They stile themselves in their Petition "a regular dissenting congregation." Pray Sir what regularity is there in that mode of worship that admits into its Churches Preachers of every denomination, except those of the established religion of the land? Do they ever enquire into the authority or credentials of the man who says he is a preacher, or do they enquire into his moral character? No, let him be a Baptist, a Methodist, a Quaker, a Mahometan, or a Jew, or let him be of what sect or religion whatsoever, so that he is not a lawful preacher, he is admitted.

If, Sir, the lot in question was to be given to the Dissenters, suffer me to ask what description of Dissenters have the right? I conceive the law knows of no distinction, and I humbly conceive it out of the power of any body of men to make an equitable and just distinction. Those who now ask for it are neither more "regular" nor more moral than the others, and as to their three leading men a small portion of honor will fall to their share. The first character has been indicted by two inquests of the county for perjury and still lies under the censure, the second has been charged upon a well grounded suspicion of Burglary, the third and last great man was a Cowardly Rebel Serjeant acting against Cumberland. Now, Sir, these are the characters that have the assurance to ask for special favours. It is said that Government are prevented from complying with the prayer of the memorial of the Wardens & Vestry of the Church of England by a former promise to those people that they should not be disturbed in their possession of the Lot. Grant that such a promise has been made; but was that promise made to the Hammonites, to the Palmerites, to the Brookites*

*Walter Bates, sheriff of Kings' county, in a manuscript now in possession of Morris Robinson of Saint John, speaks of having visited Maugerville soon after the Loyalists arrived in the county. He says, "In Sheffield and Water-"borough the people were divided into three sects named after their own "preachers, namely, Hartites, Brookites and Hammonites. Each sect preached "their own doctrine, but were annually inspired by two travelling preachers "from Nova Scotia."

or to the last and worst of all the Pearlyites or Burpeites—for these all once professed to be one and the same people in profession of religion.

If the Lot should be given to either it would give great offence to the others, for I conceive each have an equal claim of right. If, Sir, Government think themselves so far pledged to those people that they cannot grant the lot to the Church of England, let me intreat, Sir, that you will use your power to let the Lot remain as it is—in which situation the Church being in possession we are perfectly easy and secure in our title.

I hope in the name of God that Government are not pledged to put them in possession. They have fairly and righteously dispossessed themselves, we are in legal possession and, as far as the laws of our country will justify us, we mean to defend it.*

I must ask your pardon for taking the liberty of thus making known to you the most humble request of every member of the Church of England in the County of Sunbury, that you will, as they have every hope to believe, stand forth in the defence of the rights of the Church of England, and I have it in command to say that you will insure the hearts of every Churchman, who are ever loyal.

I am, Sir, in behalf of the members of the Church, with profound respect,

Your humble Servant,

Wm. Hubbard.

Edward Winslow to William Hazen.

Fredericton, 1st June, 1792.

D'r Sir,—Representation has been made to General Carleton that the Lime Kiln† in front of Fort Howe exposes the Buildings, stores, &c. to great risque and is otherwise attended with material inconveniences to the service, and he desires me to give you notice that he has been under the necessity of giving directions to Captain Dixon to forbid any Lime to be burned in that situation for the future.

I am, with much esteem

Your most obed't Serv't,

Ed. Winslow.

*See New Brunswick Historical Society Collections, Vol. 1, p. 146, for the story of the encounter between Messrs. Hubbard and DeVeber and Messrs. Burpee and Coburn. It appears that the lot in dispute was claimed as a glebe by the Church of England and also by the dissenters as having been reserved for them in the original grant of the township of Maugerville. It is rather difficult to get at the merits of the controversy; both parties seemed to have believed themselves in the right.

†This lime kiln had been in use ever since the settlement of James Simonds and James White at St. John harbor in April, 1764.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, 9th June, 1792.

Many, many thanks to you, my dear Sir, for your timely obliging letter congratulating me on my late appointment, and arrival here. Be assured your friendly participation is among those things that give real pleasure, and add confidence to my hopes on the present occasion. Mr. Brinley was with me when your letter came to hand. He united with Mrs. Wentworth and myself in rejoicing that your heart is still strong. We have long known and respected its firmness, and sound attachment to its friendships, but we are now sorry to find the Gout has so long made prisoners of your hands. The advancing summer I trust will release them and possibly enable you to give us a visit. I wish to God I could say, a residence among us for now, more than ever, do I wish your Lot was happily cast among us. Every moment since my arrival has been unavoidably engaged in business, or ceremony, which is sometimes more urgent—and now I have stolen a minute, between the tide and the eddy, to make my thanks to you, and to assure you of my best regards—pray present me in great kindness to all your family, and say to all my friends that I reciprocate with them most perfectly, in every friendly sentiment.

In the 6th Regt. is a Mr. Strong, who has been kindly mentioned to me in Yorkshire; Can you inform me where he is, how circumstanced, & whether I can by any means be useful to him? If he is within your reach, pray tell him, that I shall rejoice in any occasion to convince him of my best wishes. Yesterday I had a letter from our friend Gov'r Fanning—he is well; I believe his affairs will go honorably for him in England.

Adieu, God bless you. The Philistines are upon—your sincere friend

Wentworth.

Thomas Costin* to Edward Winslow.

Madowoiska, York County, July 2nd, 1792.

Sir,—Mr. Joseph Paquet, Missionary appointed by the Bishop of Quebec for this Place, by Information made to him, knowing that Your

*Thomas Costin was in 1791 appointed a magistrate at Madawaska in response to the applications of the Acadian settlers for a resident magistrate. He was a man of fair education and taught school at Madawaska. He attended some of the sessions of the peace at Fredericton. Madawaska at that time formed part of the county of York, both sides of the river being under our provincial jurisdiction. Thomas Costin married a French woman by the name of Chenard, and had his children brought up according to their mother's faith. In the old baptismal register the parish priest has written: "Il donne pleine et entiere liberte a sa femme, qui est Romaine de religion, de suivre et pratiquer les enseignements de sa religion," and to this Costin signs his name. In a few places where his signature occurs in public documents he adds the word "Instituteur." He removed to Fredericton in 1804, where he taught S. P. G. school for a time, but later went to the province of Quebec. See his letter of January 3, 1807.

Honour takes great pleasure in Regulating the affairs of this place, Therefore the worthy Gentleman hath Imployed and Impowered Joseph Deggle with a Petition to present the same to His Excellency, requesting a Salary for Executing his Ministry Duty and Civilising the Indian Nation, & as he is a Stranger to you, hath Requested that I should write to your Honour Requesting your Assistance by Examining the Petition and to Introduce Joseph Deggle to His Excellency that he may Receive an Answer & in case you will grant the said favour he will be accountable to you for the same. I do acknowledge Mr. Paquet is a worthy respectfull Gentleman, this is but the second Time he has come to this place, but he does take much the Interest of this Province, as I can Understand, both private and Public. I am sensible that he will make it his Duty to Civilise the Indian Nation & a better Preacher can not be expected for our District.

Now my mind I do declare & thanks be to the Lord for Granting me that day that my Enemies & the Prosecutors against New Brunswick was overthrown; that is to say I took greatly upon me to Defend this part of the Province as soon as I was Honoured [with being appointed magistrate], where there was numbers Rise Against me & would have this place to belong to the Province of Canada.* I undertook so much, that I was determined to Loose my Property. If they had gained the Day, and If their desire had been accomplished I would have suffered Considerably. I am Likewise happy that Oliver Sir [Cyr] hath received the Commission of Captain; he is a faithfull servant & will sertently Conform himself by the Laws and Regulations of New Brunswick; he has Inroll'd the Inhabitants & would wish to have the Acts of Militia in French that he might Execute his Duty. I will assist him as much as will Lay in my Power & translate the Acts in French as just as possible I can do, provided Government will Alow for the same as well as all Other writings which he may Receive in English, which I shall be trubled to Explain the same—for such Business time is Required.

I have punished Anselm Robicheaud since my arrival. I have made him pay forty Shillings for Commiting Disturbance & five Pounds for Retailing Liquors at the Entrance of the Lake call'd Degele, & I have been Informed that the said Robicheaud hath Petitioned Lately to the Governor of Quebec Requesting Satisfaction but none has been Granted, Therefore he proposes going to Fredericton; that is my Desire: then I will Expect that Government will Recompence in proportion to his faithfullness & good Behavior Committed at this place.

The Inhabitants hath Commenced the Road & I expect next year the Road will be Opened from Green River to Madowoiska River upon Hilly Land & at the Grand River. I would take it as a kind favor to Inform me by Joseph Deggle in Writing the Duty of a Clerk of a Parish, as I am not Acquainted with that point of the Law & whether You have devided this place into a township & you Will Oblige, Sir,

*Some interesting details regarding this boundary dispute will be found under the head of New Brunswick in Canadian Archives for 1895, pp. 28–31.

Your Most Humble Serv't

Thos. Costin.

[P. S.] Mr. Deggle will deliver to you a Memorial that is in my name & as you have promised to Assist me Whenever I shall Request, therefore I Request [you] to Informe me by the same Opportunity, whether I may Depend upon the Island for which I petition & I shall be Indebted for your Assistance.

To the Honourable

Edward Winslow, Esq'r, Kingsclear.

Captain Daniel Lyman to Edward Winslow.

Nashwaack, Aug't 20th, 1792.

My dear friend,—The many instances I have experienced of your friendly disposition towards me, have emboldened me to trouble you once more.

After making every exertion to establish myself for life in the Country, I find my efforts of no avail. Both Mrs. Lyman and myself disappointed and ruined in our fortunes, and our once good prospects perfectly blasted. Unable to labor, my small income will not support me without it.

I have now no alternative but to seek relief from the Government I have served so zealously and in whose cause I have suffered so much.*

My hopes and pretensions are founded on my very severe and uncommon sufferings from the wounds I received in His Majesty's service, and from the official assurances of His Majesty's Ministers while in England, who offered and advised me to accept an invalid provision, but my zeal for the service I was engaged in was such, that had it been possible for me to serve on crutches I should have returned to my duty. This procured me the most honorable recommendations and further assurances "that if I would return to England after the war I should have the provision of an invalid officer." This I should have embraced immediately after the peace, but persuaded by my friends and the promises of an ample assistance and support from the expected compensations to the Loyalists, I preferred it to soliciting or burdening the Government who appeared disposed to deal so generously by us; but in this we experienced an almost total disappointment, which is now the grand reason that compels me to make use of the strong claims I have for the further favour of Government.

*Captain Daniel Lyman had been severely wounded in 1777. He saw much hard service during the war.

Altho' I have a long time neglected making this application I hope it is not yet too late, I have many friends in England who I think will exert themselves to serve me, and for my delay I have this plea, that increasing age, the severities of a northern climate and the hardships that one must necessarily undergo in settling a new country, makes me feel with ten fold force the ill effect arising from the uncommon severity of my wounds.

And further to strengthen my claims and increase my interest, I have to beg you will request the Governor to recommend me to the protection of his noble brother, and to his friend Mr. Watson.

I have for a long time wished to ask this favour of His Excellency, but fearful of giving him offence by my presumption, I have thought this mode of making my request known the most preferable; I hope you will have no objection to do me this act of friendship, but if you have, I beg you will have candour enough to decline it.

I have endeavoured to avoid a long pathetic tale, as I think you are too well acquainted with my case, and your feelings for the unfortunate too much alive to require it. If you think it necessary to lay before His Excellency the many certificates and vouchers I have in support of my pretensions, pray have the goodness to acquaint me, and I will attend to it.

I have to request your opinion and advice on the business I have proposed to undertake.

I am with the highest esteem and regard,

Yours very sincerely,

——— Dan'l Lyman.

Colonel Jacob Ellegood* to Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, Nov. 19, 1792.

[Condensed.] Col. Ellegood asks Winslow if he can with propriety ask for a grant of the interval [flats] in front of his land in Fredericton "as low down as the Blacksmith shop." Had purchased from General Arnold†

*Colonel Jacob Ellegood apparently was not an officer in one of the Loyalist regiments. He probably served in the American loyal militia. He at first settled at Fredericton, removing thence to Dumfries. He brought to the country one or two slaves named Wise. In 1795 he was elected a member of the house of assembly. He was an active magistrate, and under his supervision the first roads and bridges were constructed in the parishes of Prince William and Dumfries. He died at the Ellegood homestead on the banks of the river St. John—the place yet in possession of his descendants. Rev. Canon Ellegood of Montreal is a grandson.

†Benedict Arnold, the "traitor," after his defection from the Americans commanded a Loyalist corps called the American Legion, which was raised in the latter part of 1780, and included both cavalry and infantry. He went to England at the close of the war, but afterwards came out to America, arriving in Halifax Nov. 19, 1785, after a five weeks' passage, in his brig, the Lord Middleton. An account of his sojourn at St. John will be found in Lawrence's "Foot Prints," pp. 70-78. While he was in New Brunswick he lived for a short time at Fredericton. The site of his residence was that of "Rose Hall," below town. He sold the property to Colonel Ellegood. He left the province about the end of 1791.

and also bought No. 2 from G. Lambert adjoining the Blacksmith shop. Had laid out £700 at least improving his lands in and about Fredericton and not less than £800 on his lands above. He says, "I have never yet had any land given me by Government, altho' they were so kind as to pass an order in Council in my favor of land &c. on the Powkeak in rear of my Prince William farms, for which I am much obliged to them."

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

Sussex Vale, 15th Jan'y, 1793.

Dear Winslow—I am sorry we have lost the services of Chipman in the House of Assembly. Had the event been known in time in this County we would have shown by our choice of him the folly and madness of the citizens. I however hope he will yet be elected for Westmorland having this day heard from there of there being a great prospect of it.*

Coffin will come to you in great triumph over his numerous enemies the Cits. who used their influence here against him. Is it possible for us to get a room at Fredericton during the session without giving so much trouble which I must otherwise of necessity do, to a private family.

Col. Ellegood has been friendly and polite enough to direct me to a Bed with him, but the smallness of his house and the largeness of his family must produce great inconvenience, and to go to a tavern, which is during the sitting of the House a scene of confusion, is to me the Devil; a lodging with my horses in a stable is much preferable.

My best compliments to Mrs. Winslow & family, and believe me,

Truly yours

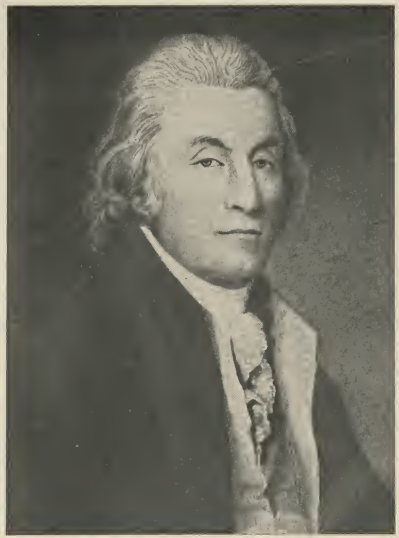
Geo. Leonard.

Seat of Government at Fredericton.

[Note. In the rough draft of the letter written by Edward Winslow to Gregory Townsend, dated at Kingsclear Jan. 17, 1793, which follows, there is the following sentence through which Winslow has drawn his pen. It no doubt contains a statement of fact. W. O. R.]

"The establishment of the seat of Government at this place, [meaning Fredericton], originally gave offence to the merchants at St. John, and they grumble yet. Whenever the citizens have a fair opportunity they give little specimens of their spite—but it is not very distressing. We have had a recent instance of it with respect to Chipman who has lost his election in the City."

*Ward Chipman was defeated largely on account of his advocacy of Fredericton as the site of the capital of the province. After his defeat in St. John he was elected as a representative of the county of Northumberland—not Westmorland, as Mr. Leonard had anticipated.



SIR JOHN WENTWORTH, BART.
Lieut.-Gov'r of Nova Scotia.
[From the oil painting in Government House, Halifax, N. S.]

Edward Winslow to Gregory Townsend.

Kingsclear, 17th January, 1793.

D'r Townsend,—Thank you for yours of the 3d ultimo, which was delivered me by Col. Whyte who arrived safe after some perils. The Colonel gives an animated description of the society at Halifax & of the hospitable reception he met with particularly at the Government House & at yours. I have had several tete-a-tetes with him & am not yet tired of listening to a string of anecdotes which are particularly interesting because they concern a circle of friends for whom I have a most cordial esteem. I have also been highly gratified in hearing of the harmony and prosperity which seems to prevail in your province. These are the necessary consequences of vigorous & extensive liberality in a Chief Magistrate. Factions cannot easily interrupt the tranquillity of a Government with Wentworth at its head. The Devil must borrow some qualities which he has not generally credit for before he can prevail, even on the worst of mankind, to oppose measures which are evidently dictated by genuine patriotism and disinterested benevolence.

Our province goes on in the old way slowly but tolerably sure. The inhabitants gradually extend their cultivation and we begin to feel the benefit of our exertions. We have good markets in the towns, and the Farmers live comfortably. One arrangement, however, I think we shall have cause to regret—our Gentlemen have all become potato planters and our shoemakers are preparing to legislate. If the operations of the latter do not turn out more profitably than those of the former we shall certainly have a damn'd bad system.

For my own part, I continue to bustle through thick and thin, rather out of my element in a country where activity is unfashionable and a spirit of enterprise is either called by the name of enthusiasm, or blasted in the bud by being imputed to a romantic disposition.

My two annual comforts a child and a fit of the Gout return invariably. They came together this heat and, as Forrest used to say, made me as happy as if the Devil had me. The Boy is a fine fellow (of course) and makes up the number nine now living. My old friend Mrs. Hazen about the same time produced her nineteenth. I've one boy,* Townsend, that I want to consult my friends about. I sent him to England to save him from perdition—but I could not afford to keep him there. He returned to me accomplished beyond my expectation—a good classical scholar, a good writer, &c, but he had acquired ideas which ill accorded with my situation. It was in vain I tried to reconcile him to the Country† [The remainder of this letter wanting.]

*Daniel Murray Winslow, his eldest son.
†That is New Brunswick.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax 25th March, 1793.

My dear Sir,—I rejoice with you in the addition to your family, for "happy is the man &c"—and, may your family be the most perfect verification of the declaration is our sincere wish. We accept the office of Sponsors with great pleasure, and I am particularly obliged in the name you kindly propose. Permit me to request, if you & Mrs. Winslow have no objection, that the name may be added John Frances Wentworth in imitation of my Son's, who was named Charles Mary, by desire of his Sponsors Lord and Lady Rockingham,* whose surnames are Wentworth.

Our good friend Mr. Townsend came in to the Cell just as I received your letter inclosing one to him. We immediately consulted upon your reference to us about your oldest son going into the Navy; and both agree that it is a measure we cannot recommend to the son of our friend. For these, among other reasons. He must have an allowance of 25 Guineas per annum for six years at least, perhaps ten. If in that time he is lucky he may obtain a Lieutenancy, in which he may possibly remain on half pay the rest of his life. You are sensible my dear friend it is not merit alone that will promote a man in the Service & it every day grows more difficult. Indeed there are instances of success—as Capt. Coffin†—but he is of a family that have a run of good fortune not to be calculated upon. I should not be surprised if he or any of that family were made Chancellors or Archbishops.

Such being the prospect rationally to look forward to, is it not against all good sense to embrace it. On the contrary, if the young man prefers a Sea life; if he were my own Son, I would put him into the Merchant's Service, where his talents and education will make him easy and independent in much less time than he can hope to be a Lieutenant upon which he may half starve all the rest of his life—An instance before us! Judge Brenton put his son into the Navy five or six years since, has always been distressed to keep him along & has no hopes of promotion. Wm. Taylor put his two sons into the Merchants Service—they are both in easy circumstances, very respectable in the community, and in progress to make good fortunes—while young Brenton, with equal talents & education is a Midshipman without a shilling, and living infinitely harder than either of the others ever have done.

I can get your son on to a Quarter deck. It will incur the expence before named, for no Capt. will take a young Gent. unless an annuity is stipulated, and they are certainly right, for they cannot live upon their pay. One quarter of the annual expence in the Merchant Service will in two or three years make him in easy circumstances and in seven or eight years he may live on shore as a Merchant of respectability.

*This reference gives the clue to origin of the name of the first station on the I. C. R. out of Halifax; it is called "Rockingham," and is in the vicinity of the old Prince's Lodge, or Friar Lawrence's Cell, to which Sir John Wentworth also refers above.

†He was a brother of John Coffin, and became an admiral with the title of Sir Isaac Coffin, Baronet. He entered the navy in 1773, and died in England in 1840 at the age of 80 years.

I have honestly given you my advice, and will be cordially friendly to your son, whenever in my power, which way soever you may determine. [Remainder of this letter wanting.]

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

Saturday Eve'g, 20 April, 1793.

My dear Winslow,—The Packet from Annapolis is this moment arrived in which came Straton from Halifax. I have not yet seen him but understand the news to be that Governor Wentworth has orders to raise a Regiment in that Province, of which our Beverley Robinson is to be Lieutenant Colonel, and that our Governor is to raise a Regiment in this Province of which Coffin* is to be Lieutenant Colonel, and that the Governors have the appointment of the other officers. How much of this is true you will immediately find out, but presuming the intelligence not to be entirely without foundation I seize the moment to suggest whether I could not obtain the Paymastership of the Regiment in this Province. It lies of course in the first instance with the commanding officer and I should suppose the Governor would have no objection. Your office I should imagine would of course revive. Don't let Paddock be over-looked as the Surgeon of the Reg't here at any rate. The 65th, I understand, are to go immediately from Halifax, where transports are now ready to take them in for the West Indies. It is supposed the war will be the most serious one the nation was ever engaged in. It is supposed that there are many affected with the French Politics both in England and Ireland. Governor Wentworth has published that he is ready to grant letters of marque to any body that will take them against the common enemy. I have not time to say one word more. Sat Verb. Sap. let me hear from you as soon as possible how all these things are to be. Adieu.

Ever sincerely yours,

W. C.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

[April, 1793.]

My dear fellow,—It is known before this line to you that your intelligence with respect to Coffin was a mistake & that Barclay is the man appointed to the New Brunswick Regiment. An Exchange will be attempted, & Robinson will command the regiment here, but at present he can assume no authority. This circumstance has deranged me, & I'm afraid (altho' Robinson speaks with the utmost affection for you on all occasions) that there is a natural affection which will bias him with respect to the Paymaster's appointment; in short I apprehend that his Brother will be the man.

*Colonel John Coffin, however, did not receive a commission in the regiment, the position of colonel was assigned to Lieut. Gov. Carleton with the rank of brigadier general, and Beverley Robinson was gazetted lieut. colonel of the New Brunswick regiment, while Lieut. Colonel Samuel V. Bayard was given a like position in the Nova Scotia regiment.

I shall however see Murray—as he will be the ostensible commanding officer [pending the transfer], I mean that he should propose you to the General in his first interview. There is one chance—Robinson will owe the exchange (if 'tis effected) to the General's interference—Morris Robinson is to be a Captain & I suspect the General may not incline to let 'em monopolise. * * *

Previous to the receipt of your letter I mentioned Paddock to the General. He said that he had very recently been instrumental in obtaining an appointment for him—that he felt himself pledged in some degree for his performance of the duties of it—that he considered it as a permanent situation & peculiarly advantageous to Paddock because it enabled him to remain at St. John—that it was directly incompatible with an appointment in this regiment, which must render his personal residence uncertain, besides (he added) "I am obliged to take the several officers from the half pay list and Doctor Paddock is not at present on that List." From these circumstances I conclude that Paddock will not get it. * * *

Ever yours

Ed. Winslow.

Lieut. Governor Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

[Abstract.]

Governor Wentworth writes to Col. Winslow in April, 1793. He asks whether Governor Carleton confines himself to six companies in his Reg't, and whether of these six the field officers have each a company. He has himself been advised to give five Captain's and one Capt. Lieut's commission. The Lieut. Col's & Major's companies to be commanded by a Lieutenant. If there should be only six companies of 100 men each they will require 2 Lieutenants and an Ensign each.

He complains that the Brig. Gen'l in Nova Scotia declines to supply from the Barrack stores and he is obliged in consequence to purchase, "at "an enormous war price, while the same things are perishing in the stores "bought at low peace price. What name has your Regiment and what "Regimentals? This is called the Kings Nova Scotia Regiment—red, "faced with blue, and gold lace."

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

Sussex Vale, 20 May, 1793.

My dear Friend,—Nothing could have given us more pleasure than the arriving of your son here yesterday with Mr. Hazen. My fears were that your delicacy would have prevented the satisfaction that Mrs. Leonard and myself promised ourselves in the care of that little fellow; be assured my dear Winslow, that we do not anticipate nor form one idea of any trouble he will or can give us, as such will be the rules and discipline he will naturally fall into with our children, and which I think will not be unpleasant to him, that we shall not have him on our minds only as a pleasing object belonging to our friend, improving in his education* under the steady attention of Mr. Arnold and Morton.† Mrs. Leonard has examined his little kit and finds it well stored with every thing necessary. He will be provided with a box for his clothes and the charge of it given to him, as we do with our children, and with the same instructions that everything in it is to be in good order when wanted for use. Mr. Tom has amused himself today with Edward‡ in seeing the sheep washed, neither of whom could remain spectators long without sharing in the pleasure of being in the water and by dipping and plunging the poor lambs in. Tomorrow he will enter the school and begin his acquaintance with the little lads and lasses of the Vale. Among other strange things shewn him by the children was the mill; he stood some time and examined it, and then wisely asked where the water was that was to give it motion; this of course produced a rude laugh among the little rogues, but they soon informed him that the wind answered that purpose. He begins to think he is among a strange and whimsical set of people as he has since been shewn another mill for threshing of grain by a horse. This is a work that will call forth the attention of the House of Assembly at their next meeting to reward the Inventor of

*An academy was established at this time by the Reverend Oliver Arnold at Sussex Vale. A prospectus was issued and printed in the newspapers under date of March 16, 1793. It states:—"The accommodations will be in readiness "on the 1st of May next for the reception of any young gentleman who may be "sent to the said school, where he will be taught reading and writing, English "grammar, mathematics and natural philosophy, surveying, navigation and "geography; also the Latin and Greek languages." The prospectus states further that "good accommodations will be provided in decent houses," and that "the whole expense for the English scholars, including boarding, lodging, "washing and tuition will amount only to £18 currency per annum."

Edward Winslow sent his son Tom there to be educated.

†Elkanah Morton came to New Brunswick from Cornwallis, N. S. He taught the white children at Sussex as S. P. G. school master and was also preceptor of the Indian academy. He left Sussex and went to Digby, N. S., where he was judge of probate and held other offices. See his letter under date January 27, 1807. He was quite lame, having had a leg shot off at "General Muster." He died at Digby in 1848, aged 87 years. He was grandfather of Finnemore E. Morton, M. P. P., of Sussex, N. B.

it, a Mr. Moore,* at Maugerville, who presented it to the House the last winter for a reward for the model; their brains at that time having been filled with matters of much less consequence neglected the poor man, and in his despondency I gave him a guinea for it and told him that I would try the experiment if the cost did not succeed £30 and brought it off. To give it a fair chance I have set to work on it one of the best millwrights in America, a Mr. Robinson from Halifax, the person who built the famous mills at Dartmouth near that place, who has nearly completed it without the smallest doubt of its answering the full purpose for which it was intended by the ingenious Inventor. When we have the pleasure of the visit we promise ourselves from you, I flatter myself you will make such a report of it, that all your enterprising dashing farmers near you will have them erected immediately.

Such is the spirit and resentment of all the powers of Europe against the French, that nothing but a miracle can prevent the war ending soon, therefore my fears are that you and our friends will not have time to have that provision made that you are entitled to. You will rejoice with me when I inform you that my son is promoted to the rank of a Lieutenant and to the command of an armed cutter in the Channel of England, given by his patron Admiral McBride to give him an opportunity to distinguish himself, and sent on a special service for that purpose.

With Mrs. Leonard's best esteem and affection to Mrs. Winslow and family,

I am,

Yours truly and devotedly,

Geo. Leonard.

Edward Winslow to Governor Wentworth.

Kingsclear, 4th August, 1793.

I avail myself of the first moments leisure after my return to my own habitation to acknowledge the rec't of your Excellency's favor of the 22nd ulto., which was handed me at Digby by Capt. Bowater. * * *

How a rupture with the Americans will operate upon these provinces is not easy to conjecture. Accustomed to look upon the bright side of every thing that has a bright side to it, I cannot join those who think we are to be immediately ousted from our possessions and kicked to the Devil head over heels, altho' I think our situation is in some degree critical. It behooves those who steer to keep a sharp look out—your Excellency's Barque is among the foremost.

*James Moore here referred to was great grandfather of the writer of this note. He was a Loyalist from Newton, Long Island, a suburb of Brooklyn. He married a widowed daughter of Captain Samuel Hallett, and their eldest daughter, Maria Moore, married Samuel Carman of Lower St. Marys, York county. An old mahogany desk which James Moore brought from Long Island at the close of the Revolution is now in the writer's possession. It contains many historical papers collected in the last ten years. The journals of the house of assembly under date Feb. 26, 1793, record that "Major Murray by leave "presented a petition from James Moore stating that he had invented a machine "for threshing grain and praying some compensation might be awarded him "for the same, which was read and ordered to be referred to the committee of "supply."

From the complexion of the letters which I have lately seen from England I suspect our Government has too much confidence in the explicit declaration which has been made by the President of the States. It seems to be the opinion in England that the Faith of America is pledged not to violate the rules of neutrality, and that their Government is so efficient as to enable them to carry their decrees into execution, but in this I fear they reckon without their host.

Nothing of consequence happened here during my absence. The regiment goes on moderately. I have mustered but very few recruits since I returned. A Subaltern's party has been sent to each of the Upper-posts. The old and infirm have been selected for this purpose; the venerable Lt. Jenkins* commander at Presque-Isle and Lt. Chew† a crippled officer who was very badly wounded at the southward, commands at the Great Falls. The remainder of the Regiment are at this place (Fred'n), St. John and Passamaquoddy. The warrant for the subsistence to June is not yet completed owing to the difficulty of obtaining the stoppage certificates from the several Commissaries who have issued provisions to the Detachments. * * * * Our Contingent expenses have already, from building barracks, establishing forts, &c., amounted to a sum so large that it ought not to be increased. * * * I see no material inconvenience that can result to you from the want of a muster at present altho' with all due deference to General Ogilvie's sagacity, I think it would be more regular to muster and inspect the recruits as they join. This in former times had a good effect, because it prevented non-effective men from being entertained or subsisted for a time, and a great expence was thereby saved to Government. * * *

Oliver who was dismissed from office as sheriff of the county of St. John in 1791, and some years later re-appointed. He was sheriff and province treasurer at his decease in 1813. vessels which run occasionally between here and Halifax, by either of them your friend may have a passage to Arichat, or (as it is called on most of the new charts) Conway Harbour, from whence he can easily get by land or water to Sydney or any other part of Cape Breton. The passage money to Arichat by any vessel bound that way is generally four dollars, but if a vessel is chartered for the purpose they will be asking £10 for Sydney, or Arichat, for they are about the same distance from here. If Captain Rainsford* is here by the time you mention, the 10th of September, I can almost insure him a passage in a small schooner of ours bound to Halifax.

Every civility in my power will be shewn to Mr. Oliver. I should think that the emoluments of the several offices to which he is appointed would enable him to live comfortable. The bearer Malcolm White returns without delay, and should your friend resolve to take this route it will be a good opportunity for him to get so far, and such as we have Captain Rainsford, or any other of your friends coming this way, will be welcome to a share of until an opportunity offers for him to get along.

With much respect I am Sir,

Your most obedient serv't,

James Fraser.

*Captain Andrew Rainsford was receiver general of the province and barrack master at Fredericton. He died in 1820 at the age of 86 years. In a letter to General Rainsford, dated at St. Ann's, Oct. 10, 1786, Andrew Rainsford states that he came up the river to look for a place of settlement; had bought a small farm, and until he could build was allowed to lodge in the barracks. Andrew Rainsford's son, Captain Charles Rainsford, is famed for his mid-winter march on snowshoes in a blinding snow storm from the lower end of Lake Temisquata to the St. Lawrence, a distance of fifty miles, returning the next day with a crew of men and provisions for his famishing comrades. Andrew Rainsford's youngest daughter, Jane Caroline, married in 1823 J. F. W. Winslow, a son of Judge Winslow, and first sheriff of the county of Carleton.

*Joseph Lee of New Jersey was a zealous Loyalist. He was confined in jail at Trenton, July 1776, for disaffection to the whigs and fined £100. He was gazetted captain in the 6th battalion of the New Jersey Volunteers December 15, 1776. At the peace in 1783 he came to St. John in command of the second New Jersey Volunteers. He served with much gallantry in the campaigns in Georgia and the Carolinas. He settled at Kingsclear, where he was a magistrate and prominent person. Some further information respecting him will be found in the New Brunswick Historical Society's Collections, vol. 1, p. 45.

†Gerhardus Clowes of Hampstead, Long Island, was gazetted a lieutenant at the organization of DeLancey's 3d battalion and rose to the rank of captain. He came to this province at the close of the war in 1783 and settled at Oromocto, where his descendants still reside. He was a man of good education, descended from an old Derbyshire family. He was killed by a fall from his horse in 1798.

‡James French was captain in the 1st battalion of Gen. DeLancey's brigade. He served with distinction in the campaigns in Georgia and the Carolinas; settled in York county and died at his house on the Nashwaak, August 18, 1820, in his 75th year. In an obituary we read:—"His benevolence endeared him to "all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and it might be questioned "whether his friends or the poor most effectually felt the good effect of his "open hand and his liberal heart. At his house the wearied traveller, the old "friend, and the friend of yesterday found the best table, the best bed and the "heartiest welcome." As a magistrate he discharged his duties with cheerfulness; as a practical farmer and a good neighbor he was excelled by few.

Captain Daniel Lyman to Edward Winslow.

London, Jany. 2, 1794.

My dear Friend ;— I beg you will give the inclosed to Hedden* or Clopper†.

I still continue the same intentions as mentioned in my last letters of coming out in the March packet, or in some man of war, if one should sail before that time.

I came out with the hopes of enjoying the Company, or any other appointment that the General may have intended for me, & am only sorry that it was not in my power to have been there before, but I hope I shall not be too late.

The Ship Rashleigh, which sailed the 14th of Oct. from Portsmouth, returned to Falmouth the 14th of Dec'r after having experienced repeated gales of wind and bad weather, and lost her sails &c. She is now repairing there, & will sail again when ready.

Mr. Watson returned three days ago from the army in Flanders, but I have not been able to see him yet.

Colo. Small is appointed Lt. Gov'r & Commander in Chief at Guernsey, and went for thence a few days since, with whom I might have had an appointment, but I have from the beginning determined against everything that should detach me from New Brunswick.

I go in a few days to Ghent upon some business which will take me about ten days, after which I shall count every moment till I leave this country for New Bruns'k. * * *

I hope you will see me with the March dispatches, & that we shall long enjoy together the happiness of New Bruns'k air, and its other comforts which this country wants.

Adieu & God bless you,

D. L.

*Isaac Hedden was gazetted lieutenant and adjutant of the 5th battalion New Jersey Volunteers, March 1. 1777. In 1780 he was doing service with the light infantry company of his corps. He was clerk of the house of assembly and filled other important positions. Records are extant in the government offices written in his beautifully clear and elegant hand. He was for some years clerk of the peace for York county. He died in February, 1802, in his 43d year.

†Garret Clopper, born in New York in 1756. In September, 1780, he was quarter-master in the New York Volunteers. He was commissioned ensign May 1, 1781, and promoted lieutenant subsequently. At the peace in 1783 he came to Fredericton, where he married Jan. 27, 1791, Penelope Miller, daughter of Colonel Stephen Miller. Garret Clopper was thus a connection of the Winslow family by his wife, who was Edward Winslow's cousin. He was for many years registrar of deeds and wills for the county of York. He died July 26, 1823, at the age of 67 years. See for further particulars his memorial under date April 13th, 1808, in this book.

Mather Byles Jr. to Sarah Winslow.

Grenada, 15th February, 1794.

My dear Sally,—I employed myself before dinner in writing a very serious solemn sort of a letter to Penelope, but as no Gentleman has any business to be serious or solemn at nineteen minutes and a half before nine in the evening, I flatter myself I am at liberty to write you anything which comes uppermost. * *

I should have wondered, no doubt, at your early frost, but should have examined the date thro' a candle to see that Pen had not altered it, for you know how mischievous she is and with Capt. Sproul for her assistant there is no telling what might have happened.

I don't pretend to answer your letters by this opportunity, because there will be another next month by Mr. Taylor for Halifax and a single vessel runs great risque of privateers—and I have already told Penelope that I am well and happy.

I hear with heartfelt pleasure that you enjoy good health and still more that you possess that cheerfulness of mind which makes health a blessing. I may one day test by observation how far you speak accurately of yourselves in this respect. Chipman has proposed when I come to give me up his house and remove to the Mill but in order to give him leisure to transport himself to his new habitation, I have been proposing that he should get me some snug box to pop my head into in the interim and that he should place my room under your particular charge that it may be well aired when I arrive. You know my dear Sally if I was to catch cold on my arrival it must necessarily retard my being married — an event which you seem positively to have decided upon.

Mr. Coffin sends his love to you and I send mine. Every good wish too to the Colonel and the family at Kingsclear. Good night — this is a late hour for me who seldom hear the clock strike nine.

Most affectionately yours

M. Byles.

* * I most heartily congratulate you on your family's recovery from the terrible disorder with which you have been so severely visited*. You have been kept alive through astonishing fatigue, hope you will long enjoy a proportionate share of health within your walls. Ere this you are freed from Quarantine and let out again. * * * Your friends all sympathize in your sufferings and rejoice in the pleasing prospect of health returning to your habitation. * * *

But to another subject. Being at length satisfied that our worthy unfortunate friend Marston was really dead, I the other day opened his chest. The uppermost thing was a tin-case enclosing some papers all of which I now send you. I opened the cover containing his Will in the presence of Mr. Hazen and Coffin. By it you will find you are his sole executor. Poor fellow, his fate was hard* and he must have been most vexatiously disappointed at the amount of his compensation†. There are besides his private books and papers, a few articles of trifling value and his surveying instruments, all of which are subject to your disposal. In respect to the debt to me for cash, which I have loaned him since coming to this country, he some time ago wrote requesting I would proceed against him as an absconding debtor and sell his property at Miramichi to pay myself. I took no steps but writing to Delesdernier for an account of the property in his hands, but never received an answer. I don't suppose it is worth while going there to look after it, as I understand Delesdernier is but a slippery chap. There are some creditors I believe at Halifax from a letter to Mr. Robie, which you will see in the last books of his journal, dated July, 1787, just before he left this. I don't know of any here, but myself, except McCall and Codner. You will determine however what is best to be done, if anything. As to myself I have long time ceased to expect anything, unless the good fellow had met with that good fortune which he had so richly merited.

Lieutenant Adam Allan‡ to Edward Winslow.

Presque Isle, 1st July, 1794.

Sir;—Inclosed is the Monthly Return of the Garrison at this place. It is perhaps expected that I should report any occurrence of a public nature that may happen in the vicinity of my post; I have to acquaint you, for His Excellency's information, that several people under the direction of a Surveyor from the States, did some days ago plant a stake on Meductic

*Benjamin Marston, after he went to England in 1787, had a hard struggle for existence, and in 1792 cast in his fortunes with a company organized to effect a settlement on the Island of Bulama, twenty miles from Sierra Leone. He accompanied the expedition in the capacity of surveyor. Shortly after their arrival the deadly African fever seized them, and of their company of 275 persons only a few survived and these abandoned the enterprise and returned home. Among those who died was Marston, on 10th August, 1792.

†The compensation amounted only to £105.

‡Lieutenant Adam Allan served with honor in the Queen's Rangers. He was a Scotchman by birth and quite a number of interesting particulars relating to him will be found in the N. B. Hist. Soc. Collections at pp. 36, 37. Lieut. Allan was the progenitor of many of those of his name in York county. He lived at the mouth of the Pokiok, where he died in 1823.

Point* as a boundary between those States and his Majesty's Dominions in America. This transaction, however trivial in itself, and little as it deserves to be noticed, has nevertheless alarmed the settlers and increased their fears to that degree that several who are settled threatened to quit their improvements, and many who had intended moving up this way have in consequence declined coming. I shall direct the stake to be taken up, as I think it is showing too much sanction to the act to suffer it to remain.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your most obed't & very hum. serv't,

A. Allan. Lieut. Kings N. B. Reg't.

Sheriff W. S. Oliver† to Edward Winslow.

Miramichi, 12th July, 1794.

Dear Sir ;—This comes to you by an Indian who is charged with a memorial from the Indians in these parts to the Governor setting forth their distressed situation and asking relief. As it appears to me very probable that in consequence of their situation being made known that something will be done for them by the Society for Propagating the Gospel‡ among the Indians, and that some person here will be appointed to manage that business in this place, I request your interest in the matter. The

*The surveyor here referred to was Samuel G. Titcomb. He acted under instructions of the government of Massachusetts to survey a due north line from the source of the St. Croix. He decided upon Skiff Lake, near Canterbury Station, as the source of the river, and ran a line thence due north which came out upon the St. John river just below the old Meductic fort. He coolly announced to the inhabitants that this was the boundary line. The Royal Gazette publishes an extract of a letter, dated at Fredericton, June 19, 1794:—"The "Americans have been running their lines. A surveyor and four men have "made their appearance about fifty miles above this place. Have planted a "large post on the bank of the river and have proceeded on with their sur-"vey."

†Probably William Sandford Oliver, Jr., of Boston. His grandfather, Andrew Oliver, was at one time lieut. governor of Massachusetts. William S. Oliver, Sr., was sheriff of the county of St. John in 1784. He was dismissed in 1791 mainly on account of having made objections to the free inspection of the county jail by the grand jury. He published a pamphlet in defence of his conduct, a copy of which is in the Toronto public library. The younger W. S. Oliver was a grantee of Parr Town. He left the province about 1806. There is a possibility that Sheriff Oliver of Northumberland may have been the ex-sheriff of St. John. See note under date 23d August, 1793.

‡This society is commonly spoken of as the "New England Company." Its operations were transferred to New Brunswick after the close of the Revolution. The company on June 14, 1786, appointed as its commissioners in New Brunswick Lieut. Governor Thomas Carleton, Chief Justice Ludlow, Hons. Isaac Allen, Jonathan Odell, George Leonard, Ward Chipman, Jonathan Bliss, William Paine and John Coffin. The original commission on parchment with the imposing red seal is now in the possession of the writer of these notes. When Dr. William Paine left the province Edward Winslow was chosen as his successor on the board. Further information concerning the company and its work in New Brunswick will be found in Edward Winslow's correspondence. See under "Notes on New Brunswick History," by Ed. Winslow in the year 1804.

appointment may be of some service to me by employing my leisure hours and perhaps some small allowance may be made therefor. Mr. Fraser, the Presbyterian minister,* held such an appointment with a handsome allowance, and since he has left this place, no one has had it.

I sincerely thank you for your friendship which has appeared on many occasions. My appointments here fall very short of my expectations. The Custom House business is not worth this year more than one third what it was known to be and very little business is done here at present. We are in hopes the war will soon be at an end and that a peace may be the means of restoring us to a more flourishing situation than ever.

Believe me to be with the greatest truth and sincerity

Your most devoted friend, etc.

[1] Lieut. Gov. Thomas Carleton had now attained the rank of major general. Many of those who received commissions in the King's N. B. Regiment have already been referred to in these notes. Short sketches of the officers of the regiment will also be found in Jonas Howe's article on the King's N. B. Regiment in the collections of the N. B. Historical Society, p. 13, et supera. In the list of officers on the opposite page only those not already mentioned are referred to in these notes.

[2] Charles Earle, M. D., in the Revolution was a surgeon in the 2nd battalion of the New Jersey Volunteers, commanded by Lieut. Col. John Morris. He was a resident of Fredericton from the time of his arrival in 1783, and his house was the first built by the Loyalists. He lived at the lower end of the town, near Mill Creek, and in early days the limits of Fredericton were commonly said to be "from Dr. Earle's to Phillis Creek." Dr. Earle was surgeon in the King's New Brunswick Regiment and afterwards held a similar position in the N. B. Fencible regiment.

[3] Thomas Emerson, M. D., was assistant surgeon, or surgeon's mate, in the Royal Fencible American Regiment during the Revolution. He filled the like position in the King's N. B. Regiment, and later in the war of 1812, was appointed surgeon's mate in the 104th regiment. He practised for a time at St. John but more extensively in Fredericton. See references to Dr. Emerson in the late Lieut. Col. W. T. Baird's "Seventy Years of New Brunswick Life," p. 30.

[4] Peter Clinch was gazetted lieutenant and adjutant of the Royal Fencible Americans May 15, 1776, and at the close of the war a captain. He was a native of Ireland and belonged to a good family; he was also a good fighter. At the peace in 1783 he settled at St. George in Charlotte Co., and may be considered as the pioneer of that place. For many years he represented Charlotte county in the house of assembly. His services in the King's American Regiment on the western frontier of the province were important. He died in February, 1816, aged 63 years.

[5] Anthony Allaire was born in Westchester county, New York. He was gazetted a lieutenant in the Loyal American Regiment in 1776. He married in 1794, Mary, eldest daughter of James Simonds of Portland Point. His daughter married Lieut. John Robinson of the 10th regiment of foot, who was the grandfather of T. Barclay Robinson of St. John and J. DeLancey Robinson of Douglas, York county. Anthony Allaire is 1801 succeeded Joseph Lee as captain in the King's N. B. Regiment. He died in Douglas, York Co., in 1839, aged 84 years. During the war he kept a diary, and his account of the battle of King's Mountain has been reprinted in Dr. Lyman Draper's well known work.

[6] John Simonson was born on Staten Island, N. Y., and served through the war in the 4th battalion, New Jersey Volunteers, as a lieutenant. After coming to New Brunswick he was for several years S. P. G. schoolmaster at Maugerville, under Rev. J. Beardsley's supervision. From 1793 to 1800 he was a lieutenant in the King's N. B. Regiment. He died at Maugerville in 1816 and his family afterwards removed to Jacksonville, Carleton Co., N. B.

[7] James Eccles was in Sept., 1781, an ensign in the Prince of Wales American regiment. He was promoted lieutenant April 18, 1783. He seems to have been an efficient officer of the King's New Brunswick Regiment, and was selected to command a detachment of picked men that in 1799 were sent to Halifax to be drilled under the eagle eye of H. R. H. the Duke of Kent. They were afterwards to endeavor to bring the rest of the corps up to the same standard of efficiency in drill and discipline. Lieut. Eccles is buried in the old grave yard in Fredericton. He died in 1839 at the age of 83 years.

[8] John Ness served as lieutenant and adjutant in the Prince of Wales American regiment. He was a Yorkshire man by birth and a good soldier. He was an alderman of St. John in its early days. He died Dec. 27, 1799, and was buried by the regiment with military honors.

[9] Xenophon Jouett during the Revolution was an ensign in the New Jersey Volunteers. He was one of the first settlers at Fredericton. In 1789 he was sheriff of York county and continued 20 years in office. For nearly 50 years he was gentleman usher of the black rod in the house of assembly. He was succeeded in this office by his son.

[10] Lieutenant Malcolm Wilmot was born in 1771 in Rhode Island. He was for many years a member of the house of assembly for the county of Westmorland.

Jonathan Odell to Edward Winslow.

8th September, 1794.

Dear Sir ;—By some accident the paper on which I had noted the degrees of cold, of which your friend inquires, is mislaid and I fear lost. I have hunted for it in vain; but you may assure your friend, Mr. Townsend, that I did see the mercury so low as 32 Degrees of Reaumur below freezing point, which is equal to 40 degrees below 0, or 72 degrees below freezing on Farenheit's scale. I was not satisfied without returning several times to convince myself that I was not mistaken, and I perfectly recollect that it was but a very little after sunrise that I observed the mercury beginning to rise in the tube. That the mercury had not been congealed I cannot assert but I do not think it had. This however is the degree at which it is said to free in Russia. This was the only time that I ever observed the mercury lower than 26 degrees of Reaumur, equal to 26 1-2 degrees of Farenheit. The highest I have ever seen it in this country, and that once only, 28th June 1789, was 97 degrees of Farenheit, but I have repeatedly seen it up to 94 degrees. The extremely cold morning above mentioned was most perfectly clear, serene, and calm, and in a very few hours the cold abated and the day was one of the finest I have ever seen.

I am sincerely yours,

Jona. Odell.

I presume Hailes has communicated the order relative to the reduction of the New Brunswick Regiment. I think this order completes the military history of New Brunswick, and I think an obedience to it without remonstrance or without a single exertion to prevent the effects is a finishing stroke to a —— character*. Had such an order gone to the other province—the little Gentleman would have thrown his commission to the Captain D. Lyman to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, May 11, 1795.

My dear Colo.—* * I like N. B'k, that is the County of York, and I am disgusted with Halifax, and nothing makes my situation tolerable here but the conceiving myself as having been neglected in the arrangements there. * * I am extremely rejoiced to hear that Glenie* & Agnew have quarrelled; the saying will be well verified there, When Rogues fall out &c. I shall watch with great eagerness for the publications in the St. John papers and hope to see those disturbers of the peace of society well lashed.

I have painted the conduct, speeches and probable views of Gl—— and his friends in the strongest point of light to the Gov'r and Prince† His R. H. expressed a pity that a man of Mr. G—— abilities should be so prone to disturbing Government, so I see that his friend Stratton had taken care to make the favourable impressions of commisseration on the mind of the Prince.

It gives me great pleasure to learn of the mark of attention in Government to our Province of N. B. in the money voted, as well as the settlement of the boundary line so favorably to us. It is exactly part of the plan I pointed out in the written communication I made to Ld. Hawkesbury & the Secretary of State, that when we made a treaty of commerce or gave up the western posts, all which the Americans were very anxious to accomplish, then to have the above said line fixed to our wishes.

It does not seem to be clear yet, from what the Prince mentioned to me yesterday, that it is determined whether he stays here or not. He said "if I should remain here and have the command," why then he would have the posts go so & so—that he would endeavour to have them go quicker, & proposed to alter their route in this Province. The officers of his reg't say that the Prince wishes to go home, but that the king will not allow it. * * *

Yours D. Lyman.

Colonel Winslow's Account of the Drowning of Dr. Cooke & His Son; May 23rd, 1795.

An event, of which you have perhaps heard, has fairly struck this Society dumb with grief. The Parson of this Parish, Mr. Cooke, was about 72 years old—a man endeared to us all by many amiable qualities. His House was literally a seat of Hospitality, and he was one of the few old men who could indulge in mirth without lessening the importance of his own character. If at times he rather exceeded the bounds of what is called discretion it was obviously the result of goodness of heart & an anxiety to give pleasure to others. His manners were peculiarly conciliatory & indeed polished and his sentiments were perfectly correct & Honorable. He was just such a father as you would love to see; for his children, altho' respectful in the highest possible degree, were under no restraint in his presence. Had this worthy old man died in his bed surrounded by his friends we should have lamented his loss very sincerely.

His son Michael was a young man of a particularly fine cast of character—he was well educated, a good figure, and sufficiently acquainted with the rule of politeness to carry him thro' every company public & private with credit and even with eclat. With these superficial accomplishments, at a very early age he commenced Farmer, and immediately exhibited such exemplary proofs of industry, steadiness & good judgment as could not fail to excite admiration. The whole care of the property devolved upon him & by his personal exertions he contributed essentially towards the support of the Family. Besides these qualities he evinced the most manly public spirit upon all occasions, and in private life he was a most perfect pattern of obedience & affection—devoted to his Father—tenderly & delicately kind to his sisters.

On Saturday the Father came over* to attend a funeral; the son (as was his usual practice) accompany'd him in his Birch Canoe. They staid & dined at Major Hailes' with a select party of friends. The evening became rainy & dark, but the old gentleman could not be prevailed on to remain on this side, & they set off. By some accident the Canoe upset & both Father & Son were drowned†. There can be no doubt but that the young man lost his own life in his endeavor to save his father, as 'tis very credibly reported that a voice was heard calling "Hold on, for God's sake hold on!" It was supposed to be from some raft & no notice was taken of it. The presumption is that the old gentleman had put up his umbrella to shelter him from the rain & that a flaw of wind turned 'em over.

*Rev. Dr. Cooke, although rector of Fredericton, had his residence near the Nashwaak on the other side of the river St. John.

†A tablet in St. Anne's church at Fredericton—formerly placed in the old parish church—records the unfortunate event.

The hats, umbrella, etc., were found the next morning. The Bodies are not yet discovered. I leave it for your own imagination to paint the distress which this most awful event has produced.

Now is there any fiction which the poetic fancy has invented to put our sensibility to the test more affecting than these awful solemn facts. I leave your own imagination to paint the distress of the unprotected daughters, etc.

Gregory Townsend to Edward Winslow.

Dear Colonel ;—I wrote three weeks ago of your son Murray's arrival & forwarded a letter from him. The Neptune sailed about 10 days ago for Quebec; Murray took a letter to our friend T. A. Coffin. * * *

I have now to thank you for your friendly letter of 29th which I communicated to Mrs Blowers, Catherine, &c. We sympathize with you and your good sisters who, after paying the tribute which nature demands on being deprived of so dear a Connection, have to look back with a flow of gratitude for the long continuance of so worthy a Parent to an uncommon long life without any infirmities of age, a blessing which not one family in 10,000 experience*. Miss Prince's letter gave us the first notice of your loss and the melancholy end of Mr. Cooke. Nothing can be more affecting than the particular circumstances which deprived a worthy family of an amiable Father & Brother in one unfortunate moment.

I most sincerely lament the death of the Father, who I knew and highly respected; it is impossible to withhold a tear on so very affecting an event which must have overwhelmed his Parish with deep distress. * *

My best respects to your family & sisters, Mrs. Blowers will write. I am with sincere friendship,

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

Thursday Morning, 13 Aug. [1795].

My dear Winslow ;—What we apprehended took place yesterday morning between Leonard and that vagabond Sower*. You recollect the scoundrel's parading so insolently with his enormous club, endeavoring to throw himself in Leonard's way at every corner; this he continued with encreased effrontery every time Leonard was to be seen in the street; I continued the dissuasions we had so successfully inforced against any notice being taken of the Bear; tho' I confess my blood boiled to see him chastized. I dared not mention the circumstance of his coming up to my Gate on Saturday with Burdett, which you must recollect, as I knew this would put Leonard beyond all restraint. About 7 o'clock yesterday morning, Leonard on his way to my house stop'd in the market place opposite the Coffee-House to speak to Col. DeVeber, Sower came strutting by with his club. Leonard coolly accosted him, and asked him "how he dared to continue such insolence ? told him he was conscious of his own superiority in a contest, and therefore had wished and endeavored to avoid him, as he (Sower) must have perceived; that he must be sensible that he most richly deserved chastisement, and that his effrontery and impudence had now become so intolerable that he, Leonard, could no longer delay the application of it." To all this Sower was silent, Leonard immediately gave him a blow; in an instant the stick which Leonard held broke like a pine stem. With the piece left in his hand he with admirable dexterity disarmed Sower by striking him upon the sword arm, seized Sower's club and with it banged him most handsomely, knocked him down two or three times and, fearful of kicking him, sought for his fleshy shoulders and Back-side which resounded like a Wool Sack, Sower all this time screaming murder. After driving him across the market place into the Butcher's stalls for refuge to the great diversion of the surrounding populace, Leonard after another cool admonition left him and walked very moderately up to my house to breakfast, unhurt, with Sower's club in his hand. As soon as the poor Devil had recover'd he got a great cord-wood stick about three feet long and with it, looking like a Ghost, strutted about, vaunting that he was not afraid of Mr. Leonard, and declaring that he did not mean to look to the law for any redress. The expectations of the people were that he would attack Leonard the moment he appeared again in the street. About 11 o'clock the Bell was ringing for Church, I accompanied Leonard down the hill unarmed myself, Leonard having my walking stick in his hand. The moment we got in sight of the Coffee-House we saw Sower strutting at the corner, but by the time we had passed Murray's house he sneaked into the end door of the Coffee-house* fronting King-street, and we passed on to Church thro' Groups both of Gentlemen and Blackguards all of whom I believe enjoyed with us the scene, which I confess delighted me.

Sower did not appear after this, and last evening sneaked out of Town to take care of his bruised carcase, threatening as I am told to publish his account of the business and to challenge Leonard in the newspapers. This has ended Mr. Sower's visit to the City† which was merely to insult Leonard, and to make his boast of it in Kings County to forward his election, not imagining I believe that Leonard would think it worth while to notice him in the manner he did.

Anxious as we were to prevent the encounter I confess I am not sorry it has happened. I do not see what else could have been done without giving the villain an opportunity of making use of his insolence most vauntingly to forward his electioneering views; he certainly most richly deserved the punishment he received and I think it must effectually damn all his pretensions as a candidate.

I trust the most decided steps will be adopted to discountenance him by employing Ryan‡ in the service of Government hereafter, for he is and always has been the most seditious fire-brand in the Province. He has been expelled from the Lodge to which he belongs and ought to be an

*The "coffee-house" was built about the year 1789 on the corner of Prince William and King streets (where the Bank of Montreal now stands) by Charles McPherson. He sold it to Cody, long known as "the prince of caterers."

†Christopher Sower lived at this time at French Village in Kings county. He called his place "Brookville."

‡John Ryan was born in Rhode Island Oct. 7, 1761. When the colony was evacuated by the British he went to New York, being at the time a boy of sixteen, and entered as an apprentice in the printing office of John Howe, a Massachusetts Loyalist. John Howe was the father of the Hon. Joseph Howe and was himself king's printer in Nova Scotia. John Ryan was married (the Rev. John Sayre officiating) to Amelia Mott, while living in New York. He came to St. John after the close of the Revolutionary war and was a printer and newspaper owner. He succeeded Christopher Sower as king's printer, March 22, 1799. His son Michael Ryan in 1806 published the first newspaper printed in Fredericton. John Ryan afterwards removed to St. Johns, Newfoundland. See Lawrence's "Foot Prints," p. 98.

outcast from all Society. He is endeavouring to sow discontent in King's County and to counteract all the salutary regulations and the peaceful demeanor which Leonard and Coffin have with so much pains introduced among the people there, and the exertions of all good men will be necessary to counteract the nefarious and diabolical acts which such villains employ to effect their wicked purposes. But enough. I was anxious to give you an exact statement of what has taken place, as I suppose different reports will be circulated by the canaille.

The post will be off if I delay any longer assuring you that I am,

Ever most faithfully & affectionately,

Yours, W. Chipman.

Captain D. Lyman to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, Sept. 7, 1795.

My dear Colonel,—I have yours of the 21st ulto. by the last post. * *

I am exceedingly gratified at an account of your journey to Leonards as well as his affair with Sower. I remember your former letter of your expecting some newspaper publications; the denoument and catastrophe of which are very entertaining. I hope Leonard will not be entangled with a law suit in consequence.

It is distressing to hear that the vagabond Glenie is like to get in; it is really a pity that there is not enough good sense and Loyalty in the country to keep out a known and most notoriously violent Democrat & Jacobin. If I had been there and concerned in the election, I should not have scrupled to come forward boldly and asserted to the county that he was an avowed Democrat and that I would prove it.

It will be some gratification to me to hear that Agnew* loses the day; if he is out of the house Glenie may be managed. Had there been time enough to have qualified myself according to the new Bill I would have been persuaded to have come forward again just to have kept out such a man as Agnew. I hope somebody will recollect his speech last winter in Vanhorne's tavern.

I am sorry our friend Chipman will not get in. * * * I do not know who I am indebted to for the Gen'l's [Carleton] unfavorable disposition towards me, but I think there must be some reason besides his own natural dislike of exerting himself to serve any one. * * *

What will be my fate or my lot I know not, but I should prefer New Brunswick with £200 pr. annum to double in any other place, and we know that is little enough even with my small train. * * *

D. Lyman.

Captain Daniel Lyman to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, Oct. 5, 1795.

My dear Colonel ;—* * * I do not know when I have been so highly gratified as with your account of the close of the election and the fate of Agnew*. I shall now have some better hopes of the future assembly, although I see a number of staunch democrats among the number left, but Glenie without Agnew's assistance will sink to nought. I have read Glenie's damned and blasted pamphlet, what plausibility mixed with falsehood, appropriating to himself every political virtue, tho' only guided and instigated by the most infernal motives. For the good of the country I should pray this performance might be burnt by the hands of the common hangman, and himself sent to Botany Bay with brothers Margaret, Skirring [?] Muir, Palmer & others, they would all be well matched. * * *

D. Lyman.

Sir John said he would write you. I see he had one of Glenie's pamphlets, which he said was sent by a Mr. Read, but I believe at Glenie's instigation. His Excellency condemns it in toto.

Duke of Kent to Lieut. Governor Carleton.

Halifax, 10th June 1796.

Sir ;—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of three letters from your Excellency, two bearing date the 13th of April, & one the 16th of May.

Your Excellency's wishes for one thousand stand of arms being delivered from the ordnance stores here, for the use of the militia of the Province of New Brunswick, shall be punctually complied with. The ordnance storekeeper is already directed to ship them by the first favorable opportunity for St. John's. I am infinitely obliged to you for the permission you have granted to MacMullen & Granger of your Provincial Corps to join the Fusiliers, in lieu of two other men to be sent from hence. If you will direct those men to be sent to St. John's I will embrace the first opportunity that offers of sending a Sergeant round with the two men whom I mean to transfer in their stead, by which means the Serg't will be enabled to take charge of the others on his return. Your Excellency is extremely polite in explaining so fully your reasons for not appointing Edward Winslow to Jonathan Sewell†.

St. John, 27th Sept'r, 1796.

My dear Sir ;—In the absence of Mr. Chipman I consider it is a duty incumbent on me to inform you of the melancholy event which has taken place here. Your much respected father has been evidently declining for some time past, and about ten days ago he became so weak and debilitated as to be unable to rise from his bed. From that time the indefatigable Dr. Paddock constantly suggested his fears "that every day would be his last." He however survived till eight o'clock last evening, when he departed this life without a groan or a struggle.

It was with unutterable grief and concern that Mr. Chipman left the place while your father's situation was so critical, but his departure was unavoidable—the Commissioners,‡ Agent, Surveyors and their parties being in waiting for him at St. Andrews and the important business of the commission entirely suspended till his arrival.

Amidst the distress which the contents of this letter must naturally excite in the breasts of yourself and brother, it may be some small consolation to know that previous to Mr. Chipman's departure he gave the most particular directions to Dr. Paddock and myself in case the accident should happen in his absence. On Friday next your Father will be interred in the vault with Judge Putnam. Mr. Bliss and myself have claimed the right of attending as principal mourners. The pall will be supported by

*It was an extremely fortunate thing that the Duke of Kent did not have his way in this matter, otherwise the interests of New Brunswick would have been jeopardized. Ward Chipman managed the case before the boundary commission with singular ability and success; he was hard working and persistent. The folly of putting a comparatively feeble man into such a position merely because he was a "worthy old officer" is apparent.

†This letter is addressed to the younger Jonathan Sewell, then living in Quebec. In 1808 he was chief justice of Lower Canada, and after holding the position for thirty years retired on a pension of £1,000 sterling per annum. He was a law student for some time in Ward Chipman's office in St. John. He was a man of marked ability. His wife was a daughter of William Smith, the last chief justice of New York under the crown. She was the mother of 22 children, twelve of whom survived her.

‡The reference is to the boundary commissioners, at this time employed in the determination of the international boundary. Ward Chipman was the agent on behalf of Great Britain and conducted his case with great ability.

Col. Ludlow, Mr. Hazen, Mr. Wanton*, Mr. Leonard, Col. Billop†, and Col. DePeyster — and every other measure will be adopted which can tend to evince the respect due to his character.

Your mother is much exhausted by constant watchings, anxiety and fatigues, but her friends are uniting their endeavors to console and comfort her. Mrs. Chipman, who has been with her all the day, authorises me to say "that Mrs. Sewell is as composed as the nature of her situation will admit." Most sincerely do I condole with you for I also have lost a trusty and valuable friend. Believe me to be with cordial unabated regard & esteem,

Your faithful friend,

The Manor‡, November 1796.

News from afar, says the Royal Preacher, is like water to the thirsty Hart. We were setting rather humdrum by the fire-side on Friday evening when your very agreeable letter came to hand, the contents of which gave much pleasure.

I perfectly think with you about the great news you mention that was in circulation some days ago. It's pretty clear that Jourdain has been handsomely beaten, but as for Boonaparte's business I fear it wants confirmation. * * *

Your epistle had an immediate effect on my family; from being (as I said before) quite humdrum, all was cheerfulness. Now as that is really

*William Wanton, son of Governor Wanton of Rhode Island, was the first collector of customs at St. John, and held office for thirty years. He died in 1816 at the age of 82 years. His handsome monument is in the old burial ground at St. John. George Leonard's letter opposite shows that while in his judgment Mr. Wanton's policy relative to smuggling was reprehensible, that it nevertheless was popular. William Wanton's commodious two story dwelling stood at the corner of Duke and Germain streets, in St. John.

†Col. Christopher Billopp was a prominent man at Staten Island prior to the Revolution. His property was confiscated by the New York legislature. During the war he was quite a leading Loyalist. Lord Howe, Gen Kniphausen, Colonel Simcoe and others were frequently his guests. Some particulars respecting him are to be found in Lawrence's "Foot Prints," pp. 64, 65. He came to St. John at the close of the war, and in 1785 was elected a member of the first house of assembly. In 1797 he was appointed a member of the council. On the death of Governor Smyth in 1823, he claimed the post of administrator of government as senior member of the council, but the position went to Ward Chipman. Colonel Billopp appealed to the home government, who seem to have eventually decided that his claim was good. However, in the meantime Ward Chipman had died in office and Sir Howard Douglas had arrived as lieut. governor of the province, consequently the decision was of no benefit to Col. Billopp. One of his daughters married the Hon. Wm. Black and another became the wife of Rev. Dr. Willis, rector of Trinity church, St. John. John Bedell, Esq., who settled at Woodstock, was private secretary to Colonel Billopp during the war. Col. Billopp died in St. John in the year 1827, aged 90 years.

the case, and the nights are not yet at full length, I hope and expect, from your known humanity, that you will be so good as frequently to repeat the dose. * * * As you are not quite in the run of all our ways up here you can expect to hear of but little variety from me. All our crops of every kind are in. I have killed and salted up 1000 lbs. fine pork and have 700 more to kill. We have ploughed up more than twelve acres of land to be ready for next year. But you will say what the D—l's all that to me ? I answer by saying it will be something to you if you will do us the fav'r to come up here and partake of some our good things. Madam says no one shall be more welcome and so say I.

My best compliments to Miss Pen. and my dear Sally; tell the latter once more to take care of J. B. Mrs. Ellegood and Miss Saunders join me in best compliments to you, your good lady and Miss Mary. Your friend Sam begs his comp'ts to you and Ned. * * * I see what you say about the last year's interest, you may pay it to me when I come down to Court in Jan'y.

I have taken the liberty to send you a roasting piece of beef. I do not think you have seen better grass beef this season. Tell Madam when it comes on the table (if it is good) she is to do me the honor to drink my health. I have a good deal more to say to you but Barm is just setting off. Excuse this scrawl.

I remain, Dr. Sir,
Your affect. Friend,

Edward Winslow to Ephraim Spooner.

Boston, Aug't 17, 1797.

My good old friend,—I boast that I can bear disappointments as well as any man on earth, but I should be ashamed if all the vicissitudes I have experienced could have hardened my heart. At the present moment I feel a distress bordering upon weakness at the consideration that I cannot pay you a visit at Plymouth.

For months past I have been continually anticipating the pleasure of again taking by the Hand my venerable friend Col. Watson, my friend Lothrop & a great number of others—& your letter of the 7th increased my anxiety to see you & them.

Be assured that I feel very grateful for the expressions of friendship which it contains. Nay Sir, I feel more—I am soothed & flattered in the highest possible degree, by the consideration that when party animosities have subsided, and the affections have returned to their proper channels, those who were the companions of my early life remember me with esteem. I consider it as a testimony that (altho' eccentricities might have marked my youth) my general conduct among you is recollected with approbation. If there remains an individual in your society who (now the cause of contention is at an end) retains any rancour against me, I wish him no greater curse than to indulge it.

Public business obliges me to return to New Brunswick immediately. The Board with which I am concerned have adjourned to meet in the State of Rhode Island in June next. If I am not prevented by any untoward accident, I will be here a month before my time for the purpose of visiting my friends.

Remember me with the most cordial affection to Mrs. Spooner & family and to the whole circle of my friends, and believe me to be with unabated friendship & esteem,

Yours most sincerely,

Ed. Winslow.

Boundary Line.*

First find out the River Saint Croix, from whose source
A line that's extended due north in its course
Thro' the country will strike on the highlands which test
Of fam'd Nova Scotia the angle northwest—
Then westward along the said highlands extend it
To south of what streams with St. Lawrence are blended.
Thus let it proceed, till it meet in its course,
Connecticut's River's northwesternmost source—
Then down the said river until it arrive
At degrees of north latitude forty & five.
Due west in a line now its course it must take,
And strike a great stream from Ontario's Lake;
This bold rapid stream Cataraqui they call,
Which loses its name at the town Montreal.
This line then its progress far westerly makes Thro' four very famous & fresh water lakes,
These lakes with each other by streights are connected
All which by the line must be duly bisected—
Ontario, Erie and Huron—these name—
And wide spread Superior, west of the same,
The last mentioned lake the said line passes thro'
To north of Isle Royale and Phelipeaux too—
Proceeding still farther the same must be traced
Thro' Long Lake and Wood's Lake that lies to north west.

*This production is in Edward Winslow's hand writing, and appears to have been his own composition. It follows accurately the description of the boundary contained in the treaty of 1783.

Still westward it goes Mississippi to find,
Then down its great stream far to south let it wind
To latitude thirty and one it extends,
Then leaving this river to eastward it tends Till Apalalchicola meeting it winds
To the north, till the mouth of Flint-river it finds,
Thence east to the river St. Mary's they name,
And winds as it winds to the mouth of the same.
Next thro' the Atlantic northward it goes
All Isles sixty miles from the coast to inclose,
Excepting those Islands which now and of yore
Of the province first named e'er belong'd to the shore.
That Great River St. Croix then points out its course
Thro' its centre from Fundy-Bay up to its source.

Captain Daniel Lyman to Edward Winslow.

Windsor, Monday 6th [November, 1797].

His Royal Highness and the party stopt at John Ruggles yesterday an hour, and then went on to the Bishops to dinner and were magnificently entertained for Aylesford*; we then came on to sleep at E. DeWolfe's, Horton, and this morning to Windsor. The Prince proposes to get to the Lodge tonight, but as I have not so great an object† in view, I shall probably stay tonight here to see how my fresh Friends are.

I do not exactly understand what the Prince's object has been in this violent journey as he just looked over the repairs of the barracks at Annapolis, dined at Barclay's and after three or four hours stay in the town returned back.

There are barracks fitting there in very compleat order for 300 men, a Field Officer, 4 Captains, 8 Subalterns, &c. I understand that the barracks, &c, at Windsor are to be repaired this summer and that troops are to be placed in both places.

The Prince has been very pleasing and in great spirits and good humour during the jaunt.

I pray you to communicate to Hailes the journal of this voyage as I have not time to write another letter. * * *

D. Lyman.

P. S. Just as I am finishing my letter a gentleman from Halifax, which he left last Saturday evening, says Dr. Almon told him that Lady Wentworth was dying after an illness of three days, supposed a pleurisy.

*Bishop Charles Inglis bought land in Aylesford and built there a country seat, which he called "Clermont."

Monday evening.—One of the Price's attendants has just arrived with accounts that Lady Wentworth is better, and that there was every hope of her recovery yesterday.

Joseph Chew* to Edward Winslow.

Montreal, 17th Dec'r, 1797.

My dear good old friend,—Let me assure you that your not having heard from me for some time is by no means for want of the most sincere regard. * * * *

I never miss an opportunity of enquiring after you, and Mrs. Chew and my Daughter Gracy often wish to know how you & family are & now desire to join me in warmest wishes for your health and happiness. Being in bad health has depressed my spirits and makes me regret the distance I I am from my old good friends. Had it been my fortunate lot to have been a neighbor to you and our worthy Chip and others of my acquaintance how much happier life would be than it is at present. Our Canadians since the execution of McLean,† if not altered in sentiments take care to behave more quietly and are more submissive to order and Government. They seem to be convinced our Government will not trifle with them. * *

I have a letter from my son William, who is the store keeper for the Indian Department at Fort George (formerly Niagara) dated the 4th instant. He tells me our old friend Benjamin Hallowell, Esquire, who is there with his daughter the Chief Justice's Lady, was very well. The Indians of the Five Nations and all the Western Tribes are very friendly and much attached to the British Government.

I hope you were kindly entertained at Boston last summer, and that you may settle the matter of the River St. Croix to your satisfaction.

* * * My dear old friend,

Yours most affectionately &c.,

Joseph Chew.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 4th April, 1798

My dear Sir.—Last night I had the pleasure to receive your favor of the 14th March, and avail myself of the earliest opportunity to assure you of my readiest inclination to meet your wishes with respect to your son—an opening will probably arise during the summer. Two companies of my Regiment are ordered to Cape Breton as soon as the navigation is relieved from ice. Lt. General Ogilvie is appointed President of the Island, and removes thither as soon as possible. Lt. Col. Bayard goes with the Nova Scotia detachment, they are to have also a serjeant & twelve artillery men.

*Joseph Chew before the American Revolution was a magistrate at Tryon county, N. Y. He signed a declaration of loyalty in 1775. He accompanied Sir John Johnson to Canada and was appointed superintendent of Indian affairs. He was an old friend of Edward Winslow and of Ward Chipman. He gave to Winslow a power of attorney to apply for lands for him in Nova Scotia.

I wish the meetings of the [Boundary] Commissioners* had been appointed one month or six weeks later, or could be postponed, as it interferes with the sessions of our General Assembly where Col. Barclay will be much wanted.

It appears to me there cannot be a doubt that the proofs are clearly favorable to the claim of Great Britain, and that nothing short of violent departure from obvious truth can disappoint us. * * *

Lady Wentworth sailed for Liverpool on the day preceding the date of your letter. Her impaired health required immediate change of climate and the similar state of our only son, in England, added to the indispensable urgency of risquing a passage in these time of great commotion. You will conceive of my extreme anxiety. If her health permits, our hopes are for her return accompanied by our son in July or August next. * * *

If you will approve of your son's passing a few months as a Volunteer†, bring him with you. It may be of use to him and can do him no harm that I can foresee. You may rely on my best interest to befriend and promote. Pray how does my namesake & Godson‡? What course do you propose for him? Remember me to all your family with sincere kindness. I pray you to remember me in the kindest manner to Mr. Chipman for whom I entertain the greatest esteem. * * *

I am with great truth and regard, my dear Sir,

Your faithful friend

J. Wentworth.

Sir Wm. Pepperell, present me in the most affectionate manner to him. To the celebrated and justly esteemed Count Rumford* say that when he has finished learning all the poor devils in the world to read and write, I hope he'll write a line or two himself just to show that he has not forgotten me. I should have attacked him with one of my old fashioned epistles long ere this, but unless a letter can be put upon the tail of a comet, there's no chance of overtaking him. At one time I hear of him in Bavaria, at another in Ireland, at another in England, &c.

I hope I shall be favored with an answer from you soon. One copy of your letter I wish may proceed via N. York or Boston, as I shall probably be there the principal part of the summer on the business of settling the line of Boundary. If it's covered to James Sullivan† Esq, it will come safe to me.

With the most sincere attachment & esteem
I am, your most obedient friend &c.

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

April 29, 1798.

* * * We are just recovering here from one of the most tremendous scenes that ever was beheld, what they call an ice freshet‡. Major Murray, Mr. Davidson, Col. Ellegood & many others above me, lost every animal they owned. Davidson had 60 head of horn'd cattle, Ellegood 50, and Murray 40 etc, etc. I escap'd, as I always do (upon all great occasions) by a hair's breadth. The water was up to my front door & 6 time of Edward Winslow's decease. Edward Goldstone Lutwyche was a New Hampshire Loyalist. He went to Boston and thence to New York. About the close of the war he retired to England. From July 29, 1808, until his death in 1815 he was agent in England for the province of New Brunswick. Colonel Lutwyche was born in Massachusetts, but removed when young with his mother to New Hampshire. He was by profession a lawyer. From 1768 to 1775 he was a member of the New Hampshire legislature. He was colonel in the militia. In January, 1777, we find him at Long Island, where he married soon after Jane Rapalje. In conjunction with George Leonard and Edward Winslow, Col. Lutwyche had a good deal to do with the organization of the "Associated Loyalists." He was proscribed and banished and his property in New Hampshire confiscated.

*See biographical note under date 8th June, 1783; also Col. Lutwyche's letter of May 17, 1800.

†Hon. James Sullivan was attorney general and afterwards governor of Massachusetts. He was an exceedingly able man and conducted the case of the United States at the time of the boundary arbitration with much ability, but the facts were against him. He died Dec. 2d, 1808.

‡There is the following short account of this ice freshet in the St. John Gazette of April 20, 1798 —"We are sorry to learn that from the breaking up of the ice on "the river, considerable damage has been done. The French Village above Frederi- "icton and the vicinity thereof have suffered greatly, and upwards of 20 families, we "are told have been obliged to remove from their habitations in consequence of the "overflowing of the country. Cattle, fences, several barns and large quantities of "hay have been swept away; but we are happy to hear that no lives have been lost."

feet deep in my cellar. I every moment for 36 hours, expected to lose my House. The mountains of ice were 40 feet high directly in my rear—the stoutest of Elms & Maples were broke like pipestems—luckily when the mountains went off they took a direction just to avoid the buildings and came in at the foot of the gardens, where they tore all before 'em. I detach'd my wife and all the Light Infantry part of my family, and stood ready with a boat to run like a lusty fellow for the Highlands. The ridge where the buildings stand was completely insulated. I sav'd all my cattle, and even my sheep and hogs—my fences of course went to the devil.

The namesake and Godson whom you have condescended to enquire about is deserving of the name he bears. He is a very handsome, able bodied fellow, very ambitious & tenacious of the title of "Governor," which is invariably bestowed upon him. What will become of 'em God knows!

Edward Winslow to Daniel Lyman.

Kingsclear, 6th May, 1798.

I thank you for yours of the 16th ult. The adjournment of the Board gives me a month or two longer at home and as Tom Coffin* is constantly employed in my office I wish to avail myself of his services as long as I can, besides he will be at much less expence here than at Halifax.

I think it will be best to enter him at once as a Volunteer in the regiment and to let him remain here for the present on leave. Whenever I take my departure he will accompany me whether a vacancy happens or not. Sir John has suggested that I should take Halifax on my way to Boston and if I can accomplish it I shall be highly gratified. In that case I could personally attend to the arrangements for my son. In the meantime you will have the goodness to make the necessary communication to Sir John and take such steps as you may think proper.

I am extremely sorry to find by your letter that parties are forming in the states in favor of the French. I have heard it intimated from other quarters. Had the French Revolution been productive of any benefit to themselves. Had it procured them liberty, plenty, or tranquility, it would not appear extraordinary that other nations should follow their example. But when it must be obvious to all mankind that tyranny, poverty, and war with all their attendant evils are the consequences of such a system, one would conclude—reasoning as we do on other occasions, that no state or community on earth could court an alliance with 'em, or, what's worse, attempt to imitate 'em. The Americans, who at present enjoy apparent prosperity, we would from the same kind of reasoning, suppose should be the last people to be deluded into certain ruin by making a new political experiment. But this is one of the curses of a Republican Government. Every Jack a Lanthorn has a train of followers, and there being no effectual constitutional controul, the whole community are up to the eyes in a bog, before they are aware of their danger. Our old Republics may do to exist in, altho' the form be exceptionable. Governments may by imperceptible degrees acquire energy; obedience and subordination become habitual. But an Infant Republic certainly is a damn'd thing. Let any man contemplate the present fluctuating state of American Politics and he'll see the destruction that awaits 'em. Hitherto they have been fortunate; their first president had claims upon them of a peculiar nature and he had qualities of a peculiar cast. The present man possesses uncommon abilities and he too has in their opinion rendered them essential services. But what would have been their condition had the competitor of the latter succeeded? The French would have had possession of one half of 'em and the Devil the other before this time. It is not the wisest part of their constitution which ordains that in an election of President he who has the second highest number of votes shall be Vice President. This rule operated tolerably well in the appointment of toastmasters because all the candidates must be jolly fellows, but in a great political contest it must be a bad system.

Two candidates start, of sentiments diametrically opposite, as was the case recently. Each avails himself of his party. The unsuccessful gentlemen, embittered by new disappointment, comes in a trice to aid His Excellency who, of course, considers him a rogue and will have nothing to say to him. This by way of securing harmony in their councils. Next trip, the Vice succeeds, & then —! Chaloner, the Sheriff of Rhode Island, told a story which is an epitome of the whole business so far as relates to elective magistracy. In the height of their politics a man named Potter, of some consideration, was accused of stealing a cheese; he pleaded not guilty and said he took it for fun. The justice ordered him to be whip'd, as soon as the punishment was over he turned to his Worship and said, You scoundrel, after the next election I shall be made a justice and then I'll whip you most damnably. The election came—a new Governor made the Culprit a Justice—the old Justice ran away (of course). Curse American Politics, what have you or I to do with 'em. Your news led me into the scrape. I only mean (to use an emphatical expression) they have no sheet anchor, whenever factions set 'em fairly afloat they'll drift to perdition.*

*Query: could it be the wish was father to the thought?

Kensington, July 3rd, 1798.

Sir,—I had the pleasure of receiving your favor of the 26th April last on the 18th June & am much obliged by the polite & delicate manner of offering your agency*. As an Agent & friend I shall be happy to render you any services in my power, for believe me, Sir, my sentiments are perfectly in unison with yours respecting old friends. Having been so long insulated with respect to them I feel a peculiar satisfaction in everything which relates to their welfare and happiness. * * *

I am sorry to inform you Capt. Armstrong's† affairs are in a very deranged state indeed, they are in chancery & upon inquiry I find the estate will not pay above 2s. 6d. in the pound at some distant period. It is hard upon you, but you have many conmapions in your misfortune. * *

That extraordinary man Count Rumford is gone to Munich. In the course of his revolution he emitted some of his benevolent rays on England & Ireland. At present he is stationary there but his splendour illuminates Europe. In the midst of the allurements of a Court where he is idolised, he devotes his time to Philosophical experiments & is communicating them under the title of Essays. While he was here his only Child, a daughter, came to see him from Boston. Fearing to take her to a dissipated Court he intended she should return, but during her stay she gained so much upon him that he could not part with her & she is gone with him to Munich. She is really a fine young woman. * * *

Major H. W. Hailes to Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, October 6th, 1798.

My dear Winslow,—Your favor of the 3rd ult. from Providence has reached me. Mr. Hedden‡ being on his departure with the plans, I embrace the opportunity of writing a few lines. I saw your family the day before yesterday all well. Mrs. Winslow will with the help of her friends keep up her spirits. The old man she had from the Regiment has left her, he was not able to do the winter's work. I have with the General's permission sent her Henry Hoare, from Miss Cooke's place, as I intend keeping

*The former agent, Armstrong, employed by Winslow as well as many others of the Loyalists, had died, and many of those who employed him suffered losses in consequence of the state of his accounts. Colonel Lutwyche proved a faithful and obliging agent. It is to be presumed he received the usual commission.

but one man there this winter. We are much in doubt if we shall see Miss Cooke this fall, and am fearful the fever will keep her from embarking for N. Brunswick. We have met with a considerable loss in our domestic society by the death of poor Black, he went off after 10 days illness, Hedden will tell the particulars. Very much as his loss is to be regretted, it is still more so on account of our friend Ned Miller*; he was in danger so short a time that he made no will, otherwise I am conscious he would have provided for him.

The August Packet is arrived, and what is more extraordinary no news of Bonaparte or Nelson. The Rebellion in Ireland is now "as a tale of other days." The Prince goes to England this fall for his health, Dr. North has been sent for from Quebec to be consulted, and Brenton writes me word, it is his opinion he must go to Bath for the benefit of the waters. Lyman has been here & returned to Halifax. His Royal Highness' illness has proceeded from a fall from His horse.

I am sorry you have been detained so much longer than you expected. I however hope that after Hedden's arrival you will soon close the business & return safe & sound to your friends in N. Brunswick. You may make yourself easy that everything will be done by your friends that can assist your wife & children till your return. I am so little of a farmer that I can give but a poor opinion of what should be done in that line. Colonel Allen promised me to call & give his advice on some points which Mrs. W. wants to consult him on. I almost forgot to mention, that on Mrs. Winslow's mentioning your wish to get a couple of Terriers for your friend Dr. Jeffreys, I apply'd to the Governor, and am sorry to inform you that the only Bitch he had died this summer, and I find Clopper has been equally unsuccessful with Colo. Robinson. If I however should hear of any I shall endeavour to secure them for you.

Make Mrs. H. & my best regards to Chipman & all friends round you, I should write to Chip, but have nothing particular to say.

Ever most faithfully, yours,

H. W. Hailes.

*Edward Winslow Miller is here referred to. His mother was sister to Col. Winslow's father, and he himself married a daughter of Col. Winslow. Harris W. Hailes, whose name frequently appears in the Winslow correspondence, married a daughter of Col. Stephen Miller (she was E. W. Miller's eldest sister.) Mrs. Hailes was a cousin of Col. Winslow. Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Miller had a large family, most of whom died young. Their only surviving daughter married the late Chief Justice Carter. E. W. Miller was Col. Winslow's deputy as surveyor of the king's woods in New Brunswick, under Sir John Wentworth. He was also assistant to Col. Winslow in his capacity of military secretary. He engaged quite extensively in storekeeping, lumbering, etc., and will be frequently mentioned in the pages that follow. See, e. g., Winslow's letter under date 12th October, 1806.

Eleazer Homer* to Edward Winslow.

Boston, Dec'r 2, 1798.

D'r Sir,—Capt'n Leavitt arrived here last week by whom I was happy to hear of your safe arrival at St. Johns but could not find that you had written to any one. I called on your sister Penelope who was relieved from her anxiety, not having heard from you since you sailed from this. She has been unwell but is now is good health. I sent you a scroll per Rhoden (under cover to Mr. Chipman) also the Quinces and Calf, which hope has arrived safe. * * * *

As we were going on board the one side the Calf jumped out the other but being tyed they soon got him in again, which I think was fortunate, as the Calf was more fearful of the water and the people more careful of him afterwards. I made him of great consequence that they might be more attentive to him and mentioned his Pedigree, &c. The keeper informed me (which perhaps you may not have heard) the sire of the Calf fought & beat the famous Bison or Buffaloe which had never before been beaten by a Bull or any other creature, but had beat many and killed some.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, N. Scotia, 24th Dec'r, 1798.

My dear Sir,—I thank you very much for your kind letter, which I received yesterday.

The successful issue of the Commission had been, some time since, communicated to me by Colo. Barclay. This laborious & very honorable part that devolved upon you I was always satisfied would be conducted with such ability & fidelity, as would give me the greatest pleasure to rejoice, that it was conducted by my Friend. It is also not a little gratifying to me, independent of the public benefit, that the negotiation on the part of Great Britain has been so ably and zealously conducted, as to obtain great respect for Colo. Barclay and Mr. Chipman. All candid, judicious men, must give them great credit. I shall be much obliged to you, for any curious Extracts of natural or political history that may be in your Collection, when you have an hour to spare.

I have great pleasure in congratulating you & Mrs. Winslow, upon the very good accounts I have lately received from Cape Breton, of your son Tom. Lt. Col. Kearney, Cap. Fox & others of my friends will pay the greatest attention to his health, and conduct, and I trust his parents will not be disappointed in my young Ensign, who will soon be as good an Lady W. & my Son, are not expected here, until spring—they were in good health, when we last heard from them. My best regards attend you & your family—pray remember me kindly to Mr. Chipman & family & be assured I am ever dear Sir, General John Coffin to Edward Winslow.

Dorchester, May 13th, 1799.

My dear Winslow,—To possess a heart that is so susceptible of participating in all the vicissitudes of Fortune that we are liable to meet with in this life, is in my opinion one of the first gifts of Nature, and which you possess so eminently.

I thank you from my soul for your kind congratulations, and the prophetic manner in which you express your wishes that may result from my promotion*.

I am now waiting for an official communication before I can determine anything, or what to do with the unweildly property and business I am engaged in. If I can in any degree secure it from destruction I shall begin to entertain an idea that Nature has done something towards fitting me for a general. * * * And I shall be happy to avail myself of your ingenuity and experience. I am apprised that exertion, enterprise and integrity, can alone bring me into consequence. With my best regards to our friends Sproule, Hazens, Coffin, & Bartlet, I am with great regard for your little flock and Mrs. Winslow, my dear Ned,

Faithfully and affectionately Yours,

John Coffin.

Edward Winslow to E. G. Lutwyche.

[Early part of 1799.]

* * My two last summers have been spent in the American States, in the execution of a very arduous and laborious duty as Secretary to the Commissioners appointed under the 5th article of the treaty of amity, commerce, etc., to determine the Eastern boundary line. The business closed in October last, and under all the existing circumstances the decision may be considered as favorable to Great Britain. Had the Americans established their claim to the Magaguadavic† the River St. John would have been intersected within a few miles of Fredericton. The whole of St. Andrews and other valuable settlements together with two military posts of some importance would have been embraced within their limits. As it is, we lose not a single British settlement. A few miserable Frenchmen at Madawaska on the route to Canada fall within their territory*. I presume that some future negotiation willl remove even this difficulty and give us a free communication with Canada.

I read with extreme concern the paragraph in your letter respecting the indisposition of Sir Wm. Pepperell's children and I have since seen the death of one of 'em mentioned in a London paper. May God restore the others to health and preserve him from such afflictions in future.

We are awaiting with vast anxiety for the next arrival from England in the hope that we shall be able to form some judgment respecting the probable continuance of the war. I shall feel myself essentially obliged if (when a good conveyance offers at any time) you would send me such pamphlets or papers as you may think worth perusal. In this secluded situation every information from your country is read with great eagerness.

* * I have sometimes flattered myself that in the present naval bustle my son† might stand some chance of promotion. I do not know of any step that I can take to forward an object of so much importance. There are few of my old friends left in the service.

Believe me to be with the warmest esteem & friendship,

Yours faithfully,

Halifax, September 10th, 1799.

Sir,— I have the honor of reporting to Your Excellency the arrival of General His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent in this Province, on the 6th instant.

His Royal Highness has been pleased to signify his intention of taking upon himself the duties of Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Forces serving in British North America, by Commission bearing date May 10, 1799.

*Sir Thomas Saumarez was administrator of government in the province of New Brunswick. He was a popular and very amiable man.

It is further His Royal Highness's intention, pursuant to His Majesty's pleasure, to affix his Head Quarters at Halifax. I thought it my duty and therein am sanctioned by His Royal Highness to convey to Your Excellency this information, as the Lieutenant Governors have no communication with the Public Order.

I beg leave to congratulate Your Excellency on the appointment of one of the Royal Family to a command of such importance, and to be with perfect respect, Sir,

Your Excellency's most humble servant

Extract from St. John City Gazette.

"By the Sch'r Thomas from Windsor we have the pleasing information that His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent arrived at Halifax on Friday last (Sept. 6th). The news was immediately communicated to the Inhabitants of the adjacent country by means of the Telegraph* with such velocity that it reached Windsor in less than 20 minutes."

Boston, October 11, 1799.

Dear Sir,—An opportunity offers for a small packet, by W. Leonard going to St. Johns via Passamaduoddy, which affords me the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your much esteemed favour of 28 August, the perusal of which gave me great satisfaction. The letter you sent to be forwarded by Mr. Chipman I am sorry to say has never come to hand. To hear of the welfare of any of your family is a pleasure to me, or of any creature belonging to you. * * * *

*This primitive mode of telegraphy necessitated a chain of signal stations. Messages were received at each by means of a telescope and repeated from hill to hill by use of a semaphore or (more probably) by a system of flags and balls. The late Geo. E. Fenety in his book, "Life and Times of Hon. Joseph Howe," p. 81, observes:—"Near the dwelling [i. e., Prince's Lodge] was the tele-"graph station, a wooden structure about 20 feet in height supporting a flag "staff and yard arms for the purpose of communicating with the telegraph "station on Citadel Hill, six miles distant, by means of flags and balls—at that "time the only system of telegraph known, and yet the interchange of words "was as correct, though slow, as it is at the present day under the electric "system."

It was proposed at one time to establish stations all the way from Halifax to Quebec. The Duke of Kent warmly advocated the idea but it was found to be impracticable. Some information regarding the initiatory steps taken in the matter will be found in the pages that follow. See also Dr. W. F. Ganong's article in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Canada for 1899, p. 348.

I think it must be a pleasing satisfaction to you, after being so long absent from your large family, to be at home with them, and to have it in your power to be of so much advantage in their education, & much more so to the children, who must be convinced that they could not find a Tutor with whom they could make more improvement. I feel myself under great obligations to you for your good wishes. I hope sincerely that I may always merit them. * * * I shall be happy in hearing from you as often as convenient & will attend any commands with pleasure.

I am with respect & esteem,

My dear Sir,— * * * Mr. Byles will present you this in person. He is the eldest son of the Rev. Dr. Byles, and is one of the nearest and dearest friends I have on earth. His last ten years have been spent in the West Indies and he is now Commissary of the Island of Granada, where he married a daughter of Chief Justice Bridgewater a very amiable woman; she is with him. I will make no apology for introducing him to your acquaintance. You will soon discover that he is a grave, sensible man, and could I relate the numerous instances of his benevolence & generosity to a train of needy relatives & friends you could not fail of admiring him. He never was in England and I shall feel grateful to you for any attentions or assistance which it may be in your power to shew him. * * * *

H. R. H. Prince Edward to Lieutenant General Carleton.

Head Quarters, Halifax, Nov. 18, 1799.

Sir,— * * * With respect to the New Brunswick Corps, no alteration can take place in the mode of subsisting them until His Majesty is pleased to signify his commands with regard to the establishment upon which they are hereafter to be paid, for although by the late voluntary extension of their services there cannot be a doubt of their being shortly placed on the establishment of Fencibles, they cannot be considered as such or as ceasing to be Provincials until the King first makes them otherwise. * * *

The detachment of two Serjeants and twenty men under the command of Lieutenant Eccles* arrived here on the 13th instant, together with that under the immediate charge of the Quarter Master. The latter will have their clothing compleated in the course of this week and will leave this on their march back to St. Johns either on the 23rd or 25th of November. The clothing being as you inform me for the year 1798, it is absolutely necessary that it should be made up according to the pattern approved by His Majesty for that year, previous to my reviewing the Corps, and I am happy to find from the report made by the Master Taylor of the Fusiliers, that there will be no difficulty in accomplishing this. I have recommended the old coats being turned and cut up so as to make into round jackets, which will answer both for the purpose of wearing under the great coat during the winter, and for drill during the Summer. I have always adopted this custom for my own Regiment, and find it answers remarkably well, for the clothing after having been worn the first year in the proper form with white waistcoat, breeches and gaiters for all duties with arms, such as Review, Parade, &c., and the second, when altered into neat jacket with Trowsers for exercise, is still able to answer the third for all purposes of Fatigue and when the men are employed on Kings work.

The Detachment under the command of Lieut. Eccles seems to be composed of very fine men, and I have no doubt but by the spring, I shall be able to return them to you so well instructed in every the most minute particular of the mode I wish to be rendered general for all the Troops under my command, that after they have been with you for about six weeks you will be able to have the Corps in perfect readiness to stand the closest inspection.

I have directed my Adjutant and Quarter Master to give every possible information to Captain Clopper, in order that during the winter he may be enabled to instruct the Regiment in many points in which they may differ from the present method. As there is none in which they are so out of the way as in the Hair*, I request you will give the strictest orders that both officers and men conform most accurately to the pattern as established here, of which Captain Clopper has been made perfectly acquainted.

Having nothing further to add at present, I have to conclude by subscribing myself with perfect consideration and regard, very truly,

Yours &c.

Edward,

General and Commander in Chief of the Forces serving in British North America.

Lieut. General Carleton,

Commanding the Forces in the Province of New Brunswick.

*The Duke of Kent was an exceedingly strict disciplinarian and very particular as to the appearance of the troops.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to H. R. H. Prince Edward.

Fredericton, New Brunswick, 3d Feb. 1800.

Sir,— * * * I beg leave to mention a circumstance of which I have hitherto had no particular occasion to inform your Royal Highness, but which now suggests itself as affording an important argument in confirmation of what you have been pleased to state to the Minister (Mr. Secretary Dundas) respecting Fredericton and the communication with lower Canada. One great object in view, when the seat of Government was fixed here at the head of the navigation of the River St. John, for vessels of any considerable size, was the promotion of the interior settlement and cultivation of the country, and especially on the upper parts of this River on which the extension of a chain of settlements was of such obvious importance to the facility of that communication, which has so deservedly engaged the attention of your Royal Highness. The beneficial effects of the measure, in this view, have been very considerable. Many valuable and flourishing settlements having been made in situations where otherwise none would probably for a long time to come have been attempted. But this extension of settlement has made it necessary to be the more on our guard against any hostile disposition among the savages, symptoms of which have at times appeared, and became in one instance so alarming to the Inhabitants as to render it necessary, before any Military Posts were established above Fredericton, to make a temporary Depot of provisions at one of the uppermost settlements in order that the Inhabitants might have it in their power, in case of actual hostility, to assemble and keep together for their defence till they should be supported from below.*

I have the honor to be, &c. &c.

Thos. Carleton.

Captain Lyman to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, February 3, 1800.

My dear Winslow,— * * *

The Duke returned on Saturday, what he has been about so much longer than he had proposed I have not heard, but I am told they have established Telegraphs all the way to Annapolis, so that there was a continual communication kept up of ordering and counter orders while he was away even to the approval of courts martial and ordering the men to be flogged. I was at the Barracks on Saturday to pay a visit to Col. Burrows when on looking out the window I saw preparations making that I did not understand, on asking what it meant the Col. told me it was a punishment going on. Expressing my surprize at it during the Duke's absence, I was told the men were to be flogged by Telegraph. So though an hundred miles off, the Duke still was acquainted with what was going on, and giving orders the same as usual. You will have this mode of communication all the way to Fredericton very soon. I hear it is to be communicated across from the high grounds back of Cornwallis to the Isle of Haut, thence towards Pleasant Valley*. I suppose our friend Leonard will have one atop of his windmill.

*The original of this letter is a rough draft in the hand writing of the provincial secretary, Hon. Jonathan Odell, by whom it was no doubt written by desire of General Carleton. It expresses the sentiments of those who favored the selection of St. Anne's as the site of the capital of the province of New Brunswick.

I shall enquire of Benning Wentworth, who is Pay Master to the Nova Scotia Regiment, of the state of Tom's affairs, but I have but little hopes at present as I know the old debts here, that I am responsible for, have never been settled. * * *

D'l Lyman.

Edward Winslow to Colonel Lutwyche.

Kingsclear, New Brunswick, 4th March 1800.

My dear Lutwyche,—When I originally suggested my ideas relative to the Quit rents in this country, I was impressed with the sentiment that an emergency of Government actually existed, and that every part of His Majesty's Dominions would be required to pay its proportion towards defraying the publick expences. Under this impression it was natural for those of us who are interested in the prosperity of this province to inquire in what way we might (with least inconvenience to ourselves) pay our proportion? Experience had taught us that voluntary contributions would not answer the purpose. We saw with concern that the Loyal and ambitious were making sacrifices beyond their abilities† and that the factious and mercenary part of the community avoided all connection with the subscriptions. We knew that it was impracticable to form a fund by taxing articles of commerce, for, in the present state of the country, taxes are not sufficiently productive to answer the internal exigencies of the province. The Quit-rents therefore appeared to us the only equitable tax which could be of service.

In my last I observed that the payment of this rent is part of the con-

*Sussex Vale was formerly known as "Pleasant Valley."

†Subscriptions in New Brunswick towards the national defence fund were very liberal, particularly on the part of the half-pay officers and public men. See Lawrence's Foot Prints, p. 11, and also newspapers of the year 1798. The patriotic fund was started in England, and in a short time a sum amounting to £3,000,000 sterling was raised by voluntary subscription. New Brunswick, with a population of about 15,000, many of the people as yet struggling for the bare necessaries of life, contributed $12,000 to the patriotic fund. Lieut. Governor Carleton headed the list with a subscription equivalent to $2,000, Chief Justice Ludlow contributed $500, Judge Saunders $250, and others in proportion.

dition on the face of every patent*, and that this condition was never considered as merely nominal or only as part of the form, but that it was presumed that the rent so stipulated to be paid would be demanded; and the officers of Government here have invariably and industriously inculcated this doctrine. The appointment of Receiver General, &c., corroborated and confirmed this opinion, and when His Majesty was graciously pleased to suspend the collection for a specific time, the presumption of course was that the demand would be made at the expiration of that period. Under the anticipation of this event lands were appreciated and sold.

The Governor and Council here, when they began to distribute lands under His Majesty's instructions, made it their first object to discharge the obligations that the Government had laid itself under to the disbanded officers and soldiers and other Loyalists who came to the country. To accomplish this object effectually, a system was adopted which precluded the issuing of patents of more than 1,000 acres to any individual (that being the largest pledge to a field officer).† From that quantity down to 200 acres was the allowance to the various ranks of applicants.

But this arrangement of property was of short duration—a great proportion of the original patentees were idle, dissipated, and capricious, and as soon as they were fairly in possession of their lands and had expended the bounty of Government, they sold it for a trifle to Land jobbers and speculators‡. Some of these purchasers now hold an extent of five or six miles on the river. These great land holders are the persons who will be most materially affected by the demand of Quit-rents and they can very well afford to pay it, especially, as in general, the purchases were made under expectation of paying it. The few non-commissioned officers and

*The terms of most of the old patents, or grants, as regards quit rents, were as follows:—"A free yearly quit rent of one shilling sterling for every fifty acres, "to be paid on Michaelmas day next after the expiration of ten years from the "date of the grant, and to continue payable yearly on Michaelmas day there-"after."

†By proclamation of George III., dated at St. James' Court, October 7, 1763, the grants to reduced (i. e., disbanded) officers of the army and navy were larger than here stated, viz., to every field officer, 5,000 acres; captain, 3,000 acres, subaltern or staff officer, 2,000 acres; non-commissioned officer, 200 acres; private men, 50 acres. At the close of the Revolution this scale of grants was materially altered; the grant to a field officer was fixed at 1,000 acres; captain or subaltern, 500 acres; non-commissioned officer, 200 acres, and private soldier, 100 acres, with 50 acres additional for each child.

‡In an old Sunbury County Record Book the following transactions are recorded:—October 14, 1783, Samuel Sullivan, soldier in the King's American Dragoons, executes a quit claim deed of his lot, No. 204, in favor of Reuben Chase, for the sum of £2 currency; the lot was situate in the township of Prince William, containing 100 acres; and on the same date Philip Service of same corps executed a quit claim deed of his lot, No. 229, in the same township, to Jonathan Miles, for one guinea. On March 9, 1784, Wm. Rusiers of the Royal Guides and Pioneers sold to Ensign Jonathan Brown his lot of 100 acres in Block No. 3, assigned to his regiment on the east side of the St. John River, for £10.

soldiers who commenced cultivation upon their lots of 200 and 300 acres remain yet in possession of 'em neither increased or diminished. On these people the tax of 2s. per 100 acres would not be oppressive.

There's another order of men called old Inhabitants who ought to pay the tax. They made choice of their situations before we came here and they occupy the most extensive tracts of intervale. They are generally from our country*. Republican principles are bred in their bones, and they would be turbulent, if they dared, notwithstanding the protection and all the other favours which they have received from the King's Government. A discerning and cautious minister may justly raise the question whether in the present state of public matters, it would be policy to demand a tax here? Situated as I am, I should not incline to enter largely into the consideration of such a question, but to you and other men of sense, who have witnessed the rise and progress of opposition and rebellion, I will venture to observe, that the instability and ill timed indulgencies of the mother country, contributed more to the establishment of American independence than all their severities and restrictions. In this province I have resided ever since it was created (or a province) and rather before. I have witnessed all its gradations from a wilderness to its present state of improvement, and I will boldly assert that I have contributed as much towards its advancement and organization as any individual who ever placed his foot upon the soil. I of course feel an attachment to it equal to what I formerly experienced to the land of my nativity, nor could I be induced by any consideration of personal benefit to urge a measure which might operate as an oppression upon the people of it. * *
With respect to the time, it appears to me that the present is a favorable time for the commencement of the rent; a retrospect I should presume would not be attempted. * * *

My dear friend,—I rec'd yours of the 14 & 15 ulto. by a former post, but delayed answering till I could find Sir John W. quite at leisure to hear the contents of your letter. This opportunity during the session of the Assembly I could not so readily meet. * * * He says he had long thought it not only a pity but a public loss that talents such as yours should be buried in retirement. Should opportunity offer, he would lose not a

That part of your letter concerning the plan you have digested about the communication to Canada would be well received by H. R. H. the Duke [of Kent]. * * * *

E. G. Lutwyche to Edward Winslow.

Kensington, 17 May, 1800.

My dear Sir,—I had the pleasure of receiving your obliging favors of 1st & 4th March a few days ago & permit me to offer you my thanks for your kind condolence.

Mr. Byles has returned to town much better in health; he appears to be all you said of him, an amiable, worthy, sensible man. I explained to him your business on which we perfectly coincided in opinion that the object†, involved as it was with difficulties, was not worth the pursuit. There appears to be no intention of demanding the quit-rents, and if they should, it would require great interest to obtain the appointment and greater still to render it compatible with your half pay. Your reasoning on the subject is perfectly just & such as might carry conviction; but the amount is too trifling in their estimation to risque the exciting any discontent. * * * If you still continue a predilection for the appointment, it will be absolutely necessary to have your application supported by some powerful friend; for great as are your merits & well founded your claims, yet I am sorry to say they will avail but little unless urged by a person of influence. Such a man as Mr. Watson could, if he would, carry the point. He is often times very friendly, though a courtier, and after the appointment if the demand of the Quit-rents was recommended by the Governor and approved by such a man, it might be carried into effect.

I am sorry to acquaint you that your son (Murray) has changed his ship and is now on board the "Termagant" sloop. Capt Apthorp appeared to act from the purest motives and to have a sincere desire to serve him, but some disagreement has separated them. However it is fortunate he is employed, so that his time is going on to qualify him for promotion. He has applied to me repeatedly for money, but considering the difficulties under which you labor, and with the advice of Mr. Byles I declined it, and recommended to him the most rigid economy, representing to him at the same time the cruelty of pressing on you, who have so large a family to support. Economy is a hard lesson to learn in youth, and I am afraid he has few examples in his messmates. Young men who enter the army and navy are not now expected to live on their pay; they have generally an additional allowance, but his case and some others are an exception, and I most sincerely hope he will regulate his conduct accordingly.

Our countryman Count Rumford is daily increasing in celebrity. He has recently founded a new establishment called the Royal Institution, intending to embrace the theory of the Royal Society and the practical part of the Society of Arts and by uniting to render them extensively beneficial to the public. All his plans have public utility and private happiness in view, and they are so happily conceived and so judiciously executed that he succeeds beyond even his most sanguine expectations. This plan, though so extensive and attended with considerable expense, has been caught at with the greatest avidity. A great number of the nobility of both sexes and men of fortune are members, and notwithstanding the pressure of the times large sums are subscribed. Members were at first invited, but it is grown so fashionable that it is now difficult to gain admission. It is too expensive for me. [The letter gives a synopsis of events of war in Europe at some length.] * * *

I am afraid I have tired you as well as myself, but I know how welcome news is to persons situated as you are. Permit me to add, you never need apologize for trouble you may give me when any service is in the power of, my dear Sir,

Halifax, May 19, 1800.

Dear Winslow,— * * * I mentioned to Sir John all the parts of the letter you desired for which he is very thankful. * * He laments that Gen'l Carleton has been so sudden in giving his resignation*, he thinks with me that your conjectures are very probable that he is sorry for it himself. For my part I wish he had remained, for after having known him so many years, and knowing him to be a man of great integrity and justice, that it is not probable we shall get a better man.

The Duke asked me twice lately, what could be the reason that the General has asked to be recalled, and added that it could not be on his account, to which I bowed. He said it was probable it might be on ac-

Mrs. L. is still very low in health* but we intend to set off for Windsor in the course of a week. The news from the States looks like Jefferson being chosen president, and probably then we may expect a rupture between that country and Great Britain. The accounts from Europe of the negotiations between France and the American envoys is said to be very unfavorable to us.

The Newfoundland Reg't have mutinied, and are to be brought to Halifax, the 66th regt. go there.

A general court martial is to set at Windsor the 16th of next month on Lt. Col. Robinson of the Royal Artillery, so General Bowyer tells me. One is now sitting here to try Lieut. Desbrisay of the Artillery for refusing to be drilled with a firelock by a sergeant of the Fusiliers.

I hope with you that a new blaze of prosperity will open to you after this dark cloud, which you have so long felt. No one of your many friends will rejoice more at this event than myself. My best wishes attend you. I shall hope to see you in a fortnight.

I am with great regard

Yours most truly,

Mather Byles Jr. to Edward Winslow.

Cheltenham, 27th May, 1800.

I fear my dear Sir that my reputation as a correspondent will be very much on the decay before this reaches you, and to say the truth I am half ashamed at dating my first English letters to you six months from the time of my arrival. * * *

Col. Lutwyche showed me the letter to him which you mention, and I had a full conversation with him on the subject of your memorial to the Duke of Portland. I find what interest he has is wholly at the Secretary of State's office, and that he has never had any communication with the

*A provincial newspaper of this year contains the following obituary notice:—"Died on Sunday, the 28th September, 1800, at Fredericton, lamented by her friends, Statira, the wife of Capt. Daniel Lyman, aged 45 years.

Treasury. It is from the latter that a Commission for the Receiver of Quit Rents would issue were one appointed for New Brunswick. * *

It seems his Grace is averse to the collection of the quit rents for two reasons—the smallness of the sum, and the discontents it might occasion. The former objection might in some measure be removed by making it a general regulation for British North America, and indeed it must take place generally if it take place at all, for it would never do to collect them in one province and exempt another; but the second objection is of a nature not to be removed by individual representations here however forcible they may appear. * * *

I regret very much that the Nova Scotia fleet had sailed before I got your last letter, as it prevented me from complying with your request in favor of my god daughter*, to whom I am indebted for her very kind letter of October last. Before I leave England I will endeavor to forward a small selection which may be of use to her and her sisters. My present intention is to pass the remainder of the year here and then, if I find my health sufficiently confirmed, return to my duty in Grenada, for as to any provision out of the West Indies I see no opening for it. I hope too, "for hope attends us still," to get strong enough to stand another tug with the climate for some years without quite sacrificing the whole of my liver, and if I can do this there is much in every point of view to invite me back again†. The present holiday is in the meantime highly grateful to me as it gives me an apportunity of enlarging my acquaintance with the world and rambling for a few months over a cultivated and luxurious country.

I hope by this time you have an additional regiment at New Brunswick, and that the establishment, made with so much expense at Fredericton, is prevented by it from going to decay. If we are to retain Canada the channel of communication with it must of course be cultivated, and I think in this country it is the point of light in which they will naturally view the question after an adequate protection is given to St. Johns, which has little to fear until the politics of America alter.

Mrs. Byles is well and begs the kindest acknowledgements for your remembrance of her; make an affectionate mention of us to every body at home, and believe me my dear Sir, with sincere attachment,

Your faithful

Mather Byles.

Lieut. O. H. Clements to Major Murray, or Officer Commanding the King's N. B. Regt.

Sussex Vale, 31st May, 1800.

Sir,—On the evening of the 29th inst. Sergt. McFarling arrived at this place from Cape Chignecto, where he left Mr. Schwartz with his Party erecting the Telegraph and necessary buildings at that place. From Mr. Schwartz letter he expects that the officer commanding the Detachment has every necessary implement (such as glasses, axes, compasses, spades, pickaxes,) for forwarding the erection of the Telegraph from Martin's Head (the high land on this side of the Bay) to Sussex Vale, tho' at the same time don't appear to be aware of the difficulty there will be in transporting those things a Distance of 20 miles through a wild and woody country—for this is about the Distance from my quarter to Martin's Head. I shall endeavor to get a few axes at this place and send Sergt. McFarling with a party to commence clearing the gap that may be necessary on Martin's Head. A Glass of a very superior kind is necessary, without which you will not be able to see across the Bay at that place, the distance being seventeen miles.

Dr. John Caleff to Major Hailes.

Saint Andrews, 23rd June, 1800.

Sir,—I wish to mention to you for the information of General Carleton, that there hath been upwards of Three Hundred persons inoculated with small-pox in this Town & neighborhood, within about five weeks past, and are all doing very well, except a Miss of five years, so refractory as to refuse medicine and even drink, and deceased the 7th day of eruption. Mr. Lindsay's† and three other families have been shut up by reason of their spouses being in circumstances not proper to receive the small-pox, one of the familys was inoculated 3 days ago, and expect to inoculate the rest on the morrow.

*Obadiah H. Clements was gazetted ensign in the King's New Brunswick Regiment in December, 1795. He was the eldest son of Captain Peter Clements of the King's American Regiment, and was born on the banks of the Hudson. In 1782 he entered his father's company as a volunteer and served through the war. The family settled in the parish of Douglas, York County. After the disbanding of the regiment in 1802, Ensign Clements went to the West Indies, where he died the next year of yellow fever.

†Ninian Lindsay was for some years a member of the house of assembly for the County of Charlotte.

The disorder among women, and babes at the Breast, hath been of the lymphatic kind, and of course very troublesome, the subjects had dieted for more than a month (which to me proves erroneous) and but few had any symptoms till the 13th day after inoculation, and as low a state as some persons had brought themselves I found it necessary to give more Physick than to those who had not dieted even a day.

The people of St. Stephens keep a constant guard against any persons going among them that may endanger their taking the Infection, as they say it would ruin their sawing and fishery, but mean to take it by and by, where are about 300 persons not having had the disorder. * * *

I pray you Sir to present my high respects to the General and hope to have the honor to do so personally ere His Excellency may leave the province, which Report says he certainly will do by and by.

I have the honor to be with the greatest esteem,

Sir, your most obedient & most humble serv't,

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

Fredericton, 24th June, 1800.

Dear Sir,— * * * I enclose a paragraph of Mr. Knox's letter in which he suggests that there is a probability that the Boundary between us and the United States will soon be settled. For many reasons an adjustment of this interesting business would be desirable, but I acknowledge that my anxiety to see it concluded is increased by the consideration that the great object contemplated by His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent will be thereby facilitated. It is I think impossible that the present negotiation can terminate in anything short of realizing and securing an unbroken and uninterrupted communication with Canada, which is so obviously essential to the safety and prosperty of these Provinces. But whether this takes place or not, it strikes me that the operation which has been commenced under His R. H's orders should not be suspended.

* * * The Commissioners who determined what river was the St. Croix truly intended by the Treaty of peace, could not proceed a step farther than the scource of that river; Indeed, by the additional article they were prevented even from ascertaining the Latitude & Longitude of the source. * * * Should the pending negotiation end differently from what Knox has suggested, and an exchange of property, Madawaska for Moose Island, &c, not be affected; then while we remain at amity with the United States they cannot forbid or prevent passage though a tract of country so situated; it would be directly against their interests &c. If a rupture takes place between us and the United States we must have the road if we fight for it. So that let us anticipate either of these events and the expediency of the measure becomes evident. So fluctuating are American politics that we cannot reason upon them with any degree of safety. From present appearances we should suppose that the southern States are inclined to form such an alliance with France as must end in a quarrel with Great Britain. In which case the union will probably be divided and a connexion with the Eastern States will be more firmly cemented, for those States have every inducement to keep on good terms with Great Britain. But what I mean is that should a war take place with all the United States, Madawaska must share the fate of the rest of New Brunswick, for that district cannot be held by the Americans or any other power unless the whole province is conquered.

*See biographical note under date Nov. 30, 1784.

If the military posts are established agreeable to what I understand to be His Royal Highness' intention, they can be defended against any enemy that will ever approach 'em. Suppose the Americans were at variance with us and embittered by the effects of war, can we imagine that they would undertake to march an army from Penobscot to Madawaska merely for the purpose of attacking a fortress and destroying an inconsidable settlement, which they must abandon immediately, for the support of an army in such a situation would be impracticable.

The enterprising Arnold, with great and important objects in view, sacrificed a party of chosen Americans in a march less arduous perhaps than the one referred to. In short the apprehension of such an event is a bugbear. Viewing the subject in every light in which it is possible to place it, we discern the magnitude of the object while the obstacles which timid minds have imagined vanish before us.

In making these observations (which I dare say have all occurred to Your Excellency's own mind) I go on the presumption that no other route can be found except that which has been recently explored by Mr. Campbell.* I form this opinion not from local attachment but from well digested information.

I consider the project of a land communication from Nova Scotia with Canada by the way of the Bay of Chaleurs to be visionary and impracticable. If the road is pursued thro' the present settlements on this river the expence of the undertaking will be materially lessened. There is no doubt but that the Government here will make every exertion to compleat a road as far as the settlement extends, and that encouragement will be offered to settlers along the remaining part of it, which without a road cannot be kept open. This is a measure in which I trust all parties and descriptions of men will unite. * *

S. Jarvis to Edward Winslow.

Post Office, Fredericton, July 10th, 1800.

Sir,—Enclosed I send you the postage account for the quarter ending the 24th June last for the public letters, belonging to His Excellency General Carleton, Major Brigade Hailes, and yourself, and I beg leave to observe that unless the postage is regularly paid at the end of each quarter I cannot defray the expences of my Office.

You will please to notice that I hold my commission as Post Master upon the express condition, that I do regularly transmit the amount of the postage of all letters, together with the ballance due to the General Post Office at the end of each quarter.

The Ballance due from my office, to the General Post Office for the quarter ending the 6th inst. amounts to upwards of Sixty pounds, and which I cannot pay, until I receive the money for the postages of the public letters delivered to the several departments in this district; besides which, I have already advanced to the Courier upwards of forty pounds of my own money in order to carry on the Service; another quarter is now due him, and it was with some difficulty that I could prevail on him to wait until he returned from the [Grand] Falls before I paid his demand, and should I fail to discharge his account on his return, I am apprehensive I shall find much difficulty in forwarding his Majesty's Mails.

I beg you will lay this matter before His Excellency General Carleton, who will, no doubt, give such directions as may be found necessary for my relief in this embarrassed situation.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your very obed't hum. Servant

S. Jarvis,* Post Master.

Major Hailes to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 13th July, 1800.

My dear Winslow,—I arrived here on Friday Evening from Windsor, and yesterday had a most gracious reception and audience from His Royal Highness. The sentences on the Brevet Lt. Colonel and Captain Clinch I suppose you will receive officially by this post, they are, as I supposed they would be, both acquitted. The Duke was pleased to say he hoped this would be the last time I should be troubled on such business, and that he thought the best method of putting an end to such troublesome litigation was to bring the parties to this province. Colonel Robinson & myself are to have the honor of dining with him (the Duke of Kent) to-morrow. To-day we dine at Brindley's, when we are to meet Sir John & Lady Wentworth. All your old friends make particular enquiries about you. The Commissary is directed to charter a vessel to take us all back from Windsor; and the Telegraph is to announce when there is one ready, and as there were several expected there from Saint John I hope we shall get away sometime this week. If not I intend, if permitted, to return by the way of Annapolis, as the Bishop has given me a very pressing invitation to go to his house. * * The Duke asked me if Gen'l Carleton was going home to England, my answer was of course I did not know, nor do I find anything is known here respecting our Government, and as it has been now so long since anything has been said on the subject, I hope and trust it will all blow over. Your son Tom will, I hope, long before this reaches you, have got home. He sailed from Windsor, at which place he arrived the night before from Halifax, on Friday morning in company with Mr. Simondson. Pidgeon* is here and I think much better, he complains a good deal, & is under Doct. Halliburton's care. Numerous are the enquiries after you and Chipman. * * * If I had your talent I could describe a great deal, but as it is it must remain until we meet. As I have nothing to communicate to the General but what he will see by the orders, I shall not trouble him with a letter, but I beg that you will assure him I shall return to my duty as expeditiously as possible. To-morrow I intend paying a visit of business to the Secretary, who is a very polite man. Putnam tells me all the cash accounts of the Barrack Office for March are returned. He says the confusion (occasioned by Tom Coffin† having left this) in the settlement of the public accounts is not to be described, nor does he know or see how it is to be remedied, as the man acting for him is perfectly new in the business. * * *

Adieu, my best regards to Mrs. Winslow, your family and all friends about you. Tell William Hazen I have made particular enquiries and find both Pay Masters & Surgeons wear every part of the military dress as ordered, except the Gorget.

Most faithfully and affectionately,

Yours ever,

H. W. Hailes.

*Rev. George Pidgeon, who is here referred to, was appointed rector of Fredericton on the death of Rev. Dr. Cooke in 1795. He was born in Kilkenny, Ireland, in 1761, and graduated at Trinity College, Dublin. He had a commission in the army, and at the close of the American Revolution came to Halifax, and at the instance of Bishop Inglis studied for the ministry. He married the youngest daughter of the bishop. Upon the death of the Rev. Dr. Byles he succeeded him as rector of Trinity church in St. John. He died May 6, 1818, aged 57 years, and is buried in the old grave yard in St. John. He was for several years in feeble health.

Dugald Campbell to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 14th July, 1800.

Dear Sir,—I had the honor of receiving your friendly communication of the 30th ultimo from the hands of His Excellency Sir John Wentworth, for which testimony of your kindness be pleased to accept my thankful acknowledgements.

The importance of the proposed military communication through New Brunswick to Canada seems to be universally felt and ackuowledged, and a coincidence of opinion from a Gentlemen of such distinguished information and ability is to me very highly gratifying. I am very sorry to have to acquaint you however, that the idea seems (I hope only for the present) to be abandoned, as the breach formed by the projection of a part of the American territory in the best and perhaps the only practicable route for that purpose, appears to be an insuperable bar.

I have done everything in my power to demonstrate the practicability as well as the usefulness of the measure, and have succeeded to my own conviction at least. I should therefore have been happy to conduct the carrying of it into effect and pledge myself for its happy accomplishment, inasmuch as it was with me the design first originated here, or, at least, it was on my suggestion that it started into operation.

The approbation of my friends on this occasion is to me a great satisfaction, and of none greater than of yours, and in any situation in which I may be placed I assure you Sir that I will do everything in my power to merit your consideration and regard.

I am very respectfully, Dear Sir,
Your most obedient & most humble serv't,
D. Campbell.

Memo. of Captain W. Bartlet, Commanding Engineer.

July 19, 1800.

If the General [Carleton] wishes to know the distance of the different stations they are as follows:

From Partridge Island to the high ground near Cape Mispec, 4 miles. From the high ground near Cape Mispec to Cape Musquash, 12 1-2 miles. From Cape Musquash to point LePro, 13 miles. From Point LePro to the south end of the southern Wolf (the best situation upon them for a look out down the Bay), 17 miles.

The land at Point LePro is very low and on the Wolves too low for the distance.

Dr. John Caleff to Colonel Hailes.

Saint John, 24th July, 1800.

Sir,—Sometime back I did myself the honor to write a letter to you & enclosed a bottle containing a thread of pockmatter which if not made use of I can get some fresh matter in this City and will send it if wanted, and should have much pleasure in assisting any of your family or friends thro' the small-pox.

I have the satisfaction to mention, Sir, that upwards of 500 persons in the town of St. Andrews & its neighborhood have had the small-pox since May last in the natural way and by inoculation, and but three only may be said to have died with small-pox, and those were refractory children that would take no food other than what they chose, and no medicine whatever; four others have died, but their deaths were after they had gotten over the small-pox. In this business I have had the assistance of Madam Pagan,* Colo. Wyer,† Henry Brown,‡ Esq'r, &c, who performed the operation both in their own family and that of some of their friends, but were thrown back in several cases where the Disorder ran high, which gave much trouble to a Physician, by their setting out ignorantly in treating the disease; several of their adult patients were incrusted as with a coat of mail, and when the crust fell off their appearance was like unto flea'd Rabbits, but recovered.

In obedience to His Excellency Lt. General Carleton's orders, I am returned to my post at this place, leaving my family at St. Andrews, as Mrs. Caleff hath been long confined with nervous complaints and female weaknesses, which of late put on an appearance of an ulcer in utero, which generally degenerate to a cancer, and my Daughter Susan for some time past hath an Hoemoptisis, and are both so weak as not to be able to bear a journey and no medical assistance (now) in the County of Charlotte.

His Excellency the Governor having afforded me so many indulgences that it would be an ill grace in me to ask a further favor; I wish to do the duty of my station faithfully and be as useful to mankind as my ability will admit the few remaining days of my Pilgrimage on earth. Yet you will my good Sir allow me to request you to devolve in your mind the state of my family and the importance of my service to the Garrison at this present, and should you think well of it, I will thank you to ask the General for further leave for me to reside at Saint Andrews, but if otherwise I bow before the General and humbly yield obedience.

I am Sir, with a high sense of all your goodness to me,
your most obedient and most humble servant,
John Caleff.

[Note: The surgeon of the King's N. B. Reg't at this time was Dr. Charles Earle. Dr. John Caleff was the surgeon of the Garrison at St. Johns, or surgeon of the General Hospital, New Brunswick. Dr. Caleff's wife and daughter grew worse, and about the end of October, 1800, the doctor by permission of Gen'l Carleton went to visit them.]

At the peace of 1783 he came to St. Andrews with his family, where he was for years a leading merchant and magistrate. He represented Charlotte County in the house of assembly from the formation of the province and for many years afterwards, and died at St. Andrews in 1821, aged 71 years, universally respected and deeply regretted.

†Thomas Wyer had been a customs officer at Falmouth (now Portland), in Maine. He was one of the founders of St. Andrews and the first sheriff of Charlotte County. He died in 1824, in the 80th year of his age. His son was Lieut. Col. Thomas Wyer, whose daughter married Rev. S. D. Lee Street, rector of Woodstock, N. B. Thomas Wyer to Edward Winslow.

Saint Andrews, 13th August, 1800.

D'r Sir,—When lately at St. John I took the liberty to mention to Mr. Leonard the expectation I had from seniority of being appointed to the vacancy of one of the Justices of the Common Pleas for this county in the Room of the late Mr. Currey* I take the liberty from the friendship I trust you have for me, from our acquaintance in early life, to address you on the same subject.

Mr. Owen† and Mr. James Campbell, having lately left the Province on private affairs, it is not probable either of them will be thought of for the appointment. Your own feelings will easily excuse me for saying that my mortification will be very great if passing over these a Magistrate junior to me should be appointed over my head. My residence in the country ever since its formation, the active part I took in inducing and assisting the Loyalists from Penobscot to settle here and in obtaining Grants of land for them at Halifax, my holding a commission of the Peace since the year 1784; and I trust I may add that my Publick conduct ever since the commencement of this settlement I would fain hope will be a sufficient inducement to His Excellency not to mortify me by the appointment of any Person over my head; the anxiety I feel on this occasion has induced me thus to address you. I trust you will so far participate in my feelings as to excuse the liberty I have taken and to befriend me in Council on the occation.

I have wrote to this purpose to Mr. Leonard.

I have the honor to be with esteem, Dear Sir,

Your most obedient humble serv't,

Thos. Wyer.

See St. Croix Courier Hist. Series, No. XLIII. He carried on a trading and lumbering business, that was quite extensive in its day, at Digdeguash. He was loyal to the crown throughout the War of the Revolution. He had business transactions with Hazen, Simonds and White at St. John.

General Carleton's Observations.

Feb. 10, 1802.

As regards the establishing of Telegraphic communication from St. John to Fredericton and on the sea coast at Cape Musquash, Point LePro, and on the southern Wolf, the orders of H. R. H. would have been undoubtedly a full justification to Gen'l Carleton for incurring the expence, and the General's duty and inclination would have prompted him to have paid implicit obedience to the commands of H. R. H., but on the present occasion the General was compelled to avail himself of that experience which he had acquired by a long residence here, and to take into consideration a number of local & peculiar circumstances which he presumed might not have been clearly pointed out to H. R. R. and which must have rendered useless and ineffectual any effort to carry on such a communication here. The Fogs in the Bay of Fundy during the principal part of the summer are so thick and impenetrable that objects cannot be discovered even at very small distances. The Telegraphic stations were necessarily so far apart as not to be visible from each other except in clear weather. Some of 'em were to be fixed on prominences in the Bay formed entirely of rocks. From these inhospitable spots it would have been almost impossible to prevent desertions, especially as the American vessels are constantly fishing in the Bay and might take them off with the utmost facility. An instance of the kind happened on the coast of Nova Scotia with a sergeant and party of the 66th Reg't in July, 1800, who never were recovered.

Nine stations were required between F'ton and St. John, most of these were taken on heights difficult of access and not cleared. It was therefore necessary not only to clear away places for erecting the buildings, but also to open views thro' forests, in some instances of considerable extent. These expences were not anticipated when the estimates were formed. But an objection more forcible than all the other remains to be mentioned. A hundred men (at least) would be required to attend such a chain of telegraphs as was contemplated, and as the General had no other Troops under his command but the New Brunswick Regiment, which then consisted of about 290 effective men, he could not have furnished the complement for the Telegraphs without abandoning some of the most important posts in the province, and changing the whole distribution of the troops.

Some of the stations too were taken on Ground belonging to individuals, who would have required compensation for the inconveniences which must have resulted to them from carrying on these services on ground which had been secured to them by his Majesty's patent, and which in several instances had been cleared and cultivated with great labour and expence.

Henry Nase to Edward Winslow.

Westfield, 23rd October, 1800.

My dear Colonel,—In March, 1799, I memorialled His Excellency the Governor for some back Lots surveyed fifteen or sixteen years ago for some Negroes, which they have never settled—in front of which I possess a small lot of 100 acres directly opposite Col. Coffins. From the evacuated state of this settlement, I am under the necessity of abandoning the situation I have occupied for fourteen years past, and am building on the lot in front of this vacant Land. * * *

If you will have the goodness to undertake the business for me and procure a Grant I shall be forever obliged besides paying every expence it may be attended with. It is not without real concern that I give you this trouble, but it is of the utmost consequence that I should have a Grant before I proceed any further with my Buildings, as I am already considerably embarrassed and have a large family to support. The number of Lots applied for I think was seven, but if more could be obtained I should be very glad. I have four fine boys and have no other way of providing for them but learn them to work and make them farmers. I am sensible I take a great liberty, but I hope my circumstances and my situation will plead my excuse—be assured if it ever lies in my power I shall be as ready as I have ever been to execute your commands.

I remain with respect, my dear Colonel,

Your faithful and obedient servant,

Henry Nase.

Governor Fanning to Edward Winslow.

Prince Edward Island, 27th Oct., 1800.

My dear Sir,—I trust you will believe me sincere when I assure you I was made exceedingly happy by the receipt of your friendly and obliging letter by the return of Mr. Wentworth. The information you gave me respecting yourself and your numerous & amiable family was infinitely more interesting to my private feelings & friendly wishes than you can imagine. I should be exceedingly happy to have it in my power to pay you a visit and note the change which seventeen years had made in the families and persons of my friends in New Brunswick, as well as in the cultivation and improvement in the face of a country which I thought capable of great alterations, from the advantages of soil and situation on inland Rivers the finest I had ever beheld; and my partiality in favor of its inhabitants redoubles my wishes to see it again.

I am well pleased to hear you cheerily philosophize on the want of money. I hope you and yours may never know the want of those comforts & enjoyments which are the only use and benefit of it. And with your happy disposition and abilities I trust you never will. * *

As Mr. Wentworth found himself superseded as Attorney General* on his return to this Island by the King's appointment of Mr. Macgowan, who had acted under my appointment since the dismissal of Mr. Aplin, he has taken it into his head to be displeased with me, and consequently has given me no information about any of our old friends in New Brunswick. Pray make amends by being more particular about yourself, family & friends in your next letter, & you will infinitely gratify and oblige, my dear Winslow,

*See Canadian Archives for 1895 under P. E. I., pp. 80, 81. Joseph Aplin, the previous attorney general, had his peculiarities of disposition and temper; he quarrelled violently with Lieut. Governor Fanning and his council. He resigned his seat in the council, and was dismissed from his position as attorney general, which he had held for ten years. Fanning desired to appoint Mr. Wentworth as his successor, but the Duke of Portland, secretary of state, decided that the vacancy should be filled by the appointment of Peter Magowan; Wentworth remonstrated without avail.

†Harris William Hailes married the oldest daughter of Colonel Stephen Miller, cousin of Col. Winslow. He had one son, Harris Hailes, who became a lieutenant colonel in the English army. In 1816-17 the elder Harris W. Hailes was administrator of government, with the title of president and commander in chief. At the time of Edward Winslow's absence from home in connection with the international boundary arbitration in 1796-98, and again when he went to England in 1804, Harris W. Hailes was most kind in his attentions to the Winslow family.

Colonel Edward Winslow to Lieut. Thomas Winslow.

Fredericton, 15th October, 1801.

My dear Boy,—I have this minute opened your letter dated the 4th August, which your sagacious brother Ned observed "was rather before you had arrived at Halifax." This trifling mistake was however productive only of a little amusement to Mr. Clopper & Ned as the contents satisfied me that October was the month intended. The letter was doubly welcome from the communication it contained respecting Sir John. I however yet fear that another Governor is appointed for Nova Scotia. I have seen a letter from high authority to that effect. It is notwithstanding possible that some alteration might afterwards have taken place and that Gov. B.—* might be otherwise accomodated. Wherever Sir John goes my best wishes will follow him. I have been acquainted with him from infancy, and through a great variety of vicissitudes and changes—and I can say with Jack Hatchway (I believe it was), "A truer heart never broke a biscuit." I was much gratify'd by the Halifax paper, there were several articles in it which we had not seen before. The appointment of the Duke to the 1st Reg't must be an unpleasant circumstance to the gentlemen of his old corps, as they must of course have considered it a very high honor to be commanded by a Prince of the Blood. Indeed I supposed that his predilection for the 7th would have prevented his accepting another regiment, nor do I understand in what respect the 1st is preferable.

Our Lieut. Colonel, about whom you enquire, has given me a resting spell. I have not been favored with any of his communications for some time past. I presume General Carleton will soon receive some directions respecting him. We conjecture variously here relative to our military operations. Some are of opinion that the business will be accomodated so that General C. will yet retain the command. Others expect a Major General or Brigadier will be appointed to command in N. Brunswick, and that our original establishment of Troops will be compleated. This perhaps would be the most desirable event for the country, as it would secure to us the exertions of some man of vigour and activity, which we very much want. How such an event would effect me is rather problematical. If an officer comes here with whom I can serve with satisfaction to myself I shall continue* (if required) whether the Head Quarters be at St. John or Fredericton. But should a Gentleman come that I do not like, I'll beat a retreat to Kingsclear. A few months will determine all this. I am perfectly satisfied that if the relinquishment of the Civil Government of this province is the sine qua non upon which General Carleton is to obtain the military command he will refuse it.

*Governor Bentick was spoken of at this time as likely to be appointed Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia, Sir John Wentworth to be transferred to the West Indies. See Murdoch's History of Nova Scotia, Vol. iii, p. 209.

We get on tolerably well in this solitude, the late addition to our house has contributed much to our comfort; indeed (to the credit of Lincoln & Barclay) it is a very compleat building—it will be finished in the course of next week.

Your friend "Joe Russell"† became such a nuisance as to bring down the revenge of the whole society with the Storekeeper General at their head—and what rendered the opposition too formidable to be withstood, the Storekeeper's lady with all the other ladies of a particular description, including many maidens, entered a solemn protest against him. They affirmed that his actions were shameful and indecent and that he was not fit to be seen either before or behind. It was therefore determined that he should be killed, and yesterday put an end to his existence.

"Paddy" is removed into the possession of a very good man named Hollowood who is to pay £6 when he is able. I was offered £5 by Sickles the shoemaker, but I really did not like to see him so frequently, as I must have done in that situation, and I knew he would be ill kept and worked hard.

Our corn crop turned out very well and York Lawrence is this day plowing the field where it grew quite home to the barn. The potatoes are prodigiously fine but will not answer your expectations in point of quantity. I've about 120 bushels in, and I think there's not above 50 more.

I hope your situation is an eligible one. Let me know who commands. Assure yourself my son that I will continue to make every possible exertion to forward your views, and I am satisfied that you will do nothing to thwart or embarrass my operations. I think of you continually and with extreme anxiety. Pray my boy continue your letters by every post; they afford us the highest possible pleasure. Pick up all the news you can and if anything transpires respecting this country let's have it. You know how eager we are for news in this retirement. Your mother joins me in the most anxious wishes for your welfare. Mrs. Miller, Clopper and all hands ask a place in my letter to the same purpose. Chock full. New Canaan* Settlers to Edward Winslow.

January 16, 1802.

On January 16, 1802, Edward Winslow received a communication from settlers at this place conveying "10,000 thanks for former services" and asking him to submit their memorial and survey of their lots to the Governor and Council that the survey might be allowed to stand as it was then. The letter is signed by Seth Bryant, Daniel Keith, George Price, Gideon Corey, John Mathers, Henry Kitchen, Oswel Allward, Benjamin Allward, George Morison, Edmond Price, Michael Thorn, Wm. Humphrey, Richard Thorn, John Price, George Keith, John F. Price, John Humphrey and John Keith. The descendants of these settlers are numerous in the counties of Kings, Queens and Westmoreland, and in other parts of the province.

Alexander Taylor to Edward Winslow.

Miramichi, January 28, 1802.

Dear Sir,—Upon my first arrival at Miramichi the Indians were a great terror to the Inhabitants, there being but very few settlers here. * * * I was told by a brother-in-law and a sister that this Julian family had done a great deal for government. Had it not been for them and a family called Renews† the other Indians would have murdered every English settler that were then there. Observe, my sister and husband was here before me. I came here in 1784; they came, 1777.

I have also found this same disposition in this Indian family ever since my coming here. The papers they now have in custody will show their Grievance and I'm greatly of opinion his Excellency the Governor will cause justice to be done to them. I have, so far as I could prudently do, informed myself of the matter between them and Gilliee, and by all I can understand great injustice is meaned them by that man and his neighbors. Last year I sent a brother of mine to privately view the place in dispute, and he reported to me that they were molested and wronged by this man Gilliee aided by some others. * * * If you think proper to have his Excellency informed of it I do certainly think it would be a great charity because the very road to justice seems to be entangled against these poor creatures, and I'm sure that's not his Excellency's will. I beg you'll forgive this liberty for I take God to witness I say nothing but for Charity's sake. * * * Alex. Taylor.*

*Sir James Alexander, in his book, "L'Acadie," gives a short account of New Canaan as it was in 1844. He says it was settled about the beginning of the present century, and this agrees with the communication which appears above. A Mr. Ryder was at New Canaan as early as 1797. At the time of Sir James Alexander's visit the people had neither store, post office, doctor, minister or lawyer. They held prayer meetings regularly, however. It was a Baptist community, and Sir James Alexander was gravely informed by an old lady "there is no dancing or singing in this settlement."

[NOTE. Alexander Taylor's sister at Miramichi was Agnes Brown. They had a nephew named Alex. Henderson. At the election for the county of Northumberland held in March, 1791, Major Harris W. Hailes was elected in the room of William Davidson, deceased. Alex. Taylor and his relatives supported Major Hailes as did also Robichaud. Taylor, prior to the election, assured Edward Winslow that the generality of the people at the lower end of the river and the French settlers would vote for Hailes. Duncan Mackay, another supporter, wrote to Winslow, "I am made to "understand that some of the candidates or their agents are to bestow "some vituals and drink on their voters, and we design to have a little for "Major Hailes voters (if we can) which it's hoped may not be disagreeable to him or you."]

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 8 March, 1802.

My dear Winslow,—I have the pleasure to announce to you a most fortunate termination of the business about which I expressed so much anxiety in my last. It was discovered upon canvassing and investigating the subject, that the number thirteen as constituting a House has never been established by any standing order of the house or any other authority whatever; of course then any smaller number was sufficient for the purpose, and the members remaining might go on with the business. This made Coffin and some of the more violent ones almost frantic, they insisted upon the Speaker's taking the chair upon the bringing in bills for repealing the city charter; confirming the rights of fishery to Proprietors of the soil; a more equal representation of the several counties; increasing the revenue, etc. This alarmed the Speaker and he refused taking the chair for any other purpose than that of adjourning the house. They were then for proceeding to the choice of a new speaker and every thing was in confusion. This was on Wednesday. Peters† and Yeamans‡ I suppose were alarmed

*Alexander Taylor was a representative of the County of Northumberland in the house of assembly in 1802 and 1809.

†The reference is to James Peters, a native of New York. He was employed as one of the agents for settling the Loyalists on the River St. John in 1783. He took up his abode at Gagetown, and for years represented the County of Queens in the house of assembly; he was an active and useful member. He died at Gagetown, January 15th, 1820, aged 74 years. His sons achieved distinction. Charles Jeffrey Peters was for twenty years Attorney General of the Province. Another son, James, was a leading merchant. A third, Wm. Tyng, was a member of the bar and Clerk of the Legislative Council. A fourth, Benjamin Lester was Police Magistrate at St. John. A fifth, Harry, was Speaker of the House of Assembly.

‡John Yeamans was a Loyalist of Dutchess County, N. Y. He was a representative for Queens County in the first house of assembly, and was also presiding justice of the peace for the county. He died at his residence on Grand Lake in 1824, at the age of 89 years.

and frightened and they went off, so that on Thursday there were only 8 members left. The violent ones having become more moderate, the speaker consented to take the chair upon condition that no new business should be introduced, but merely what had been begun before the other members went away finished. Accordingly they received a message from the Council requesting a conference upon the revenue and appropriation bill, which was acceded to, a committee appointed, who reported that the Council had no objection to any part of it but some words of surplusage respecting the clerk—that if the words Samuel Denny Street, Esq'r,* were struck out, leaving the sum payable to the clerk of the house as on former occasions, they were ready to concur. This the house consented to and the bill was returned and passed in Council. Some other bills before the Council were sent down with amendments which were agreed to, and on Friday the bills received the Governors assent and the two houses were dismissed very graciously in high harmony among all the branches, and thus have "the wicked been taken in their own snare."

The governor is relieved from an immense weight of anxiety, the seditious party are mortified and have rendered themselves contemptible, the Council have preserved their dignity and independence, and the Province is saved from disgrace, and if there is one spark of public spirit in their constituents not one of these Deserters would ever be chosen again.

A warrant was immediately made out in favor of Dugald Campbell for the clerk's pay &c., which he offered to Street with an assignment upon it; who stoutly declared he would never receive a farthing; but upon this subject I think the little Gentleman's stomach will come to. Mr. Hazen has obtained his license of occupation between high and low water mark.†

Seven new magistrates appointed for the City and County of St. John —Robert Parker, Adino Paddock, Colin Campbell, John Black, James Codner, James White Junior and John Brundage, so that upon the whole the session has terminated most fortunately and gloriously and I hope will be productive of much good.

I am very anxious to hear how you get on. * * * shall keep this letter open till the mail for Halifax closes to add anything that may occur that I can think Hailes or yourself may wish to know.

&c. &c. &c. W. Chipman.

*See biographical note under date May 9, 1784.

†This license of occupation was issued by the governor and council in February 25, 1802. It granted to the owners of the soil along the Portland Shore (who were originally James Simonds, James White and Wm. Hazen) the right to possess and occupy the shore from high to low water mark. Under this license they had a monopoly of the wiers and fishing privileges along the shore. This right they claimed to have been theirs from the date of their grant in 1765. However, Chief Justice Ludlow and other eminent legal gentlemen deemed the license of occupation to be "ultra vires," and soon after there began a prolonged controversy, with frequent suits at law, between the citizens of St. John and the old Portland grantees. See article on the "Fishery Quarrel" in the New Brunswick Magazine for August, 1899.

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 17th June, 1802.

My dear Sir,—I fully intended to have wrote you a longer letter in return for your late truly obliging letters, but the Packet is dispatching for England and another for N. York with many passengers, who are some how or other, all of them connected with me; and Captain Foy departs in the stage tomorrow, after too short a stay with us, since his arrival from England. Indeed his amiable manners are so interesting, that we should at any time regret his leaving us. You will all be delighted with him, and I anticipate with great satisfaction the happiness his arrival must afford at Government House.

The business of my removal to the West Indies has subsided intirely. It is strange that I did not rejoice at an arrangement so lucrative. We do not hear of any definite measures for the peace establishment. The N. S. Reg't is not mentioned among the annihilations.

Inclosed is a letter from your Son, who is well. * * * I trust he will make a good man and good officer. Lady Wentworth is quite his Champion and my son is not less interested for his countryman.

We do not hear anything about the instructions for granting lands. It is late in the evening. Adieu. Be assured I am

Your sincere & affect. friend,

J. Wentworth.

Edward Winslow to Lieut. Thomas Winslow.

Kingsclear, June 20th, 1802.

I yesterday finished and sealed up a very lengthy letter to you my dear Boy in continuation of the remarks made in my last. * * * I remain extremely ill and until yesterday I have not attempted to stand alone for some weeks. It was the source of much mortification to me that I was unable to stir during all the time that Gen'l Bowyer was in N. Brunswick. He had the goodness to call on me, which was some comfort to me; 'tis said he was much pleased with this part of the country notwithstanding the continued efforts of one of his attendants to prejudice him against it. * * *

I have letters from Captain Lyman; he says he saw Murray last January, and that he was to pass for Lieut. the next week and that he advanced him money to pay the fees. I fear he is not made. For God's sake my Boy keep yourself free of debt, so that whenever the disbandment of the Provincial corps takes place you may not be exposed to embarrassment and mortification. In your present retired situation I should think you could not be exposed to much expence. Let me entreat you also as a father and a friend to be cautious in chusing your companions and friends. It would give me infinite pain to hear of any censure upon you just as the scenes before you appear to be changing. Everything I saw and everything I heard at Halifax delighted me highly. Continue my good fellow to deserve the esteem of men of men of honor and men of sense. Visit as often as you can at the Chief Justices, Mr. Brenton's &c., and omit no opportunity of paying the most respectful attention to Sir John and Lady Wentworth. By the way I have experienced some anxiety about a long letter and a view of Fredericton which I sent his Excellency. I don't yet know whether he ever received them. 'Tis a bargain between us that he is not to answer all my letters but I wish you would enquire whether this particular one ever came to his hands. The winding up of the brilliant Col. Pollard is not much to his credit. I am not personally acquainted with Phoebe Moody but I feel extremely distressed for her. * * *

Mr. Wanton is obliged to return to this port again to the great mortification of his powerful dame. They'll not allow him to make any exchange or negotiate any transfer or sale of his collectorship.

When you meet any of my old friends Mr. Brinley, Hartshorne, Taylor, &c, &c., remember me affectionately to them.

Your Mama, Pen, Ned, Went, Hannah, Sarah Ann, Eliza, Chris, & Cat, all bawl out together from the breakfast table, "Give my love to Tom." Take it in a lump and accept a large allowance of the same commodity from

Your affectionate Father,

Ed. Winslow.

Charles J. Peters to Edward Winslow.

Saint John, 26th June, 1802.

Dear Sir,—I this day received your kind favor with the enclosures and shall make it my particular care to pay all attention to Mr. Bedell's* case. Independent of my personal regard for him, your interesting yourself for him would be a paramount consideration. I have received many civilities on my passing and stay at his house, both from Mr. Bedell and his wife and I feel myself extremely happy that I shall have it in my power to render them any service. The complexion of the case, as I draw it from your letter and his relation of it, is one in which not only himself but the whole community are interested. The hardened ruffian must be a villain of the most dangerous stamp. There is no jury in the country but must say that if Mr. Bedell shall get every farthing which it may be in the power of the villain to pay, it will be but a nominal consideration for the injury he has sustained. I have communicated my opinion to Mr. Bedell and shall take immediate steps to obtain all possible redress.

*John Bedell was born Dec. 9, 1755, at Richmond, on Staten Island. During the Revolution he was private secretary to Colonel Christopher Billopp, the magnate of the island. He came to New Brunswick in 1783, and was engaged with his brother, Paul Bedell, in the survey of Parr Town and other grants of land for the Loyalists. He married a niece of the Rev. Frederick Dibblee, and settled in Woodstock in 1788 at Bedell's Cove. For more than forty years he was the leading parish magistrate. He was the first judge of the court of common pleas and registrar of deeds and wills for the County of Carleton, also commissioner of roads, town clerk, overseer of the poor, trustee of schools, church warden, &c. He died in 1838, aged 83 years, leaving a family of seven sons and three daughters. Three of his sons, John, Walter and Augustus, died within a fortnight of each other of pneumonia, and the event caused a sensation at Woodstock.

I am sorry to hear you have been so severely attacked by your enemy the gout. However from your beginning again to handle the pen I conclude he is fast making his retreat. Please to give my best respects to Mrs. Winslow and family and believe me &c. &c. &c.

Charles J. Peters.*

[Note. The minutes of the York County sessions of the Peace under date June 10, 1802, show that Peter Clark of Woodstock, living near John Bedell on what is now the Peabody property, was indicted for assaulting and beating Margaret Bedell, Robert George Roberts and John Bedell. He was found guilty, sentenced to pay a fine of £40 and bound over to keep the peace for two years in the sum of £100 with two sureties for £50 each. The letter of Mr. Peters doubtless is in connection with this affair. W. O. R.]

Letter of Edward Winslow to the Royal Gazette.

[July, 1802.]

It is an observation made by a late traveller;—"That the people of America have a strange propensity to change their situations." He says,—"It is not an uncommon thing to see families, who have encountered and overcome all the obstacles which naturally arise in forming new settlements, and are just beginning to realize the comforts and enjoy the sweets of their own labour, consenting to abandon their possessions, and engaging anew in the same scenes of difficulty and distress."— Had that judicious writer passed through the Province of New Brunswick, he would have seen instances of this disposition which might have excited a greater degree of astonishment than any which he could possibly have met with in the back parts of the United States. * * * It is an established fact that the Province of New Brunswick has been principally settled by an order of men who call themselves Loyalists—men who fought in the service of the King during a long war, and who, at the unfortunate termination of it, made an election to plunge into a wilderness with their wives and children rather than submit to the humiliating and degrading necessity of soliciting mercy from those whom they were in the habit of considering rebels.

*Hon. Charles Jeffrey Peters, son of James Peters of Gagetown, N. B., was born in 1772 and came to the province with the Loyalists. He was attorney general in 1828, and held the office until his death in 1848.

Actuated by the same laudable and manly spirit they persevered, and they combated difficulties, fatigues and toils which, in a bad cause, they would have sunk under. Here they soon obtained a constitution or government similar (so far as was practicable) to the British. Lands were assigned to them, and cherished by a temporary bounty from a benevolent Sovereign they went to work with a degree of alacrity which was never exceeded. Huts were erected which at first were hardly sufficient to shelter their families, and little holes were cut in the forest. A few potatoes and a scanty crop of rye were the only rewards for the immense labor of the first and second years. During the 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th, although the prospects brightened a little, the difficulties were great and many discouraging circumstances occurrred; but under all this pressure of care and perplexity the voice of murmur could scarcely be heard among them.

At the expiration of fifteen or sixteen years the scenes are materially changed. Enter the habitations of the Farmers in almost every part of the Province now and, with very few exceptions, you'll find them tight, warm and comfortable, you'll see the man and woman surrounded by a flock of children—robust, hearty and useful, clad in homespun, feeding upon their own mutton, with bread, butter and cheese in abundance. In many instances you may discover not only the comforts of life, but luxuries procured by their over-plus produce, which never fails to find an easy and sure market,— or by their winter exertons in masting, getting timber, wood, &c, for which they receive the most liberal wages. Their barns and out-houses contain a stock of cattle, horses, sheep, swine, &c, of more value than their ancestors in [New] Jersey or New England ever possessed for three generations before they were born. Enquire among 'em for a Grievance and they'll not be able to point out one :—

Are you oppressed with taxes ? No.

Does anybody interrupt you in matters of conscience ? No.

Do the laws afford you sufficient protection ? Why yes.

This is the unexaggerated state of the Province now, and this too at a time when one half the countries in the world have been ruined by a calamitous war.

Notwithstanding all which, among the very people I have described, a few giddy, eccentric, and discontented characters have appeared who, forgetting all the favors which they received from our government, have made a voluntary sacrifice of their former honorable principles and professions, have sold the lands that were granted them, and meanly skulked into the United States. There they have made their submission; there they have become literally "hewers of wood and drawers of water"; and as an act of grace are permitted to eat, drink and vegetate. But in place of being buoyed up under affliction by the reflection of having done their duty as honest men and faithful subjects, they are compelled to consider the most meritorious actions of their lives as the most atrocious offences which they ever committed.

These men and their leaders will furnish subject matter for a future essay. I shall therefore quit 'em for the present and pass on to another class, who are not quite so culpable, but who appear to be influenced by the same extraordinary caprice — I mean those who have lately removed with their families to other parts of the King's dominions, particularly to Niagara. In comparing the two countries I declare that I have no intention of casting a reflection upon the Province of Upper Canada. I have a high respect for the government there, a good opinion of the country, and sincerely wish it prosperity. The final determination of a few changeable people with respect to the place of their residence is a matter of no importance either to them or to us, and the remarks which I shall make will perhaps apply with equal force to those who would wantonly and inconsiderately leave that Province and come to this. The principal object I have in view is to enquire whether there is any sufficient temptation offered to induce a Farmer, who has conquered the great difficulties of making an establishment here, to disturb the peace of his family and to undertake the arduous task of removing to a place so difficult to approach and so remote. It is obvious that there is no essential difference between the constitutions and the laws of the two Provinces. Allow that in Canada the climate is more mild, the winters not so long, the land if you please easier cleared, and the crops (particularly of wheat) more abundant. Possibly these considerations might have afforded good reasons for an original preference, but let us put against these advantages the acknowledged unhealthiness of the climate, the impossibility of selling that part of their produce which they cannot consume, the immense prices of many of the necessaries of life and the total want of winter employment. Would any man in his senses readily barter sound health for fevers, agues and debility ? Would he relinquish a Farm, cleared with his own hands, which supplies him with everything he wants and something to spare, for a redundance of wheat, which he can't sell and a surplusage of Pork which he can't find salt to save ?

Now let us throw into the scale a small proportion of the troubles which must be encountered in the course of such a removal. I hate misery so cordially that I can hardly bear to draw a picture of it, but in the present case I can't help it. Mark then the progress.

One of these adventurers who has arrived at Niagara, and finds himself a little in a scrape—on the principle of the old song of "Welcome, welcome, brother debtor"—sits down and writes a letter to his Cousin B—— in New Brunswick in which he courts him to come to the same place, and amuses him with a ridiculous and romantic tale of produce without labour, spontaneous grain, and wild hogs. B—— reads this letter to his wife Martha just as they are going to bed — both of them dream that they are transported to the Elysian fields where they have nothing to do but to gaze on the beauties of the scene — to open their mouths and swallow the delicious things that are cut and dryed for them. In the morning they compare notes, and they are astonished at the similitude of their delightful visions. From this moment the whole matter is settled. Time begins to hang heavily. Labor becomes more severe. Even the winters grow longer in imagination—nothing now is heard but,— "Let us move — pray let us go, Oh Niagara; Niagara oh!"

Without much ceremony the place is offered for sale—to the credit of the country be it written—a purchaser instantly appears, and the bargain is concluded. Now comes the trying scene. The new proprietor calls to take possession. Those who bought the cattle apply for them; one drives off a favorite cow, another the oxen, a third takes the mare and colt. Even the beasts as they face to the right about seem to reproach their former owner for this unnatural and wanton separation. The plough and harrow are transferred to other hands, the articles of furniture, collected with care, are scattered and sold for less than half their value. B—— and his wife, followed by their train of children, walk slowly from the habitation where till lately they were content and happy and seek a temporary shelter among the neighbors. In a few days you find them at the first place of embarkation, waiting for a vessel or a wind — exposed to heavy expences and many inconveniences. If you follow them to St. John, you will see them for days together loitering in the streets, the man and woman beginning to be dejected, the children in their best clothes staring about eating cookies, the money going in all directions. At length an opportunity offers for New York; they are cram'd on board a vessel, and in a few hours are tumbling upon the ocean, seasick and completely wretched. After a long passage they arrive in that great city, where in a few days young Joshua is seized with the yellow-fever and dies—others of the family are sick, their pockets are picked by cruel extortioners. And thus oppressed with grief and almost borne down by the weight of their misfortunes the unfortunate parents with their surviving children are compelled to set off upon their tedious journey.

God forbid that I should attend them a single step further or that I should bear witness to that variety of distress which they must necessarily experience. I had rather bring them at once to "the land of promise" with the miserable remnant of their hard earned property. * * * Let us suppose that every obstacle is removed and that they are put in possession of a tract of land; their stock of cash exhausted, every member of the family enfeebled by that most disheartening of all disorders the fever and ague, and that they begin to realize that they have the same serious duties to perform which they have been accustomed to in New Brunswick; that houses cannot be built without hands, and that crops are not produced without labor. This is the time to ask the solemn and important question, "What have we gained by all these sacrifices, sufferings and distress ?"

Here I must leave them to settle the account. In the mean time I call upon speculative readers of all denominations, between the two great extremes of Philosophers and Fools, inclusive, to account for that passion or propensity, or whatever else you may call it, which causes some of the children of men thus voluntarily to surrender the peace, comfort and happiness of themselves and their families.

Tammany.*

Isaiah and Moses Shaw to Edward Winslow.

Maguagudavick, 23rd July, 1802.

Sir,—Your kind letter of the 22nd ulto. we had the pleasure of receiving some little time back, and we want words to express our gratitude and thanks to you for the polite and friendly interest you are pleased to take in promoting our undertaking in this quarter, which from various unexpected circumstances proves to be more expensive and arduous than we at first had an idea of. However we are happy to state that now our difficulties are mostly surmounted and we have a well grounded hope that our enterprise will be productive of great publick utility as well as advantageous to ourselves.

We have erected two complete double saw mills which, if no accident happens to them, will saw each season upwards of 2,000,000 feet of boards. You may reasonably suppose, Sir, that the manufacturing of so much lumber each year will afford employment for a great number of men and oxen, and will induce a number more settlers to come here. It will also increase the value of landed property in this quarter, as has been already experienced here, and likewise will be the means of procuring subsistence to a number of needy families in this and the adjacent settlements.

*It is not quite certain that Edward Winslow wrote this letter, and that follows in these pages under the same nom de plume, but the internal evidence is so strong that there can be little doubt that he was the writer. See in this connection Winslow's letter to Sir John Wentworth of March, 1803.

We are happy to learn that the restriction laid upon Grants is likely to be withdrawn soon. We beg leave however to mention that the season for sawing is now so far advanced (and we have several lumber engagements to fill) that it would be attended with great disadvantage and loss to our interest for either of us to go to Fredericton at present. It would therefore greatly add to our catalogue of obligations if you would have the goodness to defer bringing our application for Land forward in Council till next winter, at which time one of us will attend with the statement you require.

We have a further reason for wishing to delay a discussion till the time above mentioned which is that in all probability our friend and neighbor, Colonel Mackay, will have occasion to be present then on publick service, who from his knowledge of our character as well as our operations and works in this settlement will be able to satisfy His Excellency the Governor and the Council with respect to any questions they may please to put to him on the subject of our claim &c. He will also, we trust, aided by your friendly offices, be able to remove from the minds of that Honorable body any unfavorable impressions which may have been made by means of the false and truly illiberal insinuations of some envious and secret enemies. Being conscious, however, that we never gave the smallest cause to any person to act thus ungenerously towards us, we consider our calumniators as more objects of pity than of resentment. We are infinitely obliged to you, Sir, for the high opinion you are pleased to entertain of us, and it will be our particular and constant study to merit a continuance of it. Pardon the prolixity of this scrawl.

We are with sentiments of profound respect and esteem, Sir,

Your much obliged & faithful humble servants,

Isaiah & Moses Shaw.

Note. On June 21, 1823, Moses Shaw advertised for sale:

"A new double saw mill, house and land, &c, &c, at New River emptying into Mace's Bay. Also a double saw mill 4 years old on Lepreaux River. On this river [Lepreaux] there are 430 acres of land on both sides which extend up one and a half miles, a very pleasant situation. Also a stream emptying into said bay to the east side of the above, a very handsome place for setting a single saw mill and quite contiguous to a fine situation for ship building. Also two fertile islands near the above at which places vessels can load close to the mills.

WANTED—A partner to help on with the mills at the Restook and Grand Falls. Having made application to several enterprising characters on this subject, the subscriber is determined to accept of any person God sees fit to send with about £500 in goods and cash.

As the gear is made and the frame out for one double mill she can be built and ready to cut by 1st September and can square 1,000 Tons timber and cut 200,000 Deals which may be brought to market by the fall rains. All is stopt for want of means.

When viewing these situations there is no man of erudition but what will be highly pleased, as they are the best stands for mills in all this part of America.

Whatever is done must be done soon."

Moses Shaw.

Alexander Taylor to Edward Winslow.

Burnside, Miramichi, Aug't 28th, 1802.

My worthy Sir,—This poor boy, my son Patrick, comes to your Quarter in quest of that small parcel of Land & Marsh you have formerly heard of, which I believe may be the last effort he may make. It's too tedious to narrate here the trouble he hath mett with concerning it; however, if you'll only wance more have the goodness to hear his story and look at his papers you'll perceive how he hath been dealt with. * * Now Sir I shall say no more on that score but leaves my Son to God & your protections.

Pray Sir, what will you advise about our next Election? My son will if you please Inform you on our situation. * * *

I have the honor to be with my blessing to you, your Lady & family, my dear & worthy Sir,

Your most obed't humble serv't,

Alex. Taylor.

Hon'ble Col. Edw'd Winslow.

Letter of Edward Winslow to the Royal Gazette.

[September, 1802.]

In a former letter I expressed my intention to take further notice of those men whose example, in my opinion, had some influence in causing the removal of a few simple people from this Province to the United States. The persons to whom I particularly allude are officers of the Half-pay list, who came to this country with the Provincial troops, and soon afterwards abandoned it. I shall not controvert the right of man to remove from one country to another as interest, ambition or fancy may dictate. * * * I mean only to relate a number of facts for the purpose of wiping off any unfavorable impressions which may have been made with respect to that country, where it has pleased Almighty God to place me, and which with his blessing I trust will soon become prosperous and happy. Possibly in so doing I may appear to bear hard upon some individuals. I can only say that I have no personal enmity towards them, but I consider it necessary for my present purpose to give a concise account of those persons, who by leaving the Province of New Brunswick at a critical period, afforded a triumph to our enemies and set an example injurious to our interests. * * *

This task I shall perform in my own way. I aim not at elegance. I write to be understood.

I presume I should give just cause of offence to any gentleman who engaged in the military service of the King during the American rebellion, if I did not at once allow him to have been governed by principles of loyalty and honor. The dispute with Great Britain was whether the colonies should be independent or not. The war was against the British Crown and the rights of Parliament — not against us. When honorable rank and liberal pay was bestowed on these gentlemen, they must on their part have stipulated to vindicate the cause of their lawful sovereign, and to support the principles of the British constitution.

Either they meant this or they meant nothing. At the close of the war the Provincial officers were placed in a situation of peculiar embarrassment, and they made a manly representation of their circumstances to the then commander in chief, the venerable Lord Dorchester, by whom it was transmitted to his Majesty. In the memorable paper then presented, among other sentences of great energy, was one to the following effect: "The animosities are so heightened by the blood which has been spilt in the controversy that it will be impossible for us to return to our former homes." This consideration undoubtedly operated upon the benevolent mind of the Father of his People and upon the magnanimous British nation, when the half-pay for life was indiscriminately granted.

A great proportion of those officers came to this Province, took up their lands, and instantly engaged in the arduous duties of organizing a government. To their unremitted exertions in the various capacities of Legislators, Magistrates, &c, it is principally owing that the tranquility of this Province has been preserved through all the confusion which modern philosophy has produced. * * *

I now reluctantly descend to those who (apparently) came here upon speculation. Some of 'em were "heroes of the first water." Othello like, they told of "disastrous chances," "hair breadth 'scapes," and "battles hardly fought," and they discovered a wonderful degree of enthusiasm in all their operations; but as soon as they had secured to themselves every benefit which could possibly result from such a situation, they commenced their negotiations for leave to visit their friends in the States. After a variety of difficulties they obtained it; two or three of 'em, whose accommodating nerves qualify'd 'em for any situation, and whose allegiance, like their epaulets was made to rig and unrig, set off to reconnoitre.

At first, says an accurate informer, they were not very kindly received, nor were they admitted among the better sort of folks, though after they had remained some time in obscurity, they were allowed to go into company with elderly ladies at their evening parties. Thus far, and I verily believe no farther, did they advance on their first visit.

By the persevering efforts of their importunate solicitors, who did not fail to represent their kinsmen as deluded men who had never bloodied their fingers, which in some instances I suspect was very true, they were indulged to make a second visit. A bold push was then made and the interests of all the families were united and exerted.

Suffice it to say that after a series of solicitations, for the result of which they were waiting in continual agitation, they were favored with licence to become citizens, and we now find them exercising their various callings of hucksters, grocers, auctioneers, &c. What became of their pride or their loyalty during these negotiations it is not for me to inquire. I shall only add at present that they yet remain in the enjoyment of their half pay and that the inhabitants of our mother country have, through a war of infinite expence, borne tax after tax to supply the fund out of which these trading subjects of Thomas Jefferson have received their allowances.

Nay my brethren ! when lately at the call of your country your honest hearts were beating quick with loyalty; when you were curtailing yourselves and your families of some of your rational enjoyments, and were pressing forward to contribute your mite towards relieving the national burden; it was to replenish that stock a part of which has been thus appropriated*.

Presumptious as it may appear for an obscure man in an obscure corner to make remarks upon the application of the public monies of the nation, I am not ashamed to avow that such reflections have arisen in my mind, and I think they will intrude themselves upon the mind of every man who has the dignity of the sovereign and the honor of the Government fairly at heart.

The defection of these officers, I say, had a tendency to weaken that principle of duty which ought to exist in the breast of every genuine loyalist and every faithful soldier of the King.

Shall I be told in answer to this, in the common mercantile cant of the times, that every man will go to that place where he can make most money ? Let it be observed that my remarks do not apply to these gentlemen in their "trading capacities." They are addressed to them as military gentlemen, as men who voluntarily entered into the service of the Sovereign of Great Britain, who received honorable marks of his favor such as rank, pay, &c, and who are still enjoying his bounty.

If these considerations produce no remorse for having alienated themselves from his dominions—I can only say that in my opinion the country which has adopted them will have but little reason to boast of the acquisition, and that which they have left will never lament their departure.

Tammany.

*The reference is to the generous sums subscribed by the Half-pay officers and other inhabitants of the Province to the fund for the Nation Defence towards which their contribution was equivelent to about twelve thousand dollars.

Jonathan Sewell, Jr., to Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 12th October, 1802.

My dear Sir,—Capt. Foy* returns tomorrow, which enables me to return you my best thanks for your letter and the pamphlets which I received from him.

I am sorry to find that you are still tormented in your Province with so poor a faction as that with which you have had constantly to contend since its first establishment. An honorable opposition is respectable, but I fear that your opposition is neither one nor the other.

We have endeavored to be as civil to Capt. Foy and Mrs. Carleton as their short stay would permit, but many friends have not been able to pay them the attention which they wished. The Governor was on their arrival, and during a part of their stay, absent at Montreal. Our excellent and mutual friend T. A. Coffin was also absent during the whole time nearly. The busy season of the year has also contributed, but upon the whole they are not suffered to depart without many marks of friendship to themselves and attachment to the Carleton family, for which Quebec will for many years to come I doubt not be distinguished. * * *

With my best compliments to your family & to all friends I am, my dear Sir,

Most sincerely & affectionately yours,

J. Sewell.

Edward Winslow to Amos Botsford.

Kingsclear, 16th October, 1802.

Dear Sir,—Letters have been recently received from our late Agent† and other Persons of distinction in England in which they express great concern that at a time when emigrations are taking place from Europe to Nova Scotia, to the Canadas, the West Indies, &c, it is not in their power to give such an account of the Province of New Brunswick as might induce a proportion of those emigrants to become settlers there. They therefore request that we would furnish them with information respecting the extent, population, cultivation, principal places, fortresses, harbours, trade, revenues, &c; with some remarks on the use that this province is of to the Empire, and the advantages that might be derived from its possession; Also some account of its Government, its expences and the state of society, and of such other matters as might be interesting. They add that if such information can be obtained they will make the best possible use of it.

*Captain N. Foy was private secretary and aide-de-camp to Lieut. Gov. Carleton, and accompanied the latter to England when he left the province in 1803. Lt. Gov. Carleton married in April, 1783, Hannah, widow of Capt. Edward Foy of the Royal Artillery. She was a daughter of John Van Horne of Somerset, New Jersey. Captain Foy was her son by her first husband. He and General Coffin fought a duel. See letter under date Aug't 15th, 1803.

†The reference is to Brook Watson, who was agent for the province in England from 1786 to 1795.

An anxious desire to effect an object which I conceive to be of great importance to the province has induced me to undertake the task of collecting and digesting such information as our friends have required. I will therefore make no apology for requesting that you will take the trouble to furnish me with such a statement for the County of Westmoreland as will enable me to insert it in a general estimate which I am preparing, and it will afford me the most particular satisfaction to receive from your pen such observations as may occur to you upon any of the general subjects referred to especially the use the province might be of to the empire.

I enclose a form, &c,

E. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to David Owen, Esq.

Kingsclear, October 18th, 1802

Sir,—Several letters have lately been received from England, some of 'em from gentlemen of distinction, in which we in this country have been justly censured for not having furnished our friends with such information as would enable them to give a favorable account of the province; they observe "that at a time like the present when emigrations are taking place to almost every other country, such information could not fail of being useful." An extract of one of those letters I now take the liberty of inclosing.

Impelled by an anxious desire to serve the province to the utmost extent of my abilities I have undertaken to make a collection of facts and to transmit them. To enable me to do this with any degree of accuracy I am under a necessity of soliciting the assistance of gentlemen of judgment and abilities in different parts of the province, who are acquainted with all the local peculiarities of the places where they reside. A consideration that the islands of Passamaquoddy Bay and the adjacent coasts form a most interesting part of New Brunswick, and that you have a perfect knowledge of them, has induced me to request that you will evince their importance, and that you will extend your observations to some of the general subjects mentioned in the extract, particularly what relates to the use which this province might be of to the empire.

The "Form" has columns ruled for a return from the several Counties under the following heads:—Towns; Harbors; Fortresses; Extent; Trade; Population (Men, Women, children over 10, children under 10, slaves, Total); State of Cultivation; Remarks, particularly on lands now vacant and the advantages which they possess. [Letter unsigned.]

Alex. Taylor to Edward Winslow.

Miramichi, Oct'r 25th, 1802.

My Honb'le and good friend,

Our election commenced the 20th current & ended the 21st. Jas Fraser Esq'r one of our former members & me had the honor to be elected by a considerable majority. Mr. Lee was put up by our Coroner but was far inferior in votes. * * * * I did not omit at the opening of the Poll to read Mr. Wetmore's character & to say in presence & in the hearing the whole Assembly that I was certain Mr. Wetmore's abilitys far exceeded mine and I had the strongest reasons not to doubt his will to serve us faithfully & honestly and if my friends would vote for him so would I with the greatest of pleasure and would neither ask nor wish any of their votes for myself, but found it would not take with half; either him or me would require to prevail. * * * It was advanced by some at the Election that Mr. Wetmore & the Gentlemen who accompanied him said that I had repeatedly wrote you before the Election to put the name of any two men on a piece of paper & forward that to me & I would have them elected; which advancement was likely to do much hurt notwithstanding I entirely denied that you or Mr. Wetmore had said any such thing. A great many redicoules things were advanced by some of Mr. Lee's & Mr. Fraser's friends. * * *

In expectation of having the honor to hear from you by this bearer— I am, with as great respect as mankind can have,

Your most obed't serv't

Alex. Taylor.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Kingsclear, 20th November, 1802.

My dear Chipman,—There being a kind of cessation of our public duties at present I undertake to communicate to you the particular circumstances of a project in which I have engaged, the motives which influence me, and the steps which I have already adopted. My joints are so crippled that I can't write without extreme pain and I am obliged to make use of a very young amanuensis.*

* * * His Excellency some time ago gave me to understand that he intended going to England in the Spring. As this communication appeared to me to be something like a mark of confidence, it excited sensations of gratitude in my mind and led me to a conversation most interesting. I asked him pointedly whether he had made any arrangement or preparation for such an event. His answer was (as upon most other occasions) costive and guarded and of course unsatisfactory to me.

*The amanuensis was his son Wentworth, then a boy of nine years of age. The writing is school-boyish, but clear, and the spelling creditable.

I had put the question not to gratify an idle curiosity but from the warmth of my regard for him, and I was determined to persevere; I therefore ventured to say something to the following effect:—

"Sir, you have been the Governor of this province ever since its creation. When you meet the King and his Ministers are you competent to answer such questions as they must ask you respecting the state of it? Have you any idea even of the present population Have you any compact chronological record of the leading political events which have taken place to which you may refer to refresh your memory? Do you recollect all the motives and arguments which operated upon your own mind to induce you to fix the seat of Government at Fredericton (for instance)? Can you recollect the military reasons for establishing the Head Quarters there, or for establishing the Posts at Presque-Isle and the Grand Falls? Can you trace the progress of party here and justify the measures which you have adopted unless you make memorandums of the most important transactions ?" * * *

I leave for verbal communication a relation of the evident effects which my observations had upon his mind. They produced some reproaches upon those whose peculiar business it was to have given him these intimations before, but I saw the absolute necessity of checking such a train of reflections. I convinced him that it was not too late to undertake the task, and that it was not so arduous as he might at first suppose; that his public officers were men of abilities, and that the winter was before them — and I declare most solemnly to you that at that moment I had not the most distant idea of meddling in the business myself, but a single remark of his own, made with uncommon emphasis, plunged me at once into the scrape, and I told him in plain words that if I could be guarded against the effects of jealousy from those about him; if I could harmonize with the Secretary and could be availed of his superior abilities and records; if at the same time I could be allowed to consult you; I would endeavor to accomplish all that might be necessary for him.

These conditions were accepted with the greatest apparent alacrity, and I believe the business was explained to the Secretary the next day and he has given me the most candid and unequivocal proofs of his readiness to assist. * * *

I have a very elegant book into which I mean to enter my remarks and which I do not mean to present to him until it is complete. The state of population I shall obtain, not with fractional exactness, but near enough to be satisfactory, and I've already written to my own deputies and several others in every County to make estimates for me.

I have also written to the most judicious of 'em requesting that they would give me information on other subjects and to favor me with local descriptions, &c., and I will make the most of them. The inclosed papers will give you an idea of the plan which I have adopted. I presume that I shall have answers or shall procure the necessary information so as to have a general arrangement by the time the Supreme Court sits. In the mean time I wish you would revolve the subject in your mind and that you will sketch a state of facts respecting the operations of the 1st General Assembly, and such observations as you may think proper to make relative to the conduct of the subsequent General Assemblies, and when we get together we will digest the entire business. * * *

The people I have written to are A. Botsford and Millidge of Westmorland; Mr. Odell has written to Col. Mackay and the new clerk of the court of Charlotte County, and I have also written to David Owen respecting the islands, &c. At Northumberland I have engaged Mr. Lee*, Sheriff Reed†, and Taylor‡; Queens County, Judge Peters; Kings County, Nase, with a request to consult Coffin, Leonard, &c., and I expect to avail myself of their assistance when they come up. At Sunbury, Hubbard is employed. So that I stand a chance of procuring authentic information. You know that in all matters of this nature I am indefatigable, and that on such an occasion I shall take more pains than any other man would. You also know how important your advice will be to me and that without your correcting hand my performance must be imperfect. Public considerations will therefore unite with personal friendship to induce you to afford me your best assistance.

The letters which I have written vary, as they are addressed to different characters. The inclosed will give you an idea of the footing which I have put the matter upon generally. I have reasons of great weight to prevent me from committing what I shall write to the inspection of any other man on earth but yourself. I've already seen sufficient to satisfy me that I should be embarrassed by proposals to make the statement a vehicle to convey acrimonious reflections and opinions to which I cannot honestly subscribe. * * *

I do not expect much benefit from the answers to my letters, except as to the population. Should any of my correspondents however indulge me with general remarks, it will be an easy matter to lop eccentricities and to enliven dull reports.

*Samuel Lee, member of the House of assembly for the County of Northumberland in 1795. He resided on the Restigouche River in 1788, that locality then being a part of Northumberland County.

†Sheriff Reed appears to have succeeded John Mark Cronk De Lesderniers, the second sheriff. Benjamin Marston was first sheriff of the County of Northumberland.

‡The reference is to Alexander Taylor. The circumstances that led to his making his home at Miramichi are detailed in his letter written in April, 1808.

I have now unbosomed myself to you upon this subject as freely as I can under the present circumstances of ill health, &c. I have a great deal more to say but I must omit it. I think I shall be able to convince you that some important objects may be effected by a faithful execution of this duty. As to the labour attending it I care nothing about it. Sickness has not abated the vigor of my mind, nor have disappointments produced despondency. As soon as I am able to work my fingers I'll commence my operations. Sick as I am I have some idea of taking my own horses and attending the two Penelopes to the City [St. John] immediately after Christmas. Ned Miller offers to drive me down and to return again immediately. I would stay till the City Councillors come up to the Assembly. Whether I shall be able to effect this or not I can't say — the contemplation of it serves to amuse. I want very much to see Leonard and yourself together, for in the hurry-scurry way we carry on the business here I may not get a fair chance at you. I have not so much pain but that I think I may risque such a visit.

Dec'r 4, 1802.

You'll see that this letter was begun some time ago and that it was written by my boy. I only intended it as a sort of "rough" to be copy'd when I was able, but as it is intelligible I shall not give myself the trouble. * * *

Affectionately Yours,

E. Winslow.

P. S. I know not how this is to be convey'd.

David Owen Esq. to Edward Winslow.

Compo Bello, Dec'r 15th, 1802.

Hon'ble Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter with the enclosed sketch, which I will fill up as soon as I can render the information accurate and authentic. In the meantime suffer me to suggest the necessity of speedy and very strict attention to the influx of strangers into the County of Charlotte, by no means friendly to the Government of the Province, and of the reception which they find from persons at all times ready to serve their peculiar interests.

Grand Manan, as yet ungranted and only (as is said) occupied by Licence from Nova Scotia; affords a large field; hither they are crowding under various pretences. On this* island they have endeavoured to gain a footing. On Deer Island they have actually defied the proprietor, Capt.

Sir,—The cold season was so far advanced when I received your letter of Nov. 1st that I could not make the necessary enquiries to procure the *Captain James Farrell of Virginia was an ensign in the French war in Braddock's army. He was at one time prisoner of war in France. He married in England a daughter of Admiral Fielding. Captain Farrell was present at the storming of Morro Castle, Havana, in 1762. He sold his commission, and in 1770 purchased Deer Island, opposite St. Andrews. He fixed his residence at Chocolate Cove, and his house is still in existence. He died there in 1823, at the age of 93 years. Captain Farrell had a really romantic career. For further particulars concerning him see St. Croix Courier Hist. Series, Article xlii.

†Frederick Dibblee was born at Stamford, Connecticut, Dec. 9, 1753, being the youngest son of Rev. Ebenezer Dibblee, D. D., for 51 years rector of that parish. He was educated at Columbia College, New York, where he graduated in 1776, probably with the intention of taking Holy Orders. In November, 1776, Frederick Dibblee, with other Stamford Loyalists, was transported to Lebanon, in the eastern part of Connecticut, but was allowed by Governor Trumbull to return home the following spring. In April, 1777, when the King's troops went to Danbury, his life was threatened for refusing to take an active part with the rebels, and he was obliged to take refuge on Long Island, whither his elder brother, Fyler, had already gone. He engaged in trade in company with a Mr. Jackson at Oyster Bay, Long Island, and acquired some property. While residing on Long Island he married Nancy Beach of Stratford. Two of her brothers, William and Lewis Beach, were grantees of Kingston, N. B. Mr. Dibblee and his partner in trade suffered grievously at the hands of the rebels, by whom he was plundered five times to the aggregate amount of £1,200. They came in whale boats from New Jersey and elsewhere. In November, 1782, they stripped him and his wife of their household goods and best wearing apparel. He joined the Loyalists going to St. John under the leadership of the Rev. John Sayre, but could not settle his business in time to go with his brother Fyler in the spring fleet of 1783. His wife's delicate condition and his own health detained him at his father's in Stamford until the following spring, when they came to New Brunswick. Rev. Dr. Dibblee tells a pathetic story of his trials and those of his family in a memorial addressed to Sir Guy Carleton. He speaks of "having his church, self and family, almost shipwrecked in the late civil tempest. "His temporal interest greatly impaired in the storm, his people diminished by "the great number fled for protection, and such as remained overborne and "oppressed with fines, imprisonments and impositions, retaliating acts," &c.

Frederick Dibblee drew a lot in Parr Town, but went to Kingston to live, where at the Easter meetings he was "Chosen to read prayers" at the house of Joseph Scribner. He went to Woodstock in 1787 as a lay missionary teacher to the Indians, under arrangement with the board of the New England Company. Next year he removed his family thither and took up a valuable tract of land. His eldest son, the late Col. Dibblee, was born in Kingston, N. B. Frederick Dibblee acted as lay reader at Woodstock, as he had done at Kingston, and at length, at the request of the people, repaired to Halifax, where he was ordained by Bishop Inglis, Oct. 23, 1791. He was rector of Woodstock until his death in 1826. For further account of him see Historical Articles in Woodstock, N. B. "Dispatch."

statement you requested. But this I have now accomplished and I believe very correctly.

The vacant lands between us and the American Lines are undoubtedly of the very best kind and of very large extent. They have been viewed repeatedly by those who appear to be good judges and they all agree that they are the best they ever saw for a good and extensive settlement. Mr. Close and Mr. Sloakum were here just before the River closed and spent several days in examining them in order to form a settlement there. One great reason why so many are desirous of procuring lands in these parts arises from the idea of the advantage the Americans may be to them, but they all agree that the lands are superior to any they are acquainted with in this or any other country.

There are not less than thirty who have it in contemplation to settle there if they can meet with encouragement from Government. If the Americans settle the Townships they have laid out, their lands must be very valuable and will without doubt be settled if they can be granted by them.

That the design which you have so generously undertaken to advance the prosperity of this Province may meet with its desired success is the sincere prayer of, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

F. Dibblee.

The parish of Woodstock extends 32 miles along the west bank of the St. John River.*

Produce:—Wheat, Rye, Indian Corn, Peas, Oats, Flax, Hemp, Beans of all kinds and all vegetables in the greatest perfection with all grasses. Number of horses 65, cattle 380; also a considerable number of sheep and swine.

Population:—Men 87, women 76, children over ten 82, ditto under ten 143; Total 388.

The Inhabitants of this parish are in general in a most flourishing state. The lands that are cleared and cultivated producing equal to the most sanguine expectation. There is one clergyman for Woodstock and Northampton parishes.

There is a large Tract of land that is vacant stretching to the westward as far as the American lines, and to the north for more than 35 miles, that is superior for cultivation to any that has been examined in these parts. Nothing can equal the description of those that have viewed it. They report it as superior to our best Islands, the woods equally open and of the best quality that this Province produces.

*The Parish of Woodstock at this time included the Parish of Canterbury.

The parish of Northampton* extends 39 miles on the side of the river opposite to Woodstock.

Produce:—the same as Woodstock. Number of horses 36, cattle 251.

Population:—Men 61, women 53, children over ten 113, ditto under ten 101; Total 328. The remarks as to the state and prospects of the settlers similar to Woodstock Parish.

The lands to the east of the Parish of Northampton are not equal to those that extend to the west on the other side of the River, being broken by Hills, Mountains and Lakes. But there are still large Tracts capable of being cultivated to the best advantage.

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

Fredericton, March 1803.

My dear Sir John,—I very well know that your good wishes are not limited to the bounds of your province but that you feel as anxious for the fate of your neighbors as for your own. I therefore have the most particular satisfaction is acquainting you in general terms that the business of our present House of Assembly has been conducted in such a manner as to open to us the fairest prospect of harmony and peace. The question respecting the appointment of the Clerk has been settled in favor of the prerogative of the Crown. The seat of one of the members of the County of St. John has been vacated for bribery and this day closes a contested election for the County of York, after a whole weeks unremitted investigation. The decision is in favor of the sitting members Agnew, McLean*, Davidson and Price†. The consequences of this determination are important indeed, because it secures a majority of men in the House who are zealous supporters of what is here called the cause of the King and his Government. In the present bustle of business I cannot enter into a detail, nor is it necessary, as Mr. Frazer‡ will be soon with you and is thoroughly master of the subject. I have only to say that to this gentleman we are greatly indebted for the very happy change in our affairs.

Perhaps in a pilgrimage thro' this shabby world few men have been placed in a situation more delicate and trying than your Mr. Frazer has been on this occasion. The petitioning party were his country-men and friends—one of 'em his namesake, with whom he had been connected in business, and from whom he had received some favors and marks of attention—besides this he is a partner in one of the first mercantile houses here and he is also connected with some of the most respectable characters

*Captain Archibald McLean of the late New York Volunteers. He saw hard service; was particularly distinguished for his bravery at Eutaw Springs. In the war of 1812 he was staff adjutant. He died in 1830 at his residence on the Nashwaak, aged 76 years.

†Rev. Walter Price is referred to. In the early days of New Brunswick clergymen were appointed to civic positions. For example, Rev. Jonathan Odell was our first provincial secretary; Rev. Dr. John Agnew represented the County of Sunbury in the house of assembly, and was recommended by Lieut. Governor Carleton to a seat in the council (though not appointed); Rev. Walter Price was returned for York County at the election in 1802; Rev. Oliver Arnold was a leading justice of the peace in Kings County, as was Rev. George Pidgeon in the County of York. On the other hand, marriages were frequently solemnized by civil magistrates. See the following:—

"At Miramichi, on the 13th December, 1822, by Alexander Davidson, Esq., Rev. Samuel Bacon to Eliza H., second daughter of Ebenezer Cutler, Esq., of Annapolis."

Judge Joshua Upham and Mary Chandler were married in 1792 by Jas. Law, Esq., of Westmorland. The parents of the Rev. S. D. Lee Street, rector of Woodstock, were married by the same magistrate in the year 1777. Rev. John Millidge and Ann Botsford were married in 1797 by William Allan, Esq., of Westmorland county.

Usually one magistrate in each parish was specially licensed to solemnize marriages.

‡James Fraser of the County of Northumberland, later of Halifax, is here referred to.

in our community. Both the petitioners [Fraser & McLeod*] are men of fair and unexceptionable characters, their friends have on this occasion been drawn forward and every stratagem, every political manoeuvre, that the art of man could contrive has been practised to influence the opinions of the members of the House. There were twenty present—exclusive of the four—nine one one side, nine on the other, and the eyes of the whole community fixed on James Fraser when he rose to pronounce his opinion which side he meant to take, so that the scene was peculiarly interesting. Nor did he immediately relieve the impatient and eager parties. Where he thought censure was due he gave it without reserve, and after a manly, spirited and impartial statement of the facts, he satisfied the public that his discernment had secured him from deception, and that the integrity of his own mind was proof against all the deliberate and insidious attacks which had been made upon him. Utterly regardless of all personal or private considerations, I verily believe that he gave his opinion agreeable to the sober dictates of his own conscience, and he has thereby secured the esteem of every man of sense in this country, and has compelled even those who are disappointed, to acknowledge the honorable principles by which he has been actuated. There is another contested election to be tried, and then I think we shall proceed very smoothly to raise such a revenue as we can afford and to apply it judiciously. Had the York election been settled against the sitting members, we should have been plunged into a scene of confusion. * * *

[Note. In a part of the rough draft of this letter crossed out by the pen, Winslow had written, "That a spirit of party was pervading all orders. "As soon as I recovered health enough to enter into society, I found noth-"ing but acrimony, bitterness and recrimination. I was almost rejoiced "when the Gout compelled me to retreat.]

Statement of the Population of the several Parishes in the County of Charlotte, with the principal Exports of each, &c, A. D. 1803.

Parish of Saint Andrews.

Men 104—Women 106—Children 277—Total 487. Since the year 1785 there has been built in this Parish about 42 sail of Square rigged vessels, besides small Craft. Tonnage 9,040 tons. There are 4 single Saw Mills in the Parish which cut annually about 400,000 feet of Boards.

Parish of Saint Stephen.

Men 168—Women 134—Children 381—Total 683. This Parish furnishes large quantities of Lumber. There are 7 Saw Mills on the waters of the Scoodiac which cut annually 4,000,000 feet of Boards; great quantities of Shingles are made likewise. During the late war two vessels loaded here yearly with masts for the use of Government. About 3,000 barrels of Alewives are annually taken at the falls. There has been lately 5 sail of shipping built in the Parish, Tonnage about 840 tons.

Parish of Saint David.

Men 49—Women 51—Children 186—Total 286. There are 2 Saw Mills in this parish which cut yearly about 200,000 feet of Boards. Some masts for Government were here furnished during the war. The land in this Parish is of excellent quality, the Settlers the most indpendent Farmers of any in the County. The land averages 20 Bushels wheat, 25 Indian Corn [per acre.]

Saint Patrick's Parish.

Men 50—Women 46—Children 133—Total 229. In this Parish there is a Single and Double Saw Mill which have hitherto cut about 400,000 feet of Boards. Additional improvements making this year promise large increase in the exports from this Parish. Mr. Osborne, an English Gentleman, has this Spring erected a mill on the Russian plan, now going, which works fifteen saws in a frame, for the purpose of cutting Deals for the English market.

Parish of Saint George.

Men 78—Women 82—Children 240—Total 400. This parish is growing to importance in its exports. The number of Mills has lately increased to 5 which will cut yearly about 2,300,000 feet of Boards. The immense quantity of Pine lately discovered in the interior of the Parish and capable of being brought down the Maguguadavick River may hereafter prove an endless source of Spars for the use of Government, besides a sufficiency for the supply of almost any number of Mills. The Parish is well calculated for raising stock, and the land produces very good crops of Wheat, Corn, Oats, Potatoes & Flax. It cures about 400 quintals of Fish and manufactures about 700 hogsheads of Lime yearly.

Parish of Penfield.

Population: Total 54.

There are two Saw Mills in the Parish which cut about 400,000 feet of Boards. The inhabitants are principally Quakers, settled on a good tract of land, who make excellent Farmers and live very comfortable. There was 2 vessels built at Beaver Harbor, about 250 Tons.

Parish of Campo Bello.

Men 47—Women 44—Children 154—Total 245. In the year 1794 there was imported from Nova Scotia & the western extremity of this Province into this Parish about 100 tons of Gypsum, commonly called Plaster; in the year 1795 about 250 tons; and the importation has been gradually increasing. Last year the quantity imported amounted to nearly 14,000 tons. Four fifths of all the Plaster is landed on Campo Bello. It is reshipped for Philadelphia & New York in American vessels. About 5 Sail of Square rigged vessels have been built in the Parish, Tonnage 840 tons, besides 6 vessels from about 40 to 100 tons now owned in the Parish. About 25 Boats, which take annually 4,000 quintals of Cod & scale Fish—these fish are disposed of green to the American traders on Moose Island.

Grand Manan Island.

Men 21—Women 23—Children 77—Total 121. On the Island there has been three Brigs built & a Schooner; Tonnage 370 tons. It is said to contain large quantities of good sound Birch timber for Ship Building. It's well calculated for raising Stock. The Moose Deer brought on the Island by the present Inhabitants are found to increase rapidly. There are about 3,000 quintals of Fish taken and cured yearly by the Inhabitants.

Deer Island & its Dependencies.

Men 32—Women 30—Children 55—Total 117. About 2,500 quintals Fish are yearly taken by the Inhabitants which are chiefly disposed of green to the American Traders on Moose Island. About 5,000 Boxes of Herring are smoked yearly on this, G. Manan & Campo Bello Islands.

Recapitulation.

Population of the County:

Men 549—Women 516—Children 1503. Total 2622.

Exports:

Amount of Tonnage 11,660; Feet of Boards 7,700,000; Quintals Fish 9,900; Barrels Fish 3,000; Tons of Plaster 14,000; Hogsheads Lime 700.

Colonel Hugh Mackay* to Colonel Edward Winslow.

Suther Hall, Charlotte County,

1st June, 1803.

My dear Sir,—Your esteemed favor of the 6th May I had the pleasure of receiving last evening.

Being very anxious to furnish you as soon as possible with such information respecting the present state of the country as you desired, and being unable to perform the service myself owing to a severe relapse I have had of my old complaint since my return from Fredericton, which confined me to my room for nearly five weeks, I got my friend Mr. Donald McDonald to promise to prepare and forward to you the statement wanted, which I trust he has done long ere this, and that you have or will receive it time enough to enable you to include this county in your general representation. Mr. Owen, I think, told me that when he was at Fredericton he had delivered either to you or Mr. Odell an account of the Exports, population &c., of the Island of Campo-Bello, which from his local knowledge of that place probably may be more accurate than that which was furnished by Mr. McDonald, altho' his was taken from Capt. Hatch, who occasionally resides upon Campo-Bello, and whose means of information I should suppose are sufficient to enable him to give a correct statement of these particulars, especially of the article of Plaster—he being a principal dealer in that commodity.

You no doubt have heard of the polite treatment received by Mr. James Frazer and myself from the City democrats on our return to St.

*Hugh Mackay was gazetted an ensign in the Queen's Rangers, May 21, 1778, and was promoted lieutenant in 1779. He came to New Brunswick in 1783, and settled at St. George, where he soon became a leading man in the affairs of Charlotte County. In 1792 he was elected a member of the house of assembly, and continued a representative for more than thirty years. He was gazetted colonel of militia November 1, 1793, and retained the position many years. He was the only "full colonel" in the province. He engaged quite extensively in milling and lumbering. He was for a long time senior justice of the court of common pleas for the County of Charlotte. He died in 1843, at the great age of 97 years.

John. This however shows how sore and disappointed they feel after their defeat in the last session. They have, thank God, been completely frustrated in all their plans of disorganization and confusion, and I trust a few such campaigns as the last will place the Province on a prosperous and respectable footing, and rescue it effectually from that destruction with which it was threatened by the insidious and wicked acts of a turbulent and discontented faction.

Captain Vardon, having in my absence been prevented from accepting the appointment of Sheriff by the intimidation and threatenings of a certain party in the County, they had concluded that Mr. Dunn's removal would not again be attempted, and that matters would be suffered to go on in their usual way to the great oppression of many of the Inhabitants, and to secure his continuance in office more effectually a letter addressed to Mr. Dunn (a copy of which has since been printed in the Royal Gazette) I am informed was drafted by the Junto's Secretary, Mr. Henry B. Brown, and laid before the Grand Jury in April term by one of its members for their concurrence; the Jury, which consisted only of fourteen, and had been doubtless picked for the purpose (for all of them except one are of that party) readily agreed to the measure and directed their foreman to sign it as conveying the unanimous sentiments of the whole. Thus fortified by so honorable a testimony from the Grand Jury, Dunn* and his party concluded nothing more was to be apprehended on the score of removal—but to their great surprise and mortification, Mr. Elisha Andrews on the Monday following was qualified, and immediately entered on the functions of his office, and I think the County will soon feel the benefit of the change. But between you and me, Peace and tranquility will never be effectually established in this County while R. Pagan, Nathan Frink, and Ninian Lindsay are continued on the Commission of the Peace. The two latter the real incendiaries—indeed from the violent conduct of all three, both at home and abroad, they have forfeited all claim to the least indulgence from Government.† It was hinted to me by a friend, when last at Fredericton, that it was in contemplation to make a new Roll for the Province; if so I hope you will have the goodness to bear this matter in mind. Should our worthy Governor go to England I hope his intentions are to return to his Government as soon as his private business may permit. His integrity, urbanity, and rectitude of conduct have greatly endeared him to every good person in this Province, and consequently makes us all anxious about his safety and speedy return. May heaven reward him according to his virtues and then I am sure he will be completely happy.

*John Dunn came from New York and was one of the founders of St. Andrews. He was second sheriff of Charlotte county, holding the office from 1790 to 1803. For many years he was collector of customs. He died at St. Andrews in 1829, aged 76 years. A large stone tablet marks his last resting place in the old burial ground.

†Party feeling in Charlotte County seems in early days to have run high.

I conclude with pleasure, since you say nothing to the contrary, that you are reinstated in your health, which blessing I sincerely wish you a continuance of. Please tender my best respects to my worthy friends Col. Hailes and Captain Sproule.

I am dear Sir, Yours truly,

Hugh Mackay.

Report of George Leonard, Jun., on Kings County.

[July, 1803.]

There are seven parishes, viz, Westfield, Greenwich, Kingston, Springfield, Norton, Sussex and Hampton. The largest of which is Kingston; in the center is a town platt with a handsome Church, but little or no improvements as a town, the lots having been purchased and connected into farms. Within three miles of the Town is the Court House for the County. This parish, altho' the largest is less fertile than most of the others as there are no waters communicating with it that produce intervale.

The parishes of Sussex, Springfield, Norton and Hampton are best cultivated and most productive. At Sussex Vale is a decent Church built by the inhabitants without any aid from Government, and a handsome Academy for the civilization and support of a certain number of Indians supported by a donation from England.

The principal river is the Kennebecasis, which is navigable for vessels of any burthen 20 miles and for about 30 miles for vessels of 6 feet draft. Above 30 miles it is navigable for flat bottomed boats upward of 30 miles more where it divides itself into two branches, the one called Salmon, the other Trout River; the latter is too small for navigation of any kind but is remarkable for the fertility and high cultivation of its extensive intervales which yield grain and grass in abundance. There is also a small River leading into the Kennebecasis about 20 miles from its mouth called the Little Kennebecasis, or Hammond River, which is shoal and only navigable in the spring and autumn except for Bark canoes; its intervales are however extensive and rich.

The productions are such as are common to America, viz, Wheat, Rye (both summer and winter), Indian Corn, Barley, Oats, Peas, Beans, Flax, Potatoes and every kind of vegetables in perfection and abundance. Horses, horned cattle, sheep, hogs, butter and cheese, masts, spars, tontimber, staves, trenails, boards, birch plank, &c.

There have been built within the County and principally in the parishes of Kingston and Hampton, within this five years, about 7,200 tons of shipping.

At the head of the Kennebecasis River, about 50 miles from its mouth are two very valuable and extensive quarries of Plaster of Paris, which at some future day may become a valuable article of export. There is also a very excellent Salt spring, which, if properly attended to, would make sufficient salt for the supply of the inhabitants in that part of the country.

This County is principally agricultural and annually sends about 200 or 300 barrels of flour to market, formerly more, but the ravages of the Hessian fly have considerably reduced the exportation.

There are very considerable exports of tun timber, spars, lumber, &c, which cannot be ascertained with any precision from no entry of it being made at St. John or elsewhere.

The County, like most others in the Province is not in a high state of cultivation, but is making rapid progress in many parts of it particularly at the head of the Kennebecasis River where the intervales are extensive, which are generally cleared of the timber and in most places free from stumps so as to admit the introduction of the plow with facility and are inexhaustibly productive. The settlements of Bellisle also yield good crops of winter wheat and Rye and are flourishing in other respects very fast. The improvements on the Hammond River are at a stand, as the rich parts of it were originally cultivated by the French, and the upland generally very stony and sterile and in fact unfit for cultivation. The new settlement of the Mill Stream, as it is called, (a branch of the Kennebecasis about 40 miles from its mouth) is rapidly improving, and bids fair to be a productive settlement for grain and stock, no grants are yet made to the settlers on it.

The lower part of the Kennebecasis is principally calculated for shipbuilding.

There are large tracts of ungranted lands lying between Sussex Vale and the Bay of Fundy which at some future period will make valuable settlements and of course make a communication between the interior and the Bay, and facilitate the exportation of Lumber which is in great abundance in that quarter.

Lastly it is with pleasure that I remark that the Inhabitants of the County of Kings have ever manifested an unshaken Loyalty to His Majesty and a steady adherence to the established government of this Country.

Report of Col. James Peters on Queens County.

July 24, 1803.

The parishes of this county are Gagetown and Hampstead on the south west, Waterborough and Wickham on the north east side of the River St. John, of which Gage is the shire-town, where a plat of land has been appropriated and regularly laid out for a Town, fronting one mile on Grimross Creek, which is from 30 to 40 rods in width distant about half a mile from where it communicates with the river St. John. This creek, or inlet, extends about 3 miles, when it widens and forms two small lakes. It affords throughout the whole extent thereof a most secure and excellent harbour during the breaking up of the ice in the river, as it has depth of water sufficient for vessels of any burden that can navigate the river, which circumstance, added to its central situation between Fredericton and St. John, and its proximity to the Grand and the Washdemoic Lakes cannot fail very much to increase the settlement of this pleasant little village, and at some future period render it as considerable as any other inland Town in the Province. At present it consists of only 14 dwelling houses and about an equal number of barns, shops, etc, inhabited mostly by tradesmen. The County House and Church are two very decent well finished buildings.

The principal rivers are Salmon, at the head of Grand Lake, and the Washademoic at the head of the lake of that name, both of which are navigable spring and fall for large flat-bottomed boats, such as the Durham, to the extent of 50 or 60 miles; the first of which at the distance of 20 or 30 miles up divides into two branches, one of which is called Gasperow and leads towards the Miramishi and the other still keeping the name of Salmon river extends towards the Roshebucto; and the latter [Washademoak] extends towards the Pedioac river from which they are separated by portages of from 3 to 7 miles over which the Indians carry their birch canoes. There are also a number of smaller rivers and creeks which, when the waters are up, are also navigable for flat bottomed boats and afford an opportunity of conveying to market the lumber there collected into rafts. There are also a number of smaller streams not navigable to any extent that are perhaps equally advantageous in a country so abounding with navigable waters, as they afford so many good situations for Mills, of which there are now erected within the county seven Grist mills, four Saw mills and one Fulling mill.

The principal lakes of the county are the Grand and the Washademoic, the former about 30 miles long and from 3 to 6 wide, and the latter about the same length and from 1 to 3 broad: both communicate with the river St. John by narrow runs of water from 20 to 30 rods in width and are navigable at the dryest seasons of the year for vessels of any burden that can navigate the river St. John. The Maquapit Lake is connected with the Grand also by a narrow run of water of about 15 or 20 rods in width and that again with the French Lake by a run of about the same width, also navigable to the extent of about 20 miles for wood boats that will carry 20 cords. Herring in great abundance go up into all these lakes and rivers and are taken at the very doors of the settlers in great plenty for family use, and also in considerable quantities for exportation. Salmon, Shad and Bass are also taken in many parts thereof in great plenty for family use and of smaller fish, such as Trout, Perch, Chub, Eels, &c, &c, they are everywhere caught in all the small rivers through the country.

The productions are such as are common in America, viz., Wheat and Rye (both summer and winter), Indian corn, Barley, Oats, Peas, Beans, Flax, Potatoes and almost every kind of vegetables in high perfection and in great abundance. Horses, Horned Cattle, Sheep, Hogs, Butter and Cheese, Masts, Spars, Tun Timber, Staves, Trenails, Fish;—of which articles (except grain) there are annually sent to St. John for the supply of that city and for exportation to a very considerable amount. There are built within the County annually several Ships or Brigs, besides smaller vessels.

From some trials made in the culture of hemp there is not much doubt but it will succeed well on the rich Intervale Lands, and also on many other tracts which appear to be equally fertile and well adapted for that article, but the want of Labourers skilled in the cultivation of it and the very high price of labor, will necessarily prevent the attention of the farmer to that article to any considerable extent.

The Coal mines on the Grand Lake, and Newcastle & Coal Creeks, both of which empty themselves into that lake, are supposed to be very extensive, but of what future benefit they may be can at present only be mere conjecture. The garrisons at Fredericton and St. John have been supplied with several hundred chaldrons, and from them also the Blacksmiths within the province get their supplies. The stratum, or vein, lies a few feet above the level of the water at its common height and appears to run into the banks horizontal therewith.

The population of Queens County is as follows:—Men, 411, women 373, children over ten 570, children under ten 765; Total 2,119.

Very great exertions have in general been made towards subduing a rugged wilderness, but the want of a sufficient number of labourers very much retards the same. Still, however, in taking a view of the settlements you almost every where find very comfortable framed dwelling houses, barns and out houses, handsome fields of arable lands and mowing ground, well fenced and under a good state of cultivation and improvement, and in many places young thrifty orchards beginning to bear; and what is still more pleasing you everywhere find a numerous progeny of fine hardy youth, decently and comfortably clothed and plentifully fed.

When it is considered that the settlements in this County have been made entirely by the Loyal Emigrants, who came here at the close of the American Rebellion, and set themselves down on the lands assigned them by Government, in the most indigent circumstances and many of them with large families and without any other prospect for their subsistence than their sovereign's bounty and their own virtuous exertions, it affords not only a high evidence of their prudence and industry, but is also a most convincing proof of the fertility of the soil, and that nothing more is wanting to render the Province a rich and flourishing Colony than a renewal of the Government's liberality in making suitable grants of the Crown Lands to their children as they come to age and wish to settle and improve them, and also to such other loyal subjects as may emigrate to the Province in order to become permanent settlers.

The lands situate on the River St. John, and also on the Lakes and navigable rivers are nearly all under grant to the extent generally of about one mile and three quarters to three miles back from the waters, but a considerable number of those persons to whom they were granted have since left the Province or neglected to comply with the conditions of their grants, by which they are become liable to escheat, and on many of those grants inquisition has been held on the application of industrious young men, and other settlers who have large families and are desirous of settling them. There are also on many of the smaller rivers large tracts of good land which have not been granted, as also the lands in the rear of the first grants, and as the country settles and improves will no doubt become equally valuable, as in many parts they will be found of superior quality.

* * * The above return of the Population of Queens County is collected from the returns made to me by the Captains of Militia as certified by them, and the other statements are from my own knowledge, or from the information of the most respectable inhabitants.

James Peters, Col. of Militia.

Rev. Walter Price's Report on the Parish of St. Mary's, York Co.

August 8th, 1803.

Extent of Parish 12 miles by 30.

Population: men 184, women 193, children above ten 235, children under ten 260, slaves 31, Total 903.

State of cultivation,—2,302 acres of cleared land of the best quality.

There are two lakes in the parish, the 1st lying north 3 miles from Fredericton covering about twelve acres of land,* which might be converted with a very trifling expence into a Mill-Pond, the vicinity abounding with Pine, Birch, Elm, Spruce, Fir, Maple & Beech; the 2nd lying betwixt the Nashwaksis Settlement & that of Ham's, but of no consequence owing to its inland situation.†

*This lake is now known as Killarney; but was formerly called Heron's Lake.

†This lake, situate near "Hamtown" on the Cardigan road, is marked in Loggie's map of New Brunswick, as Lake Carleton.

The River Nashwalk running northerly and falling into the St. John is settled about thirty miles from its mouth. On this river there are large Tracts of Interval Lands of the first quality, producing Wheat, Barley, Rye, Indian Corn, peas, potatoes and Oats, with large quantities of Hay. It is generally thought the low lands in this parish are well adapted for Hemp. No experiments however in this article have been made owing perhaps to the necessity the settlers are under of first attending to the provisions of Life and the want of surplus labor beyond this object, or the ignorance of the settlers in the culture & manufacture of it.

The Madam Kiswick, running nearly the same course with the Nashwalk but not so far into the country, produces the same articles. The interval on this River is not so large nor of so good a quality as that on the Nashwalk, but the upland is generally better.

In this Parish there are veins of Coal, Iron Ore (both Rock & Bog), Yellow Oaker and Lead, with large tracts of valuable ungranted land. These lands however are not likely, nor any in the Province, to be made rapidly productive in their greatest extent from the want of certain Labor, nor is that to be expected from European importations, being convinced that the natural population will best suit the climate and the arduous task of encountering the uncultivated part of this province. Introducing Africans to this climate will I doubt be found ineffectual.

Alexander Taylor's Report.

A Summary account of the State & Situation of the County of Northumberland coastwise—that is to say from Shadiake southerly to Restigouch northerly, both inclusive. A. D. 1803.

Shadiake Harbor carrys only about 6 feet water for a long distance. About 3 miles distance thereof on both sides seems to be large quantitys of Marsh Hay, particularly on the south side along the coast. There are about 20 Familys settled round a small Bason the Harbor forms. The country for a considerable distance up the River is well situated for Good Land & Timber of all kinds. The Inhabitants hath their Communication to the south by Peticoatjack River and Mamberemcook River. Some part of the road is very Boggy & Barron. Some Herrings comes in to Shadiake River in the Spring.

The distance between Shadiake Harbor and Cockayne Harbor is 2 1-2 Leagues; there seems to be very good land between these two Harbors. Cackayne is a fine comodious Harbor for small vessels, carrys from 3 to 4 fathoms water for a small distance inside and hath no Bar on the outside—hath about 15 French Familys settled therein. It is well situated for land & Timber, also for Marsh Hay, and it's reckoned the 2nd best place on this Coast for Oysters, and the lands all around it looks low and fertile and continueth so till it comes to the next Harbor called Bucktoush Harbor, which it about 9 miles distance from Cockayne Harbor.

Bucktoush carrys the best water of any Harbor in that quarter, but is very narrow in the passage. It is supposed and hath the appearance to be the best place for a settlement on that coast, and the largest soundest White Pine Timber of any in the country—hath about 11 Famillys in it. From Bucktoush to Rishibuctou Head, which is about 7 Leagues, the lands along the coast look Boggy and Barron, but where the Rivers runs up into the country the land gets much better and makes it Beneficial both for Coast & River Settlers on acct. of the carraige & navigation.

Rishibuctou hath 2 Rivers belonging to its Harbor which Rivers produces considerable of fish, particularly small fish. It is a Bar Harbor and somewhat deficult to navigate a vessel in or out. The Inhabitants are about 70 (I mean famillys). They are very well supplyed with Marsh Hay and Timber. From the Harbor of Rishabuctou to the entrance of two good Rivers called Pissabeguake & Pissabeguashes it's about 3 Leagues distance. These two small Rivers forms about 3 miles apart from one another Bar Harbors that will not receive any but small vessels, but situated with as fine land and marsh as any in the Province of New Brunswick—hath only about 8 or 10 Famillys and might accomodate at least 40 more without taking any back lands. They make a very good Salmon fishing yearly of the Beaches, and might catch as many small fish as they pleased, and very good Timber.

From said Harbor running northerly along shore to Point Eskiminack is about 6 Leagues in which distance the lands are generally poor but there are great quantitys of Marsh, which might keep Stock to cause any sort of land to yield.

The Coast all along from Cockayne to Point Eskiminack, and also from Miramichi to Caraquid (or Caragate) is bounded in by a sand bank and by [low islands]. From Point Eskiminack to the entrance to the Harbor, or inside Bay, of Miramichi is about 35 miles; some of the land very good others Indifirant.

Meantime it's evident that were every lot settled from the extremity of the one side of the County to the other along Shore, there would be marsh enough (reckoning the division at an average) to serve every Settler.

Further observed, that from Shadiake to Point Eskiminack there is no Codfish to be had through the straits, but from Point Eskiminack all along to Ristigoush is excellent Codfish, and even close in shore, often catched by people in Canoes.

Further we have no Towns in this County which is the ruin of the place. Towns & people to cultivate the land and follow the fishing, lumbering, &c, and thereby have produce to bring to Market is what would be the making of the place. In short it's a good country lost while it remains as it is. It's true we have a Town alloted at Beaubair's Point, Miramichi, but we have no people to Tenement or Inhabit it, neither have we Country Inhabitants to bring anything to Market. In short we want more settlers and them to be aided a little at first from home—and some assistance to the publick here to erect Towns, &c, &c, as Government at home, with the advice of our Government may think fit.

I now proceed to speak of the Miramichi Bay, River, & Branches; viz, S. W. Branch, from the head of the main navigation upward to the Portash leading to Fredericton is about 80 miles. Do, from said navigation to Okeans River,* leading to the City of St. John, 45 miles. The chief part of the land on said distances very good. The number of Famillys thereon settled about 30 on lands laid out in 60 & 80 rod lots. The N. W. Branch, above the main navigation, is about 7 miles settled with only 10 Famillys—the land very good. In both Branches are some front & back meadows. From said navigation in both Branches downward—to Oak Point on the north side & Point aux Car on the south side is about 30 miles each side. Number of famillys about 100; lands generally good and laid out in 60 Rod Lots. From Oak Point N. and Point aux Car S. sides to the entry of the Harbor, or the mouth of (what is commonly called) Bay inside, the distance is about 18 miles; number of Famillys about 40. On the north side is in general sunk, barron land—south side very good lands in general and good Timber. In the several distances above mentioned there are 9 or 10 small Rivers who emptys into Miramichi, and are but little Inhabited as yet, which Rivers do extend considerably into the Country, and are by far the best situated for good land, good Timber, and several Meadows, with a few fish of differant sorts. The chief sorts of Timber the whole of the above places produces fit for market are White & Red Pine, Black Birch, & Rock Maple. From the mouth of the Harbor, or Bay inside, to the mouth of the Branches is about 40 miles distance & will navigate vessels of almost any size when carefully piloted. This River, Bay, & Branches affords a great many fish of differant sorts.

From the Harbor of Miramichi northward to Tracady is about 12 Leagues distance. Tracady hath a Bar Harbor and runs about 9 feet water. The number of Famillys settled there are about 35—inclusive of a place called Tabisintack, between Miramichi and Tracady. The lands

*Okean's river is now known as Cain's river. From its head waters there is a short portage to the Gaspereau river by which there is communication with Grand Lake, and the River St. John. This route, between St. John and Miramichi, was frequently used in early times. It was traversed by Benjamin Marston in 1786.

generally good with abundance of Marsh Hay. The chief of the Timber in this distance is White Pine fit for Lumber.

From Tracady to Pockmush, distance 3 Leagues—deep of the Harbor about 10 feet. Number of Famillys about 7. Extraordinary good land for about 14 miles up from the Harbor. Well situated with Marsh Hay all along the shore, but not much good Timber. Abundance of Bass and Alewives Spring and Fall.

From Pockmush to Shipagang Harbor distance about 2 Leagues—this Harbor running through to the Bay of Shallure, distance through about 3 Leagues. South side of said Harbor shallow but very convenient for fishing vessels and small craft. North side very deep water & thought one of the best Harbors on this coast for any size of vessel. Number of Famillys about 5. The chief part of the lands—including Misquo Island (supposed 40 miles in circumference) is reckoned among the best lands on this coast.

From Shipagang Harbor to Caraquid is about 3 Leagues. The chief of the lands low and Boggy, but plenty of Marsh Hay. Number of Famillys about 55. The land these famillys occupy about Caraquid is poor shandrif land.

From Caraquid to Nipisigui Harbor is 12 Leagues in which distance a barron front attends the land. Nipisigue Harbor runs about 15 feet water and is a very convenient safe harbor. Number of Famillys about 35. The lands tolerable & plenty of Marsh Hay and considerable White Pine Timber.

From Nipisigue to River Jacket in Ristigouch Bay is about 30 miles distance. Land very poor & barron in general. The land on River Jacket for the space of 10 miles or more very good and abundance of Marsh Hay. Number of Famillys about 10.

From Jacket River to the mouth of the River Ristigouch the distance is about 18 miles, the land tolerable, but hath no marsh, number of Famillys about 14.

From the mouth of Ristigouch to the head of the Tide is about 24 miles; the navigation runs about 18 miles up the River, 4 fathoms water. Number of Famillys 12—the land appearing good in front but no marsh nor any quantity of good Timber. From the head of the Tide upwards fine land.

From Point Eskiminack to the mouth of the Ristigouch, which is above 44 Leagues, abounds with Codfish along the coast handy to the shore. And every River from Shadiake to Bay of Shallure affords various kinds of fish. There are numbers of fine spruce spars every where throughout the county.

There are in this County about 480 Famillys which I suppose may be allowed to be multiplyed by the figure 6 which will make about 4,880* [sic] people young and old two thirds of which I reckon above 10 years old and one third under 10 years and I'm well convinced the Rivers and Coast parts of this County could accommodate double that number without respect to Towns or back lands being inhabited. As to the interior parts of the County I can procure no further idea of it than that it abounds with good Timber, good fresh water and hath the appearance of good land. Slaves we have none. Our only trade is Fish, Lumber, and some furs, the furs not so plenty as formerly. Masts, Yards and Bow sprits may be had here. Servants are much wanted here.

Alex'r Taylor.

CUSTOM HOUSE AT PASSAMAQUODDY.

Note by the Editor.

In 1803 Lieut. Gov. Carleton proposed to the British Government to establish a Custom House near the Boundary Line, with the view of preventing the extensive smuggling then carried on. In this he was strongly supported by George Leonard, who in 1797 had been appointed by the British Government to be "Superintendent of Trade and Fisheries on the "coasts of the Provinces and Islands in North America from Gaspee, in "the Gulf of St. Lawrence, unto and including the Bay of Passamaquoddy, "comprising the waters of the Bay of Fundy, Chignecto & Minas, the coasts "of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the Islands of St. John and "Cape Breton, and the Madelaine Islands."

Edward Winslow was recommended to the Secretary of State by Governor Carleton as Collector of Customs at Passamaquoddy, and the recommendation was supported by Geo. Leonard and Sir John Wentworth, and in England by Province Agent W. Knox and Colonel Lutwyche. William Wanton, the Collector at St. John (of which Passamaquoddy was an outpost), was then in England, and opposed the measure strongly. The English Government were much engrossed in carrying on the French war, and as a consequence no steps were taken in the matter. Colonel Winslow would have been glad to receive the appointment, as he was straitened for the means of livelihood, and by reason of his experience as Collector of Customs at Plymouth, and subsequently at Boston, the position would have been not uncongenial.

OFFICES HELD BY EDWARD WINSLOW.

[That which follows is a fragment in Edward Winslow's handwriting; it has neither date nor address, but most probably was written about the close of the year 1788 to some friend in England. It is therefore not printed in chronological order.]

*Mr. Taylor has already specified his estimate of the number of families in seventeen settlements; the total, 479, practically agrees with his statement above. He, however, multiplies the families by ten instead of by six. The population of the same district by the first census, in 1824, was 15,829 souls.

The offices I held at Plymouth were considered as "durante vita." The execution of the duties of those offices with spirit and decision reduced me from the pinnacle of popularity to the most obnoxious of all mankind, and I was among the first who were obliged to cut and run, which by the way I did not do until by a formal vote of a County Congress assembled at Plymouth I was rendered incapable of holding any office of trust and it was declared to be meritorious in any good subject to render my position untenable and a committee ordered to demand my Records as Registrar of Probate, Clerk of the Common Pleas and Naval Officer. This handsome proposal I concisely declined. I secured the records and they remained in safe custody until the war was over, and were then delivered to the successors in office.

When I lost my offices at Plymouth, General Gage and the Commissary made me a Collector of the Customs at Boston and Registrar of Probate for the County of Suffolk. These offices were a compensation in some degree, so long as they continued, but when Boston was abandoned, although I secured another set of records, I lost every other security [for earning a livelihood]. Sir Wm. Howe then gave me a military compensation by making me Muster-master-general and that was so respectable that I considered myself amply satisfied until the war was over. Nor did I murmur when General Fox politely offered to make me military secretary at Halifax, for I considered myself in some degree provided for because 10s. [per diem] in addition to my half pay enabled my family to exist. * * But when the Secretary of State obliged me to relinquish my office of Military Secretary by deciding that "it was a mere military office, and that if I held it I could not retain half pay," I thought it was time to apply to the Commissioners on the Loyalist claims. If there is an idea that I hold any office in New Brunswick which can possibly be considered as a compensation I beg through you to undeceive the Commissioners. I have the honor to be one of His Majesty's Council for this province, and I consider it a very high honor, but I have never been able to calculate how much honor goes to a pound; for this service there is no allowance. * * [Remainder missing.]

Edward Winslow to the Lords of the Treasury.

The Memorial of Edward Winslow of the Province of New Brunswick humbly shews:

That previous to the rebellion in America he resided at Plymouth in the Province of Massuchsetts, which was the residence of his ancestors from the first settlement of the country. That his father & himself held various public offices there—among which the Custom-house appointments for the port. That when the persecutions commenced your memorialist joined the British army & was a volunteer at the battle of Lexington. That when the port of Boston was opened he was appointed Collector in the absence of R. A. Harrison, Esq., and continued to execute the duties of that office until the evacuation of that place. That he served during the whole American war in the capacity of Muster-Master-General of the British American Forces, and at the close of the war was appointed by General Carleton, now Lord Dorchester, to explore & lay out a tract of land for the disbanded Provincial Regiments, which duty he performed, and settled them in that part of Nova Scotia which is now the Province of New Brunswick. That he afterwards served as Military Secretary to Generals Fox & Campbell, successive commanders at Halifax, until New Brunswick was made a separate Government. That he was then appointed a member of his Majesty's Council for that province to which he removed when the Council was called, and that he has remained here ever since and has executed many arduous services without salary or emolument. That representations have been recently made to the Lieut. Governors of this & the neighbouring province stating the illicit practices & trade carried on at the frontier between N. Brunswick & the American States from which great injury results to our commerce. To remedy these evils it has been proposed that a Custom-House should be established at St. Andrews or Campo Bello, or at some other place near the entrance of the Bay of Fundy, and that some active & experienced person should be appointed Collector of Customs there. Your memorialist therefore humbly hopes that the recommendation of the Governors of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and the Superintendent of Trade [Leonard] and others, added to his long and faithful services in war & peace will induce your Lordships to bestow the appointment upon him.

Fredericton, New Brunswick.
March, 1803.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman. (?)

[Probably written about March, 1803.]

If I fail of success in the present attempt I shall still rejoice at having made it because at any rate it will serve as a hint to His Majesty's ministers that, altho' I have been buried for 15 years, I am not stone dead; and that believer as I am in the general resurrection & the rest of the Creed I cannot be satisfied at keeping a fast with 11 children until that great event happens.

I have seriously considered that part of your letter which relates to the appropriation of £200 of the Indian fund and I am perfectly convinced that an Institution such as you propose would be of the highest importance to this country. The present plan of education is incomplete for want of a professor of Mathematics & the sum you mention would be an encouragement to a man of eminence. If Fredericton was an improper place for an academical establishment for the reasons you formerly assigned, His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent by the system which he has adopted seems effectually to have obviated the difficulties. At the next meeeting of the Board we will dash at it & if one particle of energy or public spirit remains, of which I have my doubts, we'll blow it up.

The late measures have made (to use one of our own country expressions) a desp'rate overturn. I am not prepared to give an opinion on the subject, but I think they are calculated to give nature a jog. I wish I could see you for half an hour—but I fear that's impracticable. I've had a fit of the Gout—rather tedious than violent.

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

St. John, Aug't 15th, 1803.

My dear Friend,— * * *

I cannot doubt but that the representations of Gov'r Carleton & Sir John Wentworth will be effected so far as respects the Custom House at Passamaquoddy,* but I shall not be satisfied with them if they stop there with you, who without flattery deserve all they can do for you, particularly the former.

Capt. Foy [A. D. C. and stepson to Carleton] has given me an account of the Book which he thinks is invaluable to General Carleton, and of course will be so to the Province.

George and myself will go to work and fill up the Blanks in the paper you last sent, on the best authority we can obtain, leaving you to add or diminish as you may think proper.

I shall say nothing on the business of Coffin and Foy,† as the Major will be at Fredericton as soon as this, and will relate that disagreeable affair with all its particulars.

Your sister and your charming little daughter's visit at Mrs. Chipman's will be up, according to the time they fixt, tomorrow, or next day,

*George Leonard had much at heart a project for the establishment of a customs house at Campobello, with Edward Winslow as collector. Even at this early date there was a great deal of smuggling in that locality, which he desired to abolish.

†The following paragraph in the St. John City Gazette explains the incident here referred to:—"A duel was fought near Fort Howe (Aug. 13, 1803), between "Col. C. and Capt. F., when fortunately, after exchanging shots, the affair was "terminated without bloodshed. The number of duels that are now fought "proves the depravity of the times, and the little sense men have of another "world. 'If every one,' says Addison, 'that fought a duel were to stand in the "pillory, it would quickly lessen the number of those men of imaginary honour, "and put an end to so absurd a practice.'" when they have promised to be with Mrs. Leonard (until they set off to return to Fredericton); she is down here on a visit from the Vale to me. I think you will do well to come here to relax after your fatigue in equiping the Governor, and from the pains of the Gout.

My best wishes attend you and family to whom remember me affectionately, and believe me faithfully & truly yours,

G. Leonard.

Edward Winslow to Captain Foy.

17th August, 1803.

The day you took your departure from F'ton the Gout, as if determined to prevent my complying with my promise, removed from my left to my right hand, and until yesterday I have not dared to make free with the pen. The remarks which I now send you are calculated only for your own private use to enable you to communicate such general information as may be fairly expected from a gentleman of discernment and observation. They are arranged under such heads as are commonly the subjects of enquiry, and I regret that my indisposition has prevented me from making them more complete. Such as they are, my dear Foy, I commit them to you.

The lecture which I read and you heard with great patience, furnished you with a number of extraordinary anecdotes and gave you some insight into the history of New Brunswick. The short sketches in the manuscript will fix the impressions made by my book—a minute detail would have been unwieldy and uninteresting. The consideration that you are familiarly acquainted with Fredericton and the country from thence to Canada precluded the necessity of any particular remarks so far as related to that district. I have said nothing about the state of politics. You were so constantly in your seat during the last session of the General Assembly, that you must have acquired competent information on that subject.

The fact is that a faction has existed here for some years past, and it made such progress as factions do in other countries. It was despised at first and by degrees became formidable. The approach of the last general elections brought out all their writers and speakers, and they were permitted for some time to proceed in their career with impunity. At length their insolence became insupportable and two or three gentlemen of abilities determined to strip and have at 'em. By argument and a torrent of very fair ridicule these fellows were held up to the public in so contemptible a point of view most of 'em lost their influence and some of 'em lost their elections. A majority of well disposed men were returned to serve as representatives in General Assembly, and their first session was distinguished by spirited decisions in favor of the prerogative of the crown and by liberal arrangements for the benefit of the province.

The absence of the Governor may induce some of the disaffected to peep out again, but there are a few (what Rudyard calls) "sharp-shooters" who stand ready to take a pop at 'em whenever they appear. I flatter myself that I belong to this troop. I am cock'd and primed and you know that I am as well booted as any man in his Majesty's dominions.

Lieut. Gov. Carleton to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 1 Oct'r, 1803.

I cannot think of leaving the Province without thanking you for your judicious selection and valuable information you have made and procured for me previous to my departure from Fredericton, and I must request Sir that you will add to the favour by accepting the enclosed acknowledgment.

Very faithfully yours,

Thos. Carleton.

[Reply.]

The unexpected mark of your Excellency's approbation, which I have this day received has overcome me, and I can say nothing in answer but that no anticipation of reward opened upon my mind while I was in the execution of my late duty—but that I was influenced solely by a desire to give your Excellency the best proof in my power of my zeal in your service, and I declare that your Excellency's note of approbation would have been sufficient recompence for the trifling inconveniences which I encountered had it been unaccompanied by the generous present which it contained.

Thomas Wetmore to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 22nd October, 1803.

Sir,—From the time of Capt'n Bartlet's departure from the Province until news of the Death of General Spry was received, I was the General's agent in this province, vested with full powers. His daughter Miss Mary Spry has administered upon the estate in England, and I have lately received a letter from her upon the subject of the Debts and Rents due the estate in this province which renders it necessary that administration should be granted here.

I have mentioned the business to Mr. Peters who thought it best to make application to you. Should you grant the letters I will esteem it a favor if you will send them down soon to Mr. Peters, who can take the Bonds and administer the oath of Office.

I have the honor to be Sir,
Your most obed't & very h'ble serv't,
Thos. Wetmore.*

Notes on New Brunswick History by Edward Winslow—1804.

The Province of New Brunswick lies on the west side of the Bay of Fundy, and embraces the St. John & other great navigable rivers & contains by estimation 27,582 square miles. In 1783 there lived within its limits about 340 families of Acadians and near the same number of Indians. The Acadians had seated themselves upon the margins of the rivers, upon spots of intervale, fertile by nature and annually enriched by the overflowing of the water—and there this improvident and slovenly race, obtained with very little labour, all the necessaries of life. The Indians, as in other countries, placed their principal dependence upon hunting.

There were at Maugerville and other places on the St. John about 130 families who had emigrated from New England many years before. These people were not only hereditary dissenters from the established Church of old England, but dissenters also from their dissenting brethern in New England, branching out under the various denominations of New Lights, Methodists, Anabaptists, &c; sub-divided again into inferior sects as if for the particular purpose of making "confusion worse confounded."

Sir Guy Carleton sent an agent to this part of the Country to lay out lands for the accommodation of the Loyalists and disbanded troops at the close of the American war. This agent† had no other instructions than what were emphatically delivered to him in a parting moment by a man‡ whose comprehensive mind collects all objects which concern the honor

*Son of Timothy Wetmore, Esq., of Westchester, New York. He came to St. John in 1783. In 1792 he held the offices of deputy surrogate and registrar of deeds and wills for Queens County; he was master and examiner in chancery and a member of the council of the province. From 1809 until his death in 1828 he was attorney general of the province. The following letter strikes the reader as curious in this day of political ambition:—

"Sir,—I am sorry to find that I have been elected a member of the Common "Council of the City of St. John, as it is an office given to me contrary to my "wishes and express desire. I have to request you will inform the Council that "I will esteem it a favour in them to excuse me from the service without a fine. "or with a small one. I beg to know the terms upon which I may be relieved. "and am, Sir,

"Your most obedient servant,
"Thomas Wetmore.

"His Worship the Mayor,
"Tuesday 2nd April, 1799."

†The agent was Edward Winslow.

‡Brook Watson is meant: he was the Commissary at New York during the American Revolution and had much to do in the arrangements for sending the Loyalists to New Brunswick.

& interests of his country and whose penetrating eye darts to the centre of 'em. These were the words;—"You are to provide an asylum for your "distressed countrymen. Your task is arduous, execute it like a man of "honor. The season for fighting is over—bury your animosities and per- "secute no man. Your ship is ready and God bless you."

In the autumn of that year 14,000 men, women & children landed on that inhospitable shore, many of whom had acquired all the vices generated in camps. With them came one or two clergymen of the Church of England, exhausted and despondent, men who had spent their early days in peace and contentment and, until that time, had been buoyed up with the expectation of once more returning with the scattered remnants of their families to their former homes—now mixed with a promiscuous rabble, shocked by continual acts of licentiousness and without a habitation to shelter them. In this forlorn state however, one of them in particular, had sufficient firmness to commence the operations of duty. A church was opened, a congregation was collected, & the services of the Church of England carried on with solemnity and effect.

[In a foot note to this letter Col. Winslow states the clergyman to whom he refers is "The Rev'd John Beardsley*, who was Chaplain to Colonel Beverley Robinson's regiment all the war and highly esteemed by him, & has now no income but the miserable pittance of half-pay."]

In the following season this country was formed into a separate Government, and the name of New Brunswick given to it, and a man was appointed Governor whose dignified and correct conduct discountenanced vice and rendered morality fashionable. Inferior magistrates, imitating his example, became not only conservators of the peace, but useful auxiliaries to religion.

*John Beardsley was born at Ripton, near Stratford, Connecticut, April 23rd. 1732. He entered Yale College, intending to take Holy Orders, and was ordained in England by the Bishop of London in 1761. On his return to America he labored as S. P. G. missionary at Norwich, and married Sylvia, daughter of Rev. Dr. Punderson. He removed to Poughkeepsie on the Hudson, Oct. 26, 1766, and remained in charge until the outbreak of the Revolution. He was arrested as a Tory and his property confiscated. Colonel Beverley Robinson was his parishoner, and on the raising of the Loyal American Regiment, in 1777, he appointed Rev. J. Beardsley chaplain of the corps. He served in that capacity during the war. His family on Dec. 16, 1777, took refuge in the city of New York. The muster roll of the regiment on July 1, 1783, shows that Chaplain Beardsley was then in Nova Scotia. Probaby he came to St. John amongst the first arrivals, and it is believed he was the first clergyman to officiate to the Loyalists. He built a shelter for his family on his lot opposite the present Dufferin Hotel. Next spring, with a volunteer party, he began preparation of a frame for a church on the southwest corner of the old burial ground opposite the Court House. He worked at it himself, broad axe in hand, but, alas, a destructive fire on June 18, 1784, swept over that part of the city, destroying the frame and many of the settlers' log houses. In consequence of this disaster the project was for the time abandoned. Rev. Mr. Beardsley officiated at St. John and Kingston until the death of Rev. John Sayre, when he removed to Maugerville and remained there as rector until 1803. He was a man of many parts, and is said to have been "fully as good a farmer as a preacher." He organized the first Masonic lodge at St. John, September 1, 1784. He was the first English clergyman who visited the upper St. John, and in the course of a single week, in the summer of 1789, he baptized along the river between Fredericton and Woodstock 112 persons, of whom 13 were adults. The Beardsleys of Woodstock, N. B., are descended from his eldest son John. Rev. J. Beardsley died at Kingston, Aug. 23, 1809.

Notes by Edward Winslow Respecting the Indians and Acadians.

The Savages who possessed this province before our arrival obtained as good a living as savages wish for in any country. The River St. John, and the other great rivers & their branches, afforded the most favorable situations for hunting, and the islands & intervals afforded the most tempting and delightful spots for temporary residence and for the cultivation of Indian Corn, which were the principal objects of their attention. The waters of those rivers furnished an easy communication to the sea coast, where they were always sure of a ready market for their furs and other commodities, and where they could always procure Rum and such other Luxuries as they wanted.

Besides the savages, there were scattered about in different parts of the province a considerable number of Acadians, who had escaped from the other side of the Bay of Fundy when the French inhabitants were removed from Nova Scotia after the conquest of that country by the English. These people, whose immediate ancestors had suffered what to them appeared like the most unmerited persecution & oppression from the British Government, occupied some of the most fertile tracts on the River St. John and in other parts of the province. Embittered by the recollections of their past sufferings the majority were rejoiced at any opportunity of shewing their enmity to the British Government, and during the war with America their conduct evinced a disposition to favor the American Cause.* The Acadians & Indians lived in constant habits of intimacy and familiarity. * * * The remainder of the inhabitants (except a very few) were Americans who had removed from the States before the Revolution and were notoriously disaffected to the British Government. By those settlers both the Savages & Acadians were encouraged to acts of hostility.

This was the state of the country at the peace when the disbanded Provincial Corps & Loyal Refugees took possession of the country. The Indians were of course compelled to leave the banks of the rivers (particularly the St. John) and hunt on other grounds. The French, who had taken possession of farms without even a license of occupation or any sanction from the Government, and were so situated as to interrupt the general settlement of the country, were, by order of the Government of Nova Scotia, removed again from their possessions and obliged to seek for situations more remote. These events undoubtedly increased their resentment against the Government—and altho', after the establishment of a separate province, the Governor & Council of New Brunswick did make every effort in their power and did eventually more than compensate them by Grants at Madawaska and other places, they have never been really conciliated.

*The remark of Winslow is only true in part. The Acadians on the River St. John were not openly hostile to the British during the Revolution and several of their number including the Martins, Mercure's, etc., were loyal and their services were acknowledged by Major Studholm. Another striking instance of loyalty was displayed by Joseph Gueguen of Cocagne in restraining the Indians from siding with the Americans. See N. B. Hist. Soc. Collections No. 4, p. 115.

All this time the savages have been retreating farther and farther from the places to which they were formerly so much attached. The settlements being extended over the best part of their hunting grounds, they were soon reduced to the most abject poverty and distress. Thus circumstanced they became dependent upon the English settlers. The benevolence of individuals and some attention from government seemed to remove their prejudices. * * * The legacy, which had been formerly left by Mr. Boyle* for the Christian purpose of civilizing the aboriginals, being applied in this country, was considered by the Indians (who did not comprehend the meaning of it) as a strong proof of national protection and kindness, and it had undoubtedly a tendency to reconcile them more effectually to English Government. The erecting of a convenient building at Sussex-Vale, as an academy† exclusively for them, the employment of a preceptor to teach them the first rudiments of education, and the arrangements which were made for their accommodation & comfort, all contributed to soothe them in their state of distress; and although the Indians did not embrace the Christian religion with that alacrity which the pious Testator might have anticipated, they nevertheless considered this place as an Asylum where the aged and infirm could rest from the fatigues which are incident to savage life, and where the young of both sexes were fed, cloathed, and instructed as far as they inclined to be. * * *

The attempts to convert and civilize the Savages, which were formerly made in the New England Colonies, while they were part of His Majesty's dominions, were generally unsuccessful, and for many years before the American Revolution the sums supplied by the Company in England for propagating the Gospel among the Heathen Natives of New England and

*The Hon. Robert Boyle of England in 1662 was president of the board of management of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Indians of New England and parts adjacent in America. During his life he devoted much of his time and wealth to the spiritual improvement of the natives of America, and at his death bequeathed a handsome legacy to the society.

†This academy has been already mentioned. It was built chiefly by the efforts of Hon. George Leonard. See the account of the academy by Leonard Allison of Sussex, N. B., in his "Sketch of the Life of Rev. Oliver Arnold."

parts adjacent in America, were appropriated to general purposes by the overseers & corporation of Harvard College at Cambridge.

In the year 1785, the Company decided that as the part of America which is next adjacent to the Massachusetts state is the King's colony of New Brunswick. Resolved therefore;—

"That the Commissioners we may hereafter employ be appointed out "of the inhabitants of that colony, who are the King's loyal subjects and "living in the King's dominions, and who are many of them Gentlemen "of known integrity and fidelity and every way qualified to execute the "trusts of our charter."

In consequence of this resolution, Commissioners were appointed, and it will be shown by their first reports and the returns of the Missionaries and Instructors employed, that they effected more towards the education and civilization of the Indians than had ever been before accomplished.

In process of time it became obvious that some disadvantages resulted from dividing the schools which were at first established at Woodstock, Fredericton, Sheffield, Sussex, and Miramichi. It was then taken into serious and deliberate consideration by the Commissioners whether it would not be expedient to collect all the savages who were desirous of education into one place, and it became an important object to find a place the best calculated for that purpose. Some of the Commissioners contended that Fredericton would be the most eligible place, other places too were named, and after mature consideration, Sussex-Vale was considered to embrace more advantages than any other place and a College was erected there, in a situation where it was surrounded by a considerable extent of fertile country, cleared and under high cultivation, and in the possession of reputable and exemplary farmers. This circumstance it was supposed would offer to the Indians the fairest opportunity of observing the progress of agriculture and of contemplating the benefits which resulted from temperance and industry. * * *

Their condition, which by the encroachments made on their hunting grounds had been rendered truly wretched, was ameliorated, and they were proud of the attention which was shown them by Government in erecting so commodious a building for the education of their children. By associating and exchanging labour with the farmers, to mutual advantage, they were undoubtedly advancing in civilization. It is true literally that all the exertions which have been made have been hitherto ineffectual to conquer the prejudices of the savages against allowing their children to be bound out to trades, and they have another prejudice equally strong against the discipline of schools or chastisement for faults. To reconcile them to the latter it was proposed to introduce into the same school with them a certain number of the white children of the neighbourhood, in order that the savages might mix with them and observe that they were treated with equal justice and attention. This was not approved. * * *

[Reference is made by Edward Winslow in that portion of his letter here omitted to the retirement of Chief Justice Ludlow, Judge Bliss and Judge Allen from the Board of Commissioners of the Company, on account of some difference of opinion with the majority of the Commissioners as to the management.]

The vacancies made by these seceders may be filled with other gentlemen of equal honor and fidelity, and superior vigor and activity. The Mayor of the City of St. John, William Campbell,* Esq., should be one; his integrity, zeal and activity have been sufficiently evinced. James White,† Esq. should also be appointed—this gentleman is a magistrate in the City, was one of the old inhabitants born in the country and acquainted with all the savages in it—a man of abilities, strict honor, and uncommon activity. The third should be a clergyman of the vicinity, and there is in the same county a young man, the Rev. Elias Scovil, who is peculiarly qualified for such a situation. * * *

Three members of the Board should be compelled to visit the College once in three months and critically examine into its state and report the progress made. Cloathing should be issued to those only who are fixed and permanent scholars, and to such of their parents or Guardians as reside at or near the College for the purpose of taking care of their children. * *

Academies established in populous villages for general purposes of education, under the control of dignify'd trustees or corporations, are the worst of all possible places for an attempt to civilize Indians, and money thrown into those funds will—as it ever has been—be converted to other uses. I should therefore object to its being apply'd either to the University at Windsor or the Academy recently established at Fredericton.

*William Campbell, of Worcester, Mass., went from Boston to Halifax in 1776 with the British army, and from thence to New York. At the peace in 1783 he came to Nova Scotia, and in 1786 settled at St. John. He was mayor of the city twenty years. He died at St. John in 1823, aged 82 years. He was a native of Argyleshire, Scotland. On November 30, 1887, St. John's Masonic lodge erected a stone to his memory in the old burial ground to replace the original one.

†James White, sr., was born in Haverhill, Mass., about 1738. He was a lineal descendant of the "Worshipful" William White, one of the founders of Haverhill. He was employed in the commissariat department at Crown Point in 1761, came to St. John with James Simonds in April, 1764, and was engaged with that gentleman and William Hazen in trade there. He was deputy sheriff, Indian agent and deputy collector of customs during the time of the war of the Revolution. Many particulars concerning him will be found in the articles on "Portland Point" in the New Brunswick Magazine of 1898-99.

Thomas Costin to Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, March 23, 1804.

[Condensed.] Is intimately acquainted with the state of the St. John river Indians who are at this time "poor, distressed, and discontented." They were better off twenty years ago. Their hunting declined ever after the arrival of the English settlers. The Indian schools established on the river at Woodstock and elsewhere served, in addition to the benefits of education, to afford relief when hunting failed.

During his (Costin's) residence in Madawaska, several Indians from time to time came to him for "copies" and other useful instruction. They expressed to him their appreciation of the schools. They are at present discontented and discouraged. There is a school established at Sussex Vale, but "what is that, as they observe, to their numerous tribe and the distribution of their nation; they are scattered and dispersed to several parts on this river for the sake of supporting their distressed families, and if schools were to be established once more, it would give them a contented mind and in the course of time" be the means of bettering their condition.

Costin closes his letter with a plea for re-establishing the schools.

The letter is written in a fair hand, with good spelling, but the style is extremely redundant.

Dugald Campbell to Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 29th Feb'y, 1804.

My dear Sir,—I arrived here on the 21st instant very much fatigued from the uncommon badness of the way, which I was under a necessity of paving with Dollars to render it in any degree passable. I took off my snow-shoes at the Riviere des Caps without any regret, after having worn them about three hundred miles.

Your obliging letters have procured me much civility here. I dined the day after my arrival with Mr. A. Coffin where I met Mr. Sewell, the Attorney General, by whom I have been also very cordially welcomed here. He has gone a few days ago to Montreal and will be absent about a month. Sproule has gone to Montreal, where he has already enlisted sixteen men and I think he will bid fair to procure men enough to entitle him to a company.

We have now altogether here about one hundred men,* and our success in this respect does great credit to the talents of Major White who, in defiance of the difficulties created here manifestly to prevent him, has been thus successful. Every advantage appertaining to soldiers is peremptorily refused us, whilst our situation so urgently demands some aid. Official punctilio is here opposed to the good of His Majesty's service, but I am much mistaken if Blue Peter (as the Commander here is called) won't look Black if this matter is represented with spirit at home.

I do not at present forsee anything that may prevent my return in the Spring to New Brunswick, but should it happen otherwise and the House of Assembly be called to meet in my absence, Clopper will act as my Deputy [as Clerk of the House of Assembly], and I shall in that event send him legal authority in due form from hence, and intend to consult the Attorney General here on the occasion.

Pray have the goodness to write to me, if for no other reason than to show that your hand is again capable of performing the function that has ever been so natural to it.

I am very truly, my dear Sir,

Your much obliged hum'e serv't

Dugald Campbell.

Please to show this letter to my friend Clopper. I shall write to him by the next post.

Edward Winslow to Governor Carleton.

Kingsclear, New Brunswick, April 16th, 1804.

Sir,—Since the date of my last, a decision has been made by the Supreme Court which has excited great anxiety in the minds of many of the inhabitants of this province and I have been repeatedly and importunately pressed to communicate some of the circumstances to your Excellency. * * *

Your Excellency has not forgot the bitter controversy which subsisted between a licentious rabble at St. John and the proprietors of the soil there respecting the right of fishery in front of their lots to low water mark.* This dispute the Gentlemen of the law in general seem to agree would eventually be settled in favour of the proprietors, and some very strong reasons were assigned in support of their opinion, particularly it was observed that this right was recognized in similar situations by our ancestors in America before the Revolution, and that those of 'em who removed to Nova Scotia carried with 'em that custom and privilege among others, and yet continue to enjoy it under that government. Hazen and Simonds originally took up their Lands, and the privilege of fishing in front of their lots was undoubtedly considered as one of those rights and immunities which were adverted to and secured to them by the patents, and it was undoubtedly one of the greatest temptations which the country offered (to settlers) and they remained in the uninterrupted enjoyment until we came here. * * *

*The story of the fishery dispute is given in full in the New Brunswick Magazine for August, 1899.

Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Ramsgate, 6 July, 1804.

Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 22nd Feb'y gave us all great satisfaction; Emma* was particularly gratifyed by the intelligence it contained of what concerned the Farm, for which her regard is in no wise abated, and she took an interest even in the declaration of Nancy Cameron.

I saw your friend Col. Lutwyche a few days before I left Town and communicated to him the little prospect I saw of being able to draw the attention of Ministers towards our part of the world; the last set seemed to be entirely taken up with defending their Post; The Present we must hope will do better, but as yet I much fear that our proposal for a certain arrangement to the westward† has not been considered.

We have got out of the bustle of the Town to this very quiet pleasant spot on the seashore where we propose to pass the summer months; but altho' it's quiet it is not destitute of charms in the eyes of the young Ladies, and there is a Ball every Tuesday, and if that should not satisfy them there are three Balls a week at Margate which is within four miles; We have likewise the advantage of having a full view of the Fleet in the Downs & of the French coast, so that we are sure of having the earliest intelligence if Bonaparte should come. My plan on leaving this place is to go for a few months to Bath, and then to return to the Capital where I shall be at hand to avail myself of the first good conveyance that may present itself, after the 1st of May, to return to New Brunswick.‡ I shall write to Mr. Hailles by the next Packet.

The Filley should be broken, if a tolerable hand can be got.

Emma & Anne join in compliments to the young ladies, particularly to Miss Penn.

I am dear Col'l

Very faithfully yours &c.,

Thos. Carleton.

‡It is evident that Lieut. Governor Carleton expected to return to the province at this time, but his departure was postponed from time to time for a variety of reasons. The appointment of Sir James H. Craig in 1807 as governor general of Canada appears to have been particularly distasteful to Carleton. See on this head Winslow's letter of March 8, 1808, and William Knox's of May 4, 1808.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

Salem (Mass), 17 July, 1804.

My dear Winslow,—The vessel returns so much sooner than I expected that I have but a moment to inform you of our safe arrival after a very unpleasant passage, during which Mrs. Chipman was very sick, but she is now recovered in a good degree from the fatigues of the voyage and joins me in the most affectionate wishes towards you. * * * I have made some enquiries about an Instructor for the College at Fredericton, but I much fear I shall not succeed. I find that such Gentlemen as are in any degree qualified for the situation can obtain in this country eleven & twelve hundred dollars per annum. I shall not however give up the pursuit, and have really had but little opportunity yet of being very particular in my enquiries. * * * We found Chip very well and in good reputation and all our friends very glad to see us, and shall probably pass our time pleasantly, but shall after all return with great pleasure to our humble dwelling.

Edward Winslow and the Audit Office.

The following account of the circumstances that rendered it necessary for Edward Winslow to proceed to England in the year 1804, is based upon statements contained in his memorial to the Right Honorable the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, and kindred documents, copies of which are to be found amongst the Winslow papers.

In the year 1785, Col. Winslow was requested by Major General John Campbell, then commanding his Majesty's forces in Nova Scotia, to undertake the duty of paymaster of Contingencies, in order "to assist in correcting the abuse in the military expenditures at the posts on the River St. John." He undertook the duty and instituted a Board of accounts, and the service was carried on until the Lords of the Treasury considered the office no longer necessary. The sum of £8,988 sterling passed through his hands, and vouchers were transmitted from time to time to Halifax that they might be examined by the Board of Accounts there, and receive the sanction and approval of the General commanding. The accounts ought to have been forwarded thence to England to the office for auditing public accounts. When the office of Paymaster of Contingencies in New Brunswick was discontinued in 1786, Col. Winslow, by order of Governor Carleton, paid the balance in his hands to John Robinson, acting Deputy Paymaster of the district and took his discharge for the same. Through some extraordinary delinquency at Halifax the accounts and vouchers were never forwarded to England. As a consequence on the 10th of February, 1802, the commissioners for auditing the public accounts in England issued a peremptory "precept," which was served on Winslow April 26th, by the Attorney General of New Brunswick. Legal proceedings followed and finally Winslow appeared at the Trinity term of the Supreme Court held at Fredericton in 1804, with such explanatory documents as were in his possession. The case was ordered to stand over until the next term. Colonel Winslow decided to proceed to England in order to have the matter cleared up. He had already been subjected, he says, to an expense amounting to nearly £60 in defending himself. He left his family, consisting of a wife and eleven children, to the care of his friends, and in the month of September went to Halifax, where he found deposited in various places all the accounts and vouchers, which eighteen years before had been transmitted by him, and had been suffered to remain there by the negligence and delinquency of others. These he collected and took to England, and in the month of November had the satisfaction of delivering them at the office for auditing the public accounts in London, and on examination the Commissioners declared them perfectly satisfactory.

In his memorial to the Lords of the Treasury, Col. Winslow asked for compensation for the trouble and expence to which he had been put by no fault of his own, and in consequence of his application the sum of £150 sterling was allowed him. The trip to England, begun amid scenes of mortification and embarrassment, ended triumphantly and was eventually the means of securing for him an appointment as Judge of the Supreme Court.

The story, and it is quite a romantic one, is elucidated in the letters that follow.—W. O. Raymond.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Kingsclear, 10th May, 1803.

My dear Chipman,—By this conveyance I transmit you a number of letters which I have at different times received from the Auditors, and I have made my remarks on the outside of them. When you have read 'em and have also looked over the other bundle, you will be able to form some judgment of the extraordinary situation in which I now stand. I did not know when I saw you here that I was in possession of such unequivocal proofs of my having forwarded my accounts and vouchers to Halifax. * * * If they have not been regularly transmitted to England, surely I am not responsible for the omission. It is certainly the most extraordinary circumstance that ever occurred that a man should be called for vouchers to accounts 17 years after the accounts were settled, and after receiving not only the most ample discharges, but the highest compliments for his exertions. Almost every man concerned in the transactions is dead, myself excepted. * * * The Books are with me and contain the debit and credit of my accounts with Government, as also copies of all the vouchers and the Reports of the Board thereon.

&c., &c., &c.

Edward Winslow.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

Medford (Mass), 11 Aug't, 1804.

My dear Winslow,—Your several letters have reached me and claim my best thanks; everything in your quarter is interesting to me and becomes daily more and more so, as the remainder of my pilgrimage must be with you.

As I have information that Humbert* will certainly sail this evening I am unusually pressed for time even to acknowledge the receipt of my letters from N. Bruns. With regard to yourself I have not had a moments quiet since I read the account of the proceedings in the Exchequer cause. The persecution is certainly most unexampled, but the difficulty now is in determining what is best to be done. * * *

I think you should prepare a Memorial without delay to the Lords of the Treasury, having first obtained assurances from the Court of time to be given for the application and obtaining an answer. To this memorial should be annexed a copy of all the proceedings in the cause, which will render short the rest of the detail, emphatically stating the utter impossibility from the extreme state of your ill health of your personal attendance in England, and offering to submit to any inquiry before any persons or tribunal to be appointed for the purpose in this country. * * *

Such a memorial, accompanied by a letter to Lutwyche (written to be

*Stephen Humbert was a New Jersey Loyalist. He came to St. John in 1783 and was an active factor in the life of the city. For a number of years he pursued the calling of a baker on quite a large scale. He owned a vessel called the "Friendship," which was nicknamed "Humbert's Bread Basket." When Mr. Humbert arrived in St. John he was but a lad of sixteen. From being a baker of ship's bread he became a merchant with store and residence on South Market wharf. In 1814 he owned a brig called the "War-hater." He was a member of the St. John common council for some years, and was elected a representative of the city in the provincial legislature in the years 1809, 1816 and 1830. He was also an active man in the Methodist denomination and one of those who at first sympathized with Mr. Priestly in the well known "Priestly affair," but afterwards withdrew his support, convinced that the object of it was no longer worthy. Stephen Humbert was a man of many parts, for example, in 1796, we find him advertising a school for sacred music. His was a long and remarkably active life. He died in 1849 at the age of 82 years. The house in which he lived at the close of his life stood on the site of the present Masonic Hall building on Germain street. An interesting incident in Stephen Humbert's political career is recorded in D. R. Jack's Essay on St. John, pp. 108, 109.

shewn), and a letter to Foy to interest General Carleton (for on such an occasion there can be no doubt he would exert himself*) could not I think fail to procure an order for the stay of all further proceedings against you. * * *

We pass our time as pleasantly as I expected, but I shall not be sorry when the period proposed for our visit shall have expired—such sameness of amusement, idleness and expence, fatigues and becomes insipid after so long an experience of the calm pleasures of our comparatively solitary life in New Brunswick. Tell Hailes we are well and I could say no more if I should write to him. To him and his family, the Hazens &c, your wife, sisters and domestic flock, give Mrs. Chipman's and my most affectionate regards. And for yourself accept our constant and best love and prayers.

Yours ever sincerely,

Ward Chipman.

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

St. John, August 20th 1804.

My dear Friend,—I have prevailed upon Humbert† to send his vessel to Windsor for a load, that you might have an opportunity to get here before he was ready to leave this port for Boston. You'll lose no time if you mean to go that way to England as Humbert intends to be ready in eight or nine days. * * *

Memorials have been sent from this Province and Nova Scotia to the Secretary of State to withhold indulgence from American vessels trading to the West Indies to confine them to 70 tons as by the late treaty. The memorials state our abilities in furnishing vessels and lumber. This is a business you are well acquainted with and will be able to give the particular information necessary. * * * I have just heard you have again altered your opinion and mean to go [to England] in the ship America from this port. Whatever you determine on, you will let me know, that Humbert may govern himself accordingly on his coming from Windsor. I understand Chipman with Mrs. Chipman are well disposed to return notwithstanding the fine roads, carriages and fruit, &c. and that their visit has been long enough.

I am D'r Sir,

Very affectionately yours,

Geo. Leonard.

*There is in this sentence a covert allusion to Lieut. Governor Carleton's apparent indifference to matters connected with his government. Perhaps this indifference arose in a measure out of the disregard the ministers displayed to many of his recommendations.

†Stephen Humbert's vessel was employed on the route between St. John and Boston.

P. S. I hope your Daughter found some benefit from the Fogs of this Town, tho' they were but few to what has been usual in summer. She is a good Girl and well deserving the favors of Heaven. Our best wishes attend her and the family.

William Hazen to Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, 7th Nov. 1804.

My dear Colonel—When you were kind enough to offer to attend to any command which I might have across the water, I felt I assure you too much concerned and interested on your own account to think of adding the smallest care to your mind, although several important matters of my own occurred, particularly while you were struggling with your natural hereditary enemy, as John Bull says of the French, who chose—barbarous enough—to attack you at a time when every man has enough to contend with, in leaving home. * * * After the very romantic and favorable entree to your adventures at Halifax*, your Fredericton friends cannot but anticipate great pleasure and success in your voyage. * * *

Soon after General Hunter came to the province Mr. Needham was employed by him to do business and he condescended to say, from his own knowledge, that most of the adjutants and Quartermasters of the Regiments disbanded at the last peace had gotten half-pay, and that it was his opinion that Needham would succeed to it also upon making proper application, the mode of which he also condescended to advise. Accordingly, as the object was of immense individual importance, and as there did not seem to be any impropriety in trying the thing, a memorial was sent to the Commander-in-Chief (a copy of which I shall annex) enclosed in a short letter to Governor Carleton begging his sanction of it, if he saw no objection, & at any rate begging if this were inconvenient, that he would forward it. What part His Excellency was pleased to take Needham never heard, but from the prompt attention paid to his memorial he believes himself to be under great obligations to him. * * * As I feel anxious to do everything that can serve a young man of great industry and merit, and as I know what your dispositions are and have been on similar occasions, I am confident that I cannot do him greater justice than by begging you to take an early opportunity, while in London, of using your skill and influence to effect his purpose. He has wished me to draw up a memorial to the Treasury, but as you are infinitely better qualified to do it, I beg you will take the trouble of it, or directing to be done whatever may be necessary and proper. * * *

I am informed that the Adjutants and Quartermasters of both the neighboring provincial Regiments* have succeded in getting half-pay. Of twelve of us who memorialized for half-pay at the reduction of the late N. B. Reg't, every one except himself (Needham) are again employed in the service, mostly with permanent rank. * * *

Mr. Needham has lately been so unfortunate as to lose an adventure worth an hundred pounds by the singular accident of a Brig being burnt in port at Jamaica. This has taken nearly all the industrious scrapings of his last nine years service, that the support and education of his mother and her orphans had left him.

I will not my dear Colonel now add to the intrinsic evil of a long letter a longer apology, for I know that your politeness & benevolence are on my side, allow me then only further to mention that it will give pleasure to hear early of your welfare in London.

Mrs. Murray is just recovering from another unpleasant attack, but I hope she will be comfortable again another winter. Should you meet with Brinley, the Paymaster, or his brother, the Barrister of Lincoln's Inn, we wish to be remembered to them.

I beg that you will believe that I always remain with the greatest respect and esteem, my Dear Colonel,

Your most faithful humble servant

Wm. Hazen.

[Note. Needham's memorial, enclosed in the above letter, is addressed to His Royal Highness Field Marshal the Duke of York, Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Forces &c. &c. &c., and from it we learn the following facts concerning Mark Needham.

He was the son of a soldier of the 54th Reg't killed in the American war. He himself entered, when very young, in the 54th regiment and served nearly nine years. By the favor of his commanding officer he obtained his discharge when the regiment was ordered from N. B. He was burthened with the support of two sisters & a brother. When the N. B. Provincial Reg't was raised in 1793 he could not forbear joining His Majesty's colours. In the course of nine years further service he rose through the ranks of Fifer, Corporal, Sergeant & Paymaster's clerk, until his Excellency Gen'l Carleton (then Colonel to the Reg't), was pleased to promote him to the Quartermastercy.

Needham's memorial is dated 10th April, 1804. The reply received from Col. Clinton—dated "Horse Guards, 4 June, 1804"—states: "I have received the Commander in Chief's commands to acquaint you that he cannot obtain half-pay for you, but your name will be noted for a Quartermastercy in case an opportunity should offer for His Royal Highness to recommend you for employment."]

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

St. John, N. B. Nov'r, 20th, 1804.

My dear Winslow—I am now overpaid for the anxiety and fears for the fate of your public papers by a friendly communication from that good man Moody, who had before the receipt of your letter given me a full and very pleasing account of the manner & where they were all found, and all the circumstances afterwards. In the fullness of my heart I have offered him my services and of all your friends in New Brunswick, for life, for his zeal and fidelity to you while at Halifax, and I cannot thank Sir John Wentworth too much and your other friends there who have shewn so much kindness and friendship for you on this occasion.

I hastened to communicate the pleasing and very satisfactory account to Mrs. Winslow and your sisters immediately on our getting it, and then I sallied forth into the street of the City in triumph among the sons of woeful countenance. I asked the Attorney General,* if he meant to continue the prosecution; He said "yes, unless it was recommended to him by the President and Council to do otherwise." This was after showing him Moody's letter, which was authentic document that every paper was found as stated by you in court. I desired Peters, your counsel, to communicate to you not only this conversation, but the Rule that was made absolute in the Court at Fredericton on your departure, and the style and manner of its being done—as a document to show that if you had been here, you perhaps would have been deprived of the opportunity of ever seeking your papers. This ought to enhance your claims on Government. Upon the whole, my dear friend, I clearly see the kind hand of Heaven in this business, and that good will flow out of the evil which certain characters intended to bring upon you. I can see the joy of our worthy friend Lutwyche on this occasion—for no heart rejoices more than his when his friends prospects are fair, and none will exert themselves more to promote their success.

Chipman's return from Boston, and the prospect of your good fortune have put us in high spirits. You are now where justice will and ought to be done for you. * * *

Coffin, Tom Sproule, and D. Murray are soon to embark for N. York or Boston to take their passage for England, so that you will from them get a full information of all domestic occurrences here. God bless you and send you back soon is the wish of myself and family.

Geo. Leonard.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Stubbins House, 22 Nov'r, 1804.

Dear Colonel,—I congratulate you on your escape from the perils of winds and seas, and still more on the prospect you have of being delivered from those worst of toments, the Controlers of Accounts, and I most sincerely hope that you will not be disappointed in your expectation. I am sorry we happened to be out of Town when you arrived. We left it on the thirteenth and are thus far on our way to Bath, where we think of staying till March. As you are broke in to the thumping of a mail coach, perhaps you may take a run down between this and that time. I did not hear of Geo. Ludlow's failure till after my arrival in Town some months after it happened, and I was as much surprised as if I had heard our Chief* had absconded. Pray is the house† implicated in the misfortune, or was it known before you sailed? It must be a mortification to some of our great people on the other side of the water.

I should have liked to conduct you a little about the streets. If Foy is at Woolwich he will not fail to come up to call upon you.

Direct to me here near Maidenhead under cover to my Brother.

Yours very faithfully,

Thos. Carleton.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 24th Nov'r, 1804.

My dear Winslow,—You are no doubt before this time safe in London, where you have my most fervent wishes that you may have constant occasion to rejoice in your determination to go there. The more I think of it the more I am inclined to approve of the step, and to be persuaded that it will eventually terminate fortunately for you. * * *

I am indeed uncommonly anxious about you, and I do hope and trust that I shall receive a cheerful line from you by the earliest moment after your arrival. I would write freely and often to you were it not for the enormous expence to you of postage with which such a correspondence must be attended, but I will avail myself of every conveyance post free, that I can hear of. * * *

We have all your communications from Halifax, and are exceedingly rejoiced at your success there in recovering your vouchers, &c, and at the flying colours with which you embarked—crippled as you were [physically]. I hope and trust the voyage has been of service to your health, and that you will not have any return of Gout, at the least till you return to us, or to some better place. But I desire if you go elsewhere to see that there is a provision made for me to accompany you, I am completely out at elbows here, and my Boston jaunt has been a seriously saucy business to me. We however got very safe back after a very short passage; we sailed from thence the very day you sailed from Halifax for England. Our visit was a very pleasant one and would so have terminated had it not been for the very sudden death of our good friend Martin Brimmer; we left his family of course in very deep affliction.

*Chief Justice Ludlow, the father of George Ludlow.

†The reference is to the firm of Ludlow, Fraser and Robinson of Fredericton.

Chip was well, and doing well at College; he was to speak the English oration, which is considered as the first part at a public exhibition, a fortnight after we left him; I have this moment a letter from him, in which he gives me a very satisfactory account of his performance. He has correct information that Mr. Dexter who was there—the great Counsellor at Law, Sam Dexter—said, it was "the best performance for matter and manner that he had ever heard at Cambridge." This is indeed to be "laudatur a laudato viro." You will pardon this communication, in indulgence to the feelings of a doting, partial father. But what I shall do with him or for him I know not; he means to study law; he dislikes the states; I cannot think of his burying himself in this country. If I had money to maintain him and he should wish it, and dare to make the effort, I would send him to the Temple at once. Tho' I don't suppose I shall ever seriously think of this, I wish you would ask our inestimable friend Lutwyche, what he thinks would be the annual expence of living in the most prudent economical manner at the Temple till he could be admitted,* and what he thinks of such a plan.

If practicable it appears to me it might lay a foundation for his procuring something eligible in the colonies in the line of his profession. Witness young Cochran of Halifax, &c. But you have concerns enough of your own to occupy all your attention, this however will cost you only a few minutes conversation and will give you an opportunity of saying to our friend L.† how much I esteem him, and to assure him that I speak and think of him constantly with affection.

We have had an uncommonly severe season since this month came in; there has been no water communication with Fredericton this fortnight past, the weather is now mild again but no chance of the ice breaking up. I shall be there in February and shall not fail to contribute every thing in my power to the comfort of Mrs. W. and your family to the full extent of the little pittance I engaged to you, and by every other means in my command.

*That is admitted as Attorney. At the foot of the page in Ward Chipman's letter, Col. Winslow makes a memo as follows:—"About £200 the necessary expence at the Temple. Board and Lodge where he thinks."

†Col. Lutwyche, with whom Winslow spent much of his time in England.

I have nothing new to communicate. Parker and his family arrived safe about ten days ago from New York. All our friends here are well. I understand that Judge Allen has had lately something of a paralitic stroke but has recovered again. Upham is again ill and it is said worse than usual, but I presume he will weather it, as he has done so many times before.

In case of a vacancy I should by no means wish to succeed to it. I should hope that I might succeed to the place of Attorney General and retain my half-pay, as an allowance on some score, or to have the salary increased by the amount of it.

I do hope and expect, at least, that the Governor will make such mention of me at the public offices that they will know who I am, if I should ever hereafter be recommended for anything.

Let us know by the earliest opportunity whether we are again to have the pleasure of seeing his Excellency, and when, in this Province; indeed I shall depend upon hearing a thousand things from you that I cannot expect to hear from any other quarter. But I will be contented with an absolute dearth of all other intelligence if you will communicate to me that you are successful in your pursuits upon your own account. I pray most earnestly that you may be once more in a situation to enjoy life and thereby make your friends, all of whom are much interested in you, happy.

I am yet without any symptoms of Gout, as I have been for a year and a half last past, and could we once more get together without being so shackled with the grins and gripes of poverty and dependence, I think we should yet rattle off a few years very chearily. Adieu my dear fellow and be assured of the constant, the faithful, friendship and affection of

Your ever devoted

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Stubbins House, 1 Dec'r, 1804.

Dear Coll,—I met Captain Foy on Thursday last by appointment at Gen'l Lusins, ten miles from this place, and I saw him set off yesterday morning for Devonshire, or the land of matrimony, being determined to take unto himself a wife; the Lady is Miss Sophia Courtney, sister to Lord Courtney, and we have none of us seen her, but by all accounts there is not much beauty nor fortune; he had not heard of your arrival before I told him of it, and expressed great regret at not having seen you, but that evil is not irreparable. We are to stay here till the 17th. You know that Daniel Hailes is at Deptford; what's become of the Major?*

*Major Harris W. Hailes, who was deputy adjutant general at New Brunswick.

I should be glad to know the result of your first interview with those worthy and approved good masters the Comptrolers of Accounts.

Enclose you letters to my brother.

Powderham Castle, Exeter, Dec'r 7, 1804.

My dear Sir,—I have heard of your arrival from Gen'l Carleton and beg you to accept my very sincere congratulations. I think probably the change of scene, &c., may be of service to your health. I shall probably remain here and in this part of the country the winter, after which my residence will probably be at Woolwich, when & where I shall take the first opportunity of seeing you. The General & Family are at Lord Dorchester's and will very soon leave there for Bath. I hope at your leisure you'll let me hear from you and tell me your adventures.

Be good enough to direct under cover to Lord Viscount Courtenay.

Yours very sincerely,

Major Lyman to Edward Winslow.

Scilly Islands, Dec. 17th, 1804.

Dear Winslow,—I have not much to write, as you may suppose, from this quarter of the world and know not what to say except that I am very anxious to know how you do as to your bodily health, and how you have been impressed with this old world. * * * I wished to have accompanied you to London, as nothing could possibly in life have given me more pleasure than to have gone with an old friend like you, but I was so situated in my command here that I could not have done it without asking for a Field Officer to be sent while I was absent, & that was too much to ask.

I arrived here very comfortably in one of His Majesty's ships a few days after you left Plymouth only twelve hours on our passage, so that I did not sleep on board, and found everything very comfortable in my "Government." I wish you may be drove in here to see how I am situated, which really is very charming indeed, for an old soldier who does not expect to "le Baton de Marchel." I have a most excellent house, 150 acres of land around it—a most salubrious air and everything in plenty, except female society—but perhaps I am as well off, for from what I have seen, there are some Blanks in the Lottery of Matrimony. Moreover, I grow very nice as I grow older.

I hope you found our friend Lutwyche well, give my best compliments to him. * * * Let me hear from you the first morning you have half an hour to spare.

I am very faithfully yours,

D. Lyman.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Bath, 23 Dec'r, 1804.

Dear Colonel,—Every word of the information conveyed in your letter of the 7th respecting certain transactions in New Brunswick was new to me, for Odell's letter was nothing more than an introduction to an effusion of his muse,* which was enclosed.

The conduct of the two Gentlemen is inexplicable to me, I am extremely glad that you have got such satisfactory testimonials, as an explanation (of what appears to us misterious) must come forth. By a letter which one of the Girls has got from N. B. it appears that George† had arrived there, but it would seem that the nature of the visit was not understood, for the writer observed that Mrs. L——— must be highly pleased to see her son so unexpectedly. We have been a little more than a week at this place and have suffered more from cold in that time than I remember to have done in any country, excepting the short time we passed at Leonard's House on our first arrival‡ [in New Brunswick].

We had a letter from Captain Foy this morning, written after; of course he's supremely Happy.

Very faithfully, Yours &c,

Thos. Carleton.

pensably necessary, and altho' my success may not be equal to my wishes—nay, if further misfortunes are to follow me—I shall always think that I acted perfectly right.

Already I have compleately removed every imputation which could possibly arise from a mistaken and unwarrantable prosecution, and that circumstance has raised me a number of friends in a quarter where I least expected. I have had an opportunity—and a very sweet one to me it has been—of expressing my sentiments on subjects of some importance to the country in which I may be compelled to spend the remainder of my days.

My arrival here was at an unfortunate moment. Gen. Carleton was absent; Gen. Fox had just departed for Gibraltar; and there was not a single officer of distinction in London with whom I had any acquaintance. * * *

The Spanish war gives a fine spring to the navy bucks and the dollars begin to circulate among 'em. A land expedition is supposed to be in contemplation commanded by General Moore,* who is said to be a crack General upon the present stage. The force consists of about 20,000 men and Portugal is supposed to be the object. Gen. Moore 'tis said has been in that country for some weeks past reconnoitringand making the necessary previous arrangements. Lord Nelson is playing the very d—l with the Spanish shipping. With respect to Bonaparte and Josephine the people of England care no more about them than the Frederictonians do about Jack Arnold and his wife. * * *

The dreadful gout which I had at Halifax injured my feet in such a manner that I've never stepped without pain since, and within these three or four days I've been threatened with another attack. God forbid that I should have a violent one in such a place as this. I shall stay here no longer than my friends think necessary. I've a memorial before the commissioners to which I shall not get an answer till after the holidays. They have already told me that they will not detain me a moment, that I may leave my memorandum with my agent and return instantly if I please—but this is not exactly what I want. When I get fairly released I shall go to Bath, and I presume that in a short time I shall be able to discover whether there is any chance of my being able to procure anything for the benefit of my family. Seeking for employment without any specific object in view is a forlorn undertaking, and (crippled as I am) it is impossible for me to accept an active situation. Two or three things have been already pointed out to me, but they are in climates where I should soon fall a sacrifice, nor have they been of sufficient importance to justify the risque. I however stand ready for anything that shall appear rational.

*Sir John Moore's memory is preserved in Wolfe's fine ode beginning with the familiar line "Not a drum was heard, not a funeral note."

God knows what may be the result. Whenever I leave New Brunswick I feel such attachments that the thought of quitting it forever breaks my heart strings.

I say nothing, my dear boys, about your affairs. I tremble whenever I contemplate the difficulties which you must encounter, and sometimes I almost reproach myself for leaving you, but I could not help it. I am sure of your attention to your mother and my precious, very precious, children. They know that I cannot write to them and they know how ardently I love them. God give me once more a sight of 'em and neither malice, poverty, nor any earthly power shall separate me again.

Adieu, Heaven protect you all,

E. Winslow.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Bath, 3 Jan'y, 1805.

Dear Colonel,—I hope you have not given up thoughts of coming to Bath; next to London it is worth the Travellers inspection and you should not leave England without seeing it. The present season is a favorable one for the purpose, and you would probably meet Foy there, as he is to pass this place on his way to Town. I hear your friend Lyman* is made Governor of the Silley Islands and is actually resident,—"to reign is worth ambition tho' in Hell." Apropos, what's become of that worthy son of Beliol Mr. Glenie ?† I understood he was to come home this winter. Let us have some account of your life and opinions.

Yours, etc.,

Thos. Carleton.

Philip Deare to Jonathan Bliss.

Office for Auditing the Public Accounts,

Somerset Place, 6th February, 1805.

Sir,—Edward Winslow Esquire, late Commissary at New Brunswick, having delivered into this office for examination his account as Deputy Paymaster of Contingent Expenses of the Army serving within that province, duly attested on oath, together with vouchers to support the same between 19th October, 1785, and 7th November, 1787, pursuant to a peremptory precept of three Commissioners for auditing the Public Accounts,

*See biographical note at the end of Chipman's letter of 4th January, 1786.

†See biographical note under date 25th October, 1785. In the session of the house of assembly in 1797 James Glenie moved certain resolutions charging the lieutenant governor with interfering with the privileges of the house. These resolutions were voted down, but the lieutenant governor never forgot the circumstance. James Glenie died in London early in December, 1817, in his 67th year.

and which it appears by your letter of the 4th May, 1802, has been served on him, and the same Edward Winslow having thereby complied with the requisition of this Board, the Commissioners have directed me to inform you that it is not their wish that any further proceedings should be had against him.

I have the honor to be, Sir, &c., &c.,

Ph. Deare.

E. B. Brenton to Edward Winslow.

Beacon Hill, Bath, 13 Feb'y, 1805.

My dear Winslow,—Nothing but real indisposition would have prevented me from seeing more of you when I was last in Town. * * *

I sincerely congratulate you on the good news from home. Mrs. Brenton is grateful for your sister's kind remembrance and will take an opportunity of telling her so—what she means to say of you I don't pretend to conjecture. I only observe if she says all she thinks both Sally and herself will be fully convinced of your existence and perhaps become acquainted with more of your good qualities than they were aware of.

I felicitate you upon getting finally clear of such a "peremptory" set as you have had to deal with. I cannot but conceive such proceedings to be unjust and illegal. Some good must surely come to you from the persecution, as it may well be called rather than prosecution. Your poetical flight certainly much better suits the meridian of Bond Street than the American Cebbir.

Mary has just set off with her brother to walk, that they may not miss a fair day, and desires me to say that—

"Two thirds of a cross and a circle compleat, [TO]
Two semicircles perpendicular meet [B]
An angle upon two feet, [A]
Two semicircles & a circle compleat;" [CCO] is the enigma. * * *

I have seen nothing of the General since my return to Bath, my indisposition having kept me almost wholly at home. I met Miss Carleton yesterday, they are all well and as much delighted with Bath as ever. Let me hear from you when your leisure & inclination suits. Your letters are a source of great entertainment both to the late Katy Taylor & your Mary, who can never be indifferent to or uninterested about you. They unite with me in best wishes for you & Miss Sproule, who I hope we shall soon see here.

Believe me very sincerely
&c. &c.

E. B. Brenton.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 28 Feb'y, 1805.

My dear Winslow,—I wrote to you fully by Tom Sproule who sailed from New York for England early in the last month, and again by Gen'l Goffin who sailed from this place three weeks ago in a Brig, commanded by Capt. Scott, bound to Greenwich. We are now hourly in expectation of hearing of your arrival in England either by the November or December mails, both of which are now due, and most anxious are we all to hear that you enjoy your health, and that your affairs are prosperous. I returned a few days ago from Fredericton where I have been attending the Courts, and frequently saw a great part of your family. I twice visited Mrs. Winslow and found them all in perfect health. I supplied her with cash and other articles she immediately wanted, and have taken a memorandum of such articles as she will want from this place as soon as a water conveyance offers, and you may rest assured that I will not cease to contribute all in my power to her comfort during your absence.

We have had an uncommonly tempestuous winter, but the weather is once more become very pleasant, and I trust will continue so.

The Gen'l Assembly has been very busy and is still sitting, tho' they have not done much, everything goes on very quietly. The revenue law will again be passed for two years, and a law I understand is passed for issuing Treasurer's notes for £5,000, bearing interest. This will in some measure relieve the great scarcity of cash in the country, and I hope the exclusion of the Americans from our West India Islands, will give a spring to our commerce and a new complexion to the interests of this Province. Unless this happens universal despondence will take place. The school-bill* is again revived, has passed the House, and will I understand be assented to by the Council. £100 per annum is given to the City, and £50 to each county for the establishment of permanent schools, the latter to be under

The first school act was passed by the New Brunswick legislature in 1802. Up to this time all schools had been regulated by the following section, No. 76, of the Royal Instructions to Governor Carleton:—

"And we do further direct that no school master who shall arrive in our "said province from this kingdom be hence forward permitted to keep school "in that our said province without the license of the Lord Bishop of London. "and that no person there or that shall come from other parts shall be admit- "ted to keeep school in New Brunswick without your license first obtained."

The school bill referred to by Ward Chipman in his letter above was entitled "An Act for encouraging and extending Literature in this Province." The greater portion of the Act relates soley to the St. John Grammar School. Quite an elaborate provision was made for its establishment and maintenance. The President of the Corporation, or Board of Directors was the Rector of Trinity Church in St. John. Provision was made for eight free scholars, all others were required to pay fees. The Grammar School at St. John was an excellent institution in its day and had many teachers of much ability.

the direction of the Justices in their sessions. A new militia bill has also passed. A bill was brought in for attaching the rights of fishery to the proprietors of the soil, but was lost by the casting voice of Jas. Peters, the Chairman of the Committee. I do not recollect anything else of consequence, it is supposed the Assembly will be prorogued the latter end of this week.

My wife joins me in every affectionate wish for your health, welfare and good fortune, & I am as ever,

Yours faithfully & unalterably,

W. C.

H. Knox to Edward Winslow.

Ealing, March 15. 1805.

Sir,—My father having been for several days past confined to his bed by St. Anthony's Fire in his head & the Gout in his feet, desires me to acquaint you that he received on Thursday morning a letter from Mr. Faulkner, appointing him to attend the Lords of the Council on Monday next at one o'clock; but as he was obliged to declare himself unable to attend their Lordship's appointment, he expects they will put off the hearing until some further day, though he thinks the materials he has given them are fully sufficient for them to decide upon.

I remain Sir,

Your obedient humble servant,

H. Knox.

Charles J. Peters to Edward Winslow.

Saint John, 26th, March, 1805.

My Dear Sir,—I should be the most ungrateful of living mortals if I suffered this opportunity to escape without expressing the real and unfeigned joy your account of the fortunate and happy turn the vile and malignant persecution set up against you in this country has taken. * *

I am sure I read your letter to our friend Mr. Chipman with a kind of pleasurable phrenzy. And what do you think the old Timon of an Attorney General says? He can pay no attention to Mr. Deare's Letter, that it is not sufficient to induce any discontinuance of the prosecution (alias persecution) on his part, but the Court may make what order they think proper. You see the Tiger like disposition of the man loth to quit his hold. * * *

I spent about three weeks at Fredericton the past winter. I had the pleasure of seeing some part of your good family every day and rest assured I visited Mrs. Winslow as often as business and the state of the travelling would allow. They were never before so completely enveloped in snow. I never saw anything like it even in Canada where the clouds let down the snow without mercy. And it appeared to me that the Sun-bellied Bacchus was as prolific as the clouds for so much snow and dissipation I never knew. * * *

The post will be off from this in about an hour and I scratch this scrawl in haste, Mr. Chipman having promised to enclose it in his dispatches.

Should you see General Coffin after this reaches you tell him I shall be exceedingly glad to have the account of his safe arrival by his own hand—that we have been all frightened to death here at a rascally report of the loss of the Brig in which he took his departure, before clearing the Bay of Fundy, but our fears are now at an end on that score.

Mrs. Peters & myself visited Mrs. Coffin about three weeks since on the Ice, all well.

In haste. Your ever obliged & sincere friend,

Charles J. Peters.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 27 March, 1805.

My dear Winslow,—I will not attempt to describe to you the heartfelt pleasure which your letters of the 12th Nov. and 5 Dec'r, just received by the Packet, afforded me. The January mail arrived with those for Nov. and Dec. yesterday, but brought no letters of a later date from you than the above. I have communicated the intelligence to your friends who rejoice with us at your success in so happily settling the business which carried you home, and I hope the first good fortune is an earnest of better things to come. Make yourself easy about your family, they are all well and I shall take care that they are supplied with what they want in your absence. * * *

We are all jogging on in the same old way without anything uncommon to depress or inspirit us. Drury* is on the point of leaving us for England via Boston to join his regiment the 5th. As his wife is in a fair

*Colonel Charles Drury, of the British army, was A. D. C. in 1821 to Lieut. Gov. Smyth. He married a daughter of Hon. William Hazen, sister to the wife of Ward Chipman. After his retiring from the army here he for many years held the office of post master and registrar of deeds and wills for St. John. He was succeeded in the latter office by his son, Ward Chipman Drury. The following marriage notice appeared in a St. John paper:—

"Married on Thursday evening last (Dec. 27, 1804), by the Rev. Dr. Byles, "Major John Foster Fitzgerald, of the New Brunswick Fencibles, to Miss Char-"lotte Hazen; and Captain Charles Drury of the 5th Regiment of Foot to Miss "Frances A. Hazen, daughters of the Hon. William Hazen, Esq., of Portland."

This double wedding was a grand social event in its day.

way and it would be imprudent for her to undertake a voyage now, she remains at present a part of my family. Charlotte and Fitzgerald* will I believe remove to the Fort.

I heard from Fredericton a few days ago when all your family were well. I have sent up such articles as Mrs. Winslow thought she should want before the river opens.

I am very anxious to know if it will be your destiny to return to us. I wish devoutly some provision could be made for a few of us in some other quarter. I see that I must ere long decamp from this. There are so many other men in the profession that I find myself almost without any business at all and I cannot condescend to seek it. I sometimes think that a strong memorial to the Secretary of State supported by the Governor would procure some back allowance as Solicitor General; my half-pay prevents my applying for it in future but I have now served twenty years for nothing. * * *

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Lansdowne House, 4 April, 1805.

I fully intended calling upon you this forenoon, but the weather seems to forbid all egress; in the meantime I send enclosed a letter for the Province. The first fair day I hope to find you ready for a walk.

Yours, &c,

Thos. Carleton.

Edward Winslow to Major General Campbell.

London, 28th July, 1805.

Sir,—I have been eight months† in this great City and long ere this I would have paid my respects to you in writing if a consideration of some delicacy and importance had not prevented. This day I have the pleasure to tell you that the business alluded to has terminated in a manner honorable to me as an officer and perfectly satisfactory to me as a gentleman, and I feel myself now at liberty to detail the circumstances and I shall do it as concisely as I can.

You appointed me paymaster of contingencies for the province of New Brunswick, and so liberal and extensive was your confidence in me that you did not take the usual precaution of requiring bonds with sureties from me. I executed the duty with care and fidelity and I transmitted my accounts and vouchers to your Head Quarters at Halifax, and the receipt of *Major Fitzgerald was afterwards General Sir John Foster Fitzgerald, M. P. His daughter, Charlotte, married Otto Leopold Baron Von Ende, chamberlain to the King of Saxony, and another daughter, Anne, married Sir Robert Keith Arbuthnot, baronet of Scotland.

†Col. Winslow arrived in London November 13, 1804.

'em was duly acknowledged, but owing to the slovenly conduct of two sottish thick headed paymasters, by the names of Wheelwright and Whitelock, they were delayed in their progress, and finally detained in their offices except one or two abstracts, altho' I have repeated letters from both of 'em informing me that they were all transmitted to England. After a lapse of several years the Auditors of public accounts sent precepts to me requiring me to appear and deliver my vouchers, &c. To these letters I made respectful answers in which I stated all the facts — notwithstanding which they kept up a fire of precepts and at last issued what they called a compulsory process. This was making the matter rather too serious, and I foresaw that the next attack would be upon you, and I was sure it would necessarily be productive of great embarrassment and perplexity, because there was not any other man on earth capable of explaining these transactions but myself. I therefore, my dear Sir, could not reconcile it to my feelings that a Gentleman for whom I ever had the most cordial affection and esteem, and who had treated me with brotherly attention and kindness should be pestered and disturbed in his retirement by a wanton, unnecessary, mistaken prosecution. [Remainder wanting.]

Governor William Franklin to Edward Winslow.

[London] Sunday 25th August, 1805.

Dear Sir,—I called at your Lodgings a few days ago, when I was told you had removed to Kensington, but your old Landlord could not tell me to what Number.

I was in hopes from what passed when I last saw you that I should have had the Pleasure of seeing you in Norton Street soon after. I now send my Servant to endeavour to find you out and to inform you that if you have not already seen Windsor Castle (which the King has lately greatly improved and ornamented) you may have an opportunity of doing it very agreeably—if you have no objection to the company of Ladies — on Tuesday next. We propose to go in two Post Chaises, three in each Chaise. Mrs. Franklin and another Lady will be glad to take you between them, and I go between two others. Each Lady to pay share and share alike with the Gentlemen, for they will not go on any other condition.

If this suits you we shall be happy to be favored with your Company. We mean to call at Kensington to take up little Ellen, and can take you up at the same Time, about 7 o'clock in the morning. We are to Breakfast at Hanslow, and dine at Windsor in Time to get Home the same evening.

In hopes you will not have any Business to prevent your going with us, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Wm. Franklin.

Lieut. Gov. Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Ramsgate, 28 August, 1805.

Dear Colonel,—By not hearing from you I take it for granted that you keep your old station at 240 [Oxford St. London]. I find that among the Acts of Assembly lately transmitted from our Province, there is one to authorise the issue of paper currency to the amount of £5,000, and another to prohibit any person not His Majesty's subject from importing or selling any goods within the Province. Perhaps you have heard something of these Acts from some of your friends; at all events let me know what you think of them; everything that bears a relation to trade, coming from a certain quarter, should be scrutinized with a jealous eye.

Yours very faithfully,

Thos. Carleton.

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

St. John, Oct'r 2nd, 1805.

My dear Winslow,—I left the melancholy task to be communicated to you of the death of your dear Catherine to some friend who would less wound your heart with the recital of the event, and who could offer consolations with more effect; the last Packet sailed without a letter from me on that account.

* * * The death of your Daughter caused excessive grief in your other children, not having ever experienced a like calamity in the family. Mrs. Winslow supported herself under it with great resolution, which moderated the grief of those who surrounded and looked to her for some consolation. Your daughter Hannah was at our house and left us a little before the melancholy event happened and was with Mrs. Coffin at the Manor. * * *

The Governors not coming out this year has given great spirits to certain classes, some high and of the lowest, these have everything their own way, as popularity among the latter is the order of the day. Poor Hazen's* property in every court is sacrificed to that purpose. There is however no despair or depression of spirits, altho' it is circulated that the Government is likely to remain in the present hands as long as those who now possess it are alive; and for aught I know it may be as well as in some others, for if I had the power I feel no great zeal or ambition to remove it from darkness to darkness, but let it remain motionless as it has for years past. The only spring looked for is in your exertions and Lord Sheffield's. I hope by this time His Lordship has received the box, in which is the freedom of the City* and Chipman's letter which accompany'd it — and that Mr. Knox has the money to pay for His Lordship's picture; this I have desired Goodall and Turner to pay, and shall look to the House of Assembly to reimburse me. * * *

I am not a little pleased that you find in Lord Sheffield a friend. We shall soon have all our fishing smacks named after him.

Judge Saunder's son has this moment come down from Fredericton on his way to England with Mr. Fennell so that it is probable you will see him in London.

* * * Geo. Leonard.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 5 Octo'r, 1805.

My dear Winslow,—My last letter to you was forwarded by your son Tom who I hope is long before this time safe with you. I have not written to you since, because I thought it much more than probable that the Governor and his family and yourself would be on your return to us before a letter could reach you, until I received your letter by the August mail, which has in many respects given me very great pleasure.

* * * Your triumph is I think now complete over those who made it necessary for you to leave us, and I most earnestly pray that a further result may be a handsome provision for you for the remainder of your days, for my own sake I could wish it to be in this quarter, but I see little chance of that, and if it is in any other country my next wish is to accompany you, for I do assure you that I every day feel more and more dissatisfied with this; but as I consider my lot permanently cast I shall endeavour to make the best of it.

You must be aware that there is very little intelligence worthy of communication from this quarter; a journal of one week for the summer and another for the winter would serve to describe our situation to you the year round. I am at length once more free from gout and hope to have another interval of two years, tho' the continued weakness of my feet almost forbids me to expect it. I am glad you have been dissuaded from the use of the cold water to the parts affected; tho' it may afford temporary relief, you may depend upon it, it would soon prove fatal to you, it merely serves to repel the gout from the extremities to the vital parts.

*See the account in Lawrence's Foot Prints at pp. 35, 36. The freedom of the city was voted by the common council in recognition of Lord Sheffield's exertions in support of the navigation laws. It was enclosed in a box made of native wood and accompanied by a suitable letter from the recorder, Ward Chipman. The council ordered that a picture painted from an engraved likeness of his lordship, presented by Hon. George Leonard, be suitably framed and hung up in the City Hall.

Chip has returned from College, having taken his degree with great eclat. He had the English oration at Commencement, which is considered as the first part, and he has been famously puffed off in their newspapers. I think he is much improved, and he is now I do assume you a genteel, sensible, well informed young man. He has commenced his studies under my direction, but what to do with him, I know not. I cannot bear the thought of his burying himself in this country, and it is not in my power to educate him in or for any other. I could wish to send him to the Temple, but this is out of the question for my finances, and his rich uncle has made no overtures to any such effect, and I have no chance of assistance from any other quarter.

Your family are all well, the grievous loss you have sustained by the death of your little petted daughter, you will have been made acquainted with from Clopper before this reaches you. Mrs. Winslow, I learn, has borne this afflicting stroke with great philosophy and resignation. * *

Mrs. Coffin is earnestly looking out for the Major General by this opportunity. I do not learn from her that he now entertains a hope of anything being done for him. I have no letters from him since his first arrival in London, he then thought the ball under his feet, and I suspect must be greatly mortified and dissatisfied to find all his hopes and expectations at an end.

Give my love to our best & most valuable friend T. A. Coffin. I do not write to him as I have nothing to say, but tell him that my household are all well.

Our Government goes very smoothly on, the President more retired than ever at Carleton*, and everything done by a Committee of Council of which the Chief Justice is at the head. In his judicial capacity he has lately given a death blow to all the piscary interests of our good friend Mr. Hazen. He brought an action for trespass for taking possession of his Weir, erected upon the flats on this side the Point within the boundaries of his Grant near the King's Provision Store, of which he proved himself to have been in possession 40 years — but the Chief, without hesitation, directed the Jury that it was an arm of the sea and common to all; that even if all the fisheries there had been expressly granted to him, the grant would not have been worth a farthing. That the Grant of the City fisheries was good for nothing and that they therefore applied to the General Assembly to confirm it by a law. Such tergiversation, such unbounded thirst for popularity with the fishermen here is too provoking! but I cannot enlarge upon the subject here, if we ever meet I shall have much to say to you which I cannot commit to paper. We mean however to resist such (in my opinion) lawless decisions and, if we can, to appeal in the last resort to the King in Council. I wish you could procure some opinions on this subject from the law characters you may fall in with. To me it appears absurd to apply the obsolete articles of Magna Charta and principles of the Common Law to this Country, whose settlement depends upon principles and practice diametrically opposite to them.

*Hon. Gabriel G. Ludlow, formerly colonel of DeLancey's 3rd battalion, was president of the council and administrator of the government at this time. He was also judge of the court of vice admiralty, and served as first mayor of the city of St. John. He lived in Carleton, as stated by Chipman in his letter; the house is still standing and known as the "old government house." In Trinity church, destroyed by fire in 1877, a tablet was erected to the memory of Gabriel G. Ludlow on which were recorded the words "He was truly a good man." He died in 1822 in his 80th year. See Lawrence's Foot Prints, pp. 10, 12.

This letter will be forwarded by Mr. Fennell of the New Brunswick Reg't, who has leave to go home. He takes under his charge Judge Saunders' son John, who appears to me to be a fine boy. The Deputy Quarter Master Gen'l, Col. Furlong, is now at Fredericton to inspect and pass the regiment which is a great event for them, they are all bustle upon the occasion and the General I understand gives a magnificent Ball.

You will doubtless hear from Leonard that his daughter Caroline is lately married to Ralph Jarvis; the match appears to be highly pleasing to both families. The match between W. Odell and Jane Billopp seems to be quite off and it is said that Wm. Black is soon to carry off the prize. Sheriff Oliver is, it is said, soon to be married to your favorite Miss Boyd.

I do not recollect anything else foreign or domestic to mention except that Charlotte and Fanny (alias Mrs. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Drury*) are in hourly expectation of presenting us the fruits of their matrimonial intercourse—the latter is one of our family; if you see Drury tell him she is very well and give my best love to him. Remember me also very affectionately to our good friend Lutwyche.

Adieu my dear Winslow & believe me in all places, at all times, and on all occasions,

Your ever faithful, affectionate, & devoted,

W. C.

Wife and Chip desire me to present to you their best love.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Ramsgate, 19 Nov'r, 1805.

Dear Col'l.—It is so long since I have had a line from you that I fear your old persecutor has been bringing up lee way by something worse than one of his usual visitations; if the foe has not attacked your hands I should be glad to have a line. You have probably had accounts from N. B. since I heard from you.

Church at Natley Scures in Hants where Lt.-Gov. Carleton is Buried.

Mr. Knox informed me that he had received instructions from the Assembly to represent the state of the Province to the ministers, have you had any communication on this subject?

We have been extremely anxious to hear the particulars of the famous victory of Trafalgar. All we know of William* at present is that the Colossus was there.

We have not yet fixed a day for our leaving this place, but it will probably be early in the next month. Adieu.

T. C.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Ramsgate, 1 Dec'r, 1805.

The ladies join in thanks for your attention. We got a note from your friend with the glad tidings of William's safety which after such a conflict is Providential.

I am glad you have got a sight of the Instructions; it seems odd that no notice has been taken of them either by Odell or Chipman. We hope to be in Town on Wednesday next, and have engaged No. 40, Conduit Street, where we hope to see you ere long.

The rumour respecting Canada is I believe without foundation, as yours was the first information I have had of it.

Yours &c.

Thos. Carleton.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 14th Dec'r, 1805.

My dear Winslow,—My last letter to you was by Mr. Fennell who went from this place with Judge Saunders son under his care for Boston on their way to England. Since that our friend Gen'l Coffin has arrived and delivered to me your letters by him. If he met with mortification or disappointment in England he has forgot it all. He appears to be in high spirits and is I think determined to sit down quietly here at home under a full conviction that he cannot do better. He is gratified with his visit and speaks very affectionately of you all. Your friends here feel great satisfaction in your complete triumph and success in the business that carried you home, and we all most anxiously hope that you will obtain some provision that will better your situation. In this country I see nothing that you can look to worthy any regard except the reversion of Wanton's* place, but he I believe will outlive us all. I have not seen him for many years apparently in better health, and he leads a remarkably abstemious regular life.

* * * You ask if Chip is with me? He is, he took his degree at the last Commencement in August. I have had the vanity to inclose to our friend T. A. Coffin the paragraph from the Boston papers respecting the English oration, assigned Chip in the exercises. He is now with me pursuing his studies, preparatory to his entering upon the study of the law, and I hope will be contented to follow his fortune in the manner that I may be enabled to provide for him. He is mild and I think gentlemanlike in his manners and deportment, very industrious, but ambitious to understand and to excel in whatever he undertakes. Should he hereafter have a field for exertion I doubt not he will do well. I am much obliged by your kind inquiries respecting the expence of an education at the Temple. When I requested you to make them I anticipated the possibility that his Uncle Gray, who is highly pleased with his conduct and afterwards made a handsome entertainment for him at his Commencement, might offer to complete his education in England, and I gave some indirect hints upon the subject; but I found that his wishes were that his education might be completed in the States, which did not exactly accord with Chip's or my own inclination. So that I have given up all thoughts of his looking beyond some of these Provinces for his future destination. I hope he will never be contented to starve, as I have done, in this part of the Country.

Our friend Leonard has been making another seizure at "the lines," as they are called, in which I think he is perfectly right. On this occasion I have taken some pains to digest into a formal argument all that I think can be said upon the subject of the Islands, which I have shewn to him, and he is so much pleased with it that he has determined to have a few copies printed. I presume he will send one to Lutwyche, in which case you will see it.

* * * As for any expectations of anything further being done for me, I give them up. My situation is mortifying in the extreme, but it is too late for me ever to think of remedying it. When I was in Boston last summer Mr. King, the late American Minister, told me that the line marked out by Judge Benson,† which you will see in my argument, had been actually agreed upon between him and the British Minister, tho' no instrument confirming it was actually signed. I think if the question is understood there never can be any doubt, and I think it will be a good field for Lord Sheffield, Mr. Knox, &c., to enter in our behalf. You understand the subject so perfectly that it may give you an opportunity of being useful upon the occasion. My name will be known to Lord Sheffield by a letter I wrote to him last August officially as recorder, accompanying the freedom of the city, which was presented to him in a box of birds-eye maple. If it should fall in your way I should like to know how his Lordship received it. The cause in the Admiralty is not yet argued, and how our friend Botsford will determine this question I know not, but I think he has firmness enough to do right, malgre all the temporizing degrading Politics of some of our great men. I think the cause is calculated to give some eclat and consequence to our friend Leonard's establishment as Superintendent, and this I am sure you will be glad to have an opportunity to promote. * * *

With regard to all public affairs here, we are really a self-governed quiet people, and get on just as well without a governor as with one, and so I think we should without their Honors the Judges. The President* is more retired and secluded from the world than ever at Carleton; Everything is done by a sort of necromantic action and reaction of a Committee of Council, the head of which has an influence I think never again to be shaken, unless we should have a young, active, vigorous and enterprising Governor to bring forth the energies and capabalities of the country, an event most devoutly to be wished.

You mention the two Acts of Assembly, one for emitting paper to the amount of £5,000, and one for prohibiting the bringing into or selling in the Province any merchandize by any others than British subjects. I know not what immediately occasioned the latter act, tho' I presume it was the American traders at the lines, whose illicit practices Mr. Leonard's efforts are so well calculated to interrupt.

The act for emission of Paper was well intended. It is not a lawful tender, except at the Treasury for Provincial duties, and I believe would have proved a good circulating medium in the great scarcity of specie here had the notes not borne an interest, which they do at 5 per cent. This it was supposed would have made them more current; but the trouble of calculating the interest, and the knowledge requisite to understand it, has made People in general so shy of them that they are passed with great difficulty, and will principally rest in the hands of the merchants for the payment of duties. They have however been of some service in the payment of public creditors, who somehow or other contrive to get rid of them again, tho' with delay and difficulty, without much loss.

Assembly fixing the standard weight of gold coin, and allowing or deducting so much a grain for every grain above or below the standard, which having made the gold as valuable here, or rather more so than it is in the United States, we have now a great deal of Gold in circulation.

Could but our trade and fisheries be a little encouraged, and the restrictions taken off from our trade with Spain and Portugal by compelling the vessels to go to England, I think these colonies would soon increase in their consequence both to the mother country and themselves. * * *

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

St. John, Decem'r 14th, 1805.

My dear Winslow,—Your family are well and comfortable. I have written up to Mrs. Winslow if she has occasion for anything she need not confine her application to Mr. Chipman. I say, as in my former letter, you do well in staying in England to try the extent of your fortune and most of your friends think so. * * *

I most truly wish there was an opening in the Custom House here where it requires just such a person as yourself for the advantages of trade and navigation of the colony, for under its present management they are all thrown into the hands of the late revolted colonies.

I told you in my last that I should furnish you with more matter for the Commissioners of the Customs and for Ministers, if they think the trade of these Colonies worth attending to.

The seizure of an American vessel in the Bay of Passamaquoddy has brought forward a claim from the States to several of the Islands in that Bay and the waters which surround them. An answer to that claim, by Chipman, does him the greatest credit, as it is thought conclusive and unanswerable. The cause is not yet tried in the Vice Court of Admiralty, waiting for the evidence to be produced on the part of the claimants. But I have got the answer printed—at least it is now in the press—and hope to have it to send to you, Lord Sheffield, Mr. King (who was in the Duke of Portland's office when you and Chipman were engaged in settling the Boundary line, and who took the active part of that business in that office, and who I think will be much pleased with the document), and one to Mr. Knox and another to Col. Lutwyche. * * *

Chipman has at this moment informed me that notice has been given to him as the Advocate General in the Vice Court of Admiralty by the American Agent, that William Wanton the Collector, and Robert Parker,*

*Robert Parker was a Massachusetts Loyalist. He was appointed comptroller of customs and ordnance storkeeper shortly after his arrival in St. John, holding both offices during the remainder of his life. Hon. Chief Justice Parker and Hon. Neville Parker, judges of the supreme court, were his sons. Robert Parker, the Loyalist, died in October, 1852, aged 84 years.

Comptroller, will be examined before the Registrar on the part of the claimant for the sloop Falmouth. This has excited the astonishment of all who know it, that the principal officers of His Majesty's Customs should volunteer in a business of this nature to shelter the Americans in that contraband trade within the district under their charge, to prevent. The Surveyor and Searcher, Mr. Colin Campbell,* is one of the Agents for the American claim for the sloop Falmouth, and the Collector and Comptroller are evidences for the claimants. It is one of the most extraordinary matters in the history of Custom House Officers. A son of the Surveyor and Searcher is owner of the cargo of the Falmouth; this accounts for Campbell's taking the active part he does. Wanton and Parker are afraid of the illegal transactions at Campo Bello making their appearances on the trial of the above vessel, and that the trade with American subjects there will lay open their emoluments of office under Dunn their Deputy Collector. This information is necessary for you. Loads of more may be sent if wanted, which you can collect and put in form—and come out yourself and execute the office of Collector.

The most that may be said of me is that I am contending with too much zeal for the revenue of the Crown and the fair British merchant, and a strict adherence to the Navigation Laws—the Collector is contending for a contraband trade with the late revolted colonies. In this you'll see I have given myself credit.

I have recommended Lord Sheffield to you for further information on our right to the Islands, and on the illicit trade there, &c. &c.

Yours very affectionately,

Geo. Leonard.

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

St. John, Decem'r 20th, 1805.

Dear Winslow,—While the ship lays here in the Harbour I shall continue to write to you. I began the 14th, and may end the 22nd, the time fixed absolutely for her to sail. The post was in from Fredericton this morning—your family all well & comfortable. Mr. Smith and his wife are here from New York, on their way to Fredericton for the Winter.

Chipman's, and my time has wholly been occupied to prepare for the trial of the sloop Falmouth, no less than 20 evidences have been interrogated before the Register—the opposite party—the Claimants, do not yet know the object of our pursuit, the condemnation of the vessel is a second consideration—the first is to obtain a right by the Treaty to all the Islands in the Bay of Passamaquoddy and the waters which surround them, allowing the Americans a fair navigation into the St. Croix, but not to permit them on their passage thro' our waters to stop, and injure our trade and navigation.

I am sorry that we are not ready to send you the whole evidence on this business, & annex it to the Claim and answer which you will receive.

Notwithstanding the time and anxiety with which my mind has been engaged, to bring forward the whole of the business of the illicit trade, at New Brunswick, and our right to the Islands in the Bay of Passamaquoddy, I have not been without a strong degree of resentment, at the illiberal conduct of those who have made unjust insinuations on the Indian affairs at the Vale and, as soon as the trial of the American vessel is over, I shall send a particular account of every shilling fairly and justly expended on the Academy at the Vale, which will prove the insinuations to be the most wicked and malicious ever known in any matter—as it will be seen that I have expended with the greatest economy and judiciously upwards of £100 sterling on that Building, besides all the care and labour of my family, which would by any other person been charged at £120 more.

The Building is now a strong and well built House that with £50 repairs will last 50 years, as it stands on a strong stone and brick wall above the ground out of reach of rotting. * * *

The Chief must be at the bottom of this wickedness by his myrmidons, the Stockton's, and that fellow Morton,* and when he went to Fredericton from the Vale, he was in high wrath with Arnold, and the old school Master Regan,† and I had my share also of his anger, tho' he kept his resentment to himself. From him and the Stocktons the Chief must have collected the tales which he transmitted to George, to be conveyed to some of the Members,‡ as a punishment for my attempting to build the Academy at the Vale instead of Fredericton, where his store‖ would have had the benefit;—this my friend is the source of all the evil that has happened to that benevolent Institution, and which my family is now in want of the money I have expended on it in the spirit of my enthusiasm to promote the views of the New England Company to whom I felt obliged for the trust reposed in me (by the recommendation of my worthy friend Mr.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Bath, 1 Feb'y, 1806.

Dear Colonel,—I have a letter from Hailes with an account of the death of that worthy member of our Council, Mr. Daniel Bliss, I immediately wrote to Lord Castlereagh to recommend Chipman for the vacant seat.

The day after we got here, which was the 21st, I had a letter from Lord St. Vincent offering to place William in the Amazon Frigate, commanded by Captain Parker his own nephew. She was to join the squadron under Sir John Warren and ready to start with the first northerly wind; this was not to be rejected, so I set out with William for Portsmouth that same evening and found to my great satisfaction on my arrival next morning, that Sir J. W.'s fleet which had sailed was put back, so got the Gentleman completely equipped in the course of three days and left him last Saturday night ready to embark next morning, and I believe they sailed the following day. Sir Isaac Coffin was very civil and very useful to us. He is about to give up his situation at Portsmouth for some speculation on the Magdalen Islands which I am sorry for.

I hope you have got fairly under way again. We are in Pulteney Street; let us hear from you.

Yours, &c.,

Thos. Carleton.

Shrewsbury, England, Feb'y 1, 1806.

My dear Sir,—I received your very kind favour of the 17th of Dec'r, for which I am very much obliged to you, and have only to regret my not having the pleasure of a personal interview with you when I was last in London. * * *

*Israel Maudnit of London was at this time president of the board of governors of the "New England Company." The operations of the company in New Brunswick were continued from 1786 to 1833 for the purpose of educating the Indians and converting them to the Protestant faith. During that period the expenditure aggregated about $140,000, of which sum probably 30 per cent. was paid to officials who had little or nothing to do with the work of instruction.

You mention your sisters living in a comfortable house of their own. We had heard that one of them was married. You surprized me when you mentioned Col. Miller* and family being in your neighbourhood; remember me particularly to them, to Upham my old friend, Leonard & family, Bliss, Chipman and to Mr. Odell, who was my first Latin Schoolmaster in New Jersey so long ago as the year 1756. I met with him in London some years past but he did not recognize me. Remember me to W. S. Oliver and all that know me among you. * * *

What hath become of Pelham Winslow's wife and children?† Nat. Ray Thomas's‡ family? Ruggles' sons? Daniel Murray & John Murray? John Watson & John Thomas? G. Leonard's sons?

He was in his 79th year when he died in the year 1791, and for more than three years before he died was a very great invalid, and Miss Clark never once was in her bed with her clothes off during that time, which discovers wonderful attention and resolution. She hath been with me ever since as housekeeper; her eyes are very bad, she hath not been out out of the house for 12 or 13 weeks but she is a little better at times. * *

I am now in my 65th year—at present at Shrewsbury, but wish to get nearer London.

He was a justice of the peace for Suffolk County, which county he also represented for many years in the Massachusetts house of assembly. At the epoch of the Revolution he was the first man to rise in the assembly to oppose the movement. This led to the destruction of his political fortunes and the confiscation of his property. He came to New Brunswick at the peace in 1783 and settled at Fredericton, where for many years he was a much respected magistrate. He died in 1816 in his 90th year. His wife was sister of the elder Edward Winslow, and their eldest daughter married Col. Harris W. Hailes.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Bath, 3d March, 1806.

Dear Colonel,—I am glad Mr. Uniacke has made representations that may turn the attention of those concerned on this side the water to the state of our trade. I have always thought that our open communication with New York was an injury to us. If any inquiry should be made respecting our Custom House, the necessity of a reform must appear, and in that case I should hope your services would be remembered. A memorial to the Lords of the Treasury supported by some such active spirit as Lord Sheffield, is what occurs to me at present. A reference to me as Governor might be made and I should be happy to have an opportunity of doing justice to your merits.

A copy of Mr. Knox's petition with the annexed papers have been transmitted to me by direction from the Lords of the Committee of Council, in answer to which I have sent a copy of the objections given in to Lord Camden against the instructions of 1802,† with my decided opinion in favour of the prayer of the Petition, which I now hope will be acceded to; I don't much apprehend that the business of our boundary will be renewed, and if the attempt should be made I think they would fail.

Yours, &c.,

Lieut. Gov. Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Bath, 25 March, 1806.

Dear Colonel,—I am extremely sorry to find that you are still under persecution, and that the period of your stay in this country draws so near a conclusion as to leave little chance of my seeing you on this side of the Atlantic. I suppose you have heard nothing more of our Province or its concerns.

You will no doubt call on Sir B. Watson previous to your departure. We propose staying here till towards the end of the next month and availing ourselves of the first safe conveyance that offers after the first of June*.

William Knox, Province Agent, to George Leonard.

Ealing, Middlesex, 8th May, 1806.

My dear Friend,—I had the great pleasure to announce officially yesterday in a letter to the Committee† under the President's cover the total revocation of the prohibitary Instructions also of Lord Hobart's abominable Instruction of 1784 respecting the Grants of Land. * * *

At my former hearing before the Committee, Mr. Barnard opposed the revocation of Lord Hobart's Instruction on the ground that the original one would give New Brunswick an advantage over Nova Scotia, but I silenced him by stating that Governor Parr has received similar Instructions, and that if from negligence or misconduct on the part of Nova Scotia, alterations had been suffered to take place, there was no reason for subjecting New Brunswick to the effects of their folly. Lord Selkirk had been applying for a Grant of 300,000 acres in New Brunswick and to secure his people from quitting him, he wanted to deprive the Governor and Council of the power of making absolute Grants, and that their Grants should be liable to be reconsidered here—or that all Grants should originate here. When I understood this to be his Lordship's intention I reprobated the whole plan, and gave the Lords a history of the warrants that had been issued here after the peace of 1763 for the sake of the fees. I also told them of the fate of Trumbull's project of bringing Greeks to East Florida, and so effectually convinced them of the propriety of continuing the mode prescribed by the original Instruction that Lord Archeland rose up and said they had now heard enough upon the subject and dismissed us.

Lord Sheffield is continuing to oppose the bill for legalizing the Governor's licenses to the vessels of the United States, but he has found no great support in the Lords, and I fancy not much in the Commons. I always wished to avoid any discussion of the subject during the war as

*This seems to show that it was Governor Carleton's intention to have returned to New Brunswick this year.

†The committee was appointed by the legislature of New Brunswick to correspond with the province agent.

I was convinced the measure would be continued, and I would rather it would continue illegally than have a legal sanction. We shall soon see whether I was right or no.

Lord Sheffield's picture* is finished and the expence of the frame and packing is Frame 20, Packing 5 guineas. Shee says his price is 120 for pictures of the size he has made this, and it certainly is an excellent Picture. It is now in the Exhibition.

I hope our good friend Col. Winslow is safe arrived and has recovered his health by the sea voyage, for he is a most worthy man and a most valuable member of your community. I beg my best respects to him and congratulations upon our success.

Edward Winslow to S. S. Blowers.

Fredericton, 7th June, 1806.

Here I am my dear Blowers once more fast recovering from a tedious and distressing fit of the Gout which attacked me in England during the last winter and followed me home. My visit if not profitable was certainly as pleasant as any man ever made. The nature of my business and the peculiar circumstances which attended it increased my importance and interested my friends, and the termination was as honorable as the nature of the thing would admit. Sir Brook Watson gave me new and unequivocal proofs of his kindness and propped and supported me thro' all the perplexities of official negotiations, and T. Coffin stuck by me like a brother until my business was settled. I found also through the kindness of Carre (an attorney of eminence who married Lechmere's daughter) a safe adviser and an indefatigable assistant (Mr. Erskine.) Unfortunately for me he died suddenly last autumn. * * * Notwithstanding I had the most ample testimonies to prove that I had transmitted my accounts and vouchers to Head Quarters in due season, agreeable to the General's order, the Comptroller insisted that the Act of Parliament compelled me as a public accountant to deliver them into the office for auditing the public accounts, and that no plea or excuse whatever could be offered in justification of the delinquency. * * * However on the score of the suit or process they were disposed to recompense me amply, and the sum recommended was three times as much as my expences amounted to. Having obtained my Quietus with a special letter acknowledging the accuracy, fairness and correctness of my accounts, and honored by the King's warrant to recompence me for the injury I had sustained, I had nothing further to seek. It was of little consequence to me whether the Barons, or law officers of N. B. had committed a mistake or not, and recollecting that "Least said soonest mended," I thought it best to hold my tongue. From Sir Wm. Pepperell, who used to speak of you with great affection I rec'd every possible attention & civility. His daughters are well married but the loss of his wife and son has imprinted strong marks of melancholy on his countenance which will never wear off.

Palmer, old Joe Royal, Franklin, &c, &c, &c, welcomed me to their hospitable tables & a crowd of military acquaintances, among whom were Hugh Gordon* & Addenbrooke†, whisked me into a circle of jollity and dissipation that 'twas impossible for me to get out of. Your wife and Betsy Kent, if you read this to 'em, will both jump at the same idea, "He did not try very hard"—no matter. I regret monstrously that I did not come by the way of Halifax. Even in this obscurity, where everything but anecdotes freeze, I could always collect a few for my friends. Surely then deep laden as I am with experience, piping warm from London, and exceedingly improved in my manners I could not avoid affording them great entertainment. My good sister Pen listens, looks like Lemuel Gulliver's wife, when I describe some of the Yahoos that I met with in my travels, and Aunt Sally reads the cards of invitation from His Grace of Northumberland and other great men (which I brought out on purpose for her) and she concludes very properly that during my absence I have supported the dignity of the family. I only wish that their united efforts had obtained for me some situation where I might find support for the flock that here surround me.

I have kicked up such a dust and brushed up their recollections so effectually that I believe they will serve me if they can. I am loaded with fair promises and emphatical declarations but unluckily the appetites of my family require Beef & Bread. The good Gordon wrote from London previous to his departure for Ireland; he mentioned to me that he had a patent of a tract of land* in the Province of Nova Scotia embracing a harbour, and that it might be of some use to one of my sons. And he told me that he would immediately write to you to request you as his Attorney and friend to make a secure title to Edward Winslow, Jun'r. If this can be done, and in your opinion the land is worth looking after, my son will take such measures as may be necessary to avail himself of it. I will therefore thank you to give me information on this subject. I can give you no just idea of the kindness which I experienced from this good hearted affectionate friend. In London he lived like a Prince, his house, his carriage and his servants were completely at my command, and some of the pleasantest hours which I spent in London were with him, and I was particularly delighted to meet his sister Mrs. McKay who in disposition is exactly like him. I brought out an engraving which is a perfect resemblance of him. I wish I could show it to the ladies. My fingers are crippled with the gout and I can't write much more.

I beg to offer my most brotherly regards to Mrs. Blowers and Betsy. When you see my respectable friends William Taylor and Doctor Haliburton, remember me kindly to them. Taylor has heard from Edward and Kitty the particulars of our distressing voiage out. God knows I pitied them all sincerely.

George Leonard to the President of H. M. Council.

St. John, June 17th, 1806.

Sir,—In answer to the papers your Honor handed me yesterday, inclosed by Mr. Merry, His Majesty's Minister at Philadelphia in the States of America, to Lt. Governor Carleton or the Officer exercising the Government of the Province in his absence, I beg leave to observe that my instructions from his Majesty direct me not to permit any commerce or traffic of any nature or kind to be carried on between the subjects of His Majesty and the citizens of the United States of America, who may come within the limits of my district in contravention of the laws and regulations which have been established, or to allow to any of the citizens of the said United States who may from time to time be employed in the Fisheries the enjoyment of any privilege or advantages upon the coast of the said district which are not particularly specified in the Treaty. The limits of my district are pointed out in my commission and instructions, by which I am appointed "Superintendent of the Trade and Fisheries on the "Coasts of the Provinces and Islands in North America from Gaspee in "the Gulph of the River St. Lawrence unto and including the Bay of "Fundy, Chignecto and Minas, the coasts of Nova Scotia and New Bruns- "wick, the Islands of St. John and Cape Breton and the Madelaine "Islands."

By the Treaty of Peace with America and the Laws of this Province, which have never been disallowed by His Majesty, I conceive that Moose*, Dudley and Frederic Islands are within the limits of New Brunswick, and I have continued to claim them accordingly in my official capacity ever since the year 1786, and the waters surrounding those Islands also are waters belonging to Great Britain for the purpose of navigation and lawful trade. I have therefore always conceived it my duty to prevent any illicit traffic between the subjects of His Majesty and those of the United States in those waters knowing nothing of the convention mentioned by Mr. Madison the American Secretary of State, and feeling myself bound to disregard what is called a tacit agreement between a subordinate officer in His Majesty's Customs for New Brunswick, and an Officer of the Customs for the States of America, which they could have no legal authority to make. My whole proceedings on the coasts of these Colonies, and particularly in the Bay of Fundy, together with the trial of the sloop Falmouth, with my letter, which is so much explained [sic] of, have been laid before His Majesty's Secretary of State and I now await for such further instructions as it may be thought necessary to give. In the meantime I cannot think myself justified in assenting to any traffic between the subjects of His Majesty and the subjects of the United States of America in these waters; but there will be no hindrance by me nor those acting under me to the American subjects navigating their vessels through those waters and anchoring round those Islands.

I will, however, obey any orders your Honor may please to give as exercising the Government in the absence of His Excellency Governor Carleton, with leave to transmit the same to His Majesty's Secretary of State for my justification.

I have the honor to be your Honor's most obedient & humble Servant,

Geo. Leonard.

I enjoy London for a month (April) but not longer. What a change it will be for the Miss Carletons ever to return to their native country after having enjoyed all the gayetys of England. Yours Truly, Martin Hunter.

General Coffin to Edward Winslow.

Dorchester,* July 14, 1806.

My Dear Winslow,—I should have given you a few lines by the Governor [probably E. Winslow's son Wentworth] but he slipt off in my absence. He is a lad of an active mind and I think a good fellow. I hope he will return safe and gratified with his visit.

You have experienced exactly what befell me with "our great men" as you term them. They have been cheated in their expectations in the Quit Rents. But you and every other person who presumes to interfere will be followed up—that however you nor I don't care much for. * * *

When I returned it was with a determination to endeavor to reconcile all the difficulties of the country and to jog on quietly if possible. There is however so many things that bears so very hard, I have made up my mind to be off, and I think it won't be a great while before our great men will be left alone.

With regard to the Indians I have already written to Lewis Way† all my mind could suggest, and I have been open and candid. In short I have given them to understand if they had a desire to effect what was necessary to be done towards the Indians, they must make up their minds to pay the individuals who were employed—without that they would never get on. As to the number of Indians in this and the neighboring province, you may as well attempt to number the Spruce trees. * * *

*Dorchester seems to have been the name of General Coffin's residence, so called in honor of his old commander, Sir Guy Carleton, now Lord Dorchester.

†Lewis Way was an active member, probably secretary, of the board of governors of the New England Company in the old country.

My wife and Cary are in Town, Remember me kindly to the Sproules, Mrs. Winslow & family, and Lutwyches, when you write. God bless you my D'r Ned.

Ever yours,

John Coffin.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 29 July, 1806.

My dear Winslow,—A thousand thanks for your letter and the communication it contains. The whole business is just as I supposed, and I am fully aware of the chagrin my appointment to the Council has excited. I have seen the President several times but he has not opened his lips to me on the subject. * * * I am just now so much hurried in preparing for the Kings County circuit, for which I set off tomorrow morning, that I cannot write to you a thousand things I have to say. To be brief then, you will see in this days Paper—Anti-scelertus and Censor No.1. My conscience would not let me rest till so much appeared, but nothing more is to be expected from the same quarter at present. I think here is an Augean stable to be cleaned and I have opened the latter signature for you or any other particular friend, who is in the secret, to furnish me with a number occasionally upon any subject to which you may think the public attention ought to be called, either for information or reformation, I think it may be made a useful vehicle.

If you will contribute to this salutary design and send your speculations to me, profound secrecy will be observed, and you shall not be known except by the "cloven foot," which I suspect will always betray you in whatever you write however you may attempt to disguise it.

By moderate and dispassionate discussion I think the public sentiment upon many points may be corrected; as our lot is cast here, at least while it so remains, it behoves us all to make the community as respectable as we can. * * *

Yours most faithfully and affectionately,

W. C.

Colonel George Williamson* to Edward Winslow.

Royal Military Aslum, Chelsea, August 4th, 1806.

Dear Winslow,—It gives me great pleasure to hear that you have arrived safe at Fredericton, but I was before informed of your arrival at

*Colonel George Williamson was in Nova Scotia in 1784 acting as brigade major to General Fox. He was then and subsequently an intimate friend of Col. Winslow.

Halifax by our friend Lutwidge, whom I met by accident at the Commissary Gen'ls.

Your son Wentworth was gazetted a week or ten days ago an Ensign in the Nova Scotia Reg't. I wish it had been in the New Brunswick corps, but I conclude it was intended civil and we must not refuse what is offered. I make no doubt if the war continues you will be able to effect an Exchange for him into the N. B. Reg't, as General Hunter is on the spot.

Inclosed is Col. Gordon's official letter to Gen'l Brownrigg. I shall refer you to the Papers for Politicks. Of course all here are in expectation of the result of Lord Lauderdale's mission to France. I write Hailes by this opportunity.

Very truly yours,

Geo. Williamson.

George Leonard to Anthony Merry, His Majesty's Minister at Philadelphia.

St. John, New Brunswick, Aug't 20, 1806.

Sir,—It is with great satisfaction that I acknowledge the honor of receiving your letter of the 22nd July. I may now contemplate a hope of a speedy enquiry into the evils which have for a long time existed in this quarter of His Majesty's Territory, by the possession of Moose, Dudley, and Frederick Islands in the Bay of Passamaquoddy by American subjects.

From 50 to upwards of 100 American vessels at times, within ten days past, have been receiving cargoes from British vessels in the waters in that Bay, being the waters considered to be within the Boundary of Mis Majesty's colonies by the Treaty of Peace with America in 1783. * * *

These Islands are the asylum of deserters from the British navy and army, criminals and absconding debtors from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

You may ask why the British vessels discharge their cargoes into the American vessels and do not go on to the places of consumption in the States of America. I beg leave to refer you for information to the pamphlet I enclose you, page 25—the argument of Mr. Chipman, the Solicitor General, on the trial of the sloop Falmouth. He was employed as the British Agent in settling the boundary line between this Province and the United States of America. He is in possession of all the documents respecting that boundary, and will I have no doubt, with much satisfaction furnish you with any information in his power which you may require on the subject and at all times you will please to command me.

I enclose copies of two charts, one of which gives the situation of the Islands upon a large scale—the other gives the mouth of the River St.

Croix at Joe's Point (as decided by the Commissioners to whom the question was referred under the 5th article of the Treaty of Amity, Commerce and Navigation) and the two passages from thence into the Bay of Fundy.

These charts will elucidate the argument above referred to.

I have the Honor to be Your Excellency's most obedient and with great respect, your very humble servant,

Geo. Leonard.

Edward Winslow to E. G. Lutwyche.

Kingsclear, New Brunswick, August 28th, 1806.

In our late and frequent communications during my residence in England, I experienced from you such marks of disinterested friendship and such a brotherly anxiety and concern for my welfare, as could not fail to make a durable impression upon my mind and to fill it with sentiments, my dear Lutwyche, which induce me at this time to deposit with you a recapitulation of such events as have hitherto marked my progress in life, in the hope that by a judicious detail of them to those friends which Providence seems to have raised up to assist me, you may facilitate their efforts in my favour when ever an opportunity offers. A man who stands trembling on the brink of poverty surrounded by a flock of children may, in his efforts to save them, be indulged in a string of egotisms which on almost any other occasion would appear offensive. I will pass by the active part which I took as a gentleman and a magistrate at the commencement of the American Revolution, and the flattering prospects of future comfort which I voluntarily sacrificed. Nor will it be necessary for me to do more than mention the decided and unequivocal step which I afterwards took at the Battle of Lexington, or observe that from that time to the end of the war I was (without a single days furlo') constantly employed in military services, for which I received many flattering compliments and proofs of approbation. These are old stories. Nor would I have touched upon them (even slightly) for any other purpose than to evince that I have preserved a consistency of conduct thro' all the vicissitudes of war & peace—circumstances more recent claim a greater degree of attention.

When the treaty of peace took place (in 1783), I was importuned by some experienced friends to proceed immediately to England and to apply for some position, and the governments of the Island of St. John and the Island of Cape Breton were mentioned as objects, and I have reason to suppose that, assisted by a numerous train of friends and favored by the eclat which attends long and faithful services, I must at that time have succeeded. But at that critical moment a duty was pointed out to me by Lord Dorchester and Sir Brook Watson (who were my friends and benefactors) which appeared to me to be in the highest degree interesting and important, and I undertook it with enthusiastic alacrity.

The body of provincial troops, with whom I had served during the war, were to be disbanded, and a great number of unfortunate refugees (whose zeal in the King's service had precluded all chance of reconciliation with their countrymen) were, with their miserable families, reduced to a state of despair from the apprehension of being left without support and without protection. To provide an asylum for this forlorn multitude was the service allotted to me, and I instantly embarked for this wilderness as their agent. I personally explored the country (now New Brunswick) I negotiated for the possession of it with the Governor of Nova Scotia, (a man of the most jealous, difficult, and impracticable temper that I ever met with).* In the autumn of that year and the Spring following the Land on the River St. John was surveyed, divided and sub-divided under my direction, and upwards of 14,000 of those desponding people were placed on lots which they could call their own, and even the bounties of government, which were benevolently ordered to save their lives, were distributed under arrangements made by myself, and I boldly assert that for all these arduous, affecting, and perplexing services, to which great responsibility was attached, I never received one single farthing of fee or reward, not even an allowance for my actual expenses. The venerable Lord Dorchester and Sir Brook Watson can vouch for the truth of this fact. Before I had completely finished my agency, I was solicited by General Fox to assist him, in the capacity of military secretary, in settling the intricate and complicated accounts of the district of Nova Scotia. During this service I attended him to the River St. John, where in his presence I closed the accounts and disbanded such of the provincial corps as (till then) had continued to receive subsistence.

A view of the country and a due consideration of local & other circumstances confirmed General Fox in the opinion of the necessity of forming a separate province on this side of the Bay of Fundy, and he suggested to me that he would accept the government of the province if I would engage to act as secretary. To this proposal I instantly consented. The general soon after proceeded to England, and I remained with his successor (General Campbell), until the whole business which I originally undertook was fully accomplish'd; I then resigned the appointment. The explicit acknowl-

*The reference here is to Governor Parr. His correspondence with the home government in some measure serves to corroborate Col. Winslow's assertions. For example, when Sir Guy Carleton was sent out to Canada as governor general of British North America in 1786, Colonel Parr expressed much annoyance at being reduced to the rank of lieutenant governor, and asked to be appointed a major general "to restore his consequence." See Canadian Archives for 1894, p. 442.

edgements and thanks of these Officers (which you have seen) were my principal reward—the pay of 10 shillings a day being hardly an adequate support in such an expensive garrison as Halifax. The representations which I continued to make to that discerning and respectable man [Gen. Fox] contributed to effect the important object at which we aimed, and I received repeated assurances that the original arrangement would take place; but General Fox not inclining to take the office of Governor on the terms proposed, General Carleton was appointed and the office of secretary was given to Mr. Odell, a clergyman who was then in England, and every other office of salary or emolument was bestowed upon men who were personally teasing the king's ministers with their solicitations. From Halifax after performing the melancholy duty of burying my veritable Father) I proceeded with my own numerous family—my Mother, my sisters, and a train of other relations and dependants to this country, in full assurance that I should be provided for. Thus circumstanced it was impossible for me to quit 'em—but I was in some degree soothed under my disappointments by the attentions of the Governor—and by a letter from Sir Brook Watson to the following effect. "The government of New Brunswick is "only a stepping stone for General Carleton to the gover'ment of Canada, "and Mr. Odell certainly goes with him, in which case it is understood by "all partics that you are to succeed to the secretary-ship."

Satisfied with this assurance, I ventured to take possession of a tract of land, part of which I purchased, and with the assistance of my friends (for I had no money left of my own) I built me a house to shelter my family, and with an overheated zeal and very little experience, I commenced farmer upon a pretty large scale. I also took my seat in the Council, and being thoroughly acquainted with the country and its inhabitants, a considerable portion of the labour of distributing lands, etc, fell on my shoulders; and when a court of Common Pleas & Sessions was afterward established I accepted the office of President in the County of York, where most of the inhabitants were officers and soldiers of the disbanded regiments, and (of course) not very easily managed. To the Governor, Council, and country at large I can confidently refer as to the character which these courts have acquired, and the good order and exemplary conduct of the inhabitants. Of this I do not by any means assume the whole merit—my Brother magistrates are entitled to a full share. As a Councillor no emolument whatever arises, nor is there a guinea a year of fees accruing from the office of the Presidentship of the Courts—on the contrary considerable expenses are necessarily incurred in both situations. I have however continued to execute the duties of these stations from the commencement of the settlement to the present moment. Governor Carleton's acknowledgements of my services are particularly strong and pointed in the certificate I left with you, nor have I any reason to complain of his conduct towards me. The only office that has ever been in his gift was that of Surrogate General of the province, which he bestowed upon me (worth £20. per annum), and during his military command I acted as his Secretary.

I ought to have mentioned that in 1796 I was called upon to act as Secretary to the Commissioners for settling the boundary line between Great Britain and the United States of America which I readily undertook, and I reflect with pleasure that this duty was executed to the satisfaction of the American Commissioner & Agent, as well as to the British, and I assert that by my own personal exertions during the sessions of the Board I shortened the duration of that Commission for one year at least, which was a saving to the government of upwards of £4,000, a fact well known to all the parties concerned. My allowance for this duty was £500 per annum while it lasted, out of which I paid my own expenses in the United States. Of course I returned to New Brunswick not much richer than when I left it. Ever since that time my embarrassments have been increasing, and on General Carleton's being superceded in the military command I was again reduced to my pittance of half pay. * * *

Discouraged by a succession of mortifications, my spirits failed me, nor could I have mustered sufficient resolution to undertake a voyage to England, had not a ridiculous prosecution instituted here compell'd me to attempt it.

The satisfactory termination of my public business, and the countenance and favor shown me by a number of the most respectable characters in England, added to the hospitality and kindness of many of my old acquaintances, revived and almost regenerated me. Of the notice taken of me by His Grace the Duke of Northumberland I reflect with particular pride and pleasure. Under his penetrating eye I first commenced my military operations,* and his approbation of my conduct was always considered as the highest honor ever conferred on me. To his Grace I always supposed myself indebted for the temporary appointment of Collector of the Customs at Boston. Under his Patronage I was appointed Secretary to a Board of general Officers of which he was President, and his honorable testimonies in my favor procured for me the appointment of muster-master-general, in which Department I served till the end of the War, and now receive half pay. * * *

*Lord Percy led the English at Lexington, and on their return from the expedition, when in danger of being cut off, Edward Winslow became their guide and led them in safety from their difficult position across the country to Bunker's Hill. See letter of Sir John Wentworth of Aug. 9, 1815. Lord Percy became Duke of Northumberland and was able to essentially serve the interests of Col. Winslow, as will presently appear in these pages.

When I arrived in England and considered his exalted rank and the long time which had elapsed since I had the honor of seeing him—the idea of approaching him was productive of some embarrassment, from which I was instantly relieved by condescension and kindness on his part that never can be forgotten.

There is another nobleman whose conduct towards me excited sentiments which are difficult to express. To Lord Sheffield I was a stranger. * * *

But when the benevolence of his heart led him to make a tender of his services as a Friend, the Searcher of Hearts is my witness that I was completely overcome by his unexpected goodness, and (in the then state of my mind and health) I am sure that the facts which I related respecting my own affairs must have been incoherent. It is the recollection of this circumstance (in an hour of quiet retirement) that has caused me to extend this letter to such an unusual and almost unwarrantable length, in order that you may have it in your power to explain any matters to his Lordship which my agitation might have rendered unintelligible.

* * * At present there are no vacancies in this province, but in the common course of nature such things must happen and whether it be the secretaryship (which was so solemnly pledged to me) the Collectorship of Customs, or a seat on the Bench of the Supreme Court, I consider myself competent to the duty. * * *

Edward Winslow to Lord Sheffield.

Fredericton, New Brunswick, 28th Aug., 1806.

My Lord,—The imperious calls of my family, and severe indisposition of body, compelled me to leave England abruptly and it was a matter of great regret that I had not once more the opportunity of repeating my acknowledgments to your Lordship for the many instances of your goodness which I experienced during my stay there. It was also my wish again to have expressed my sense of the great obligations which this country is under for that assistance your Lordship has extended towards it. The sober and sensible part of the community know how to appreciate your Lordship's exertions. The intelligence of the bounties on fish and the arrangements for convoys was received here with every mark of gratitude and satisfaction. These favors were considered as an earnest of that justice which we have always been taught to look for from our political parent. By your Lordship's public declarations justice has been done to the character of the country and its inhabitants and they have revived those principles of Loyalty which were beginning to droop.

* * * I brought out with me one of your Lordships books for Mr

Botsford and one for Mr Leonard and a third (unbound) for myself. To gratify the public at large I have caused it to be published by chapters (commencing with the 7th) and I have taken the liberty of introducing the first number by an extract from Mr Alley's pamphlet. The Editor of the Fredericton Telegraph (a new paper) is now reaping the benefit of the publication by an increased demand and extended circulation of his paper.

An event has taken place here lately which has caused some alarm, the particulars will be communicated by Mr Leonard. In one of the documents it appears that a secret convention took place in London in 1803 in which the then minister engaged to Mr Ambassador King that our government would relinquish the islands at the entrance of Passamaquoddy bay to the Americans. The circumstances relative to this business are at present so inexplicable that I dare not venture to comment upon them. * * *

I will not intrude further upon your Lordship's time only to declare that I have a just sense of the honor which has been conferred upon me by the friendship of your Lordship and that I am

Your Lordship's most faithful & obed't serv't,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Duke of Northumberland.

Fredericton, New Brunswick, Aug 28, 1806.

My Lord Duke,—Soon after I had the honor of receiving your letter from Alnwick Castle I was seized with a most violent fit of the gout which at once deprived me of the use of my hands and feet and in that situation I remained at Kensington during the last winter. Early in the Spring I made an extraordinary effort and was put on board a ship which brought me to this country where I have recovered my health and am now able to walk and ride. In this retirement, my Lord Duke, I have reflected with peculiar pride on the condescension and kindness of your grace which I experienced in England. * * * The reception I met with at Northumberland House riveted my gratitude so effectually that time itself can never efface or weaken it and it has been the source of extreme concern that the unfortunate state of my health precluded all chance of my again seeing your Grace before I left that country. * * *

I hope I shall not intrude too far by requesting that your Grace will hear (when an opportunity may offer) from Lord Sheffield a few interesting circumstances relative to the disappointments which I have experienced and the fatal consequences which will probably result from them. That nobleman—to whom I was unknown until I was lately in England, has allowed me to place his name among the number of my friends, and he has offered his services to solicit in my behalf some employment by which I can save myself and family from the distress which awaits them. It is possible that his Lordship may find it necessary to apply for some testimonials of my conduct relative to that period in which I had the honor of being known to your Grace. Perhaps what Lord Sheffield may communicate may induce your Grace once more to extend your protection to me, especially when your Grace is informed that my misfortunes have arisen principally from a reluctance to solicit favors as long as I could exist without them * * * &c, &c.

Ed. Winslow.

George Leonard to the President of H. M. Council.

St. John, New Brunswick, Sept. 27th, 1806.

Sir,—I beg to state that the promulgation of your order and Mr. Gallatin, the American Secretary of the Treasury's letter to the Custom House officer at Passamaquoddy, has occasioned a great increase of American shipping far exceeding any former period in that Bay, to take off the produce of these Colonies out of the British Vessels, lying in the waters which are considered within this Province, and from the shores within the same, where no interruption is now given in consequence of that order.

That as we acceed to the demands of the Americans they increase their aggressions. They have the boldness to come within the Harbours and on the shores five leagues to the eastward of Moose, Dudley and Frederick Islands, which have been wrested from His Majesty's Territory, and have disturbed the faithful and peaceable subjects and inhabitants of Harbour Le Tang and the shores bordering, and disputed the rights of Fishery with them by cutting their nets, erecting huts and smoke houses on the shores, in defiance of all order and the terms of the Treaty of peace between Great Britain and America.

Authentic testimony of their proceedings and acts are ready to be offered to your Honor, and for further information I herewith subjoin an extract from Mr. Gallatine's letter to the American Custom House officer above alluded to, to-wit;—

"In consequence of your letter relating to the seizure of the Sloop "Falmouth, &c, which has been laid before the President, the subject has "been discussed by the Secretary of State and the Ambassador of Great "Britain—the latter has wrote to the Lieut. Governor of New Brunswick "recommending that the mode hitherto adopted with the consent of the "two countries for loading vessels and the use of the waters in the Bay "of Passamaquoddy may be continued. I presume therefore the American "Vessels will experience no further interruption."

Mr. Gallatine appears to have been mistaken, from Mr. Merry's letter to your Honor, of which I was favored with the perusal—as I conceive the letter only recapitulated a conversation of Mr. Madison's, without Mr. Merry's giving an opinion, or a recommendation on a subject he must at that time have been unacquainted with, as also appears since by his letter to me, which I beg leave to lay before you.

Not having been informed from the Secretary of State's office in England, nor from Lieut. Gov. Carleton before his departure for Europe, of any mode being adopted with the consent of the two countries such as Mr. Gallatine speaks of, I presume he means a tacit agreement lately entered into between a subordinate officer of the Customs of this Province and the Custom House officer at Passamaquoddy for their mutual convenience, which I can conceive can have no legal authority, and by which the American subjects derive nineteen twentieths of the carrying trade from that Bay, of plaister of Paris*, Lumber, and fish to the ports of consumption in the States of America and to other markets, being the actual labor and produce of His Majesty's subjects and Colonies.

Under the peculiar circumstances in which I am placed by my instructions from His Majesty's Ministers, I am "on no account to permit any "commerce or traffick of any nature or kind to be carried on between the "subjects of His Majesty and the citizens of the United States who may "come within the limits of my District in contradiction to the laws and "regulations which have been established; or to allow to any of the citizens "of the said United States, who may from time to time be employed in "the Fisheries, the enjoyment of any privileges or advantages upon the "coast of the said district during the exercise thereof, which are not par-"ticularly specified in the said Treaty."

I feel myself compelled to make this representation to your Honor, as exercising the Government of the Province within which such manifest evils exist in order that such measures may be adopted, with advice of His Majesty's Council or by your Honor, as will prevent them; or that I may be left at liberty in my official capacity to remove the evils so justly complained of by His Majesty's subjects, and that I might be furnished with the means to prevent an infringement of the 3rd Article of the said Treaty of Peace by a lawless rabble collected in the Harbours and on the shores within His Majesty's Territories to the great annoyance of His subjects and the great injury of the Fisheries and the carrying Trade which belongs to the Inhabitants of these colonies, and also the injury done to the fair British Merchant by the introduction of contraband articles into the provinces.

*The plaster of Paris obtained at Windsor was transferred to American vessels at Passamaquoddy, the transfer taking place in the waters surrounding Moose Island and Campobello.

The Union cutter, being now absent from this coast on a service of a similar nature on the Eastern part of Nova Scotia, I have therefore no means to put my Instructions into effect, unless aided by your Honor, when I will without delay proceed to Harbour Le Tang on that coast with such assistance as may be thought proper.

I have the honor to be, with great respect,

Your obedient Humble Servant,

——— Geo. Leonard.

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

Kingsclear, Sept'r 28, 1806.

My dear Sir,—I have this morning rec'd a letter from the Commander in Chief's office in England, acquainting me of the appointment of my son J. F. Wentworth Winslow an Ensign in the N. Scotia Fencibles, and I consider myself under great obligations for it; but the fact really is that my application was for an Ensigncy in the New Brunswick Fencibles, and my reason for declining a commission in an established reg't when offered to me was that I might have my son under my own eye for a little time longer. He is now pursuing a line of education which may be of great importance to him in future & which if he goes immediately to Newfoundland must be compleatly interrupted and deranged. I am therefore particularly anxious to obtain leave of absence for him for six months, but I know not who to apply to for this purpose, whether to Gen'l Skerrit, Gen'l Hunter or the officer commanding the reg't. In this dilemma permit me Sir to ask your advice what step I shall take to effect this object—or, if it is not too great a trespass upon your goodness, allow me to solicit your interest to obtain leave for him. I'm extremely anxious for the fate of this Boy; he is only 15 years old, lively and inexperienced. To turn him loose without a friend or a patron in the corps would be extremely hazardous and unfortunately I have no particular acquaintance with any of the Gentlemen of the Corps. I have some little knowledge of Major Thesiger, enough at any rate to excite a high esteem for him but not sufficient to justify me for taking the liberty of introducing my son to him. I presume he must embark. I shall feel extremely impatient until I am favored with a line from Your Excellency advising me what to do on this interesting occasion.

You will excuse me Sir John for continuing to look up to you upon emergencies. I've been in the habit of it ever since I knew you and fear I shall never leave it off as long as we live.

Allow me to offer my best regards to Lady Wentworth, and to assure you that I am

Your devoted & grateful servant,

Sir John Wentworth, Bart. Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to E. G. Lutwyche.

Kingsclear, Oct'r 12th, 1806.

My dear friend,—I wrote you so voluminously by Capt. Rudyard that it is not necessary for me to say much on the present occasion. A vacancy has happened on the bench of the Supreme Court by the death of Isaac Allen,* Esq'r. You know my sentiments fully on the subject of this office, it is therefore unnecessary for me to add a syllable further than to say that I was regularly educated for the profession of the law, and that when the revolution commenced I was Clerk of the Courts of common pleas and sessions, and Registrar of Probate for the County of Plymouth; that my pursuits were interrupted by the war, and that after having served in a military department thro' the whole war I returned, at the close, to my former studies and pursuits, and in 1785 I was appointed first Justice of the peace for the County of York and have ever since continued to execute the duties of that office to the acceptance of the Country and the Governor. If a memorial is necessary these are facts which ought to be stated to take off the objection of my not being a professional man; an objection which has never been considered of much weight in the appointment of puisne Judges in the Colonies—Mr. Deschamp, Mr. Monk and others are instances in point in Nova Scotia; and indeed the Chief Justice of our province is another instance, having originally been bred a merchant. The salary annexed to the office of Puisne Judge here is only £300, which certainly is an inadequate support for a gentleman with a family, and a very small recompence for the arduous duties which must be performed in a country where communications are difficult and the circuits extensive. Should I succeed to the appointment I cherish the hope that, on a proper representation from my friends, I may be indulged in receiving the salary without relinquishing my half-pay. I have never asked or received any compensation for the loss of my former civil appointments in America, nor have I received any other assistance from government except my half-pay.

The duties of a Councillor and President of the Courts have been executed ever since the Province was established without one farthing of pay or emolument. Perhaps these considerations may induce my noble friend and benefactor† to make an effort to effect this object. Should the interposition of the Duke of Northumberland be necessary on this interesting occasion, I trust he will discern the justice of my claim and afford me his assistance on a proper application being made to him. * *

Governor Carleton's inactive disposition and constitutional coldness prevent me from expecting any great exertions from him, but you have his certificate.

*See biographical note under date June 1, 1783.
†Lord Sheffield.

I am called by the relations of Col. Allen to assist in making some arrangements for his funeral. I therefore must put an end to my letter with only this addition that Judge Upham has gone to England to solicit an addition to his salary or the continuance of half pay. Should he succeed it would afford a precedent. My principal dependence is on your kind exertions.

You will sign my memorial. Whether I succeed or not I remain faithfully and gratefully, Yours,

Edward Winslow.

Edward Winslow to James Frazer of Miramichi.

Kingsclear, 12th October, 1806.

My dear Sir,— * * * I have a son Edward who has been employed in Mr. Miller's store* for seven years past and is now of age. A good education in early life & great ambition & industry have enabled him to acquire a competent knowledge of accounts, and to write with ease and correctness, and he is free from any vicious propensities, prudent & persevering. In Mr. Miller's extensive lumber concerns he has for several years past been his principal manager and agent, and I have the pleasure to find (after an absence of two years in England) that my son is highly esteemed in society here. Having obtained commisions in the Army for my other sons, I am particularly desirous to find some employment for this son in the province, where I shall probably spend the remainder of my days, and it appears to me that the River Miramichi at present affords a fairer field for enterprize and industry than any other part of N. B. and it offers peculiar inducements to me, because you and your House are extensively concerned there. A long acquaintance with you has fixed impressions of esteem and I should be highly gratified if in my son's first efforts to enter into the world he could secure your patronage and protection. I hope to hear from you on the subject before you leave the province, as (if this project is impracticable) we shall aim at some other.

My late tour to England, altho' undertaken with some reluctance, has been attended with may pleasant circumstances. The honorable termination of my public business, and the flattering attention which I received there, have given a new spring to my health & fresh vigour to my exertions. During my residence in England I was not idle and I flatter myself that I have been instrumental in communicating information relative to the state of this country & in relieving it from the oppression of Quit-rents & nonsensical restrictions with respect to land matters. * * * I enclose for your amusement a few paragraphs of a letter from our snarling old Agent Knox. He adds that there is a degree of impudence in Uniacke's proposals which evinces very plainly that he was born in Ireland.

We have no domestic news except the death of Judge Allen. It took place this morning.

I am with very sincere regard &c, &c,

Ed. Winslow.

P. S.—Since writing the above my son came up from town and suggests that an interview with you would be more satisfactory to him than to attempt to negotiate in writing, and I have consented to his setting off to-morrow morning for Miramichi. I however will not suppress my letter as it will serve to introduce him and his business.

Colonel H. M. Gordon to Colonel Edward Winslow.

Royal Hospital, 4 Nov., 1806.

My dear Winslow,—I have had great pleasure in hearing of your safe arrival in New Brunswick, but you behaved very shabby in not letting me know of your departure from England that I might have made my promise good by sending the necessary conveyance deed to Mr. Blowers by you. I have however written this day and desired him to send me the necessary form to put you in possession of my Lands in Nova Scotia,* and you may rest assured it will add to my happiness if they prove useful to you or yours.

My countenance was never that of Adonis but, as we are all open to a little flattery, it is a pleasing reflection for me to think that your sisters recollect me. As to your kind expressions I do not feel myself entitled to half the merit you are disposed to give me, for it would be rather extraordinary that you should not reap the full benefit of anything that either my ability or situation could afford you.

I am sure you will feel much concern at the death of our old friend General Campbell. He lingered two months, and after experiencing excruciating pain died on the 28th August of a complaint in his Bladder. He left his son John (by the sandy headed girl at Halifax) £5,000 and he is a Lieutenant in the 57th Reg't.

Since I parted with you I have constantly resided at Kilmainham as Military Secretary to the Commander of the Forces; it is an office of confidence and a good deal of labour. My General, Lord Harrington, is a pleasant man which makes my situation as agreeable as an office of the like nature can be, and the Lord Lieutenant and his pretty Duchess have been uncommonly attentive and civil to me.

*See under date 7th June, 1806; also letter of Col. Winslow to his son Edward of Oct. 25, 1809.

I am not a politician, and therefore shall not offer an opinion upon the state of public affairs, being confident that the Ignorant are the happiest part of the people.

I know not your neighbors, but after remembering me to Mrs. Winslow and family my best regards to your sisters, say every thing that is civil to those of my acquaintance near you and don't forget Sproule and his wife when you meet them.

Adieu and believe me ever, my dear Winslow,

Yours,

H. M. Gordon.

Lieut. Gov. Carleton to Lord Sheffield.

Ramsgate, 29 Nov. 1806.

My Lord,—I am favor'd with your Lordships Letter of 25th & do most sincerely lament that the applications made to procure the Collectorship for Col. Winslow have failed of success. Possessed as he is of talents so peculiarly suited to that office he must have made a most useful servant to the public, but in the present instance, my Lord, the case is widely different. The Col. is not a professional man & talents I apprehend would not atone for the want of Law knowledge; besides that in a Province where there are several respectable Gentlemen of the Bar, such an appointment could not fail to give general dissatisfaction.

I have the honor to be, &c, &c,

Thos. Carleton.

Lord Sheffield to Duke of Northumberland.

2d December, 1806.

My Lord,—I flatter myself your Grace will excuse the liberty I take of addressing you on the subject of a very respectable man for whom I understand you have expressed a regard; I mean Col. Winslow of New Brunswick. It might not have been necessary to trouble your Grace on the subject if the present ministers had not shewn on more than one occasion how little disposed they are to attend to me; but it will hardly be the same in respect to your Grace. I have therefore enclosed in another cover the copy of a Letter which communicates the object of Mr. Winslow.

Before he left England, early last spring, he mentioned to me his situation. I have reason to be satisfied that his large family has reduced him to great distress & that if he does not attain some situation of emolument after his long and many services, he will be obliged to sell the little property he has & quit the Province. * * *

I have the honor, &c, &c,

Sheffield.

Lieut. Gov. Carleton to Lord Sheffield.

5th December, 1806.

My Lord,—I am honor'd with your Lordship's Letter & its enclosure. The circumstances stated in the case of Col. Winslow were not unknown to me & I am aware that many persons had seats on the Benches of the Supreme Courts both in Nova Scotia & Canada who had not been regularly bred to the profession, but the credit of these Courts suffered in consequence of such appointments. In the present instance there happens to be a Gentleman at the Bar, possessed of superior Talents, who has been Solicitor General since the first formation of the Court & who it would be an act of injustice to pass over.

I have the honor, &c, &c,

Thos. Carleton.

Duke of Northumberland to Lord Sheffield.

Alnwick Castle, 11th Dec'r, 1806.

My Lord,—A slight attack of the Gout in my right hand, prevents me from being able to do more than sign my name to this Letter acknowledging your Lordships of the 2d of this month.

Nobody my Lord has to my knowledge a greater claim upon Government for the Loyalty he shewed during the whole contest in America than Mr. Winslow, & nothing would give me greater pleasure than being instrumental in procuring for him a situation to which his public services as well as private abilities give him a fair pretenson. I am sorry however to say, my Lord, that unconnected as I am with any party at present, my influence with his Majesty's ministers is but small & if they will not pay a proper attention to your Lordship's recommendation of Mr. Winslow I have but little hope that any application of mine in his behalf will prove successful. Mr. W.'s claims & merits, however, are so strong that I will make the attempt, & truly happy shall I think myself if any endeavours to serve Mr. W. shall procure for him a situation which he is desirous of having. To his Loyalty and zeal I was a witness while I continued in America.

I have the honor to be with highest respect & esteem

&c, &c,

Northumberland.

P. S. I have taken the liberty to retain the Chief Justices certificate & the copy of Mr. W.'s letter, as they appear to me to be documents which will help to explain to Lord Grenville Mr. Winslow's wishes & pretensions.

Thomas Costin to Edward Winslow.

Hamomashoe, Jan'y 3rd, 1807.

Honourable Colonel and most respectable Friend,—This is to inform you that I have established a free School at this place, according to an Act of Assembly of the Province. Sixty pounds encouragement is given to each Parish, but as the Papists and Prodistants and the Curate of the Parish differs in mind, this is to request of you a particular favour, and perhaps it may be the last, hoping that my request shall be Granted. It is to favour me with a Letter of recommendation under your hand to the Honourable the President Thomas Dunn.* Now Dear and respectable friend as soon as you will grant that favour I shall set off for Quebec to present the same with a petition signed by a Majority of the Parish.

Mrs. Costin joins with all the Family in sending their sincere Love to yours & Mrs. Winslow's.

The mis-understanding of the Priest is that he expected to have the Land and Building at his own will and pleasure, but being rather knowing the Land proves to be Granted to me and to all other School masters after my Decease. But what vexes most the good Priest, or black Gown, is that a certain Building of thirty five feet long has been transported by his own consent on the said Land, which I do enjoy and possess at the present.

I have nothing more to inform the Colonel, but I hope to have it in my power by the Spring to write a phrase or two concerning the good Priest.

I conclude with the greatest respect &c, &c,

Thos. Costin.

P. S. Excuse my writing, I have detained Michaud a few minutes to write this Letter.

Charles J. Peters to Edward Winslow.

Saint John, 4th January, 1807.

My dear Sir,—I have put into Golding's slay a couple of codfish directed to you being the only fruit produced in our fruitful City. Mrs. Peters desires me to guard Pen against the bones, which are apt to stick into the throats of giddy young girls, and if a little point of a chicken bone closed the mortal career of a hugh great American General, what may not be dreaded from the back bone of a codfish by a delicate young damsel. This is my wife's lingo, not mine.

We have no late news, and I almost dread the arrival of any more.

*Hon. Thomas Dunn was at this time president of the council and administrator of government at Quebec.

My wife's and my own best wishes for a happy new year to yourself and all the ladies.

Your friend, Most sincerely

Charles J. Peters.

Col. E. G. Lutwyche to Edward Winslow.

[January 5, 1807.]

[First part of letter missing.] * * * It appears from the face of the papers that you are indebted to Lord Sheffield only, but I shrewdly suspect the Duke's influence has effected the business—not that this lessens the merit of Lord Sheffield in the least. Lord Sheffield wrote to Sir J. Shee and having no answer he wrote to the Duke [of Northumberland]. After more than 20 days Mr. Windham answers Lord Sheffield's letter and grants his request. The time which elapsed gave the Duke an opportunity of writing to Lord Grenville—the Duke was not to be refused and then Mr. Windham tho't proper to give a favorable answer to Lord Sheffield.

My opinion is that Lord Grenville has told the Duke his request is complied with & Mr. Windham claims the merit of obliging Lord Sheffield. This, if I am right is a pretty piece of court finesse by which they oblige two noblemen and lay you under obligations to both—but tho' it should happen that the Duke's interest prevailed yet it does not lessen Lord Sheffield's merit who was the "primum mobile."

The mast ship will bring your commissions. Adieu, I am tired. God bless you.

E. G. Lutwyche.

[P. S.] Catharine writes you.

Mrs. Weltden to Edward Winslow.

[January 5, 1807.]

My dear friend,—I heartily congratulate you and your interesting family on your appointment. There is a tide in some men's affairs most certainly. The very day I heard of your success Mr. Torin asked me if you had succeeded in procuring a cadetship ? I said, no; then tell him, said Mr. Torin, there is one waits his acceptance. Judge from what you yourself feel, my dear Sir, how much I, your young friend, was delighted at being permitted to be an instrument of comfort to your heart. This is so much better a provision for Mr. Edward, than it appears to us you can make for him in New Brunswick, that I have no doubt of its meeting your wishes. The establishment of one son in India may be a source of great advantage to your family. My dear Weltden will I trust come home in July & if so he will probably go out again in January or February and the arrangement we used to talk over can take place. He will be happy to take charge of him out and will manage everything for his outfit to make it come as easy to you as possible. Tell Miss Winslow I am almost ashamed to address her after so long a silence, but when we forward your commissions, relying on her indulgence, I believe I shall take courage.

Will you have the goodness to send me a couple of plants of the white blowing Shrub I think you called it Moose Shrub from its blooming in winter. Your son need not leave you till the autumn at soonest, before which you shall hear more from us & we shall of course have letters from you. God bless you and yours prays

Your very affect'e,

C. Weltden.

Elkanah Morton* to Edward Winslow.

Digby, Janu'y, 27, 1807.

Honb'e Colo'l Winslow.

Dear Sir,—Tho' I am among the last who have the pleasure of congratulating you on your safe return to your family and friends, I beg you will not consider me less sincere: much necessary absence, and a perpetual hurry, when at home, have caused the neglect. It was at Shelburne, with your Friend Judge White, I heard of your arrival — and that the attempts to injure you had proved particularly advantageous, which certainly afforded us the highest satisfaction — hope your Voyage has proved as salutary as prosperous, that you, Mrs. Winslow and your dear Lambs may long enjoy the blessing of health with every other comfort which this life can afford, and finally obtain a gentle dismission into the regions of uninterrupted felicity.

I am sorry to say that long and very deep-rooted prejudices have subsisted in this Town, between the Irish and poor Yankees, tho' we have some few Yankees who make excellent Irishmen,—being only a blue-nose myself, did not think it prejudice that made me consider the Yankees least in fault. However having never been a party-man I feel no inclination to become a dupe to either — therefore struck out a middle course. And thro' the favor of Heaven & good friends, have succeeded beyond by own expectations. His Excellency has pleased to send me a Commission of the Peace with one as Surveyor of Ships &c.— unsolicited was the appointment of Coll. of H. M. Customs given me, previous to which I had solicited & obtained the Register Office, also the Collection of Provincial duties, in all which I desire to do my duty fairly & handsomely & to be thankful. With kind remembrances to Mrs. W. & family, I am with all due respect & esteem,

Dear Sir your most faithful & ob't serv't,

E. Morton.

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

1-2 past 5 o'clock Wednesday Mor'g, February, 1807.

My dear Friend,— I find it impossible to get to you without its being before you are up in the morning or after you are in bed in the evening. I will however try tomorrow.

Our sentiments have always been in unison from children and I presume they always will, and that you will enjoy with me and our friends Odell, Saunders, Chipman, Coffin, &c., &c., the late proceedings in the two branches of the Legislative Assembly, for the real public good which must flow direct from them. A whole change of system has been suddenly brought about by events fortunate and unexpected. How much its to be regretted that your health did not permit you to continue with us. Instead of that overbearing dictatorial manner of delivering opinions and forcing them down, there is the humble spaniel at your feet where in future it ought to be kept. Chipman has been a host in this campaign and has been well supported. * * *

God bless you,

Geo. Leonard.

Lieut. Governor Carleton to Edward Winslow.

Bath, 2d March, 1807.

Dear Colonel,—I deferred answering your letter of 10th Oct'r until I could have it in my power to say something satisfactory respecting poor Beardsley*, and I am now happy in being able to say that all difficulties in the way of his receiving his half-pay are removed. This has been effected entirely by the active benevolence of Sir Brock Watson. I had only to vouch facts and make a short statement of his case to the Secretary of War.

I am Dear Coll, very faithfully yours,

Thos. Carleton.

Mrs. Weltden to Penelope Winslow.

Kensington, March 14th, [1807].

My dear Miss Winslow,—I sincerely hope that long ere the date of this our much valued friend, my adopted papa*, is made happy by the receipt of his commission. Nothing was wanting to complete our satisfaction on the occasion but the pleasure of congratulating him in person. I trust he has received a letter from me written on a part of my father's, & that he is pleased at the opening for one of your Brothers in India. Tell him Torin gave me the cadetship with such a handsome compliment to my friend as made it doubly acceptable.

I have enclosed in the Box of things for your father a few articles that I thought might be useful to you. I have been making a fashionable handkerchief & inclose you the cotton to complete it. I have a little exceeded Col. Winslow's commission in one of the Gowns for Mrs. Winslow, if he thinks it too gay tell him I thought the Judge's Lady ought to have something a little out of the common way.

I hope the Books will entertain you. I will add to them occasionally as opportunity occurs. Your father has I trust raised such an interest for us all in his family that you will not be satisfied without my particu--larizing.

My father, thank God, has quite recovered his health, & his spirits are as good as I can expect them yet to be. I am quite well, though in anxious expectation of the long looked for Letters from my husband.

And now my dear Miss Winslow I will bid you adieu. Tell Col. Winslow he must always fill every scrap of paper of his Letters for I grumble when there is the least vacancy and he knows how I can scold. He has my most affectionate respect & esteem, & all his family my warmest wishes for every possible good.

Believe me my dear Miss Winslow,

Your affec'te friend,

C. Weltden.

George Leonard to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 28th March, 1807.

My dear Friend,—The second day after I got home from Fredericton I left the City for the Vale† where I have been until yesterday so that I have but this moment had your note put into my hands. I will give you what I have written to Lord Sheffield (and sent immediately after) for you to confirm and add to as you may think proper.

New Brunswick, March 5th, 1807.

"My Lord,—The Legislative Assembly for this province closed their session yesterday. I take the first moment to inform your Lordship that

*The reference is of course a a playful one to Edward Winslow.
†Sussex Vale.

I laid before the House of Assembly your Lordship's letter which I was honored with, and which was listened to with much applause by the whole House — the Galleries, being at the time full of people from different parts of the country joined in the acknowledgement and thanks for the services rendered the colonies by your Lordship; £150 was immediately voted to cover all expenses for your Lordship's picture to the colony, and a place in the Province Hall assigned for its being hung.

The House of Assembly voted also an address to his Majesty on the subject of the Islands in the Bay of Passamaquoddy (now in possession of the American subjects) the loss of the carrying and illicit Trade, &c., &c. This important paper which I am anxious for your Lordship to see, as a corroboration of the facts stated in your Lordship's book on the navigation system, also confirms my statements to the ministers for years past. The President of the Council, who is administrator of the Government, was requested by the two branches of the Legislature to transmit the same without loss of time to his Majesty's Secretary of State, before if possible the Islands were ceded to the American States — as great fears are entertained on account of a letter from Mr. Madison the American Secretary of State to Mr. Merry, a copy of which I sent your Lordship.

The address will be sent by the first conveyance as also a copy to the Agent Mr. Knox. It is too large a paper to trouble your Lordship with the postage of. Mr. Knox will be desired to wait on you with it. He is continued Agent with his usual salary £100 until the plan of your Lordship can be carried into effect. All desire it, but the difficulty is to unite in the person. Sir John Wentworth the Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia is much attached to Mr. Barnard, the agent for that Province, and it is not probable that this Province or Canada will agree in him.

Your Lordship's application for a larger vessel for the public service under the direction of the Superintendent of Trade has succeeded. A letter has lately been received from Lord Spencer authorizing the Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia in conjunction with the Superintendent to purchase, fit, and man a suitable vessel for the purpose; the command is given to my son who had the former vessel.

It is a great mortification to Colonel Winslow that he was not able to attend the Council during the whole of the last session on account of being confined to the house with the Gout. I left him on the road to recovery. He frequently expresses much gratitude for your kindness and attention. He is certainly deserving the notice of Government, as his usefulness may be of great service in these colonies from his active mind and extensive knowledge, if we are permitted to keep them [the colonies] from the common enemy of mankind [Bonaparte] who from late intelligence is over running the continent of Europe.

I have the honor, &c., &c.,

G. L.

Thus I have given you a rough sketch from a rough copy. * * *

The prospects on the continent are favorable — the Devil take the American Treaty, it however will not be ratified. It was altogether commercial and no part boundary. Thank God our address will be in season and the Chief will lose his Hat and Feather.

I am desired by Sir John Wentworth to fix on the spot for the Light House on Briar Island, and to contract for the Stone for the building. On that business I shall set off there in a few days.

Yours affectionately,

Geo. Leonard.

Ward Chipman to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 4 April, 1807.

My dear Winslow,—* * * We should all be mortified in the extreme if the fishery law, which we have been battling for so many years and at last with success, should finally miscarry by the arts made use of to procure the Royal disallowance of it. In the inclosed News-paper you will see a copy of the Vote of the Common Council. The Committee has applied to the Attorney General* and he, I understand, has undertaken to draw up their petition and remonstrance against the law. Altho' I cannot believe that it will be attended to, I think we must resort to every expedient and make every exertion to prevent its success. It is not improbable that in consequence of the daubing resolutions of the Common Council respecting Lord Sheffield, his little picture† &c, some attempt may be made to interest him in their favor. This must be guarded against and I know not who can do it but yourself. To enable you to make a fair representation to him I have sketched some leading facts in the inclosed Paper, these you may dress in your own way and add to them whatever you please. I have sent a copy of them to Odell for him to adopt what he can or dare do, as remarks to accompany the copy of the Law to the Secretary of State. You must also write to Knox on the subject and let him well understand that the whole originates in the most damnable and malicious persecution that was ever witnessed in a civil society. Lutwyche, if he knows how much Mr. Hazen is interested, will interfere in whatever he can be useful I am sure. But I need not suggest anything more to interest you on this occasion.

Yours, &c., &c., W. C.

Edward Winslow to the Duke of Northumberland.

Fredericton, New Brunswick, 10th April, 1807.

My Lord Duke,—It is not many hours since your Grace's letter of 7th Feb'y was put into my hands. Had it contained intelligence of a new disappointment, I should have met it like a Christian. A series of misfortunes have brought my mind into habits of submission, and an unconquerable spirit of cheerfulness will never allow me to despond.

*Jonathan Bliss.

†See note under date Oct. 2nd, 1805; also Lawrence's "Foot Prints," pp. 35, 36.

* * * The business that of late called me to England terminated in a manner highly honorable to myself, and his Majesty was graciously pleased to order me a warrant for £150 as a compensation for my trouble and expence. Had I left England at the time I intended this sum would have been satisfactory, but on the eve of my departure (which was but a little while after my visit to Sion-House) I was arrested by the most violent and spiteful fit of the Gout I ever experienced. By this means I was detained till the middle of April & the helpless state to which I was reduced greatly increased my expences. Upon my return, after two years' absence, I found my embarrassments greatly increased. [Letter proceeds to state that Col. Winslow had decided to give up his property to his creditors, when he received the Duke's letter notifying him that he was to be appointed a Judge of the Supreme Court. The emotions excited in his breast by this happy event are described in the words that follow.]

Judge, my Lord Duke, with what alacrity I summoned my flock of children about me—children educated by myself, inheriting a laudable pride and great sensibility—and explained to them the nature of your Grace's action on my behalf. The appointment which your Grace has procured for me will enable me with rigid economy to extricate myself from my present difficulties. * * *

The plain language of gratitude which flows warm from the heart of a tender parent and an honest man will I trust be acceptable to your Grace and induce you to receive with complacency the cordial thanks of myself and my family.

I am now anxiously looking for the arrival of the March mail to receive the communication which your Grace refers to. * * *

Permit me now to declare myself, My Lord Duke,

Your Grace's most grateful & obed't serv't.

Ed. Winslow.

Colonel Lutwyche to Edward Winslow.

[Endorsed, "1st. May 1807. Rec'd. at Halifax."]

* * * Before this reaches you I suppose you will be arrayed in your judicial costume. It would gratify me to see you seated by the C. Justice. The Commission went by the last packet from the S. of State's office.

Colo. Upham has recovered wonderfully, and will return in better health than he has known these twenty years. The augmentation of the Judges Salaries engrosses all his attention and I, who am not naturally sanguine, think he will succeed. Mr. Percival the new Chancellor of the Exchequer is interested in the business and has promised to give him a meeting with Lord Castlereagh; the results of this conference will most probably determine the fate of his application. I have written to Lord Sheffield and sent him a copy of all papers. His Lordship is willing to come forward, but I wished Upham to try his strength first. In a few days he comes to town and then we will see what is necessary to be done. If the prayer of his petition is granted, and I really think it will, this increase of your income will I hope relieve you from every embarrassment by enabling you to set apart a certain portion, agreeably to your wish—and gratify that independence of spirit which you possess, without which you can never be quite happy.

* * * The Governor is at Bath drinking large draughts of Lethe to obliviate the cares attendant on Government, and the affront offered him in appointing a Judge without consulting him, and really I do think he has some reason to be displeased. * * *

Edward Winslow to E. W. Miller.

[St. John], 1st June, 1807.

My dear Miller,—I rec'd your letter by Pine this morning. * * *

The two-mast ships are loaded & will sail for Halifax on Saturday. I should have taken passage in one of 'em, but they are ordered to go no further than Sambro Head and make their signal for the convoy, and to wait a certain number of hours and if the convoy does not then join they are to take their departure alone. A voiage to England would not suit me at this time and I did not incline to run the risque.

I have taken a passage for "Went" in a fine schooner bound to Windsor, which sails on Wednesday. Letters rec'd by the last mail render it unnecessary for me to accompany him.

Press Lincoln to finish the business of the barn and afford him all the assistance you can.

My love to Mary and give the precious little ones a kiss extraordinary for

Yours most affect'ly

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Major George Thesiger.

Halifax, June 18th, 1807.

Sir,—The very kind interference of Sir John and Lady Wentworth & my other friends almost precludes the necessity of my addressing you on a subject highly interesting to myself. My son, the bearer, has through the impatient exertions of my friends in England been appointed an Ensign in the regiment under your command rather earlier than I originally intended.

The leave of absence which General Skerrit has been pleased to extend to him, and which expires on the 24th inst, has been improved in endeavors to qualify himself for the service. He has been unremited in his attendance upon the drill during the winter, and I trust (altho young & educated in retirement) he will not appear awkward or in any other respect discredit the regiment. But great vivacity & a total want of experience may expose him to many impositions unless he is guided by the protecting hand of some benevolent Guardian. My anxiety as a parent is soothed by the consideration that he is to be under your command.

Allow me, my dear Sir, to declare myself
With great esteem, your most obed't &c,
Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Lieut. Col. William Allen.

Fredericton, N. B., 20th June, 1807.

My dear Allen,—A knowledge of the benevolence of your heart leads me to address a line to you on a subject of some importance. Ross Currie* of your regiment of Pennsylvania Loyalists came to this Country when I did, and he married a young, amiable interesting woman, the daughter of Doctor Clarke. Currie was unfortunately drowned in the St. John, leaving two very fine boys, the eldest 17 years old—named for you (William). William Currie is tall and handsome and uncommonly correct in his conduct. He expresses an ambition to obtain an Ensigncy in the army and there are now four regiments raising in this country; the Nova Scotia, the New Brunswick, the Canada, and the Newfoundland Fencibles. I presume it would not be difficult to obtain a commission in either of these corps for an accomplished young man the son of a meritorious officer. Allow me then to solicit your assistance in behalf of young Currie on this occasion and that you will take the trouble to throw a line into the post office to let me know the result. * * *

Ed. Winslow.

---

*Ross Currie was commissioned a lieutenant in the Pennsylvania Loyalists Dec. 1, 1777, and was afterwards adjutant of the corps. He belonged to Philadelphia, which was also the home of Lieut. Col. William Allen, whose family and that of Lt. Col. Isaac Allen of the New Jersey Volunteers were related. Ross Currie settled at Fredericton about 1783 and became a leading lawyer there.

Judge Edward Winslow to Chief Justice Ludlow.

Kingsclear, Wednesday July 22, 1807.

Sir,—From the communication made to me yesterday, I have reason to apprehend that His Honor the President may be induced by your opinion and advice to supercede me as Surrogate of this province and that the supercedence will issue immediately. I therefore consider it a duty which I owe to you Sir, as well as a duty I owe to myself, respectfully to call to your recollection the following facts.

That on the first attempt to organize a civil government in this country, I was appointed by commission from Governor Carleton, bearing date 29th Nov'r, 1784, to be Surrogate of the Province of New Brunswick and I have continued to act in that capacity ever since, and with confidence I can appeal to yourself and the community at large whether the official duties have not been performed with diligence and fidelity. * * * To you it is also known that the most benevolent attention has been always shewn on my part in cases where poverty has asserted its claim to a relinquishment of all fees. Nor could I inform you, Sir, of the unwearied and persevering efforts I have made to establish some system for the regulation of the Surrogate's department which might apply to our situation.

[The letter goes on to speak of his recent appointment to the bench as a mark of appreciation of the services rendered in early life and later, and as a recognition of "the neglect and disappointment experienced in the original distribution of the Offices of emolument in this province." His Majesty had been also pleased to consider the distress, hardship & expence to which he had been exposed in consequence of an unnecessary prosecution instituted against him by the Attorney General.]

Under these circumstances and in the absence of the Governor I must acknowledge Sir, I did not expect that the little pittance which I received from an office, enjoyed in my own country almost as an hereditary right before the revolution and in which I have had so much experience here, would have been so suddenly seized upon.

[The letter goes on to shew that there were precedents in England for Judges of the Supreme Court acting also as Judges of Probate, and Winslow argues there is nothing incompatible in the holding of both offices by the same individual.]

I hope what I have written (under unpleasant impressions) will give no offence, none is intended, but I should ill deserve the honorable testimonies which have been given to my character if I did not satisfy my friends that on an occasion of some delicacy and importance I had made a firm and decent effort to do myself justice. In that view I trust this letter will be considered, and for that purpose only it is respectfully submitted.

By your most humble servant,

Ed. Winslow.

Judge Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

Kingsclear, 25th July, 1807.

My dear Sir John,—The postmaster General* and myself had a pleasant journey and voyage from Halifax to St. John, where I found the King's Mandamus appointing me a Judge of the Supreme Court here, and a number of letters containing a history of the whole negotiation upon this occasion. I regret that these letters had not come to hand before I left New Brunswick, because I should have shewn 'em to you with peculiar pride and pleasure. The conduct of the Duke of Northumberland evinced not only the kindness of a friend, but the decision of a patron, and he expressed his concern that a greater object had not offered. Lord Sheffield's activity was also conspicuous. Gov'r Carleton's objections were (all circumstances considered) extraordinary. They were confined to my not being what he called a "professional man." They however had no effect —indeed I fear they were treated rather contemptuously. Upon the whole, should the income arising from this office amount by any means to the salary of your Judges, I should prefer remaining here to any other situation. Indeed I should prefer an income of four or five hundred a year here to double the sum in any other place.

The Gentlemen of the Bar I am told are not very well pleased with my appointment, but the congratulations of all other orders of men are much more than a balance for their chagrine.

When I was in England I had some expectation of obtaining through the interest of a very respectable gentleman, by the name of Torrin, a cadet-ship in India for your namesake,† but the impatience of my military friends obtained the commisssion in the Nova Scotia regiment, with which I am perfectly satisfied, and I concluded that Mr. Torrin would think no more of the matter; but the good man observing Wentworth's name gazetted for an Ensigncy, now sends me notice that the cadet-ship waits the acceptance of my other son Edward. This is the only son I have left, and he inherits all the discretion of the family, and I am distressed at the idea of parting with him. But as the offer is accompanied with a letter from my very amiable friend Mrs. Weltden (Lutwyche's daughter) whose husband is captain of an India-man, kindly saying Captain Weltden will take him out free of expence, I feel exceedingly embarrassed, especially as I know nothing of the nature of this business. Will you my dear Sir John, to whom on all occasions I look for advice, give me some information on this subject. He is not obliged to go from here till October, and should you think the object not a proper one for him to pursue I should be inclined to relinquish it. My son has been educated as a merchant, and is accomplished in book keeping &c. He is tall—and tho' I say it—a handsome young man, and of a most accommodating disposition and perfectly prudent. But unless I send him to the United States (and I'd as soon send him to the Devil) there appears to be no field for speculation in his own profession. In the present situation of this province the whole trade of it would not give bread to five men of ambition.

From my other son Tom, I have heard the most flattering accounts by the last mail; he is high up among the lieutenants of the tenth and is appointed to the Granidier Company, and in a letter to Col. Robinson, he is spoken of as an officer of uncommon merit, and, as if the current of fortune had now set pretty strong the right way, I have also heard from my elder son Murray, who has been particularly distinguished in some of the late naval actions, and is I trust long before this on the quarter deck of the Tiger, and under the special protection of my most valuable friend Admiral Hallowell, from whom I have received assurance. * * * [Remainder missing.]

Instructions for a Journey from Fredericton to the River St. Lawrence.

[Written by Edward Winslow About 1807, Probably for the Information of George Heriot.]

The baggage in a Birch canoe should be fitted to it; that is each article should have its proper place. The canteen should be between the two forward bars, with the lock towards you, so that you can take a cut or a drink without disturbing anything else. Your portmanteau, men's provisions, etc, will go between the foremost bar and the bow. Your fusee will lie at your left side; your umbrella on the right. If you don't take a mattrass your great coat just over the bar behind you makes a good seat, and by drawing one end up you preserve your back from the hard bar. When your arrangements are once made, directions should be given to the Boatman and servant when you come to your ground in the evening, that the baggage be so placed as that the articles may be returned to their proper stations in the morning. If you have two canoes the baggage should be kept separate. An attention to this circumstance prevents confusion and delay and 'tis of considerable importance. It should be an object to take possesssion of your ground 20 minutes at least before sunset. Even if you carry a tent it will take that time at least to chuse your spot and fix it for the night; a hut will require rather more time. As soon as you land, light a fire and make as large a one as you can. It corrects the damp, keeps off the flies and contributes much to your comfort. Take care that your tent or hut is to the windward and that the spot is dry. If you have no mattrass a good feather bed is easily made with the small branches of the Evergreens.

At this season I would recommend (notwithstanding there are some high authorities against me) that you take breakfast before you embark. When you have all your things on shore and your fire ready kindled you will save time by getting that business over. Your next meal will me a meredian cut, which you will get without landing, if you chuse. In the river you will find many beaches and flats, where you may stretch your legs which is a great relief. Should you be caught in violent rain or very severe weather you'll find a good shelter in almost any farmhouse on the banks of the river, and the people are generally civil and clean and you'll always be able to get from them milk, butter and potatoes.

Between this* and the Great Falls you will have plain sailing, and you will make the journeys long or short as the weather happens or as your feelings or inclinations may dictate. As you would wish to see the Post at Presque-Isle you may easily manage to get there the 3d night. The 5th night you will probably be at the Grand Falls. In the morning you will have time to view the Falls, the Post, &c, and proceed to the French settlement at Madawaska. If you charter your canoes to go from here to Madawaska you will be able to hire others there, perhaps better ones. There are two very respectable people among the inhabitants, Joseph Deagle and Simon Aubeare, and I would recommend that you take your station at or near their houses—they are not far apart. You should set off from Madawaska pretty early in the morning. There is a fall at the entrance of the River Madawaska near the village, which will delay you a little while, and it will be a good days work to get from Madawaska to the mouth of Timisquata Lake.

Before you leave Madawaska you will make arrangements for your return. You will stipulate with Deagle or Aubeare that they shall meet you at Higginbotham's† Landing, at a day to be agreed on, with one or two canoes. There's good ground to encamp at the entrance of the Timisquata Lake on a rocky point at the left hand. The distance across the lake is 5 English leagues, a trade wind blows there. Should it be fair when you arrive and the evening pleasant, I should recommend that you proceed, if not, halt till the morning and take the day before you. There is at times a very heavy sea in the Lake, and a head wind renders it disagreeable navigation. In a calm they pole along the shore, but the indents and bays are so deep as to increase the distance very materially. If you get across the lake before night, you'll be able to arrange your baggage, which should be previously fitted with slings, haversack fashion, and if you have time to go eight or ten miles on the portage, you will have it in your power to get out to the River de Cap* the next day, but to effect this, you must be industrious.

†Higgonbotham was an old courier who had settled at Lake Temisquata,

Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

[Date about 1807.]

* * * * * *

Pardon me, Sir John, for intruding upon you with so much domestic matter, but to lighten the burden you may share it with Lady Wentworth whose kind heart never fails to rejoice when anything good happens to your friends. Permit me to tell her I appreciate as I ought the attention she lately extended to her little Godson [Wentworth.] Her condescension and kindness may be the means of riveting impressions on that boy's mind which will never be obliterated. The letters which he wrote from Halifax, and which have been shewn me since my return, contain affecting proofs of his sensibility and gratitude towards Lady Wentworth & yourself, & I am persuaded that the confidence which he acquired in his visit at Halifax will have a wonderful effect on his future conduct and manners.

When Heriot† and I passed the Lodge, he was very much pleased with the appearance of it, and while our horses were feeding at the Rockingham he went back and took the sketch‡ which he afterwards touched off and gave to me and I sent it to Lady Wentworth, supposing it would afford her Ladyship a moment's amusement. I hope she received it safe. I coaxed the Postmaster [Heriot] to accompany me to Fredericton, and he was delighted with the Country. He set off afterwards back again to St. John to pursue his route thro' America, but the noise of a rupture alarmed him and he is now on his way to Canada through the woods. I fear the flies of New Brunswick will interrupt his sketches on this tour. Personally I cannot realize that the Americans can be serious in thinking of hostilities to Great Britain. * * * *

†George Heriot was post master general of Canada, and seems to have had jurisdiction in postal matters in British North America. He was an excellent scholar and also a clever artist. He published several books on British North America, illustrated by engravings made from his own sketches. These books are now scarce and command high prices.

‡The Prince's Lodge was at this time the property of Sir John Wentworth, and was his villa or country residence. It was here he spent his declininig years after his retirement from the lieuteant governorship in 1808. The cottage built here by Sir John Wentworth was in the first instance called "Friar Lawrence's Cell." It was enlarged by the Duke of Kent and called "The Prince's Lodge." Many interesting particulars of the lodge are to be found in Fenety's Life and Times of Hon. Joseph Howe, pp. 80-92.

Judge Edward Winslow to Lord Sheffield.

Kingsclear, 20th August, 1807.

My Lord,—It was not until the 20th June last that I received his Majesty's mandamus appointing me a Judge of the Supreme Court in this Province. The official forms are now arranged and I have taken my seat, but before I enter upon the execution of my office it is incumbent on me to perform one solemn duty of another nature, which is to offer to your Lordship the united acknowledgements of a numerous and grateful family. A family saved from sinking into distress by your Lordship's benevolent interposition, for altho' I am fully sensible of the condescension and goodness of my other noble patron and friend, it is impossible for me not to discern the important effects of your Lordship's active exertions in my behalf. My worthy and faithful friend Lutwyche has communicated the particulars of the negotiations carried on in my favour, and truly my Lord the perusal of 'em have excited a degree of sensibility beyond what I have ever before experienced. * * *

A decision has been communicated to me by the Chief Justice relative to the office of Surrogate, which I have held ever since the Country was settled without a single appeal from any of my decrees, or I may venture to assert without any murmur at any of my official acts. This office (it is now determined) is incompatible with a seat on the Bench, and the instant the oaths were administered to me I was notify'd of the appointment of another person. The office is worth now £50 or £60 per annum, & is the only civic office of emolument I have ever held in the Country, and this deduction from my little income will be felt severely if my half-pay ceases. The Chief Justice appears to have temporized on this occasion merely for the purpose of conciliating some of the "Gentlemen of the bar" (as they are called here) who are, I believe, the only people in the Province who are not perfectly satisfy'd with my appointment. From every other order of men I have received the most explicit congratulations. These gentlemen affect a kind of "esprit de corps", and their objection arises from my not being a Barrister, although the most respectable of them have repeatedly declared that they would not have accepted the office had it been offered them. The Solicitor General (Mr. Chipman) wrote me in the most pointed terms while I was in England, "that in case of a vacancy on the Bench he would not wish to succeed to it," and I communicated his letter to Governor Carleton then at Bath, before I had any idea of applying for the office myself; nor does the conduct of the Governor appear to be very consistent upon this occasion, for he seems perfectly reconciled to pass by the Attorney General*, who (of course) stands first on the roster and is eminent in his profession, merely because of some personal digust. I don't suspect the Governor of any design to injure me; he is a man of a very peculiar cast of character, and on this occasion I think he has not acted with his accustomed frankness and candour. However as the matter is now settled, I shall persevere in the same respectful line of conduct towards him and shall pursue my duty with increasing assiduity.

Tenacious as I am of your Lordship's good opinion, I could not avoid this detail, and I hope I shall be excused for my prolixity.

I wish most devoutely your Lordship would compleat your goodness to this Country by interesting yourself to send us out some active and respectable man for a Governor; £1,500 sterling a year for 4 years past, with considerable emoluments, has been divided between a Governor, who for his amusement resides at Ramsgate in England, and a President, who for his convenience lives 80 miles from the Seat of Government. Your Lordship must be aware how critically we are now circumstanced with respect to the Americans, and it must be obvious how important the presence and influence of a Governor must be in an infant Country at such a crisis.

Your Lordship's picture is the strongest likeness I ever saw—it has been viewed with peculiar pleasure by all orders of people here—and with emotions of the highest gratitude and respect by

Your Lordship's most faithful & devoted Serv't,

Edward Winslow.

N. B. I forgot to mention that the Supreme Court in this Province is not the Supreme Court of probate—but appeals are made from the latter to the Governor as Ordinary.

Colonel Hugh Mackay to Judge Edward Winslow.

Suther Hall, August 20, 1807.

Dear Sir,—My friend Mr. Donald McDonald, having lately informed me that he intends shortly, as the uncle & Guardian of the Heirs of the late James McMaster Esquire, deceased, to apply (in conjunction with Mr. Moses Gerrish) for all the remaining unlocated part of the Island of Grand Manan, I take the liberty to address you upon the subject, and to state to you as correctly as I can, the principles and grounds of their intended application, which is as follows:—

In the year 1783, a License of Occupation was given by the Government of Nova Scotia to Messrs. John Jones, Thomas Ross, and Moses Gerrish* of the Island of Grand Manan, and the smaller adjacent Islands,

Moses Gerrish, of Massachusetts, was a graduate of Harvard in 1762. He was employed in the commissariat department of the army at the time of the Revolutionary war. He was a man of ability and force of character, and was the leading magistrate on the island of Grand Mann. He died in 1830 at the age of 80 years, and is buried on Ross Island, which adjoins Grand Manan. In the conditioned to be confirmed therein by Grant, on their locating & settling thereon other fifty families. In 1784 they by Virtue thereof, & as British subjects, took possession of these Islands, and invited & obtained several other settlers to join them on the Island, some of whom have made valuable and extensive improvements.

That on the 2d day of June, 1786, Mr. Jones (one of the said Licencees) conveyed & assigned by Deed, to Messrs. James and Patrick McMaster, his third, or whole claim to the said Island, for the valuable contribution of £500,—which was actually paid, and received;—that the title or claim in consequence of the said assignment, now devolves on, and remains by Survivorship and Inheritence in the Heirs of Mr. James McMaster, and to whom, with Mr. Daniel McMaster, the said John Jones is indebted to a very large amount, in addition to the sum paid him for the Lands, and that without the most distant prospect of ever recovering a shilling from him—which with other losses & disappointments, leaves the widow and orphans of the late Mr. James McMaster* considerably embarassed in their circumstances; a matter which gives me no small early part of the century Moses Gerrish placed a pair of Moose on the island, which increased and multiplied, and the provincial legislature in 1810 passed an act prohibiting the killing of moose on the island under penalty of £15 for each offence, "provided always that nothing in said act shall be construed to prevent Moses Gerrish, the original importer of said moose, from killing or giving "license and permission to kill a certain number of moose each and every year." The last moose was killed in 1834 or 1835 and the act soon afterwards repealed.

John Jones, sometimes called "Mahogany Jones," on account of his dark complexion, was quite a character. He was in the year 1780 a captain in Roger's "King's Rangers." Some account of him is to be found in Sabine's American Loyalists. See also Bartlett's "Frontier Missionary," pp. 325, 326. Captain Jones also raided the Kennebec country in 1780 and created much consternation, carrying off Colonel Cushing, high sheriff of the county of Lincoln, and others. In the autumn of 1784 Rev. Jacob Bailey wrote to Sir John Wentworth: "I "would beg leave to recommend to your notice Mr. Jones, an honest worthy "Loyalist, who has lost an ample estate for his attachment to his majesty and "the British government. He is endeavoring to obtain a grant of Grand Manan."

Thomas Ross, mariner, of Falmouth, Maine, was proscribed and banished in the year 1778. He settled on Grand Manan, where his descendants yet reside. His name is perpetuated in Ross Island. He died in 1804.

The license of occupation of Grand Manan obtained by Gerrish, Jones and Ross, and their associates, was on the condition they should procure fifty settlers, a school master and a minister within seven years. They were then to receive a grant of the island. They failed to fulfil the conditions and did not secure the entire island. See account of Grand Manan in Collections of the New Brunswick Hist. Soc. pp. 341-365.

*James McMaster was a Boston merchant. Having refused to be bound by the non-importation agreement, he became so unpopular with the majority of his townsmen that he deemed it necessary to remove to Portsmouth, New Hampshire. He was proscribed and banished by act of the New Hampshire legislature in 1778 and his property confiscated. He settled at the close of the war at St. Patrick, in the county of Charlotte, where he resumed business and was highly respected. One of his daughters married the Rev. Samuel Thompson, rector of St. George. James McMaster died in 1804.

uneasiness—for a better or more amiable woman that Mrs. McMaster is seldom to be found. Her family consists of five lovely children, Viz: two Boys, and three Daughters. Conscious of the Justness of those Children's Claim to the Lands asked for, added to my high respect for their widowed mother, and twenty odd years uninterrupted intimacy and friendship with their uncle Mr. McDonald and other relatives & connections in this Country, makes me feel peculiarly interested in the success of their intended application. I must beg leave therefore, (tho' reluctantly, being sensible that I have given you too much trouble already in this way), to have recourse to your goodness—and earnestly entreat your friendly offices in support of the said claim.

Should Mr. Gerrish succeed in his application, my friend Colonel Hatch* (whose interest and prosperity I have much at heart) will, I expect, be essentially benefitted in the result; for I believe it is contemplated, that in the event of Mr. Gerrish's succeeding in getting a Grant of his share of the unlocated part of the Island, the Colonel is to receive a certain proportion of the same. Pardon the trouble of this address, and believe me to be, with sentiments of profound respect & esteem, My dear Sir, Your faithful,

Affectionate and obliged humble servant,

Hugh Mackay.

E. G. Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

September 3, 1807.

My dear Winslow,—To say that the satisfaction you express on the result of your friends exertions gives us great pleasure, would but faintly describe our sensations. * * *

The kind and good Lord Sheffield has pushed the matter of an increase of salary with Lord Castlereagh, & Mr. Cooke and Upham have not been idle on the occasion. The petition has gone from Lord Castlereagh, I suspect with his approbation and probably recommendation, to the Chancellor of the Exchequer with whom it rests for a final determination, and as Upham has had an interview with him on the subject, when he expressed himself rather favorably, I entertain hopes of at least a partial

He ill brooks the delay, but we, who have been schooled in the procrastination of the public offices are not surprised or discouraged by it, tho' I know a gentleman who was not always so patient.

I must not forget to remind you to give a decisive answer about the Cadetship. Let your son's benefit and your comfort decide.

Tho' she is silent, it manifests itself in her actions, nor is it to be wondered at from their strong mutual affection and tedious separation. * * * In order to change the scene and strengthen her by the sea air and bathing, I intend carrying her to Dover, where she will at least fancy heself nearer to the object of her affections. We both wish you could be of the party, but since that cannot be will suppose you are conversing with us when we are perusing your entertaining letters.

* * * My last letters from Tyng† lead me to fear I shall never have another from him. He sustained something like a paralytic attack and his writing corroborated my apprehensions. He was a pleasant agreeable man and a very old friend. I am not ashamed to own I shall feel very sensibly his loss, but it is a tax we must all pay, there is no resisting the grim Taxgatherer.

†Colonel William Tyng died at Gorham, near Portland, Maine, December 10, 1807. St. Paul's church in Portland was erected under his patronage, and he was buried there with Masonic honors. Sabine, in his Loyalists of the American Revolution, pronounces an extremely high eulogy on the character of William Tyng as a man, a gentleman and a Christian. He was employed in the commissariat department during the war, and at the peace was commissary at St. John. In the laying out of Parr Town he received ten lots on "Rocky Hill," north side of Princess street (first called Tyng street), from Prince William to Germain street. He removed to Gagetown in the year 1784. He called his place "Prospect Farm." He was the second sheriff of Queens County. The following letter was printed on Jan. 29, 1784, in the "Royal St. John's Gazette and Nova Scotia Intelligencer":—

Lt. Gov. Edmond Fanning to Judge Edward Winslow.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Aug. 17, 1807.

Lt. Gov. Fanning writes to Judge Winslow by Robert Pagan of St. Andrews, N. B., respecting deserters from the P. E. I. Fencibles, the cause of which is His Royal Highness the Commander in Chief's "code of dress and duties." The deserters had passed through Richibucto, and if not arrested the code referred to "may have a very perambulatory effect upon many more of the corps." He asks for the apprehension of the deserters, if possible, and for the appointment of Jacob Powell* of Richibucto as a magistrate to enable him to arrest deserters in future.

George Leonard to Judge Edward Winslow.

Sunday, 20th September, 1807.

My dear Winslow,—

* * * The late conduct and language of the Chief Justice, with Parker, Robinson, &c, on the prospect of peace with all the world, America included, was outrageously disloyal, being in effect that Great Britain was in such a humiliating situation as to have to submit to any terms offered by Bonaparte, and instantly comply with all demands from America. But these poor insignificants are now humbled and mortified by their folly in publicly declaring their principles before the late intelligence arrived that England was determined to resist anv unreasonable demands either from Bonaparte or the Americans. * * * I can forgive the citizens of St. John for all past indiscretions when they have come forward on the late occasion to so generally disapprove such conversations of the Chief Justice & Co., and shew their readiness to meet the enemy and to contribute all in their power, not only to defend the province but to annoy the sea coasts of the States when called upon, and when the militia of the City apply (not by order of the President) by their Major Judge Edward Winslow to Major Gordon.

Fredericton, N. B. 1st Oct'r, 1807.

My dear Gordon,—An opportunity by private conveyance enables me to tell you that in June last I was at Halifax and there received from Chief Justice Blowers the patent for your land in Nova Scotia, and I have now to offer my grateful acknowledgements to you for this substantial mark of your friendship and goodness. It will afford you satisfaction, my

*John Ward was born at Peekskill, on the Hudson, in 1752. He was gazetted in 1776 an ensign in Col. Beverley Robinson's Loyal American Regiment, and promoted lieutenant Oct. 7, 1777. During the war of the Revolution he was frequently in action. At the evacuation of New York by the British forces in 1783 he commanded a detachment of Loyalist troops, the last to leave that place. The transport ship in which he sailed to St. John was laden with provisions and clothing. Owing to the lateness of their arrival they were obliged to shelter themselves under canvas tents on the Barrack Square at Lower Cove. The tents, although thatched with spruce boughs, were miserably cold, and owing to the exposure and lack of nourishing food many women and children died during the winter. John Ward, jr., son of the Loyalist, was born in a tent on December 18, 1783. The elder John Ward continued to interest himself in military matters and attained the rank of a major in the militia. (See reference to him in Baxter's History of the New Brunswick Regiment of Artillery). In civic affairs his interest was equally manifest. He was an alderman of the city of St. John and was elected to represent the city and county of St. John in the house of assembly in 1809, 1816 and 1819. He was an enterprising merchant. He was also one of the promoters of steam navigation on the St. John river and a leading member of the company that owned the first steamboat, the "General Smyth," which ran between St. John and Fredericton. The same company aftewards built the "St. George," "John Ward," and "Fredericton." For many years Major Ward was regarded as the father of the city, being the last survivor of those who may be classed as its founders. At the semi-centennial commemoration of the landing of the Loyalists, held in 1833, he was assigned a seat at the banquet on the left of the mayor, John M. Wilmot—the lieutenant governor, Sir Archibald Campbell, being on the mayor's right. On the 18th May, 1843, he was presented with an address by the corporation of the city, being then 90 years of age. The Ward family were noted for their longevity. Major John Ward died Nov. 5, 1846, in his 94th year. John Ward, jr., died in 1875 at the age of 92 years, and Charles Ward, his brother, died in 1882, aged 91 years. Major John Ward, mentioned in the letter above, lived at the corner of King and Germain streets. He was at the time of his decease, the senior magistrate of the city and county.

dear Gordon, to find that the favor which you benevolently conferred on me appears to be of more consequence than we originally apprehended. I think it may be valued (without being too sanguine) at £200 or £300 currency. I shall however not be in haste to dispose of it. The son Edward, for whom I intended it, is the bearer of this. He was bred a merchant and is a discreet and valuable young man. The process of commerce, being completely suspended here by the operations of war, and no field opening to satisfy an ambitious boy, I determined to accept a Cadetship for him in India, which has been offered me by a very respectable friend in England. I know nothing of the nature of the service. Possibly my dear Gordon you may give him some hints which may be of very great importance, and your heart will I'm sure incline you to render him any little service in that way.

The warm interest which his Grace of Northmuberland and Lord Sheffield were pleased to take in my concerns was productive of an appointment as a Judge of the Supreme Court here, with a salary of £300 a year, for which I have received the King's mandamus; so that my voiage to England, entered upon under very inauspicious circumstances, terminated fortunately for myself. It besides gave me an opportunity of making honorable provision for my sons. The one in the 10th*, for whom you interested yourself, I hope will conduct well, and I suppose will obtain promotion in his turn. The young one who was appointed to the Nova Scotia Fencibles†, has joined his Reg't at Newfoundland and is highly spoken of. I've now parted with my last, and may God bless you for so liberally and readily assisting me in snatching them from obscurity—I'd almost said perdition.

If your good sister is in the way offer my best regards to her, and remember me kindly to Ardenbrooke. And my dear Gordon once in a while catch a transient moment and tell me where you are and how you are. Could you realize the value I set on these favours, you could not fail to indulge your old and faithful friend, &c, &c,

E. Winslow.

P. S.—My wife and sisters ask to be most kindly remembered.

Judge Edward Winslow to Colonel George Williamson.

My dear Williamson,—I'll not torment you for a moment by any formal parade of acknowledgements for the prompt exertion of your friend-

*The reference is to Lieutenant Thomas Winslow. ship in procuring an Ensigncy for my son Wentworth in the Nova Scotia Fencibles. I shall only tell you that I feel as I ought the full force of the obligations which you have conferred on me. The boy has joined his Reg't and the Commanding officer writes of him in the most flattering terms.

Hailes was with me this morning and gave me much pleasure by saying that he'd a late letter from you and that you were well and happy. The good Major [Hailes] is rather in a funk at present; among the profusion of honors which have been heaped upon him in this Country he's Adjutant General of the Militia. And there's some reason to apprehend that the Americans may be inclined to walk over the ideal line which divides us and interrupt our present tranquility. Such an event would produce scenes of great activity and the Major anticipates 'em with his usual zeal and energy. Unluckily for the Country some of our present rulers do not discover the same disposition.

Judge Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Fredericton, Tuesday, 6th Oct., 1807.

My dear Boy,—It was my intention to have put into your possession my correspondence with his honor, which at some leisure moment you may show to Col. Lutwyche. There is in Col. Lutwyche's family (I suppose) a servant by the name of Sally, (Mrs. Weltden's woman) to whom I am under many obligations. I desire that you will tell her from me how gratefully I remember her attentions. Col. Lutwyche will probably introduce you to my venerable friends at Pudsey-Hall in the Square at Kensington. You will present my best regards to 'em all, but particularly to Miss Wood, whose tender and affectionate good offices will never be forgotten by me. If Mr. Wintour remains in the house tell him that I gratefully recollect the many instances of his kindness which I experienced while in England. Possibly you may see my old servants—Moulton & Susan—their fidelity & goodness entitles them to my best acknowledgements. When you are going by No. 240 Oxford Street, step in and tell old Novella & his wife that I yet feel myself much obliged by their kindness when I was a Lodger with them—and there's a Stationer at the corner below by the name of Jackson, from whom I received much attention, & I wish you would give my love to him & his wife.

I leave it to my friends at Phillimore Place* to determine on the propriety of introducing you to Sir Wm. Pepperel, Gov'r Franklyn, Mr. Coffin, &c. Should they decide in favour of the measure, you will only have to present my best compliments to 'em all. Tell Mr. Coffin that I have too great a regard for him to torment him with one of my lengthy epistles & I can't write a short one. Next door to Col. Lutwyche lives a family to whom I am and ever shall be indebted for the most friendly treatment in sickness & health. Mrs. Weltden will give you an opportunity of seeing Mr. & Mrs. Hailes—& you must remember me to them in the most affectionate manner—& also to their son Mr. Jo. Hailes, for whom I've a great regard. This Memorandum I meant to give you before your departure but I was not equal to it & my hand is now very lame.

I've say'd all that's necessary about Halifax. James Frazer of Fredericton is on his way to that place; he will take charge of your mother's 6 1-2 yds. yellow glaz'd cotton, which must not be omitted. I wish you would consult my friend Lawson about a barrel of fall Mackarel & a Quintal of genuine Codfish & if he can procure 'em for me and will send 'em round, directed to Mr. Chipman's care at St. John, I'll pay the amount with many thanks. Tell Lawson that they are for my own eating & that I long (as the ladies say) for a Mackarel* this moment.

Circumstances occur every moment which I wish to communicate but it's too late. This is written at Aunt Sally's table with cramp'd fingers & no fire. Mary† has a famous daughter & is wonderfully well. Your mother, sisters & circle of friends repeat their good wishes.

3 o'clock.

The post arriv'd and no letter from you. I suppose we shall get one by some other conveyance and I rec'd one from Mr. Chipman which gives us much comfort.

Once more Goodbye to you my dear Boy—nothing but the consideration that your future happiness & prosperity depends on your present step could ever reconcile me to it. My loss is a severe one.

Kingsclear remains in its old station—the managers of my farm are as active & sprightly as ever, & we are getting in our small crop with great deliberation.

Pray don't omit informing me of every event which takes place which concerns yourself.

Most affectionately

Yours,

Ed. Winslow.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow Jr.

Fredericton, 12 O'clock, Tuesday, Oct'r, 1807.

My dear Edward,—Your mother & I came down this morning, & we find Pine* just getting under weigh. I'm therefore prevented from writing to Miss Sproule & Went; as I intended. Nor have I a chance of writing a few lines to Mr. Leonard, which I very much wish'd.

The Moose-wood shrubs, your Flute, &c, are committed to the care of Pine, & I hope will come safe to you. I'm impatient to hear of all your arrangements—and shall look with extreme anxiety for the next arrival from St. John.

When you get to Halifax you will call at Mrs. Brown's & should it be necessary to take your quarters on shore she'll give you a bed. Give my love to her & Miss Hutchins & to the gentlemen of her household, particularly to Mr. Henry.

The family are as composed as can be under a separation so truly afflicting—for my own part I derive every consolation from the consideration that 'tis for your own advantage. Other matters may occur to me when I'm a little rested and refreshed.

You will probably hear from us at Halifax. Write us from every halting-place you make. My future comfort will depend on hearing of your health and prosperity. Keep up your own spirits in all situations. By every conveyance you shall hear from

Your affectionate Father

Ed. Winslow.

The inclosed was put into my hand by your Mama.

Chief Justice Blowers to Judge Edward Winslow.

Halifax, November 16th, 1807.

Dear Sir,—Your letter, which was intended to be delivered me by your son Edward, I received by the way of Windsor after we had heard the Duke of Kent mast ship had passsed by without touching at Halifax. I hope she will have a good passage, and that Mr. Edward will meet with all the success in his enterprize that he can wish for himself, or his friends for him.

By the last packet I received an affectionate letter from our friend, covering a Deed of conveyance to you of the Lands in the County of Sydney, executed in due form and acknowledged before a magistrate in Dublin, where Col. Gordon then was. He begs to assure you of his continued regard and that he hopes the Lands will prove of sufficient value to be worth your acceptance. He says his situation in Ireland is very respectable, but its duration very uncertain. That he shall not regret its termination as he should be sorry to spend his days in that Country. He speaks of the Irish as by no means well affected to the Government, but too much disposed to join the French standard whenever it can be erected there.

*Alpheus Pine of New York came to New Brunswick with the Loyalists, For several years he sailed a vessel on the River St. John. The story of his altercation with Benedict Arnold is told in Sabine's Loyalists. He died at St. John in 1846, aged 84 years.

You will see by the papers, that your old friend Sir Brook Watson is dead. His departure will not I hope subject your sisters or your Boys to any inconvenience, though I doubt if Mr. Turner's* friendship will ever be so active or so obliging as Sir Brook's has been. Mr. Butler, who came out in the packet, says he has not died rich, being supposed to have left only £40,000 or £50,000, a trifle among your nabobs and contractors. I wish Mr. Edward may in a few months return from India like another Barwell able to purchase a county.

By a Sloop of war which arrived yesterday we have accounts from England a day or two later than the packet brought us. Vice Admiral Berkley is recalled, and is to be succeeded by Sir John B. Warren. This is considered by the politicians as a proof that we are not to go to war with the United States. I wish this may be the case as I think we have enemies enough without adding them to the number. Besides it is much more pleasant to discusss the merits and demerits of Battles fought in Poland, Turkey and South America, than it could possibly be if the scene of action was in Halifax, New Brunswick or Penobscot River.

I am sorry to hear that Penelope writes that you have been lately much afflicted with the Gout. I hope you will have been able to put that troublesome enemy to flight, and that you are on your legs again. We are all well and unite in good wishes for you and yours.

I shall keep the Deed from Col. Gordon until I receive your directions respecting it. It should be registered in the County of Sydney, but that may be done probably without hurry, as there is no danger of any subsequent conveyance being made, or of the interference of the Creditors.

I am always, Very sincerely yours,

S. S. Blowers.

Lieutenant William Turner* to Judge Edward Winslow.

Presque Isle, 2d January, 1808.

Sir,—Permit me after stating some circumstances relative to my half-pay to ask your advice as to the propriety or impropriety of drawing it. Upon enquiry I find that all those under similar circumstances in this Province and Nova Scotia receive it, and I continued to do the same until the appointment of the Commissioners—that is until December 1806; the magistrates knowing my remote stationary situation, having had the goodness to acknowledge my certificates without my attesting to them. The appointment of Commissioners rendered it necessary that I should qualify, but I objected supposing, as I still do, that such an oath cannot safely be taken.

Tho' my appointment is very handsome, having had at my coming here considerable debts to discharge; some eligible purchases that I have since made, with improvements on the land I received from Government, the purchase of stock, &c., has left me still in a large arrears to Mr. James Bell, and tho' I have no cause to complain of his patience, he no doubt wants his money and thinks I ought to draw my half pay—this I should be very happy to do could the objections before mentioned be got over.

* * * * * *

If you please to honor me with your opinion on this Business by leaving a letter at James Frazer's (from which it will reach me at an early period) the favour will be most gratefully acknowledged by, Sir,

Your most obedient, & most humble Serv't,

W. Turner.

Colonel Williamson to Judge Edward Winslow.

Royal Military Asylum, Jan'y 11, 1808.

Dear Winslow,—I hope this will find you well. I hope the report is true that your salary as Judge is to be made up to £500 per annum.

*William Turner of New Jersey was gazetted a lieutenant in the West Jersey Volunteers in March, 1778. His company was in October following incorporated in the New Jersey Volunteers. The muster rolls of this corps show that in February, 1781, he was a "prisoner in the hands of the rebels." He was a gallant old soldier, and came to New Brunswick at the peace in 1783 with his regiment. In 1793 he was commissioned a lieutenant in the newly raised King's New Brunswick Regiment. He was in 1804 in command of the post at Presque Isle, and after the corps had been disbanded he still remained in charge of the post as commissary. Rev. Frederick Dibblee, the first clergyman on the Upper St. John, mentions William Turner in his diary, which he kept for many years with scrupulous care: his parish register records the baptism on Oct. 29, 1804, of Mr. Turner and others of his family. On June 20, 1809, a grant of a tract of 29,965 acres in the vicinity of the military post was made to Capt. William Turner and 87 others of the parish of Wakefield. Capt. Turner's estate, including two islands in the St. John river, comprised 1,000 acres. While he lived he was the principal man of the settlement, magistrate, school trustee, etc., and a man universally respected. His death is thus referred to in Rev. F. Dibblee's diary: "Jan. 17, 1817, went to Presque Isle to bury Mr. Turner at the garrison. Capt. Ketchum and Mr. Bedell went with me."

Gen'l Fox is arrived and well; Mrs. Fox I fear very unwell. I think the line your son Edward has taken—Purser to an India-man, is better than a Cadetship. Captain Hazen has joined his Regiment in Jersey.

Politicks you will know from the Papers. The 10th are gone to Sicily.

Every sincerely yours, Geo. Wiliamson.

Address to Judge Winslow of York County Court of Common Pleas.

Fredericton, 12th January, 1808.

Sir,—The Court of Common Pleas and of General Sessions in concurrence with the Grand Jury of the County join me in acknowledging the receipt of your favor of the 5th Instant.

They thank you for the official communication therein contained, and are highly pleased with the appointment his Majesty has thought proper to confer on you. It justifies Sir the public opinion of those talents which have long distinguished you in this County as our presiding Magistrate. The relinquishment of your seat amongst us and the affectionate leave you have taken of the members of these Courts most sensibly affect them, and they beg leave to reciprocate your own sensations so kindly expressed on this occasion. Your example and precepts Sir, have formed the manners of the County Courts and will never cease to influence the members of them while Loyalty is a virtue in the British subject and Independence of spirit a requisite in the judicial character.

The Court request Sir you will be pleased to continue your kind advice or patronage whenever you may think either of advantage to them.

I am Sir, with sentiments of sincere attachment and regard and of great respect,

Your most obedient & very humble Servant,

S. Agnew.

Mrs. E. W. Miller to Edward Winslow Jr.

Fredericton, January 17th, 1808.

Down I sit with a determination to steal an hour to write my dear bother Edward, trusting to heaven that he is safe landed in England and in health and spirits. As I don't expect to have it in my power to say half I would wish I shall begin with assuring you that my spouse and children are all hearty. My "brats" often talk of "poor Uncle Ned," as they style you. "Bets"* says you're "a naughty Boy" for leaving her—she's as good natured and funny as ever.

*See the reference to this child in the letters of Penelope Winslow of Oct. 30, 1809, and of Judge Winslow of Feb. 6, 1810.

We moved to our house the first of the month and are as comfortable as possible. I am delighted with every part of it as far as convenience and comfort goes. We have only a Parlor, Bedroom, Kitchen and Pantry finished. However we make out very well, & being so handy to the Store makes it of convenience to Miller. He has only young Misery (as Eliza calls him) to assist or depend upon—a slender dependence you know. Charles Lee wrote for him a month, and I sincerely wish it was possible to have detained him longer, but he poor fellow is now cutting rails for his father. He used to fetch many a groan while with us at his forlorn situation and swear at himself for not having resolution to better himself in some way. I pity him exceedingly; he really is a clever lad. * * *

Mama has been attacked most severely, tho' not so long ill as when you were at home, but the same complaint in her head, and deprived of her reason for near a week. She frequently called for her son Ned. I spent last Sunday at home and she was as rational as ever and looked much better than I expected. * * *

I have nothing new to communicate. They're making a sort of stir with the Militia. You remember you attempted to frighten me last summer about Mr. Miller's attacking the enemy. I begin to be uneasy in earnest. You know it does not take much to alarm me where he's concerned. He is now taking his usual nod in the corner & doesnt look ready to face the enemy. * * *

It's growing towards twelve at night and I must close. Nothing but the consciousness that I am acting a sisterly part would have induced me to write a letter, for I am really so entirely done making & writing them, and you may remember I am wonderfully busy with my family concerns. I have a Daughter three months old and she monopolizes a great deal of my time at present. I have not, my dear Ned, been to the store or to Church or made a visit of any kind since you left us. I never want to see the inside of the store again, I shall miss my poor Brother so dreadfully, * * * I wish it might please God to place you in a comfortable situation in England. I can't reconcile it to myself your going to the East Indies, it seems like burying alive. Do let us hear from you as often as possible. Nothing gives your friends and affectionate sister more pleasure.

Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

Sunday, 14 Feb'y, 1808.

My dear Winslow,—Before this reaches you, you will have heard of the death of the President [Col. Gabriel G. Ludlow] who expired very suddenly on Friday morning. You will of course succeed to the administration of the Government. * * * The Vesta has arrived this morning from St. Andrews with very important intelligence; among other things that Russia has declared war against England. Major McClaskey and Col. Wetmore have this moment called upon me with this intelligence and suggested it as their opinion that an express ought to be immediately sent to you with an account of it. * * * I know not whether the instructions require that you should be sworn in in full Council, but if so (in the present peculiar situation of our public affairs resulting from this recent intelligence) I beg leave to submit for your consideration whether it will not be advisable that you with the Secretary, if no other members from Fredericton can attend you, repair to this place to be sworn in and to adopt such measures as the exigency of the moment and more matured intelligence may require.

The state of the Militia already embodied, requires some immediate measures to be adopted for paying them. I understand that the President was to have signed bills for this purpose the day on which he died. * * I will not add to this letter, as I expect it to be immediately called for, but by saying that we shall have a bed as usual at your service, which we shall depend upon your occupying without ceremony.

&c., &c., W. Chipman.

Edward Winslow's Appointment as Administrator of Government of New Brunswick.

Fredericton, New Brunswick,
In Council, 20th February, 1808.

In consequence of the death of the Hon'ble Gabriel G. Ludlow, which happened on the 12th Instant, the administration of the Government having devolved upon Mr. Winslow, the next eldest Councillor present in the Province, he this day took the requisite Oaths and assumed the Administration as President.

Extract for the Minutes.

Jon'n Odell,
Clerk of the Council.

Honorable John Saunders to President Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, February 26th, 1808.

Sir,—In obedience to the direction of his Honor the late President to organize the first draft of the Militia in this part of the Province, which he was pleased to put under my Command, I drew up the inclosed establishment for the Battalion which met his approbation, and which I now have the honor to submit for your consideration. A part of this draft, vou will be pleased to observe, has not been called out into actual service owing to the impossibility of procuring quarters, barrack bedding, &c., but this is the less to be regretted as it has been the cause of saving a considerable expence to Government and is I apprehend of no very material injury to his Majesty's service, as these officers and men stand ready to join at the shortest notice should war actually take place, when by a proper distribution of them with those who are disciplined, the Battalion may be so modelled as immediately to be made fit to take the field.

As it is necessary the Battalion should have a name, and as from the youth, vigor, and local knowledge of both officers and men they would doubtless in case of war be employed as light troops, that of "Volunteer Militia Rangers," appears to me to be the most appropriate.

I have the honor to be with great respect, Sir,

Your very faithful & obedient humble servant,

John Saunders, Col.,
Com'g. Vol. M. Rangers.

His Honor Mr. President Winslow.

Ward Chipman to President Edward Winslow.

St. John, 2d. March, 1808.

My dear Winslow,—I wrote to you by the last post and again by the express on Sunday evening. Yesterday the Vesta arrived from St. Andrews but without any letters or papers of consequence. The master of her saw Col. Wyer, who had just been at Moose Island, and there saw a Boston newspaper which contained among other things an account of the death of our most gracious King*.

No money can be raised here for the payment of the Militia and some measure should be immediately taken to procure money from Halifax. It might be well for Co. Johnston to let Gen'l Hunter know our situation that by the Joint aid of all the Powers money may in some way be sent to us from that quarter.

* * * Will it not be worthy of serious consideration whether the whole of the Militia should not on the 24th of this month be disbanded as contemplated by the late President ? I confess that I am much inclined to this opinion for many reasons. If we are to have war with the States, I think many months must elapse first, during which time the country would suffer much inconvenience and distress without any adequate advantage, by having the Militia embodied, and if money cannot be procured to pay them, they will certainly separate of their own accord, which would be very mortifying and disgraceful. If I rightly recollect Lord

*This report proved incorrect.

Castlereagh's letter does not contemplate the services of the Militia longer than the Spring, when Troops can be sent out from England, and there is certainly no danger of war or invasion at present. * * *

I have received Hailes letter by the Post and am glad to find you mean to come down with Jones this trip. I entreat you not to fail; I do indeed think it very necessary. As I write so much from the impulse of the moment I think you had not better let any one see this letter, tho' I think it would be well for you to apprize Judge Saunders that if the report is true that the French ambassador has demanded his pass-ports, you shall dismiss the Militia. Pardon this impertinence — you know my heart and my motives. [This letter is unsigned.]

Major General Hunter to President Edward Winslow.

Halifax, March 6th, 1808.

Sir,—By the last Post I had the honor to receive your letter of the 16th ult'o. I beg leave to congratulate you on your having succeeded to the administration of the Government of the Province of New Brunswick. In the present initial state of affairs with the States of America it affords me great satisfaction to know that a person of your abilities and zeal for the Public good is at the head of affairs. I feel flattered by your assurance of being always ready to co-operate with me in any measures for the good of His Majesty's service.

I have the honor to be Sir, &c., &c.,

M. Hunter.

President Edward Winslow to Lieut. Governor Carleton.

Fredericton, 8th March, 1808.

Sir,—Called unexpectedly by the death of Col. Ludlow to take charge for the present of the administration of this Government, I consider myself as your Excellency's locum tenens for the time, and though I understand that [you consider the appointment of Sir James Craig as*] circumstances have occurred which effectually preclude your return to this country, I presume that Ministers will have some consideration and memory of your services during so many years in this Province, and that they will not be in haste to appoint your successor. If so, I must expect shortly to resign the administration into the hands of Judge Upham†, whose

*Judge Winslow has put his pen through the words contained within the square brackets, substituting the words that follow. Sir James Henry Craig. K. B., was appointed governor general of all the British provinces in North America in 1807. The period of his regime, which lasted four years, was known in Quebec as "the reign of terror."

†Judge Upham, as senior member of the council, was entitled to act as president and commander in chief, but being at the time in England, Edward Winslow was called to the position.

return I am told may be expected by the first opportunity. But whatever may be the term of my present situation, I should deem it proper to abstain from any step respecting the patronage of office that could have a chance of being disagreeable to the future Governor; and most assuredly then I shall feel the force of this sentiment so long as it can have a reference to your Excellency. Under these impressions I have written the letter of which a copy is inclosed, and in which I have mentioned Mr. Sproule—not as from myself, but as one whom you had intended to recommend. And for such other nominations as now are or hereafter may be called for, I have requested the Minister to look to yourself on the Spot. You will perceive that I apprehend another Vacancy in the Council soon to happen. This is on account of a recent paralytic stroke, which threatens the life of the Chief Justice, and which happened on Sunday the 6th Instant.

The duty which I have undertaken becomes arduous and responsible by the peculiar state in which my immediate predecessor has left the Militia of the Province — but surrounded as I am by men of great respectability and sound judgment, influenced also by the general principles which governed your administration, I do not fear the commission of any material errors. Permit me to offer my best regards to Mrs. Carleton and the young ladies. The remembrance of their kindness will never be obliterated from the mind of myself and family—and to Capt. & Mrs. Foy, when you meet them, give my kind regards, & allow me to avail myself of this occasion to repeat—

[The rest of this letter is missing; the original is only a rough draft.]

Ward Chipman to President Edward Winslow.

St. John, 9 March, 1808.

My dear Winslow,—* * * I think that you have concluded upon the most (and perhaps only) correct grounds upon which the Militia can be disembodied, viz., the approbation of Gen'l Hunter, at whose instance they were originally called out, and I have no doubt that his approbation will be received, under the existing circumstances. * * *

We are much disappointed in not seeing you here, as people in general will be; but as W. Hazen* is going to Halifax—the only effectual measure for obtaining money—the necessity of your being here is in some measure removed until his return, and as soon after that as the river shall be open, I do really think you should be here.

*William Hazen, jr., was in 1793 appointed paymaster of the King's New Brunswick Regiment. Afterwards he was paymaster of all the forces in the province. In 1813 he was sheriff of the county of St. John, holding the office until his death on February 14, 1816.

By the January Packet there are accounts from R. Hazen that Upham is again worse, and his surgeon has declared that unless the immense discharge from his head, with which he is afflicted and upon which an operation has been performed, can be resisted and a speedy and favourable alteration takes place, he cannot recover—my own persuasion is that he cannot recover. This added to the alarming intelligence respecting the Chief Justice, has excited reflections in my mind similar I have no doubt to what have arisen in your own upon this occasion; but this is a subject upon which I cannot enlarge in this way. I would give much to see you. I cannot dissemble that in case of a vacancy and an increase of the salary, of which latter I think there can be now no doubt, I should be greatly disappointed in not putting an end to 34 years toiling at the Bar by enjoying during the remainder of my life the moderate independence which a seat upon the Bench would afford. How mortifying to us all must it be if the Creeper Cock*, the insignificant "Creon," should by any unexpected interest, in case of Judge Upham's death, obtain his seat upon the Bench; and yet there are those men who anticipate this event. * * *

Adieu for this time,

Yours very sincerely, W. C.

P. S. I am persuaded from R. Hazen's letter and from all other circumstances that you are a long time to remain in your present situation, and this is the opinion of many others here.

Ward Chipman to Jonathan Odell.

St. John, 9 Mar, 1808.

Dear Sir,—In a letter by the January mail Robert Hazen writes as follows:

"After I saw the Act of Parliament" (referring to the Act past last

*The "Creeper Cock" was Samuel Denny Street, who was in stature short and of rather pompous manners. He was a gentleman of the olden time, and wore a queue, knee breeches and gaiters. He was an able man and a clever lawyer, and in 1807 went to England at the request of the St. John common council to argue their case in the fishery dispute as opposed to the claims of Hazen, Simonds and White. Mr. Street's efforts were crowned with success, and the act lately passed by the New Brunswick legislature giving control of the fishery between high and low water mark to the owners of the adjacent shore was disallowed by the king in council. In the year 1802 there was an acrimonious debate in the house of assembly over the appointment of a successor to the late Isaac Hedden as clerk of the house. The assembly by a majority of one appointed Samuel Denny Street to the vacancy, he having been acting temporarily in that capacity during Hedden's illness. Mr. Street was at the time a member of the house. The lieutenant governor and council claimed the right of appointment as one of the prerogatives of the crown and named Dugald Campbell as Hedden's successor; their appointment was ultimately accepted by the house of assembly. Out of the controversy much feeling arose and some warm political letters appeared in the newspapers. Ward Chipman was averse to the appointment of Mr. Street. The latter wrote some letters under the nom de plume "Creon" to the St. John City Gazette.

August authorizing the American vessels to come to these Provinces for Gypsum) "I went out to Great Ealing, about 8 miles from Town, to see "Mr. Knox the Provincial Agent, I really was astonished to find that so "feeble, so infirm an old man should be at all desirous to hold an appoint- "ment which he is so incapable of filling with any advantage to the "Province.

"He was so very ignorant of the affairs of the province that he ap- "peared to have never received certain pieces of information, or if he had "that he had totally forgot them.

"I asked him particularly about the bill granting the right of fishery "to the proprietors of the soil in New Brunswick, and the petition from "the City [St. John] he positively insisted that the bill had never been "received in England and that no petition had ever arrived. Mr. Venner "told me for a certainty that he knew the bill had been received at the "proper office, and I know that Street is in London with the petition*. "Mr. Knox knew nothing about what has been done about the address "from the two branches of the Legislature on the subject of the Passa- "maquoddy Islands; indeed poor man he is too infirm to attend to any "business and some active man should be appointed."

From this account of our Agent I fear we can place but little de- pendence upon his exertions respecting our fishery law, and I wish the Northumberland Petition may be forwarded with a proper letter as soon as possible, or I fear all our labour may be in vain. Another agent must certainly be appointed next session†. I am glad to find that there was no foundation for the report of the King's death.

Ward Chipman.

Ward Chipman to President Edward Winslow.

Thursday Morning, 10 March, 1808.

My dear Winslow,—Upon looking over the dispatches to Gen'l Hunter, which W. Hazen has permitted me to do, my only objection to them is that by them it might appear to be a matter of perfect indifference to the

*In response to a memorial signed by a large number of citizens the St. John common council voted £100 for the expense of sending Samuel Denny Street to England with a petition against the act of the New Brunswick legis- lature granting the right of fishery along the Portland shore to Messrs. Hazen, Simonds and White and their tenants.

†The House of Assembly on July 29, 1808, passed a vote of thanks to William and Thomas Knox for their services as joint agents of the Province; also the resolu- tion following:—"Whereas it is thought to be necessary to the interests of the Province that the Provincial Agent in Great Britain should reside in or near London for the purpose of more ready and speedy access to the public officials in attending to the business appertaining to such agency; Resolved that Edward Goldstone Lutwyche be appointed the Agent of this Province in Great Britain." The Council concurred in the appointment.

embodied Militia themselves whether they should be retained or dismissed, whereas so far as respects the militia here, after the general order of the late president respecting their dismission, my opinion is that if an attempt should be made to hold them for a month longer time they would disembody themselves and take all consequences. Be assured the detachment here will not be satisfied to continue embodied after the fishery and planting season come on, or are near approaching, and I doubt whether they will many days after the expiration of the time limited in the late President's order, for they consider the faith of Government pledged to them for their dismission at that time, and even a small extension of it would be submitted to only from the expectation of receiving their pay within such short period. * * * Whatever may be the necessity at Halifax of keeping the militia together there for local purposes, such as working, &c, there is no such case here, and in a conversation with Capt. Simpson two days ago he expressed his opinion without reserve that he thought the militia might be discharged for two or three months; and this is the universal opinion here. * * *

The disgrace, the dishonor to the Province would be indelible, should the militia determine for themselves upon this occasion; and yet their present sentiments here, aided by representations I fear from many among us, who would not be displeased at such an event, lead me to have serious apprehensions.

* * * You see I cannot have done upon this subject. I think a letter to General Hunter should follow Hazen with as little delay as possible with some information to the foregoing effect. * * *

George Heriot to President Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 11th March, 1808.

My dear Sir,— On the 9th instant I was favored with your friendly letter of the 16th ultimo, acquainting me with the death of Col. Ludlow and of the change that had taken place in consequence of that event. I heartily congratulate you on your succession to the Honorable and distinguished situation of President of the provincial government.

The militia of this province has not yet been either embodied or paid, as such a measure was considered unnecessary, there appearing no sufficient cause to justify the expence which would have been thereby incurred. Should it be thought expedient not to continue any longer embodied for the present, that part of your militia which has been kept on pay during the winter, the approach of Spring, when it is essential to pursue the labours of Agriculture, and the favorable reports concerning the state of the negotiations between the British and American Governments, seem to present a very plausible reason for disembodying it; at the same time it will no doubt be understood that the militia, in case of any emergency, will be ready to re-assemble on the shortest notice.

I am fully persuaded that there are very few who are so capable as you are of discharging the duties of the arduous situation which has devolved on you, and as there does not appear to be much of party or opposition in your province, I hope you will have no cause of anxiety.

I very often reflect with pleasure on the agreeable days I passed in New Brunswick, and on the beautiful and picturesque scenery exhibited by the banks of the St. John, which I think is the most romantic river I ever viewed, and of whose bold and varied landscapes I have a great number of sketches*.

I hope the negotiations with America will terminate amicably, and that these provinces will continue to enjoy the blessings and advantages of tranquility.

With every good wish and with sentiments of esteem, I am, my dear Sir,

Most faithfully yours,

Geo. Heriot.

Charles J. Peters to Edward Winslow.

St. John, 17th March, 1808.

My Dear Sir,—I am certain you cannot doubt the assertion, when I declare there is no one of your friends who can feel himself more rejoiced than myself at the happy turn in the wheel of fortune which has placed you at the head of the Administration of the Province.

I am rejoiced in proportion as I personally felt indignation at the unmerited, unrelenting and unjust persecution you suffered but a short time since. That scene is no doubt in your mind forgotten and forgiven, but the impression on mine is indelible. It formed an era in my life ever to be remembered, as I have reason to fear the extremity of proceedings was in a great measure owing to my inexperience and inability to conduct a cause of such magnitude and novelty. Pardon me for recurring to what is passed, and being gone should be forgotten, but the Idea is so immediately superinduced by what is present that I could not forego the observation.

I have heretofore postponed throwing in my small portion of congratulation by letter in the hope and confident expectation of seeing you in Saint John, as I was given to understand by Mr. Chipman, when he returned from Fredericton, you intend to reside with us during the breaking up of the River.

Allow me to conclude this scrawl with a wish for your own sake — and for the sake of the Province, that you may long retain the Presidential chair.

Your greatly obliged Friend,

Charles J. Peters.

George Leonard to President Edward Winslow.

Sunday, 27th March, 1808.

My dear Friend,—You and I have been too long in the habit of friendship, and I may add brotherly affection, to make profession necessary. * * * The Government at home will now be satisfied with your charge of this Province, and will not trouble themselves in sending any one out in the stead of Gen'l Carleton, whom they will suffer to remain as long as he pleases. Poor Upham will never see this Country again, the last accounts were too forlorn for his friends even to hope. * * *

[In the passage here omitted, Mr. Leonard offers to resume Command of the Kings County Militia, but does not know where to find another man to act with him, and he deplores the lack of prominent public men in Kings County. He continues as follows :]

Such is the want of common understanding in official matters in that County it was thought proper to nominate Mr. Arnold* as a magistrate, in a full Council while you was in England, and fully approved of. When Coffin is absent from the Court of Sessions there is no one now capable of opening the Court. He thinks with me that Arnold is the most proper man to be placed on the Bench with him and desired me to write to you on the subject and also joins with Arnold in Henry's† being a magistrate, as Mr. Regan in that part of the Country declines doing any duty. These are appointments which cannot cause envy but thanks from the public.

The mail has this moment arrived from Halifax. My son writes that Hazen will obtain what money he may require, and that the Hunter‡ will bring it round, by this time he is on his way with it. I hope the Militia will be persuaded to stay and receive their pay, their impatience to return is inconceivable at the time they say was promised them. * * *

I am with great faithfulness,

Yours truly,

Geo. Leonard.

*The Rev. Oliver Arnold of Sussex.

†His son, Henry Leonard.

‡The Hunter was an armed schooner in the service of the superintendent of trade and fisheries. Besides cruising on the coast she carried government despatches to Bermuda in January of this year, brought thence the December mail from England, and after bringing the money to pay the embodied militia of New Brunswick was sent to the coasts to prevent illicit trade. George Leonard's salary as superintendent of trade and fisheries was £200 per annum.

Ward Chipman to President Edward Winslow.

St. John, 30 March, 1808.

My dear Winslow,—Hazen has lately written me from Halifax "That from the General's conversation he concluded that the Gen'l had advised you to comply with the late President's promise and not to make any distinction between the terms of the St. John Militia and those at Fredericton." Also "That Sir John W. has received a letter from Lord Castlereagh approving fully of the measures which he has adopted respecting the N. S. Militia and assuring him that directions had been sent down to the Treasury to pay the draft which he might find it necessary to make."

I immediately furnished Col. Wetmore with the above extracts, in the hope that by his communicating them the Militia would be made contented to wait quietly for the orders for their dismissal from you, but it was all without effect — several of them went off the next day, and a party to bring them back was immediately dispatched but I understand has since returned with only two of them. The rest of the Militia remained quiet till yesterday morning, when they went off in bodies to the number of 40 in all, and the residue remain only for time for an express to be dispatched from Fredericton, which they suppose will be immediately sent off, as soon as you receive the dispatches from Halifax for their dismissal. Should they be disappointed in this they also will I am told follow the example of the others. I believe they would all have been prevailed upon to remain till the arrival of the orders they are now in expectation of for their dismissal, had it not been for the orders received last week for their being drilled by the non-commissioned officers of the regiment here. Had such an order been issued in the first instance, and had there been convenient rooms to drill them in, as at Fredericton, it would I have no doubt have been cheerfully submitted to, but at the moment almost when they expected to be dismissed, to be subjected to this drill upon the open parade at a season, tho' not very inclement, yet not altogether adapted for such exercise, occasioned in their minds very alarming suspicions that it was not only intended not to dismiss, but that it was preparatory to an attempt to make soldiers of them With men whose fears and anxieties are so much alive, and kept alive by the mischievous insinuations of others here, it would have been in vain to attempt to reason, though I believe it was attempted.

Those of the Militia that remain are I believe considered of so little effect that Major McCarthy has relieved from the regiment the guards they have been accustomed to mount. The pay roll of the Militia was rendered a very feeble tie, as the most, if not all of them, had received the amount of it by credits obtained for them by their officers at the stores in town. This circumstances will render it a very serious question whether their pay shall be forfeited by their abandonment of their posts in the manner they have done. Indeed that part of the order of the last week which held up a forfeiture of their pay as a consequence of their quitting their duty before they should be regularly dismissed, was, I understand, from prudential considerations not communicated to them, as being more calculated to irritate them than to reconcile them to a compliance with it. There has been a fatality attending this business from the beginning, for which you are by no means responsible, and yet it has brought you into difficulties of a very serious and perplexing nature.

I had determined not to pester you with anything more upon the subject, for it has I do assure you been with extreme reluctance that I have already given you so much trouble on this occasion, but I felt that I should be wanting in my affection for you and the interest I must and shall ever take in everything that respects your administration, if I had said less. I most certainly would not have written this letter had I not learned from Major McCarthy yesterday, a circumstance altogether unknown here, that General Hunter has recommended a new draught of the Militia to take place immediately. If by this is meant anything more than a draught of a farther number to hold themselves in readiness to march when danger shall require it, or after the planting season shall be over, I hesitate not to say that it will be utterly impracticable to carry it into effect in this part of of the Province. I have no doubt that they will submit to all the consequences of the law sooner than obey such an order: they will submit to be committed to Gaol if you can find Gaols that will hold them.

The speech of Sir James Craig has had a very unfortunate tendency in this respect; they will not believe that there can be greater occasion for calling out the Militia here than there is in Canada, and unfortunately the late President declared that he had been over-persuaded to call out the Militia at the time he did. They therefore have all along considered the measure as merely calculated to give pay to a few officers who were importunate.

The words of our Act are, "In case of any invasion or sudden attack made or threatened to be made by the Enemy." * * *

The popular opinion is that the case has never yet existed and does not now exist, which authorizes the calling out of the Militia under the Act. But setting this question aside, let us for a moment consider the expediency of the measure. In England express provision is made in the Militia Acts, so far as I have been informed, for I have not seen them, that the men shall be dismissed to their homes in seed time and in harvest. Now in this Province such is the dearth of labour that agriculture is with great difficulty carried on, even with all the labour, that can be commanded in the Country, and the consequence of any considerable proportion, even one quarter of the population being called off, must occasion proportional distress in a country which depends upon itself for bread, and with a command of all the labour can with difficulty supply it. Consider the case in this City, three-quarters of the Inhabitants depend upon the fisheries during the three ensuing months for their subsistence for the year. Under these circumstances, and under the impressions they have respecting the law, I have no doubt that in the Country they will pay their fines or go to Gaol, in case of being drafted for immediate service, and twice the amount of the fines would not hire a substitute at this season. But notwithstanding all this were there * * [Remainder missing.]

Alexander Taylor to President Edward Winslow.

Burnside, Miramichi, Ap'l, 1808.

Hon'ble Sir,—Since writing the other papers herewith sent (the bearer being obliged to return after proceeding two days on his journey, the ice breaking up) a thought hath forcibly struck me, viz., to visit Great Britain, and my reason is I am but like a stranger here, and there I am not so.

My ancestors for seven centurys back were of consanguinity to His Grace the Duke of Gordon (North Britain) and his ancestors, and held of them and him a very handsome fen of land close by their castle. This small estate descended lineally from five Major Gordons down to my mother Helen Gordon and from her to me: but when I came of age and found my parents much troubled in mind how to bring up such an extensive family, I consented to let the land be sold and a will to be made agreeable to their wish. They made a very generous allowance to me, but I was very unfortunate, for in the course of seven years thereafter I scarce could command one shilling. I was advised to apply to his Grace aforesaid, but my heart was too great, and hearing such vogue and encouragement about this place, I went privately to the Minister who Baptised me and got a certificate of my behaviour and character, and set out for here with a wife and six children. Now Sir what makes me think that I would find friends there is this. In the first place this noble family all along did honor to all my ancestors, and when I came to this country, the present Duke and his son, the Marquis of Huntley, did aliment my mother after my father's death, and when she died had her honorably interred. Moreover one of my sisters did nurse the Duchess of Manchester and Dutchess of Bedford in England, who are both daughters of His Grace the Duke of Gordon, and also did dry nurse the Marquis of Huntley, and these nobility have taken such notice of my said sister that they allow her everything that she can personally ask, and hath placed every child she has in fine places.

In short Sir will you wance more do me the honor to approve or disapprove of my thoughts, as I am very consciencious to myself that since I have been in this country I have never made any steps of consequence without first soliciting your advice. * * *

I would not hesitate upon leaving this place of uncertainty and depend on the assistance of such men as I have mentioned, but alas what comfort can I expect to have in another corner, and leave here ten sons and two daughters and above 150 of my nearest in kin, all which, with many others, I have been the sole instrument of bringing to this country? If I am drove to the necessity I shall have to humbly beg your Honor's certificate of my conduct and stations I have occupied while here,— & with many other honors & favours conferred on me I shall allways be bound to be Sir,

Your Honor's mo. obedient and
Most Humble servant,

Alex. Taylor.

Chief Justice Blowers to President Edward Winslow.

Halifax, April 2, 1808.

I sincerely congratulate you, my dear Sir, and the province of New Brunswick, on your elevation to the Seat of Government, and I hope you will remain in it long enough to acquire no small share both of honor and emolument, and that your administration will furnish a good example to whoever may succeed you. If such should be the case you may shake hands with your successor, come when he may, with the utmost complacency, and return to your former station with the feeling and sentiment which the consciousness of well-doing always inspires. I wish to God such may be the situation of our pleasant little knight when he arrives. Do you know Sir Geo. Prevost*, whom the English papers say is appointed Governor of Nova Scotia? He is said to be the son of that Gen'l Prevost who defended Georgia during the Revolutionary War, and the same who repulsed the French at Dominique; and he is said by the Military here, that I have heard speak of him, to be clever and a sharp exact officer. I hope he is neither needy or rapacious, and that his pay and emoluments will be sufficient for his wants. He must be very good tempered, easy and affable to replace Sir J. W. [Wentworth]* in those respects. I fear his appointment will be fatal to the nomination of Mr. Charles Wentworth to the office of Secretary, which in this province is worth £1,000 a year currency, taking one year with another.

*The prospect of war with the United States seems to have led the home government to place military men at the head of affairs in the British American provinces. At this time Sir James H. Craig was lieutenant governor of Lower Canada, Sir George Prevost lieutenant governor of Nova Scotia, and General Martin Hunter administrator of government in New Brunswick. Sir George Prevost is said to have been "a veteran Swiss officer." His appointment as lieutenant governor of Nova Scotia was dated Jan. 15, 1808, and he arrived in Halifax to take up the duties of his office on April 7th of the same year. In 1811 he was governor general of Canada in succession to Sir James H. Craig.

The serious and sudden illness of your Chief Justice, in the present state of your Supreme Court, will probably be the occasion of much inconvenience. Mr. Hazen tells me there is only Mr. Justice Saunders who can sit, for he seems to suppose that your being in the Chair and having the powers of the Chancery Court will prevent your taking your seat on the Common Law Bench. There is however no incompatability in the case, and there are examples in England of the places of Chancellor and Chief Justice being held by one and the same person, particularly in Lord Hardwiche, who held both for some time. Unless you sit yourself or appoint an assistant Justice ad interim, there may be a danger of a general discontinuance of all the pending suits, which in this province would be productive of great confusion and much real injury. But you will be well advised on this head, and will do that which is right, which is generally, if not always, that which is best.

As exertion has often proved salutary to your crippled Limbs, I hope you will find a benefit from the bustle which your situation must necessarily occasion, and that you will not suffer an anxiety of mind to exhaust and wear you down. I should not be so free with my advice, if I did not feel very much interested in your success and comfort.

You will see by the King's speech, and the extracts from English papers, that there is a firmness and energy in Great Britain as well as such astonishing resources, as may safely set at defiance the naval power of the whole world confederated against her, and carry her through the war with great glory. I shall be deceived in my conjectures if the present state of affairs should not tend to cool the courage of President J. [efferson] while it increases the strength and power of those who oppose his measures. Sir John Wentworth told me that Mr. Rose has said that notwithstanding the suspension of the negotiation, he did not despair of its terminating in an amicable adjustment of all differences between our Government and the U. States. If the Americans would cordially unite with us and heartily co-operate on our side, there can be little doubt of the complete and speedy dissolution of the confederacy against us and of a safe and honorable peace. May we live to see and to enjoy the blessing with all its attendant benefits.

God bless you. The Ladies are well and most cordially interested in your welfare and prosperity.

I am very sincerely yours,

S. S. Blowers.

*Sir John Wentworth on his retirement from the lieutenant governorship took up his residence at the Prince's Lodge. The place was visited by the Prince of Wales, our present sovereign, in 1860.

President Edward Winslow to Sir James H. Craig.

Fredericton, 4th April, 1808.

Sir,—From local considerations every event which concerns the defence of New Brunswick must be in some degree interesting to the Commander in Chief in Canada. Under this impression I consider myself at liberty to detail the following circumstances.

When I succeeded to the command in this province, I found a number of Militia embodied (about 800) for whom provisions were issued and Barracks provided by Major General Hunter's order; and by an order of the late President (published the 22nd January) the detachment at St. John were to be dismissed on the 28th of March. But unfortunately my predecessor had not taken any steps to procure money for paying the expence. Thus embarrassed I considered it my duty to draw bills on His Majesty's Treasury for the amount of the expences already incurred and (not being able to dispose of them here without a large discount) I sent the paymaster to Halifax where, I understand, he has negociated the bills and is returning with the money. And I notified the Detachment at St. John that the faith of Government thus pledged by the late President should not be violated, but that they should be permitted to return to their homes immediately, and an order to this effect has since been issued.

Although the other detachments were not in the same predicament (as to limitation of time) it was obvious that this partial indulgence created much discontent and uneasiness. Influenced by the opinions which I have recently received, some from high authority, that a war is not likely immediately to ensue; contemplating also the extreme distress which must result from keeping so many active labourers from the performance of the duties of agriculture, and the very heavy expence to Government, I determined to extend the indulgence to the whole of the embodied Militia — and your Excellency will allow me to add one other motive which operated upon my mind. I had seen in your speech to the Legislative Council and House of Assembly in Canada the strong evidence of your paternal care and of your benevolent attention to the welfare of the People, and I was ambitious to imitate your example.

It is my design to give the Militia a short respite, and then to require a new draft to replace those which have disbanded, but to suffer them to remain at home until such an emergency as our Militia law contemplates shall render it necessary for them to be again embodied. And I shall make the most vigorous exertions to have the new draft in particular, and as well the Militia generally, so disciplined as to render them useful, and in effecting this object I expect to derive great advantages from the experience of those officers and men who have been steadily drilled during the winter and are now dispersed through the several counties in the province, nor have I the least doubt that every man in the Militia will turn out with alacrity whenever their services are required.

Above the Grand Falls there is a compact and flourishing settlement called Madawaska. As the line was settled by Commissioners it appears to interesect the St. John between the Grand Falls and Madawaska, and thus the village of Madawaska is thrown into the American States. But tho' the territory may be theirs, the jurisdiction remains with us, and these people hold their lands by our patents and are governed by our laws. They have made an explicit tender of their services to me, and at their own request, I have appointed Pierre Dupeirre (a man of some consideration among them) to be Captain of the Militia. The situation of the place renders it in some degree an object to secure these people. And I regret that I have not the means of counteracting the insidious attempts of the Americans to seduce into their connection a number of Indians who are scattered about in that direction of country, and who in case of accident may become mischievous.

I shall keep my eye fixed on your Excellency's movements and shall be governed by them as far as circumstances will allow.

I have the honor to be

Your Excellency's devoted & faithful serv't,

Ed. Winslow.

Colonel Saunders to President Edward Winslow.

Fredericton, April 12th, 1808.

Sir,—I am sorry to be obliged to request a General Court Martial for the purpose of trying two Deserters who were brought in this morning, the conduct of one of them was so audacious and mutinous that I was obliged to order him to be committed to gaol. I could have wished to avoid having one in this late stage of Militia matters, but I find it to be indispensably necessary, and it will have a very salutary effect upon the next draft.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your very faithful and obedient humble servant,

John Saunders,

Col. V. M. Rangers.

MEMORIAL OF GARRET CLOPPER.

To His Honor Edward Winslow, Esq'r, President of His Majesty's Council and Commander in Chief of the Province of New Brunswick, &c., &c., &c.,

The memorial of Garret Clopper* Esq'r humbly sheweth,

That your Memorialist at an early period of the late Revolutionary war entered into His Majesty's service, and joined the Regiment of New York Volunteers commanded by Lieut. Colo. Turnbull and served faithfully until the peace of 1783, during which time he executed the duties of Lieutenant and Quarter Master, and received pay in both capacities.

That your Memorialist on a more recent occasion during the existence of the late Regiment of New Brunswick Provincials did also serve His Majesty as Lieutenant and Quarter Master, until they were disbanded in 1802, and received pay in both capacities.

That your Memorialist on the present occasion of embodying the Militia has again come forward, with a zeal and promptness that will never desert him when the good of His Majesty's service is in question, has partially neglected his other pursuits, which are various tho' not lucrative, and has undertaken the arduous task of arranging and quartering a Militia Corps.

Your Memorialist will only add that he has served His Majesty in Military and Civil capacities since September, 1776. Your Memorialist therefore prays your Honor will take his peculiar case into your serious consideration and that your Honor will be pleased to order that your Memorialist may, as in the former wars he has served in, receive pay as a Lieutenant and as a Quarter Master in the present embodied Militia. And your Memorialist as in duty bound will ever pray.

Garret Clopper.

Fredericton, 13th Ap'l, 1808.

Order for Disbanding Militia.

April 24th, 1808.

His Honor the President cannot dismiss the embodied Militia under the command of the Hon'ble Col. Saunders at Fredericton, without expressing the high sense which he entertains of the unremitted exertions of Col. Saunders, Major Bliss and the other officers of the detachment. By their steady perseverance a corps has been formed and disciplined which, had the threatened hostilities taken place, could not have failed to render essential service in defending the Country. His Honor is also sensible of the Loyalty and zeal which the non-commissioned officers and private men of this detachment have evinced by the readiness with which they entered the service and by their orderly and regular conduct (a few instances excepted) ever since they were embodied.

His Honor is pleased to order that the detachment be discharged from any further duty at present, and that the officers and men shall be and are hereby permitted to return to their respective homes immediately.

The paymaster will be directed to settle with and pay them up to this day, and seven days in advance, to carry them home agreeable to the rates prescribed by the law of the province under which they have been called out. It is however to be understood that those men of the Detachment, who have not performed their whole tour of duty, will be liable to make up their deficiency whenever His Majesty's service may render it necessary.

(Signed) Edward Winslow.

President Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow Jr.

Kingsclear, 26th April, 1808.

Your last letters my dear Edward have afforded me the highest possible satisfaction. To hear of your late arrival in England, your kind reception and final success relieved me from a burden which had become almost insupportable. I will now make an explicit declaration, which I think will give you pleasure, which is that when the proposal of procuring you a cadetship in India was originally made by the amiable and benevolent Mrs. Weltden, I consented to it because I could more easily reconcile myself to the idea (dreadful as it was) of never seeing you again than of being a continual witness of the discouragements to which you must have been exposed had you remained in this country. Had there been a single avenue open which could possibly have led you to a bare competence, I never would have inflicted such a wound upon my own heart as I experienced at parting with you. * * I now rejoice my dear son that you had an opportunity of relinquishing the cadetship and that you have obtained a situation the duties of which you must be competent to perform with honour to yourself. That you are under the protection of the worthy Captain Weltden is a consideration that compleats my happiness on this occasion. * * *

The girls I presume have informed you that by the death of Colonel Ludlow I succeeded, as Senior Member of the Council, to the office of President & Commander in Chief of the province, & altho' that situation continued but for a single quarter, it afforded me an opportunity of effecting some objects of considerable importance. My predecessor, under the expectation of hostilities with the Americans, had called out 1,000 of the Militia & had officered them, formed them into two battalions under the command of Col. Saunders & Lt. Col. Wetmore, & a detachment was stationed at Fredericton, another at St. John, and a 3d at St. Andrews under Col. Mackay. They were crammed into Barracks & drilled and disciplined in the true style of soldiers. At Fredericton your old Theatre was converted into a famous barracks. Thus arranged I found them. The country was of course deprived of one quarter part of the men who had hitherto been engaged in the pursuit of agriculture, & who when they were all employ'd could not raise a sufficiency of bread for their families. As the Spring approached misery and want seemed to stare them in the face. Never for a moment believing that the Americans had a design to invade this country, I thought it my duty to disband them, and on the 24th inst. they were all sent huzzaing and shouting to their own homes. The gentlemen who have been employed as officers are disappointed by this measure, but I've the satisfaction to find that among the judicious and disinterested part of the community it is highly applauded, and I have no doubt that it will meet the approbation of His Majesty's Ministers.

General Hunter is expected in about a fortnight to take the command of the province, civil and military, to which he was appointed previous to the death of Col. Ludlow. I shall then return to my seat on the bench and, if my salary is augmented to £500 as we are informed, I shall be able to procure the necessaries of life for my numerous family, and beyond that my ambition does not soar just at this time. Your friend Charles Lee has been employed here as Adjutant in which station he has not acquired a great deal of fame. Capt. John Allen has gained much credit and he lays down his regimentals with much regret. The calling out of the Militia had, as you may suppose, a fatal effect upon the lumber contracts. All those fine lads who were hitherto employed in Mr. Miller's service were among the embodied Militia & I believe Miller does not send a single raft to St. John this Spring. How he gets on I know not. Mr. H. Smith and himself have entered into a co-partnership to carry on the potash business and they have engaged Mr. Crotty as their manager. * * *

The trade of the town is now collected into a very small compass around the barracks. The whole Fencible Corps is here & the 101st at St. John.

Your mother joins in the most anxious solicitude for your welfare and the most ardent prayers for your safe return.

London, Bull Inn, Aldgate St.
Monday, 2nd May, 1808.

My dear Father,—On Saturday I was desired to attend at the India House for the dispatches for the "Indus," where I waited from 12 o'clock till seven in the even'g, & was then told that they could not be made up till this morn'g early. I therefore came into town last night & attended again at the India House at 7 this morning when they told me they would be ready for me immediately, I accordingly ordered a chaise instantly — but here I am yet, and it's now ten o'clock; however I expect a Summons every moment & (as I must get to Portsmouth by 7 o'clock this even'g, to save post) I don't care how soon. As I am the only purser in the fleet that was not dispatched on Saturday, I suppose we shall have but a very short time at Portsmouth — perhaps too short to give me an opp'y of writing my very dear Sisters, &c; to my Mother I will at all events write. Col. Lutwyche & Mrs. Weltden have promised to give you a very minute account of me. I hope my father you do not think that I have been negligent about writing, if you knew how much I had done for these two months past, you would not I'm sure.

Say to Pen & Hannah that I shall not forget their goodness. I rec'd two letters from H. & one from P., also one from you last week — but indeed I have not time to make a remark upon them now — tell the girls if I don't write from Portsmouth it shall not be my fault.

To my very much esteemed Mr. Miller & his wife, Cousin Hannah & the rest of my friends and relations I beg to be most affectionately remember'd. I pray to GOD & trust that my mother has recovered. That He may bless & preserve you all shall never cease to be the earnest prayer of

Your most affectionate Son,

William Knox to President Edward Winslow.

Ealing, 4th May, 1808.

Dear Sir,—I have great pleasure in congratulating your Honor upon your accession to the Command of the province, in which I flatter myself we shall have the satisfaction of your continuance for some time, as I find from General Carleton that he feels it impossible for him to go out during Gen'l Craig's residence in Canada as Governor General, and the representations we have made at the Secretary of States office of the sufficiency of the present President of the Council will I trust remove all apprehensions of the public affairs suffering for the want of a Lieutenant Governor. The Instruction for granting Lands, which it was so difficult to obtain and was so long delayed, will I hope have reached your hands some time before you receive this, as I have been assured at the Secretary of State's office that it was sent out, with a similar one for Nova Scotia, before General Craig sailed, and we Planters must all feel happy that the execution of His Majesty's pleasure has fallen into your hands. It will be an agreeable circumstance in the opening of your Administration to be able to inform the other branches of the Legislature of the liberality of parliament to the Chief and Puisne Judges, as I was yesterday assured the addition to their salaries, so earnestly solicited by Judge Upham, is entered in the estimate prepared for Parliament. I wish the worthy magistrate may live long to enjoy his portion, but he has passed a severe winter, both from climate and disease.

I mentioned in my letter of last month that we had failed in supporting the Bill for ascertaining the right of Fishery. The Master of the Rolls was unfortunately one of the Committee of Council who had to determine upon it, and he is too good a Lawyer to permit a Provincial Legislature to abrogate a Law of England*.

The American States embargo must be highly advantageous to New Brunswick in many respects. A great emigration of ship-wrights, sailors, and fishermen must take place, as well as of other settlers, now that you can accommodate them with lands. All your fish and products must find a ready market in the West Indies and cheap returns. In short it will effectually give you all the advantages the Navigation Laws intended you should have.

The Liverpool merchants, who are always the most alert of British Traders, have taken up an effectual mode of evading the American Prohibition and the embargo also by sending their ships and merchandize, to St. Andrews, instead of St. John, as from thence it is most easy to smuggle into the United States and their ships lie out of the reach of the embargo. I applaud Jefferson very much, as an Englishman and especially as a New Brunswick Agent and Planter, for the measure of the embargo, as it disappoints Bonaparte's expectations of the Americans carrying the produce of the French and Spanish West Indies to his countries, and raises our continental colonies at the expence of the American States. I hope it will continue during the war with France and I have no apprehensions of our being at war with the States.

As I do not know whether there be any committee of correspondence subsisting, I do not write to them at present, but if there be, you will be pleased to communicate such parts of this letter as you may think fit to the other members.

*The principle on which this decision was based was that of the non-existence of private rights in navigable waters. William Hazen in 1805 brought an action for trespass against certain persons for taking possession of a weir on the flats east of Portland Point, where he had taken fish for many years. He, however, lost his case, Chief Justice Ludlow directing the jury to find a verdict for the defendants on the ground that the water east of Portland Point was a navigable arm of the sea, and the fishery in consequence common to all. Mr. Hazen deemed this unfair, claiming to have been for forty years in possession of the weir, and to have vested rights in the fishery there.

I hope my old servants Inwood and his wife with their children and apprentice, whom I sent in the Flora from Liverpool to settle upon my lands, have arrived safe, and I beg leave to recommend them to your Honor's protection. When I am informed of the extent of what is granted me, I shall make more important arrangements.

I am with the greatest regard and esteem

Your Honor's most faithful & obedient servant,

Will. Knox.

London 4th July, 1808.

Dear Colonel,—I received your letter of the 8th of March. Sproule's name I was vexed to see recommended for a seat in Council as Mr. Windham in person assured me about a year ago that he should be appointed without loss of time, and I took it for granted that it had been done long since. I stated however to Lord Castlereagh what had passed between me and Mr. W. respecting Sproule and urged his appointment and that of Hailes for the other vacancy, but have received no answer.

Upham I have not seen for a year and did suppose he was returned to N. B. until I learned by letters from thence that he is still here. Mrs. Jones told me the other day that he was with Colonel Lutwitch, I hope he will not be in a hurry to join you.

We heard from William lately off Corunna: he says they have got pilots on board to take them into the Harbor. The noble spirit that has broke out in Spain and communicated to Portugal will, it is to be hoped, revive the drooping spirits of Europe.

The Ladies join in good wishes to you and yours.

I am yours &c,

Thos. Carleton.

The Elder Edward Winslow's Daughters.

On Sunday, June 5, 1808, a fire broke out in the house occupied by the two sisters of Judge Winslow and, the wind being fresh, the whole building was speedily in a blaze and it was impossible to save more than a few articles of furniture. By the kindness of Hon. Jonathan Odell, and other friends at Fredericton, a generous donation was raised on their behalf to which General Hunter contributed £50, the Chief Justice £25, Captain Sproule, Major Hailes, George Ludlow, Geo. Leonard, Ward Chipman, Mr. Robinson & Mr. Pagan £15 each, and others at Fredericton, St. John, Halifax, etc, smaller sums.

After the death of their parents, Penelope and Sarah Winslow had a pension of £33 6s. per annum from the Imperial Government in consideration of the services and losses of their father. Penelope died January 23, 1810, but Sarah survived some years after.

Thomas A. C. Winslow to His Sisters.

Sicily, 9th July, 1808.

My dear Sisters,—The length of time which has elapsed since I wrote you may possibly induce you to suppose I am one of those inconstant, changeable sort of beings who suffers the affection for those he loves to diminish as the distance increases between them, and that I have found nearer objects for my regards & attention. However be assured my good girls (whatever opinion you may have formed to the reverse) that the heat of Sicily has not kindled in my breast an affection that can in any degree decrease that I feel towards you. On the contrary, you are continually uppermost in my thoughts—not only your present happiness, but your future prospects in life are objects which by turns occupy my mind, and believe me, the reflections they give rise to adds to the weight of my own misfortunes. Were it not for the mortification it would occasion a numerous connection of relatives, I could calmly reconcile myself to the idea of becoming a wandering exile for the remainder of my life in preference to dragging out a slavish existence in my present profession. But enough of this.

I hope my friend Went thinks differently, and that in his progress thro' life he may never meet with such "vile blows & buffets of fortune" as have followed me. Ned has certainly given a proof of his understanding by choosing the profession he has, and I look forward to his being the fountain from which much comfort is destined to spring to you all. His absence from you will be lengthy — but you must reconcile yourselves to it by the consideration of its being absolutely & indespensably necessary. Pen's letter by him I receiv'd some months back. I was pleased to find by it that Fredericton still retains its credit for hospitality. You appear to have had a more than usual share of amusements the last season. But I observe the old complaint. Want of young men. I was in hopes ere this a Yankee war would have afforded you a reinforcement of them and that I should hear the number of Maidens in your Society was considerably reduced. But that prospect is now at an end and I fear the greater proportion of the virgin part of your community — will remain unmolested until they "throw off their frail covering" and join the sisterhood in "the mansions below." However girls it is not your fault, nor the fault of your sisters in affliction. Where men are not to be found, they can't be captivated, and it is with no small degree of pride I avow (from the observations I have been able to make) that perfection in females is as likely in New Brunswick as in any other corner of the Globe. Don't let the ladies imagine I mean to flatter them; that is one of the depravities of human nature I hope I shall never descend to even when they are in question, tho' it is acknowledged to be a passport to their Favor.

You all conclude your letters with a quiz about Anna Coffin. That good girl seeems to have had a multiplicity of admirers. I am told Wallop renewed his attack after I came away, and a friend of mine wrote me that two more red coats (a Capt. and a Sub.) had put in their claims and laid a regular siege. However it appears these sons of Mars were all retired in their turn and I understand that the Forum has produced a champion who will probably bear off the Prize. That he may is one of the first wishes of my heart. She will then (if Chip* is the sort of man he promised to be) experience as much of happiness as comes to the lot of any individual inhabitant of this tempestuous world. To her and my no less loved friend Carry give my most affectionate regards. Remember me to Fanny Sproule. Tell her I thank her for the Postcript to your letter. By the way you Pen, in your last letter sent me a profile, but for the life of me I can't make out who it is intended for. Do in the next let me know. It is not possible for me to say to what quarter you had better direct your letters, but if they come thro' Col. Lutwyche or Col. Williamson I shall be sure to get them, as they will both have the earliest information of any movements of mine. Remember me to my Aunts, Pen Miller, Sally, Mr. and Mrs. Clopper, Miller & Spouse, Lucy, &c. To John Allen, C. & G. Lee, A. & F. Rainsford, in short to everybody in the neighborhood. John Robinson is at Syracuse. I got a letter from him yesterday. He is well and apologizes for the shortness of his epistle, alleging that he is writing to his friends.

Adieu, Believe me my dear Girls,

Your affectionate Brother,

T. A. C. Winslow.

*The reference is to Ward Chipman, jr., afterwards chief justice of New Brunswick. He married in 1817 a daughter of Henry Wright, Esq., collector of customs at St. John. She was the last survivor in St. John of the Chipman name. She died July 4, 1876, the one hundredth anniversary of the declaration of independence. Chief Justice Chipman's mother died May 18, 1852, on the sixty-ninth anniversary of the landing of the Loyalists. The chief justice himself died on the 26th of November, 1851, the sixty-seventh anniversary of the organization of the supreme court of New Brunswick.

P. S. Tell Mary it would give me much pleasure to get one of her real old fashioned spicy letters. If Betsy Sproule is in your country she will I dare say assist her in the Diction.

Judge Edward Winslow to Colonel E. G. Lutwyche.

Fredericton, N. B., July 30th, 1808.

My dear Lutwyche,—In mine of the 20th I inclosed a letter from General Hunter and a life certificate to enable you to obtain my salary as a Judge, for the 6 months ending 1st July inst.

In that letter I concisely observed that during my service as President I had not lost a day's duty as a Judge, for while I was thus employed there had been no term of the Supreme Court. I also suggested that my service as President had been, as is fully certified by General Hunter, unusually arduous. My predecessor had embodied 1000 of the Militia, and they were stationed in three different places, namely Fredericton, St. John and St. Andrews, and they were fully officered and temporizing promises had been made them of extraordinary indulgences, furlows, discharges, &c; but not a single effort had been made for procuring money for defraying the expence.

On the death of Mr. Ludlow I found them exposed to all the hardships of soldiers, and clamorous for their pay, while their families in many instances were reduced to abject distress. Thus circumstanced it was incumbent on me to ascertain what real danger actually existed to warrant the continuance of a measure which was productive of an enormous expence to Government and attended with consequences so fatal to the interests of a country scarcely able when every man is employed in agricultural labor to raise bread sufficient for their own consumption. I soon procured information from Mr. Erskine, the ambassador at Washington, that there was no prospect of immediate hostilities on the part of the Americans, even should Mr. Rose's mission fail. I therefore without hesitation adopted the resolution of permitting the whole body of Militia to return to their homes and to hold themselves in readiness to appear again at a minute's warning, and finding a rascally combination here to extort 10 pr. cent premium upon the bills, I sent the Paymaster to Halifax and procured £6,000 at par, and as soon as I could avail myself of it I paid and discharged 'em. Subsequent events have shewn that this measure was judicious.

Such efficient arrangements were also made in the business of granting lands as cannot fail to facilitate the operations of my successor. The embargo in America had created new difficulty, and it became my duty to counteract it, and I adopted such measures as have since been successfully followed both by Generals Hunter & Prevost and explicitly approved by Sir John Warren, and if persevered in must terminate very favorably for these colonies. Large quantities of flour and other commodities are, in consequence of those regulations and in defiance of the embargo, brought into our province and shipped from hence to our West India Islands.

These events rendered my short administration unusually arduous and surely it would be derogatory to the honor of Government to allow me to be a loser by exertions which absolutely injured my health.

&c., &c., &c.,

Edward Winslow.

NOTES ON MILITIA EMBODIED IN 1808.

Taken from Winslow's Report to the Commissioners of Public Accounts.

The Militia were called out by President Ludlow about the 12th January, 1808, and were disbanded April 24th following, receiving pay for the period of three months. They were embodied in consequence of a communication from Lord Castlereagh. The men says Winslow turned out with alacrity. The officers were to be paid (in accordance with the law of the province under which they were called out at the same rates as allowed in the regular army.

President Ludlow died February 12, 1808, and Edward Winslow succeeded as Commander in Chief. Detachments were stationed at Fredericton under Colonel Saunders, at St. John under Lieut. Col. Wetmore and at St. Andrews under Col. Mackay. At Fredericton the old Theatre was used for a barracks, at St. John a building, formerly the "City Windmill" and later used as an Alms House, was converted into a barracks: it stood at the South West corner of King Square, where the Hotel Dufferin now stands.

Among the officers of the embodied Militia were Colonel John Saunders, Major Bliss, Captains Hiel Camp, John Allen, Odell, Smith, Gedney and Morehouse of the York County Militia. Lieut. Col. Wetmore, Lieut. Col. Mackay, Capts. Gilbert, Ruloffson, Lyon, Wilbore, Macleod, Brown, Campbell, Wyer, MacFarlane, and Mowatt of the St. John, Kings, and Charlotte County Militia. Paymasters Wm. Hazen and Wm. Scovil. Adjutant, at F'ton, Charles Lee. The rates of pay per day seem to have been Serjeants 1s. 6d. to 2s., Corporals and Drummers 1s. 3d., Privates 1s.

Not being able to obtain money at less than 10 p. c. to 12 p. c. premium for the bills drawn on Government owing, as Winslow says in his letter, to "a rascally combination", Wm. Hazen was sent to Halifax for money. The season and state of ice was such that Hazen proceeded from Fredericton to St. John "at the risque of his life" (the ice being uncommonly weak and the traveling difficult and dangerous) to St. John, whence he crossed to Annapolis and proceeded to Halifax. Some of the non-commissioned officers and privates became clamorous and discontented, principally through the want of money for their own & families' needs — the latter in some instances being in distress through the absence of the men. "Rudeness to officers, contumacy and disobedience" were some of the consequences of this state of affairs. Col. Saunders addressed the most pointed reports to the President and Commander in Chief (verbally in one instance & in writing in another.) The evil increased to such a degree that Winslow submitted the matter to the consideration of the Council, and the principal Military officers of the Garrison, and they were unanimously of opinion that a General Court Martial should be assembled, and a serious example made of the delinquents, several of whom were lodged in the common gaol. So many of the officers were either prosecutors or witnesses, that officers of the Militia not called out were summoned to attend the Courts Martial, (in one case nine, in another four, and in a third one). The turbulent spirit received an effectual check in consequence.

By his trip to Halifax Wm. Hazen saved £500 or £600 to Government. He brought with him the sum of £6,000 in specie to St. John. The ice in the St. John river being then in motion in various places, he was compelled to hire boats and horses alternately, and to employ an officer and a party of men to bring a portion of money for the detachment at Fredericton, which he succeeded in effecting at considerable hazard, and the Militia were all paid and sent huzzahing and shouting to their homes on the 24th April. The British Government paid the men, but some contingent expenses were paid by the General Assembly of the Province.

Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, Saturday 30 July, 1808.

My dear Winslow,— I find that the language used by the little "Creeper"* is this,—"That he is perfectly satisfied with his visit to England — that he has taken such steps and made such interest that in case "of Judge U——'s death he shall succeed to the Vacancy both on the bench and in the Council."

*The reference here is to Samuel Denny Street. Two vacancies on the bench of the supreme court occurred during the year 1808 in consequence of the decease of Chief Justice Ludlow and of Judge Upham. They were filled by the appointment of Attorney General Jonathan Bliss and Solicitor General Ward Chipman, the former being named as chief justice. Mr. Street endeavored to obtain one of the vacancies, but failed in so doing. Afterwards, in 1815, a vacancy on the bench was again created by the decease of Edward Winslow, and Now this must be counteracted with all your address and all your ingenuity and without delay. I find that Odell has already written expressly on this subject to Gov'r Carleton, having heard the report some time ago. S[tree]t has a brother, an attorney in London of some eminence, and he may possibly command an interest that may be formidable. Sat. verb. sap.

Ever yours, W. C.

E. G. Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

August 4, 1808.

My dear Winslow,—The specimen you have just given us of your talent at novel writing has excited a strong desire that you would compleat the whole at your leisure, and in the mean time we are so reasonable as to be contented with the 5th chapter at large. Remember you have promised, and Catherine will keep you to it.

* * * Your Gown was sent by Vennor's ship, your son Edward undertook to convey it to Mess. Bainbridge's, and I hope you have received it long before this time. Wilson would have made your suit of clothes if he had had your measure, but he could not venture to guess at the size of a Gentleman who had held such dignified offices since he had seen him, therefore you must send your measure. * * *

Whether you will be allowed to receive salary in both capacities is uncertain, but as the salary as Judge is only £500 and that of President £750 pr. annum, I shall push for the latter during the period of your command and if possible obtain the other too — but it must be done fairly and openly consistent with your character and dignity.

* * * I am much concerned for the misfortune which has befallen your sisters*. What a distressing event it must be to you as well as to them. Happily you are in a country where the hand of friendship and benevolence will be promptly extended to all in their distress.

Upham, in spite of all prognostics, is pronounced to be getting better, and his surgeon is in hopes of bringing him round again. If he does he will gain credit, for a more difficult & dangerous case was scarcely ever known. He has suffered enough to kill a dozen men and is a hero in his way — struggled with difficulties the most discouraging and risen superior to them. He is a good fellow and deserves to live for his patience and fortitude under all his sufferings. * * *

Mr. Street pressed his claim for the appointment. In his memorial he states that he had been at the bar of the supreme court upwards of 32 years, during all of which time the favors of government had been almost wholly dispensed to American Loyalists through the generous intention of the government to remunerate them for their losses. He adds: "Of such favors I have received "none—a stranger and unconnected in this country, without support or influ- "ence, I have been passed by and compelled to yield to juniors of greater in- "terest." He had again the mortification of proving unsuccessful in his endeavor, the position being given to his old professional rival, John Murray Bliss. His sons, however, were more fortunate. George Frederick Street became a judge of the supreme court in 1845, and another son, John Ambrose Street, was attorney general in 1851 and for many years a conspicuous figure in political life.

When I began this letter I was so exhausted by the heat, I thought it impossible to fill one side, but luckily or unluckily for you the heat abated, and I have spun out this epistle to an enormous length. Had I your talent at writing, I should not regret it, but you must take the will for the deed. But it is time to draw to a close my labour and your punishment.

Thank you and your daughter for the honor done us, may the many-named grand daughter inherit all the virtues and none of the foibles belonging to those she derives her name from. All your friends here enjoyed your exaltation but I must say none so truly as Committee of Correspondence to E. G. Lutwyche.

St. John, N. B., 5 Sept., 1808.

Dear Sir.—From the Royal instructions that have been from time to time given respecting Grants of Land and from the intimations of Government on other occasions, it appears to be an object of great magnitude to encourage the culture of Hemp in these Provinces and the late interruption of the friendly intercourse between Great Britain and Russia must have increased the importance of having a reserve within His Majesty's Dominions for the supply of an article so essential to the maritime interests of the nation.

From the experiments that have been already made it has been ascertained beyond a doubt that a great proportion of the land in this country is peculiarly adapted to the growth of this article, but the difficulty of producing it in any considerable quantity fit for market arises from a want of sufficient knowledge of the mode of dressing it, and a sufficient capital to procure the necessary hands and implements for this purpose, no individual having the power to engage in so expensive a speculation without public aid.

If the Government therefore is desirous of availing itself of this country for a supply of Hemp, some method must be fallen upon to procure and send out at the public expense a number of settlers from the north of Germany acquainted with the best manner of raising, curing and dressing it, and to furnish them with seed and proper implements for the purpose. There is no doubt that land already fit for its cultivation might be procured on which to make a fair experiment, and the produce would probably in the course of a few years repay all the expence that Government would be at, and in case of success the example would stimulate others to engage in a similar undertaking so as gradually to make this article one of the most valuable staple commodities of this and the neighboring Provinces.

If these suggestions should be thought worthy of attention, the Commander in Chief of the Province might be instructed to look out for and provide a proper place whereon to fix a Company of Settlers of this description, and the business while in such a course of experiment might be managed under the direction of such an overseer as he might think fit to employ, Government sustaining the loss or reaping the profits that might be derived from a speculation so much beyond the abilities of any person here to engage in at his own risk.

After considerable discussion of the subject here the result of the opinions seems to be that in some such way as this only can a measure of so much importance be tried with any probability of success. We have therefore thought it our duty to make it the subject of a letter to you that it may be fairly brought before His Majesty's ministers for their consideration.

We have the honor to be &c. &c. &c.

Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, 18. Nov. 1808.

My dear Winslow,—The sudden death of the Chief Justice has brought to my mind most forcibly your kind and affectionate suggestions respecting me in case of such an event. I have been so often disappointed that I shall not place much dependence upon any efforts I can make for succeeding to this vacancy. I have, however, written to Governor Carleton and to our friend T. A. Coffin, and have also sent up a memorial under cover to Mr. Odell, in the hope that Gen'l Hunter will have the goodness to forward it with his recommendation to the Secretary of State. I know of no interest that in my opinion would be so successful as thro' Lutwyche and Lord Sheffield, if you should make a request of the kind to them; but this to answer any purpose, should be done without delay. I will say no more; you I know will do what you can with propriety under the circumstances of the case.

I have not a moment to add anything more. Adieu:

Ever yours most faithfully,

W. Chipman.

Judge Monk to Judge Edward Winslow.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, 23d. Decemr. 1808.

My dear Sir,— It will be greatly obliging some of your professional & other Friends, if you will be kind enough to inform me of the course of the late application, made by the Judges of the Supreme Court in New Brunswick, for an augmentation of their salary. * * *

Your Friend Sir John Wentworth maintains great Firmness of Mind, & good Health & Spirits in his unexpected Retirement (at the Lodge), and Lady Wentworth preserves better Health than it was expected she would in the winter season, & wonderful good Spirits. I am sure they would not forgive my omitting to mention them, & the warm regard they always manifest for you — in which Mrs. Monk & I beg leave very sincerely to unite.

I hope I do not mistake, in flattering myself that you will not require an apology for this liberty, in a professional pursuit, and that you will believe me to remain, with unfeigned good will and esteem.

My dear Sir,

Your faithfully devoted and obedient humble Servant,

G. H. Monk.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Winslow.

Judge Edward Winslow to Judge Monk*

Kingsclear, N. B., 9th Jan'ry, 1809.

Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 23d ult: came to me this day — and I regret that it is not in my power to give you the most minute and satisfactory information relative to the course of application of the Judges of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick for an augmentation of their salaries, but the fact is that the negotiation has been carried on in England exclusively by Judge Upham, and that since his arrival there he has not wrote a line either to the late Chief Justice, Judge Saunders or myself — so that we are perfectly in the dark as to the mode of application which he pursued. From my own private letters, however, I have reason to suppose that the foundation was lay'd in a Memorial to His Majesty, which was productive of a conference with the Secretary of State (Ld. Castlereagh and a conversation with Mr. Percival the Chancellor — who ('tis said) interested himself in favor of the Judges. Other interest was also exerted on the occasion, as appears by a paragraph in one of my letters to this effect. "The indefatigable exertions of the Judge have been wonderfully facilitated by the invisible aid of your active & faithful friends". I know not whether our nominal Lt. Governor gave any certificate on this subject. His recommendation I suspect would not have been considered as a very powerful support. From his present retirement & utter indifference as to the affairs of the province, it is more probable that he has never heard of the petition or the result. Should any other circumstances come to my knowledge which may be worth communicating to you I will transmit it with the utmost alacrity.

E. Winslow.

Captain Hatch to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. Andrews, April 23, 1809.

Dr. Sir,— I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 1st inst. with its enclosures acquainting me with my appointment as Asst. Deputy Surveyor General of Kings-Woods for the County of *George Henry Monk was educated as a lawyer. In the war of the American Revolution he was an officer of the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers—was gazetted captain Dec. 28, 1775, and afterwards promoted major. He lived at Windsor and was deputy collector of customs in 1769. At the peace in 1783 many of his regiment settled at Antigonish. He was appointed Col. Francklin's successor as superintendent of Indian affairs in 1783. In the year 1801 he succeeded the late Hon. Isaac Deschamps on the bench, and in 1816 was retired on a pension of £400 per annum. He then went to Montreal, where his brother, Chief Justice Monk, resided. He died there in 1823 at the age of 75 years. The Monk family were of distinguished ancestry, their founder being the Duke of Albermarle, the restorer of monarchy. Those of the branch who came to Nova Scotia were noted for learning and refinement. See Murdoch's Hist. N. S., vol. ii., pp. 385, 386.

Charlotte. I beg you to accept of my thanks for the active part you have taken in procuring this appointment for me, and the confidence you have plac'd in me. * * *

It is much to be regretted that an officer in this department had not been earlier appointed for this County, a few months would have prevented great loss of timber. All that has been cut since Sep'r last is now on the banks of the different rivers and Bays of the County. The great demand for this article the last season and the consequent high price, induced every exertion to be directed to this object, and there are now twenty Thousand Tons of squared pine timber ready for market, two thirds more than has been obtained in any one season prior to the last, with Logs sufficient to employ Forty saws in the different mills within the County. Your astonishment will be less when you understand that seventeen twentieths of the male population of this County are what is termed here "Lumbermen", and were employed in procuring this large quantity of timber. Reserve Number Two, in the parish of St. Davids, from its convenient situation has been the scene of great depredations for some years past. It abounded in excellent timber and a large quantity has been cut the last winter on it, but it is now so intermixed where it lays with what is called Lot Timber, that I apprehend it will be difficult to designate it except by direct information, which is not to be expected.

For a number of years past the inhabitants of this County have cut tmiber of any size without any check whatever it suited their convenience. Mr. Brown, the late Deputy Surveyor, never interfered to prevent it, although he has been frequently informed of it. The magistrates and other leading characters whose duty it was to disapprove of measures so injurious to the public interest were silent, none opposed it, because it suits every person. I trust it will not appear to you as an easy task to eradicate a business of so long a standing, with such props as follows: Mr. Pagan owner of saw mills and purchases large quantities of timber; Messrs. McMasters, Porter, Wyer, Campbell, Lindsay, Cristy,—all engaged in the business; Col. Mackay concerned in logging & timber teams, with a long list of tenants, Foreigners as well as subjects—however I am inclined to believe that with steadiness and prudent measures * * *

E. G. Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

May 6, 1809.

My dear Winslow,—I received your letter on the subject of the Military Succession*. Nothing can be more absurd than the measure, nor

*There was so much objection to this system that the agent of the province in England, Col. E. G. Lutwyche, submitted to Lord Liverpool a letter (the draft of which was prepared by Ward Chipman, jr.), expressing the dissatisfaction more pertinent than your observations on it. If the Ministers had studied to alienate the affections of the people and disgust the Council they could not have devised a more effectual plan. * * *

The return of General Prevost to Halifax will restore things to their former state in the province. I was gratified to find this glaring impropriety had produced an embarrassment, for Mr. Calvert, the Agent, not knowing who Colonel Johnson* was refused to pay upon his certificate until authorized by the Secretary of State, and accordingly applied to Mr. Cooke who appeared equally ignorant, not having received any document to shew he was acting the President. It is really too ridiculous, and I cannot help feeling provoked when I reflect that this absurdity is occasioned by indulging a drone† with a sinecure of £750 per annum. * *

Catherine is gone to Englefield. She as usual has seized upon your letter, & I cannot find it, so I will answer what I can remember. In my last I informed you of the arrival of the Lieut,‡ & now, that he is gone to the W. Indies. I have supplied him (on your behalf) with a little money, which was absolutely necessary, & I am sure you would have done it had you been here. He has a good heart and never does wrong without feeling compunction. Naturally of an hasty disposition & a pliable temper he is often betrayed into errors which his cooler judgment condemns. That felt in New Brunswick on account of the state of administration of the government. This letter contains the following passage:—

"The dissatisfaction to which I refer arises from the operation of an article "in the Royal Instructions transmited in 1808, which is construed to confer the "administration of the civil government on the senior military officer who shall "at any time happen to be in command of his majesty's troops within the pro-"vince. By virtue of this authority, although Major General Hunter has in "general administered the civil government to the satisfaction of all classes of "people, yet an instance occurred some time ago, in which the temporary au-"thority devolved on Lieut. Col. Johnstone, then the commanding officer of his "majesty's Fencible Regiment, in consequence of General Hunter's absence for "some months on military command at Halifax; and at the date of my last "letters, General Hunter having been again ordered to Halifax for the purpose "of succeeding Sir George Prevost in the military command there, the province "of New Brunswick was left without an executive head, awaiting the arrival "of Major General Balfour, who was then expected from Halifax. The incon "venience which may result from this mode of succession in the government "of a colony of so large an extent, and which is now making such rapid pro-"gress in wealth and commerce and is daily rising in the scale of importance "with respect to the empire at large, are of no inconsiderable moment."

The letter proceeds to describe at some length the practical disadvantages of the system, and in conclusion intimates that it is peculiarly humiliating to the members of the council of the province, most of whom have been his majesty's tried and faithful servants in various important public situations, in view of the fact that the sister provinces of Lower Canada and Nova Scotia on any temporary absence of the king's selected representative the administration devolves, in the usual course, on the senior member of his majesty's council.

you may judge of him I shall send his letter to me. * * * All I can add is that the "Indus" is expected in July & that Edward was well in Dec'r last. I have the Rheumatism so bad I can scarcely sit in my chair, so Adieu, God bless you.

George Leonard to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, May 9, 1809.

My dear Friend,—I truly thank you for your cordial congratulations on my son's supposed appointment, I receive it from you as from a Brother.

Our ideas and motives of action have appeared to me more alike than any other persons of my acquaintance. I have felt your misfortune as my own, your success also. * * *

I cannot charge myself with the sin of omission in not representing in the strongest expressions, both in my official capacity and private letters, the injurious conduct of the officers of the Customs for this port, that it was in vain to adopt regulations or to make laws without employing proper officers to carry them into effect; that there was the most shameful perversion—when I had no idea of any of my family taking the post in the Customs as it is said Edward is appointed to. All this was previous to his going to England, but when he was determined to go, and informed me of it, I prepared every document to shew the government the culpability, the imbecility, the unprincipled conduct of the officers of this post in the execution of their duty. If Government has removed one it will the rest, not but I think Mr. Wanton should be fully provided for during his life, as I wish he may, also Mrs. Walton. I have had no conversation with either on the subject as yet, as it is only report of Edward's appointment. There has been no bargain, as is generally supposed, but everything fair and honorable will be done if the report is confirmed. When I have further information on this subject I will consult you in some important points, for there is no one I can place that implicit confidence in on this side of the water who is capable of giving advice. I think it is probable I shall be obliged to go to Halifax to see Sir George Prevost on the subject of his proclamation and applying the money granted by Parliament for a vessel in the service of the Superintendent (of Trade and Fisheries), if that office is to be kept up under the new regulations. Capt. Hunter is just going off. I have not time to say another word but that I am, affectionately and truly yours,

Geo. Leonard.

Judge Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, 2d June, 1809.

My dear Winslow,—Altho' my situation in point of income will not for the present be bettered by my appointment to the Bench, yet upon the whole I am satisfied with it as I consider it as a permanent provision for life, and a relief from the corroding and unpleasant cares and business of a professsion in which there is so little satisfaction in this country. The new Chief Justice* will I presume make his arrangements as soon as he conveniently can for a removal to Fredericton. I conceive it absolutely necessary that there should be one Judge in the City and this will of course be my post. I have too many things to say to you, to attempt to commit them to paper, and must therefore defer them till we meet. I wonder I have not a line from T. Coffin. I imagine there could have been no communication of the appointment from the Secretary of State's office in season for the packet, as nothing was known here respecting it till the return of the Post from Fredericton last evening. At any rate I hope Coffin was not prevented from writing by sickness.

One of Lord Sheffield's last phamphlets, just published, came addressed to you from the author under cover to Leonard by the last English mail. There is not much in it. I shall forward it by the first Vessel, as I also will Chalmer's deputation to Miller, which is made out and only waits for his signature. Tell Clopper I am much obliged to him for his kind attention in communicating my appointment; it was the first intelligence I received of it, about 8 o'clock last evening. Adieu! Yours ever most affectionately,

——— W. C.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow Jr.

Kingsclear, August 3, 1809.

My dear Edward,—Your last letters (from the Cape) were cordials to us. How fortunate have you been to escape from a scene of sloth and inactivity and from their never failing attendants, vice and dissipation? Your sister Pen: has just sealed an immense letter at my table, and I presume has precluded the necessity of my meddling with domestic concerns. Our public affairs go on very quietly, altho' the people in general do not relish a system which appears to be rather too highly seasoned with what an American poet calls "Military Acids." While however there remains any appearance of misunderstanding between Great Britain and America, it may be very politic to place these colonies under the command of Military officers of respectable rank and character. Ours is an unexceptionable

*Jonathan Bliss.

Military officer* but he is wonderfully out of his element in a Chancery Court or a Land office. His attentions to myself and the family are very particular and a perfect confidence & harmony exists between us. * *

When you left me I was under some apprehension that exception would be taken to my holding the office of Surveyor of the Woods for this province, under a stiff opinion that Judges should hold no other employment. As that office was held by me independent of the Government of New Brunswick, I did not readily or tamely assent to its relinquishment. The matter is now settled in my favour. Mr. Miller is appointed a deputy in this district.

The interruption of the Baltic Trade & other obvious causes, have occasioned a most extraordinary demand for ton timber. It sells as high as 25s. pr. ton at St. John, & higher at Miramichi. This rage for cutting timber obliges me to keep a sharp look out. I have at this time several causes depending in the Admiralty for trespasses committed on the King's reserves. Miller is also appointed deputy Marshal in the Admiralty for this district. * * * 'Twas impossible for him to get ahead as a merchant here, the decent traders have literally been overwhelmed by a torrent of shoemakers, taylors, & tinkers, who have started from their stalls and become merchants all at once.

You see my dear Boy that there is a kink in my fingers—indeed I am scarcely able to hold a pen at this moment. I have had a most tremendous fit of the Gout. I am now beginning to ride and I suppose I shall soon be well.

To the amiable family at No. 6 Phillimore Place remember me most affectionately—next to my own I love them, and I experience the same anxieties about 'em as I do for those who are nearest of kin to me. While you are in England I wish you would procure and send out to me by some of the fall ships a small assortment of Garden seeds—a few quarts of early pease & some broad beans will be particularly acceptable. Let me hear from you by every possible conveyance. My mind is occupied with thoughts of you continually. God bless you prays your Friend & Father,

Ed. Winslow.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Kingsclear, 25th October, 1809.

It is not in my power My dear son to give you any just idea of the pleasure which I have receiv'd from the perusal of your letters. They carry such evident marks of satisfaction and betray qualities so amiable & honorable to yourself—that they have operated like an invigorating cordial to my heart. I had symptoms of Gout flying about me when I receiv'd 'em—but instead of fixing in the extremities (as usual) the current of enjoyment from your letter & Wentworth's (rec'd the same day) set so strong against 'em, that like Mary Magdalen's Devils, they all flew off together, and I have not had a minute's pain since. Having now with a fervor which nothing but Christian gratitude and parental affection united, could possibly inspire—offered my thanks to the Giver of every good and perfect gift—for the preservation of my son—and having also indulg'd all these emotions of sensibility which naturally arose from contemplating the uncommon goodness of your friend & benefactor Capt. Weltden & your other friends, I will pass from a subject so tender & affecting to tell you—That we are all perfectly well and comfortable. My situation is rendered much more eligible by the introduction of Mr. Bliss & Mr. Chipman on the Bench. Mr. Bliss (the Chief Justice) has purchas'd Lyman's house, and I dare say will make a pleasant addition to our Society. Chipman will remain at St. John (of course), he is perfectly reconciled to this arrangement, indeed I think it's better for him than if he had been Chief Justice for then he must have removed to Fredericton.

During the short time which I exercised the office of President, I had an opportunity of making some very important arrangements for the Country, and I had also a favorable chance of evincing to the world that I was capable of forgiving those who were supposed to have persecuted me. Some circumstances between the late Chief Justice & myself—remain to this day unexplained. You have some knowledge of the events which took place, and you will discern the peculiar delicacy of my situation (so far as related to him) when placed at the head of the Government—and it will afford you pleasure to hear—that my public conduct in very critical & difficult instances met his most explicit approbation, and he was pleased to say that "in my conduct towards individuals I had given proof of unexampled candor & magnanimity." After his death his venerable and truly amiable widow, in a manner which excited sensations that can never be described, transferred to me the Chief Justice's elegant silk Robes, Bands, &c, and asked me to wear them for her husband's sake. I have pride in relating these circumstances to you, for various reasons.

I still retain the Office of Surveyor of the Woods for the province, and I have procured a deputation for Miller, and it's a very convenient thing for both of us. I issue the permits and he inspects the timber for which he gets 10s. per day. The suspension of the Baltic trade & the impudent political arrangements of the Americans have caused an extensive and eager demand for the timber of this country, & increased the business of my office very materially.

I have not yet sold the Nova Scotia Land, but I am negotiating for the sale of it. Miller has been to see it, I expect to get £250 currency for it.* You know what a wrecked, miserable situation my house and farm was in—I have put 'em both in good order & this year I have raised a crop, which (tho' not very abundant) will be very useful to us—and I am getting up my stock of cattle & sheep again. I've found a match for the Count & have built a smart double sleigh—and at present we are blessed with very good servants. Since you left me I have paid off £400 or £500 of the old debts which tormented me so grievously, and I hope if I live a few years to get clear of the remainder.

James Frazer will leave this soon for England, by him we shall all write you. I shall at the same time write to my valuable and affectionate friends at Phillimore-place, in the mean time offer to 'em all the acknowledgements that a grateful heart can dictate for their goodness to us all. I cannot conceive what has become of all the letters which have been written within these six months by Fitzgerald, Ryan, &c, &c, &c, they have been numerous and lengthy to my knowledge.

I hope to GOD the business will be so arranged that you will sail again with Capt. Weltden—he is so valuable and so respectable a man that I feel extremely tenacious of the connection. Continue to inform me of everything that happens to you, and may GOD preserve you from every evil, prays your affectionate father,

Ed. Winslow.

You will see Col. Williamson & remember me kindly to him, also to Mrs. & Miss Chalmers. I retain a grateful sense of their civilities.

Penelope Winslow† to Edward Winslow, Jr.

30th October 1809.

* * * Sunday night.

The last mail brought us your long looked for letters from England, and relieve us from a weight of anxiety. I dare not wish to see you in New Brunswick while your prospects seem so fair and your pursuits so advantageous, but to hear frequently that you are well and happy is the only thing that can reconcile me to your absence. I most sincerely wish you may continue with Capt. Weltden, for I am quite sure you will never meet with such another man; if he is as agreeable and sensible as he is good and handsome he must be a great way out of the common way.

*This land was at Chedabucto, N. S., a gift to Winslow from his old friend, Major General H. M. Gordon. See Winslow's letter under date 7th June, 1806.

†The younger Penelope Winslow, the judge's daughter. She was a very clever young lady and quite a belle in her day. Her letters are particularly entertaining. She was devoted to her family.

I am grieved to say that Papa is just laboring under a fit of the gout, I flatter myself it will not be as severe as common—he has been unusually well all summer; But I think of late an attack of gout affects his spirits much more than it used to do. We are delighted with the Idea of Wentworth's spending the winter with us, and expect him in about a fortnight—his society will be a great pleasure and comfort to Papa, who feels the want of one of his sons at home more and more every day. * * *

You will get all the news of course from all your friends, but that must not prevent my giving all I can muster. Our summer has been uncommonly Brilliant from the unusual interference of Hymen. I assure he has made sad havoc among the Fredericton Belles. Miss Jane Garden* was foremost on the File—your flame Fanny Jarvis and Capt. Maule the next. My favorite Bell Phair and Lieut. Stratton followed—and last of all Frederick Robinson and Miss Jane Paddock. I'm sure you'll think there is a grand Reformation in the fashions since your departure, for you know matrimony has not been much in vogue before in our day. Fanny Sproule and Moodie are just where you left them. But the world say they are inevitably to be married shortly, I confess I have no faith in such unreasonable long flirtations.

Mary† has just presented the Public with another son, the comforts of wedlock are coming upon her all at once. Elizabeth is as great a Pickle as ever, and Katie a sweet child. George Sproule is on a visit to the City—the 23rd regiment have just arrived there, of course she'll bring up a great supply of hearts. Sammy Ellegood is on a visit to his Brother—he has returned quite a finished buck—as I have no taste for such things (especially when they come from New York) he is no favorite of mine. William French is also on a visit to his friends, I have not seen him. I have not been able to get sight of Duncan yet except across the Church. We are very grateful my dear Edward, for your entertaining Journal—do my dearest Brother write us by every opportunity. John Allen is duly elected a member of Parliament this season—the Phairs desire to be particularly remembered to you, indeed there are so many who have given me love and compliments to send that it would take me a month to enclose it all separately, you must therefore taken the whole society in a lump. If you have more cash than you want I wish you would send me a Black Lace Veil by Fraser. I'm told they are very reasonable in England, and here they are rather beyond me. As I don't know how you stand in point of money this may be a very improper and extravagant request—if it is I beg you will forget that I made it.

*Jane Garden married William Thompson of Toronto. She died in Woodstock, N. B., in 1848, and is buried in the old church yard there.

†Mary Miller, the sister of the writer. Her little girl Elizabeth or "Betts" (as her mother calls her under date January 17th, 1808) died in 1810 to her parents' great sorrow.

I have lived a very retired domestic life for the last year, scarcely staid a night from home except one month I passed with Mrs. Hunter, while her General was away—she is a charming woman and I can't help hoping that I am a favorite of hers—as I should not be willing to bestow as much esteem and affection as I cannot help feeling for her on a person who cared nothing about me. Do my dear Edward offer my most sincere regards to Mrs. Weltden and believe me with unabated affection,

Your Sister P.

I have not time to read this over—you must therefore correct the Manifold Blunders as you go along.

Edward Leonard to Judge Edward Winslow.

15th December 1809; At the Vale.

My dear Friend,—I am grieved to hear by my son Richard,* who is now here, of your illness with the Gout. I hope it was at the heighth when he left you and that I shall find you in good spirits when I get to Fredericton. My desire to be there is the pleasure of seeing you. I have no political or domestic objects in view there. I shall in future be tranquil on all Fishing bills and all other subjects on which our friends have for years past come forward with so much intemperate zeal.

My residence here so long has engaged my attention to my domestic concerns instead of devoting my whole thoughts and exertions to those of others. Your life has also been spent in the service of others, perhaps more than any man's of the present age, and how little gratitude is shown by the world here for it. To your more distant friends you are indebted for your respectable situation and independence. I truly feel grateful to heaven for your success and that it was brought forward by such characters. You must be proud to acknowledge the obligation to them instead of to those from whom you had reason to expect every exertion for the services you had rendered them.

I hope our friend Chipman will get well of his gout so as to be at Fredericton at the meeting of the Council.

I have not yet my letters by the October mail, I think you will hear everything favourable from our friend Lutwyche from what he last wrote me.

Richard is now waiting by his horse for this—Adieu.

God bless you and yours,

Geo. Leonard.

*Richard Leonard was a lieutenant in the 54th regiment, and in 1805 was stationed at Gibraltar. He retired on half pay and was appointed fort major (or town major) at Fredericton, a position previously held by Captain Daniel Lyman. The latter sold out to his successor, receiving £400 sterling as compensation.

Judge Edward Winslow to E. G. Lutwyche.

Kingsclear, [about 1809.]

If I were preparing to write to a churl or a man that I did not love, I should have a delightful opportunity (after six months misery and distress) to give him a description of my grievances—but this, my dear Lutwyche, would be a bad treat to serve up to a friend. * * *

Ever since I left England it has been one of my enjoyments to write to you and thro' you to your daughter, and I was wounded in a very tender place when I was deprived of that comfort. My heart however has not suffered by this unrelenting Gout. In its approaches to that citidal I suspect the place was found to be preoccupied: had it been hollow or ungrateful such an insidious tormentor might have stolen his way in. * *

My son Edward's last tributes of acknowledgment are strong and pathetic. I should not love him so well if he was not sensible of your goodness. Captain Weltden's partiality to him afforded me more satisfaction than any other circumstance. Catharine or yourself might have viewed my son with complacency because he is good tempered and accommodating and because of that peculiar diffidence—the source of which has been so difficult to discern—but the confidence and esteem of Capt. Weltden are proofs of more substantial qualifications, and this my dear friends is a comfortable consolation to me. I have been so much the subject of God's goodness and mercy of late that I dare not anticipate an evil. My son is among you. He has been snatched by you from scenes of indolence which might have ended in dissipation.

If he does not remain with Captain Weltden I hope he may find some other situation in the same line. I shall feel impatient till I know the result.

Col. E. G. Lutwyche to Edward Winslow.

Dec'r 20, 1809.

It is now, my dear Winslow, a very long time since my eyes have been blessed with what I call a Letter from you. The scraps I have rec'd might be called such from any one else. I fear indeed you have too good a reason to offer for your silence.

I have no objection to the American embargo, it may continue for ever it they choose—it concerns not this Country nor me, but we deprecate that on your fingers, and anxiously hope for its speedy removal, trusting that when it is you will indulge us with some of your enlivening effusions, to which we look forward with as much impatience as a Girl for the arrival of her Lover. Could you realise how they are valued by us and see the eyes sparkle with delight when a Letter of yours is announced, you would think nothing of the trouble to give so much pleasure. We read and re-read them and then give a taste to some of our friends. * * *

Edward is our daily visitor & it will gratify you to know he rises daily in our estimation. From him I learn with pleasure that you are pursuing vigorously the plan of extinguishing your debts. Go on & prosper my dear Sir. * * *

The season of festivity commenced with the Jubilee & has continued and will I suppose to the end of the year. Supper parties with Rack punch and vocal music fill up every evening and so pleasant do the evenings pass that we seldom part until the Clock strikes little hours.

* * Capt. Weltden, Edward and myself dined at Sir Wm. Pepperrel's where we met Royal & Mr. Price. Royal is 88 and as hearty as a Buck. He ate like a Trojan and drank very decently when your health was drunk by all with great pleasure. Sir Wm. was better than usual and shewed his regard for you in his attention to your son.

That you and yours may enjoy without alloy the festivities of the approaching season is the united wish of this family.

Yrs, E. G. L.

Judge Edward Winslow to Lord Liverpool.

Fredericton, New Brunswick,

5th February, 1810.

My Lord,—I had this day the honor of receiving your Lordship's letter of the 1st Nov'r, addressed to me as President of this province,* acquainting me "That His Majesty has been pleased to honor your Lordship with the seals of the Colonial and War Departments in the room of Lord Viscount Castlereagh, an event upon which I humbly presume to offer my most sincere and cordial congratulations. Your Lordship's letter was immediately transmitted to Major General Hunter, commanding His Majesty's troops in the province of New Brunswick, who by special mandamus (notified by Lord Castlereagh) was appointed President of the Province. In that mandamus it is ordered that in case of his absence the civil government should be exercised by the military officer next in rank doing duty within the district, a case which has already once happened, and altho' the Lieutenant Colonel of a Fencible regiment who succeeded to the command was in this instance a man of amiable manners and respectable

*This is curious: Winslow had retired from the position of president and commander in chief a year and nine months previously, but the officials of Downing Street seem to have been unaware of the fact.

character, we cannot divest ourselves of the apprehensions that in the fluctuating and precarious operations of the military service the important civil concerns of our province may be committed to officers of a very different description. * * *

This measure my Lord is evidently a deviation from His Majesty's original instructions to His Governor General, which are considered here as part of the law of the Land, and I humbly conceive it was hastily adopted by His Majesty's late minister under the pressure of supposed emergency. As the oldest surviving member of Mis Majesty's Council, I consider it a duty which I owe the Country to draw the attention of His Majesty's present ministers to this important object, in the full hope and persuasion that such a revision may be had and such steps taken as may be more congenial to the principles of the constitution and be more beneficial to His Majesty's service.

I have the honor to be with most perfect respect, my Lord,

Your Lordship's most devoted humble serv't,

Edward Winslow.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Kingsclear, 6th February, 1810.

My very dear Son,—Since I wrote you I have passed through one continued scene of persecution from the Gout and after three months confinement I am at this time scarce able to stand and in great pain. My friends are expressing such anxiety for me to go to town (the General Assembly being now in Session) that I fear they will compel me to undertake it. What the result of such an undertaking may be is rather problematical. Your friend General Coffin and the Speaker,* both now in the Drawing-room, all of 'em have exerted their influence on this occasion, and the two Mr. Chipmans have been up on the same errand. You know the powerful eloquence of the General and all the rest of 'em. * * *

The death of your Aunt Penelope† was sudden indeed and the loss of Miller's beautiful little Betsy has been a severe affliction to us. Henry Smith has lost a charming little daughter which has almost killed the delicate and affectionate mother.‡ Your other friends and connections are well. I am obliged to write by "hitches" for fear of bringing the Gout back to my fingers. Indeed only about ten days ago I had reason to apprehend that I would never write again. For the sake of my family and friends, and for no other reason, would I wish to prolong a life which lately has been one scene of constant pain and misery. Possibly after three months of unremitted agony I may indulge the hope of some abatement and you know that my spirits never fail me.

†Penelope Winslow died January 23, 1810.

‡Henry Smith's wife was a daughter of Colonel Stephen Miller and a cousin of Judge Winslow. Henry Smith was a magistrate and merchant and a useful and active resident of Fredericton. His family consisted of four sons and a daughter; the latter married G. Ludlow Robinson of Fredericton. One of the sons was the late J. Woodforde Smith, deputy provincial secretary for many years.

Wentworth I presume is ere this promoted: he was senior Ensign when we heard last and there was a vacant Lieutenancy. The character he bears is most pleasing to my pride, "A young officer of great promise, rigidly attentive to his duty and of exemplary manners," and I can add (what under all circumstances is most extraordinary) he is a correct economist, having never once drawn on me for assistance since I parted with him. We were disappointed at not seeing him this winter, having obtained six months leave from Gen'l Prevost, but the commanding officer of the garrison did not incline to part with him, and Went concludes most manfully that it is all for the best. Before this reaches you Sir John & Lady Wentworth will be in London. You know the brotherly affection which subsists between us, and I must entreat you to pay your respects to them. * *

With the most anxious solicitude for your welfare I am my dear—very dear boy,

Your affectionate Father,

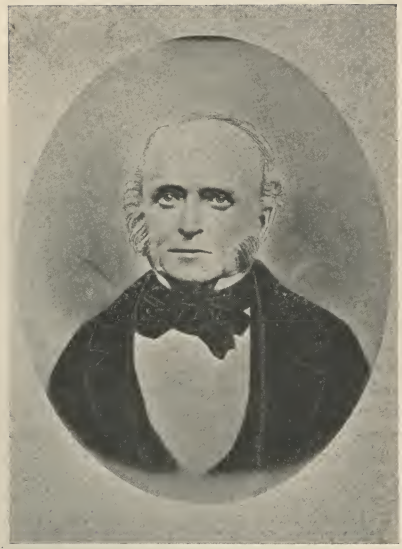
Ed. Winslow.

Mrs. Weltden to Judge Edward Winslow.

Feb'y 25, [1810?]

My dear Sir,—Your son tells me I can write now without putting you to the expence of postage, & I have stationed myself at the corner of a table at which Weltden and him are busily employed to do so if it were only to congratulate you on your recovery from the severe fit of gout & to rejoice with you that our Edward is going out with Weltden again. I consider this Voyage as establishing him in the Service & I trust my dear Sir he will not only do well for himself in it, but in time be enabled to assist his family in a degree.

I wish to send my friends your Daughters some useful marks of my regard, but Ned cannot recommend anything to be more useful than stockings. I therefore request them to divide two dozen pair amongst them. Ned begs I will say "he will write all he can," but he is very much engaged at this moment in preparation for the approaching Voyage, & particularly so in consequence of Weltden's severe indisposition—thank God within these few days Weltden is better & ere the ship sails I trust he will be quite well—my father too has had a severe bilious attack but by following closely the prescription of his Physician he is himself again. I have been the only stout one amongst them.



JOHN FRANCIS WENTWORTH WINSLOW.
Sheriff of Carleton County, N. B.

Poor Hazen left England rather out of health, but I trust the Voyage will restore him for he is a very valuable young man.

I beg you will write us my dear Sir as often and as much as you can, for your Letters are a great treat to us all. My father writes himself, I have therefore nothing to say for him. Weltden joins me in affectionate regards to you and all the family. I am always My dear Sir, Your sincere friend,

C. Weltden.

P .S. Ned is quite well—& quite happy.

Penelope Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

26th March 1810, Kingsclear.

Sunday Morning.

I am happy to find by your letter of the 11th Dec. (which we received but yesterday) that some of our numerous letters have at length reached you. Indeed, my dear Edward, I do not know if I should have had courage to have commenced another Epistle to you unless you had acknowledged the receipt of some of them. I should like to know what altered your mind about writing by the January mail. Once more I desire to impress upon your mind that we are not as particular here about postage as you Englishmen are—and I assure you if we could afford to eat 8 dozen Oysters at a meal, we would not think it extravagant to pay fifteen pence every week for a letter from a friend. But you have odd notions of economy, however I beg you'll save a penny any other way than by depriving us the pleasure of a line from you by every packet. I admire the way in which you spend your time, and I cannot help now and then wishing I was living with you at Mrs. Sherwoods, or any where within the reach of No. 6,* as it appears to me that place must be the seat of happiness and peace. Papa has had a shocking winter, he has not only been presecuted with the gout but has had other complaints still more alarming, nor has be attempted to walk from one room to the other for more than four months till last Wednesday, & this trifling exertion has brought on the gout again, and his feet are now completely crippled. I however flatter myself the spring will restore him to health. He has had his friends Chipman and Leonard &c, &c, with him a great deal, as the House sat much longer than usual, and they dined with us in the family way once every week. Papa is determined to make an excursion to St. Andrews in June, as every one thinks such a jaunt will be of more service to him than anything he can try; he is determined to take me with him, by way of nurse. As I acted a great while in that capacity—he seems to prefer my company to any of the rest. There is a violent talk of this regiments being moved early in the Spring in which case we shall be put to our trumps in good earnest—for since Providence deprived us of every Brother we have, their places have been partly supplied by Jenkins* and Bradshaw, both of which will of course move with the rest. Your friend Phair is appointed a Lieut. in the 4th West India regiment—he drank tea with us the other evening—his sisters have not honor'd us as often as usual this winter—there's a great intimacy between them and the Sproules—which you'll think rather extraordinary (if anything deserves that name that happens in Fredericton). Fanny is a spinster still. Moodie has been sick all winter and I assure you it has not improved his appearance much. I'm afraid that match will not take place as soon as the world expects—indeed my faith in mankind evaporates daily —for (saving your presence) they are a slippery race.

Mary and her children are spending the day with us—her youngest is a beautiful Boy, and Kate an uncommon fine child tho' not a beauty. It is a long time since we heard from poor Tom, 'tis said his regiment was at Gaudaloupe. I almost dread to hear a word about him, for I too well know his enterprising spirit would drive him into danger's way if possible. I cannot write to him for I don't know how to address my letters. Of course you hear nothing of Murray, or you would certainly mention him, do not give over your enquiries I entreat you. Wentworth has a Lieutenancy at which he is not a little elated. I wish dear Edward you would write to him, he thinks it hard that you never notice him in that way. It's a good while since he wrote to us, But the opportunities from N. F. Ld.† are not frequent in winter. I won't mention our disappointment at not seeing him this winter, for that's a subject that sets me in heroics directly. It was the good natured Gen'l Moore that prevented him, as Sir G. Prevost gave him leave. Charles Lee and Sally Odell are flirting away famously—and the wise world says they will undoubtedly be married in due time. I assure you it wears a very serious aspect, But you know Charles is a little given to change, and I should not be surprised if he took another direction before his circumstances would admit of his taking a wife. I'm sorry to say he does not visit us as often as he did, for I can't help feeling a school-fellow liking for him, and regret that he has taken it into his head to keep at such a distance. The family have not heard from Andrew Phair since the expedition to Gaudaloupe, of course they are as anxious as we are about Tom. I'm told William leaves this in June. Your old flame, Eliza Paddock, made a long visit to her sister Robinson this winter. I begin to

The Phairs love to you.

Judge Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, 20 May, 1810.

My dear Winslow,—I thank you for your letter of the 16th inst. I do indeed participate most intimately with you in all your joys and all your sorrows. The accounts from Edward are consolatory and flattering in the highest degree, and there is certainly the fairest prospect of his arriving to a situation which will enable him to gratify his most benevolent views & wishes for his friends as well as for himself.

The Speaker has received a letter from Lutwyche by one of the late mails, I do not know exactly which, but I presume the Jan'y or Feb'y, in which he says that he has presented another memorial from him (the Speaker), for the office of Atty. Genl. backed by Genl. Carleton; now I do not believe that the Governor would have done this unless he had thought his recommendation would be attended to by Lord Liverpool.

I congratulate you very sincerely on the issue of your public accounts; the very dread of the responsibility to be incurred by calling out the Militia hastened the death of your predecessor,* and I think you have been extremely fortunate, as well as judicious, in the steps you adopted to extricate yourself from the embarrassments incident to the situation in which you were placed upon succeeding to the Command of this Province.

I am very glad to learn from my Agents that the Salary is, as you informed me, subject to the reduction of 10 per cent tax only; they also write that our friend T. A. C.† had been very seriously ill, and still continued very unwell; now my dear Winslow, I am very much inclined to doubt, whether with all his good fortune and riches, he has enjoyed life more than we have done with all our perplexities and embarrassments, and when he has at length arrived to a situation, when the otium cum dignitate might have been justly anticipated, he is deprived by his ill health of every source of comfort and enjoyment. This is indeed at best but a shabby world and the quitting it of little moment were it not on account of those who look to us for assistance and support.

†Thomas Aston Coffin at this time had been knighted and was now Sir Thos. Aston Coffin, baronet.

I have disposed of your bill fortunately at par, tho' the exchange has been for some time past 2 1-2 to 3 per cent discount—the balance I shall retain after paying the demands you mention, subject to your order.

By the Post before last I wrote to Sally Winslow inclosing a letter to her from Goodall & Turner,* I wish to know whether she received it.

I am rejoiced to find that you can once more get on horse-back; persevere in this and every other mild kind of exercise that you are equal to without intermission, it is the only chance we have for preventing our becoming cripples from our inexorable malady;—I yet remain in tolerable health & security from its attacks, but it is by dint of great temperance & caution, and being on my feet from morning to night, sometimes with great pain from my exertions.

Adieu! Your's ever most affectionately & faithfully,

W. Chipman.

George Heriot to Judge Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 13th June, 1810.

Dear Winslow,—I embrace the opportunity, which a few minutes present me, of acknowledging your Letter of the 30th Ultimo, and to assure you that I shall always take pleasure in transmitting the Weekly Papers of this place, as they seem to afford you amusement. If you have not already perused the correspondence between Marquis Wellesley and Mr. Pinckney, you will find it in the Montreal Gazette. The American Government has evinced throughout its whole conduct the imbecility of old age. Had the chief offices been filled by old women they would have displayed greater capacity. * * *

I believe I formerly observed to you that provisions had become very scarce in Quebec and Montreal, and that the articles of life had mounted up to a price that is almost incredible, when compared with that of former times. This circumstances arises from the sudden increase of commerce, and the subsequent influx of population. A laborer now gets 10s. to 12s. per day, and I myself paid for a man with a single horse and cart for about ten hours, no less than 30s., only four days ago. The only remedy which occurs to me, would be to cut roads through different parts of the country so as to communicate with greater facility with the new Townships, and the State of Vermont, from whence we might at least procure a quantity of Beef. You seem to possess in New Brunswick great abundance of every article for the support of life, and to enjoy the most perfect undisturbed state. But your society is composed of reasonable people who have learnt to set a value on the tranquility of retirement, from a recollection of the evils of warfare and internal dissention.

I shall be happy to be favored with your correspondence whenever you find it convenient to write, and with best wishes have the pleasure to subscribe myself, My dear Winslow, truly Yours,

——— Geo. Heriot.

E. G. Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

July 13, 1810.

My dear Winslow,—Having written you recently by the packet, this is meerly to inform you that I send by the Earl Percy, Ship of Mr. Vennor's, a Box containing the Saddle I mentioned, four Bottles of Eau medecinale, with a Book of directions & testimonies of its salutary effects & as there was some room in the Box, a few articles which will go without any additional expence, the cheapness of which will be a saving to you and your family.

As the Gout has hitherto been considered incapable of any amelioration, every attempt having proved ineffectual & ultimately injurious, it will require some faith as they call it, or more properly confidence in the medicine to make trial of it.

Mr. Jones's Book will create a degree of that, which I can strengthen by conversation with my friend Mr. Smith, the Banker, who was attacked very seriouly in the head & stomach, so much so that his life was considered in danger. He told me that after suffering ten or twelve days, his friend insisted on his seeing a Physician, even his friendly Apothecary recommended it. Mr. Jones was sent for, & after hearing his case and what had been done, that the Grand Canal was cleared, did not hesitate to advise the use of this medicine, of the efficacy of which he had had ample proofs: but in consideration of the discipline he had undergone, recommended his dividing the Bottle into three doses, taking one then, another the next morning & if necessary the other third in the Evening. Mr. Jones paid him that visit only, & one Bottle has cured him. He is fully persuaded that if he had applied to that remedy at first, he should have escaped much pain and confinement and, from former experiences, supposes that without the medicine he should have been confined three weeks longer and endured much pain. Instances happen daily of its efficacy.

I will say no more upon the subject but leave you to use your own judgment, trusting you will have cause to bless me for forwarding relief to you when you shall be again attacked,

So God bless you & yours,

E. G. Lutwyche.

Look in the Saddle and you'll find a paper parcel in which you'll discover four Bottles — be careful of them.

I am happy, my dear Sir, to find that you write in such good spirits, as your letters always contain something spirituel and which makes me smile Although I cannot command my time so as to be able to write you by every Post, I hope you will not allow your correspondence to drop on that account.

It gives me much pleasure to learn that Miss Ann Coffin is married to a husband who in case of accidents will leave her something. From the little I saw of that Lady I put her down in my memory as a favorite. * *

Although Great Britain is abundantly supplied with all kinds of Timber and produce of the North of Europe, yet the commerce of Canada seems to be upon the increase, and it is supposed that between eight and nine hundred vessels will enter at the port of Quebec this year. Provisions as well as Labour are exceedingly high and we cannot supply the want of servants by antediluvians.

I returned a few days ago from the Jacques Cartier, a rapid river about 30 miles from Quebec, where I had been on a fishing party. It is particularly beautiful and romantic and is of considerable magnitude. Although I had often before visited it, I cannot refrain from admiring it every time I see it. I composed a small ode in Latin addressed to the River, of which the following verses descriptive of the scenery which it exhibits, are a part—

Ad Fluvium Iacartinum.

Angustos inter scopulos repressus,
Rivum vexatus fundis per asperum
Undas, et atras fluctibus proruptis
Lambis speluncas.

Per Saxa, per agros, strepiter fremente
Fertilem agis cursum, et umbrosa
Nemora sonant, dum Laurentum patis
Ore spumante.

I now employ my leisure hours in painting with oil colours, and am finishing a Venus and two Cupids with which I am tolerably pleased. Pray write me soon and believe me my dear Sir, Very truly yours, Geo. Heriot.

George Heriot to Judge Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 7th August, 1810.

My dear Sir,—In order to communicate to Mrs. Sheaffe, who is at present at Three Rivers, the intelligence of the marriage of her amiable relation, I took the liberty of enclosing your letter to your old acquaintance the Colonel, who in return wrote me the letter which I now transmit.

You will see from the Newspapers what a disorderly set the inhabitants of this province are, I mean the Lower Orders, particularly of the Towns. You will likewise remark that upwards of two hundred Soldiers are at present engaged in making a road to the American States line, which will shorten the distance from hence to Boston nearly two hundred miles, and besides afford us a good supply of beef and other provisions from the Townships. In short we flatter ourselves to derive great advantages from this communication with our own Townships and with Vermont, and hope in a short time to live like little Irish Kings, in a Land overflowing with milk and honey. Cannot something similar towards the improvement of your province likewise be effected by Military aid ? and could not the road between Fredericton and St. Johns be made practicable for carriages ? I hope the act which the British Legislature are about to pass, laying a duty upon all timber imported from foreign Countries, will be essentially beneficial to your Colony as well as to this.

I hope to have the pleasure of hearing from you soon and remain, My Dear Sir,

Very truly Yours,

Geo. Heriot.

Judge Edward Winslow to George Heriot.

Kingsclear, Sept. 1810.

Your two Letters of the 7th Aug't & 5th Sep't have been delivered to me since my return from my tour, and I have offer'd up a concise but very emphatical thanksgiving to GOD and my friends for the kind interest they have taken in my concerns. You are among the foremost my dear Heriot. * * *

Col: Sheaffe* is a man whose early progress in life was watched with a parental anxiety by me, somewhat resembling what I now experience for this lively, honorable boy† of my own. His father and mine were old-fashioned friends, sincere & affectionate. His amiable mother, with daughters beautiful beyond description, (amidst scenes of war & difficulty)

*Colonel Sheaffe of the 49th regiment was born in Boston in 1763. A very full biography covering more than nine pages is contained in Sabine's Loyalists of the American Revolution. Col. Sheaffe had a long and distinguished military history, which began in Lord Percy's regiment, the 5th of the British line. He served in the West Indies, in Ireland, Canada, etc. Was present at Nelson's assault on Copenhagan in 1801. In the war of 1812 he commanded the British at the capture of York (now Toronto). He rose to the rank of lieutenant general in the army, was knighted and became Sir Roger Hale Sheaffe, baronet. He died at Edinburgh in 1851, aged 88 years. He was greatly esteemed by his relatives, to whom he was particularly kind and attentive.

became objects of my unremitted attention, and the searcher-of-Hearts is a witness for me, how often and with what peculiar delight I have since reflected upon the frequent opportunities which those turbulent times offered to soothe, protect & comfort them. Hale became exclusively my charge (without knowing it himself)—nor did I ever violate the solemn parting engagement which I made to his trembling mother. He remained with me until Lord Percy (most fortunately for him) literally took him away from me at Staten-Island. The rest of his history—so highly honorable to himself—is well known to you. I state this merely as a reason for my preference for the 49th Reg't.* I have friends to whom I can fairly look for assistance on this occasion, but my mind would not be at ease unless I could place my son under a faithful guardian & adviser. Keep this letter as a deposit.

I am at present tormented by a vile head-ache which almost disqualifies me from writing. This I fear will carry strong marks of such a malady.

The country which I have lately visited is by far the most interesting & delightful part of the province of New Brunswick. The late American embargo has given a spring to the Commerce, and thereby extended the improvements to an incredible degree. The Banks of the St. Croix—(formerly Scoudiac) which in 1796†, were on both sides deserts, now exhibit uncommon scenes of enterprise — industry & activity. The American settlements being directly opposite to ours causes a spirit of emulation which is highly beneficial to both. * * *

Sir John Wentworth to Judge Edward Winslow.

London, 34 Nottingham Place,
19th Sept., 1810.

My dear Sir,—I have now to acknowledge with the greatest pleasure the rec't of your very acceptable letter of 25th July. The measures you have reported to me, are highly expedient & such as I should have pursued myself. Mr. Miller's report and Hatch's reports will be very useful to me in conducting the representations necessary for our Service; if we can get them here, free from Postage, which may perhaps be done through our friends Messrs. Black of your Colony, by some of their vesssels to Liverpool, to the care of their correspondents there, or even via Scotland. A Box with all these papers might be sent up to me here, at a small expence, & very safely, if closely packed to prevent rubbing on the journey.

*This was Colonel Sheaffe's own regiment.

†This was at the time of the international boundary arbitration. Colonel Edward Winslow was appointed secretary of the commission at the first meeting held in St. Andrews, October 4, 1796.

The omission of the Clause of reservation of pine timber in the patents for Land passing under the new Instructions, is much to be regretted, I wrote fully upon the subject, but have not yet rec'd an answer. In confidence, to you, I fear we shall lose that timber, and should fail in making suit for seizures or penaltys. But I will press for a better authority & endeavour also to get an instruction to guide us. * * *

I am very happy to hear of our dear Lieut's welfare, & will do all in my power to promote him, his & your wishes; I have already applied for his removal, and in a few days expect a favorable answer. It was recommended to me, not to limit his removal to a Regiment serving in N. America, because if there were not a vacancy there, it might delay his wishes. I will be responsible for the Fees—& will look for a good regiment, good introduction & patronage in it. Your Son in the E: India service was frequently with us, is an excellent, active, * * *

Colonel Williamson to Judge Edward Winslow.

Royal Milit'y Asylum, Chelsea,
Oct'r 2d, 1810.

My Dear Winslow,—I am favored with your letter of the 10th July last and immediately made application to the Commander in Chief respecting removing your son to a Regiment of the line. Inclosed is the answer received, which will be acted upon as soon as a vacancy occurs in a respectable old Reg't. He might have been appointed to several Reg'ts, but I requested to one in Nova Scotia or Canada, as he cannot live in England upon his pay. Probably a vacancy will not happen until I hear from you. Write me your wishes by the first Packet, if you have partiality for any particular part of the World for him to serve in, and I will try to get him appointed there, but shall not refuse Nova Scotia or Canada should they offer before I hear from you. I perceive the N. B. Fencibles are made a Reg't of the Line, the 104th. I fear should they be removed from their present Quarters it would annoy our friend Hailes. I write to him on that subject. Gen'l Fox is settled at Seven Oakes in Kent. He is not at present very well from a lame foot, but hope he will soon recover. He desires his best respects to you.

Ever sincerely My dear Winslow yours,

George Williamson.

I was informed at the Horse Guards after receiving the inclosed that a similar application in favor of your son had been made by Col. H. M. Gordon.

Kensington, London, Oct. 3, 1810.

My dear Sir,—* * * Our friend Gov'r Wentworth is well. Lady W. was ill upon her arrival but is perfectly recovered—they both speak of you with a warmth of friendship that delights me to hear. You will be pleased to know he is in a fair way to receive a handsome addition to his income from Government.

A few days ago Sir Wm. Pepperell invited a number of Loyalists to dine with him in order to celebrate the completion of His Majesty's fiftieth anniversary of his reign, when we passed a very pleasant day and our absent brethren were not forgotten in the circulating glass. * * *

I am sorry to inform you the King is again attacked with a most distressing malady. It is supposed the hopeless state of a beloved Daughter*, together with his anxiety for the state of public affairs has brought it on. * * * E. G. Lutwyche.

Judge Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, 3 Nov., 1810.

My dear Winslow,—What with his own industry and some aid from his friends, Chip can at length command enough I hope to support himself for a twelve month in England, and as William Botsford has very kindly offered to remove to the City and discharge the duties of the office which Chip holds, during his absence, I have lost no time in applying to Gen'l Hunter for 12 months leave of absence for him to go to England on his private affairs, which I shall hope to receive by the return Post. He will embark in the Caladonia or Rosina, both which ships will sail in the course of the next month, and will take charge of the letters you may wish to write. If you should have occasion to write to Lord Shefield I will thank you to make favorable mention of him. His object is to prosecute his legal studies and attend the courts in Westminster Hall. If you will give him any other letters that will be of service to him I am sure you will do it. You will easily realize my anxiety respecting him.

I understand that the Earl Percy has arrived, and I presume your box with the medicine has been put on board one of the sloops during my absence in Kings County, from whence I have just returned after consigning to the Gallows and the Pillory, &c; If the medicine should kill you, you may be assured I will take none of it, I should like however to read the Book.

Chip desires his best respects; he is too busy to write and desires me to say everything for him. Adieu!

Ever and ever yours most affec'ly,

W. Chipman.

*The Princess Amelia.

HON. WARD CHIPMAN.
Chief Justice of New Brunswick.

Penelope Winslow to Edward Winslow, Junr.

Kingsclear, 17th November, 1810.

It's a long time my dear Edward since I have seated myself for the purpose of writing to you, and I confess I do not feel in a humour at present to afford you much pleasure by my epistle. We yesterday parted once more with poor Wentworth, who received a very sudden and unexpected summons to join his regiment immediately. This was a cruel disappointment to me, as we had foolishly persuaded ourselves he would be allowed to pass the winter in peace and quietness at Kingsclear. He is an uncommon fine Boy and very much grown and improved*. His account of the gambling and dissipation among the officers of the regiment at Newfoundland makes me wonder (with his disposition) that he has been preserved so long, and his being obliged to return to such a shocking place, with every temptation to err is the source of wretchedness to us all. His is the most thoughtless cheerful disposition I ever met with, and he kept the house alive while he staid with us. You may easily imagine how much we miss him now. We have got into the habit of being so stupid and miserable of late that all Wentworth's mischief was necessary to keep up our spirits. Indeed my dear Brother poor Tom's cruel fate can never, never be forgotten by me—every day adds to the pity I feel for his unmerited misfortunes and increases my regret for his eternal loss†. But I am well convinced the goodness of his heart will be more prized in the other world than it was in this. But it is not fair to write so long on this melancholy subject to you who know by experience how we feel.

Your friend Harriet staid part of last week with us to assist in fitting out Wentworth. She is the same good girl you left her, and desires her best love to you.

The Judge and myself made a short trip to St. Andrews this summer which I think has been of great service to his health, as he has not had a symptom of the gout for some months. After we returned, Hannah made Mrs. Chipman a visit—indeed it has been quite the fashion to gad this Summer. Your cousin Lucy has just returned from Halifax with Mrs Pidgeon—which I assure you has not a little elevated her. She staid two days with us since her return, but she has been so accustomed to the company of Lords and Ladys in the other province that she feels herself embarrrassed by plain people. * * The rage for Matrimony has quite subsided in Fredericton and Frances is a spinster yet, but as the Captain is still unaltered in his attentions, I flatter myself he'll prove a constant swain. There is a new Colonel just joined (Halkett). This man I fear will encourage the Captain's natural taste for drinking, which will not increase Fanny's happiness of course. * * You will be shocked to hear of poor LeBaron Hazen's death; he died last week very suddenly in consequence of taking a violent cold. He is universally lamented and his loss irreparable to his family, as he was the best of Sons and Brothers.

*Wentworth Winslow was at this time but seventeen years of age.

I hope you will see Chip—he leaves this for England in a few days and will be able to give you a great deal of news about us all. The Judge's box from England with his saddle, medicine, &c, arrived but yesterday. Papa is delighted with the saddle and the medicine he thinks invaluable. I sometimes think he almost wishes for a fit of the gout that he may have an opportunity of trying its wonderful effects. He got your letter from Madeira the 1st of June, which is the last we have heard from you — we begin to be very impatient I assure you. God bless you, my dear Brother,

Believe me with unabated affection, Ever Yours,

Penelope.

P. S. Mary and family are well. Miller has just come to eat his Sunday's dinner with us and desires his affectionate regards to you.

Judge Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, 27th Dec'r, 1810.

My dear Winslow,—I hastily scratched a line to you by the last Post and shall not be able to do more by this as he (the post man) goes off so suddenly.

As the hour of Chip's embarkation approaches my spirits fail me. He has been so good and so affectionate a son, and of late years so useful and so necessary to me, that I know not how I shall get on without him. God grant that this, I hope temporary separation only, may be for the best. I thank you again and again for your kind letters to go by him; my only fear is that you have too much over charged the picture respecting him to Lord Sheffield, and that his Lordship will consequently be too much disappointed when he sees him. I have given him a line of introduction to Sir W. Pepperell, and Parker has given him one to Tom Palmer*. Upon the whole he goes I think as well recommended and under as favorable circumstances as I could wish.

I have seen Coffin respecting the Indian Boy† and have procured a letter from him to you on the subject which I enclose. My mind is too much agitated to write more. You from experience must know my feelings tho' not exactly in the same degree, as mine is not only an only son, but an only child.

Adieu my dear friend; Many happy returns of the season to you & yours & may God multiply his blessings upon you all prays ever,

Your faithful & affectionate,

W. Chipman.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow Jr.

Kingsclear, 31st Dec'r, 1810.

My very dear Boy,—When the last budget of letters were dispatched I was ill. I have this ins't heard that there is a possibility of overtaking Chipman, and under that hope I write. One of my first duties is to thank you most cordially for your very acceptable present — it has probably mounted me for the remainder of my days — and I don't see why a saddle is not as good to make a hobby-horse out of as anything else: the receipt of yours has had another beneficial effect — as is observed by some of my friends (particularly Capt. Sproule) who swears that I have not been out of town since the landing of the Saddle for one single day. It is a truth my dear Ned, that I am proud of my Saddle & bridle, the other is growing very shabby, Mr. Went having nearly put a finishing stroke to it.

Col. Lutwyche will acquaint you with the effects of the L'eau Medicinale d'Husson. Indeed my dear Boy I have not for seven long years been so entirely free from the Gout as at this moment. I now walk with some degree of activity, & the stiffness in my knees is astonishingly abated. I do not understand this "hocus pocus" business — but the fact is that I have been reliev'd in a most miraculous manner, and as yet have no return of my pain. I wrote for a re-inforcement of the medicine and hope nothing will prevent my receiving it.

Wentworth made us a scrambling visit for a few months. A General Court Martial, or some other military service, render'd it necessary for him to return to Newfoundland before his furlo was expired. He left Halifax on the 14th ult. and I hope is safe arrived — he's a good fellow — but a Scatterbrain. I am negotiating to remove him into the Line & have some encouragement that I shall effect the object. His brother-Lieut., Richard Armstrong, is under a sentence of Court-Martial & in retirement with his poor old father.* He waits to know the King's pleasure. Penelope is staying with Mrs. Hunter; her visits to that good Lady are sometimes pretty lengthy.

*Lieut. Richard Armstrong was a son of General Richard Armstrong, formerly of the Queen's Rangers, in which he served as major during the Revolutionary war. Lieut. Armstrong and his brother Alfred were living at St. Andrews in 1817, in which year their father died. See under date 25th Janaury, 1785.

6th January, 1811.

I give over all expectation of overtaking Chipman—this must be a flying letter by the post—the communication [on the ice] with St. John is now practicable. My family are much affected by the death of Betsy Lee who is to be buried to-morrow. Mr. Anderson (William) Late Sheriff was buried yesterday. No other breaches that I recollect have been made in our Society of late. I long most ardently to hear of your return. Lose not a moment after your arrival to give us notice of it. Considerations of the last possible importance to yourself reconcile me to your absence—GOD only knows how severely I feel it. This winter I have beeen comforted by having Henry Clopper for an occasional companion. He is a kind goodhearted lad but out of spirits for want of something to do. My Sleigh & horse are in good order, and the antideluvian—Jennins—is my coachman, so we keep it up tolerably well. The Rainsfords & John Jenkins are as usual—constant visitors. In additional to my Suite, I've a gingerbread color'd young savage boy that I have undertaken to tame. A few days ago he attended me to town on horse-back, but the "Count" preferring to come home, faced to the right about & set off full speed and landed the Indian in a favorable spot in the centre of the stable-yard. But he's good natur'd, tractable, & honest, & I think will do very well.

Remember me affectionately to the worthy Capt. Weltden—and to my best of friends at No. 6 Phillimore place.

With the most ardent love & anxious solicitude,

I am Your father & Friend,

Ed. Winslow.

Judge Edward Winslow to Sir John Wentworth.

Kingsclear, N. B., January, 1811.

My dear Sir John,—Your letter of the 19th September relieved me from a degree of anxiety which I have seldom experienced on any former occasion; having never before received a line from you since your leaving America, I had begun to fear that some serious misfortune had befallen either Lady Wentworth or yourself. * * *

In the case of Robertson, Forsyth & Co., Contractors with His Majesty's commissioners in England, access has been allowed them to the Crown Reserves and ungranted Lands for the purpose of enabling them to complete their contract with Government. * * *

It was a matter of great importance that your department should not impede the fulfilment of a contract made with the Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy. On the other hand it was the cause of much concern that these nurseries for Timber should be too freely resorted to, more especially as the Timber now wanted was of a young and thrifty growth.

After a very careful investigation made by Mr. Miller of the several tracts of land and a very serious consideration of the subject (under the best information and advice I could obtain), I concluded that it was safest and best to give the License for cutting such quantity of Timber upon the Reserved and ungranted Lands as appeared necessary to complete the contract, and of this transaction I gave you notice by Mr. Chipman. In doing this there would be no detention of vessels, nor other pretence for complaint, and the Timber would be applied to the use of Government at a time when it was obviously very much wanted. I therefore issued the License for 4,000 Tons and 400 small masts, which have been cut and hauled under the Inspection of Mr. Miller, and which I suppose will be obtained in season to be rafted to St. John this Spring.

Upon this subject I shall look with impatience for explicit instructions from you for my future guidance. It is Mr. Miller's opinion that (altho' the most wanton depredations have been formerly committed on the Reserves at the Oromocto and hundreds of valuable sticks now lie rotting and useless upon the ground) there is a large quantity of valuable White Norway Pine still remaining.

The intimate connection between Mr. Miller and myself renders written communication from him in most cases unnecessary. Immediately after his appointment such an arrangement was made as enabled me to avail myself of the cool and dispassionate opinion of a Gentleman of strict honor and integrity; and at the same time (when the service required it) I was sure of the most spirited exertion on his part.

The order of men who are usually employed in Lumbering (as it's called) are proverbially licentious [lawless]; the steadv and determined conduct of Mr. Miller has so effectually counteracted such a spirit in this district, that in his frequent excursions into the Forest no man has ever attempted the least opposition to him in the execution of his official duty, or presumed to offer him the smallest insult. Whenever he returns from the performance of a duty I obtain from him a clear and distinct detail of the events which have taken place, as well as the information he has procured and the observations he has made. When these have been maturely digested I endeavour to form from the mass such concise general abstracts as are calculated to afford you the most satisfactory information with the least trouble to yourself, so that my Letters to you may be considered in some degree as Mr. Miller's report. * * * [Remainder missing.]

Henry Goldsmith to Judge Edward Winslow.

Saint John, 14th January, 1811.

My dear friend,—A man in pain will gladly seek a remedy anywhere, even tho' imprudence may be attached to the application; Irishmen you know have almost as much impudence as Yankees. Here I am, feeling the comforts of one of Chipman's Arm Chairs, with both of my feet raised on a Cuishing in much pain, as also in one of my hands and arms. I therefore fly to you in hopes that you will be able to afford me means of relief by the loan of one bottle of your Medicinal Water, I ask it with more Assurance being confident that I can in a Short time return it to you, as by a Letter from my son some time since he informs me that he had forwarded to me four Bottles with Doctor Jones pamphlet, but which has not yet come to hand; if you can spare it I will thank you to send it by the first safe Conveyance so as to relieve me from the intolerable pain I am enduring, and for which I hope in a little time I shall be enabled to return you personally my best thanks, I remain my dear friend,

Yours sincerely,

Hen. Goldsmith*.

Jacob S. Mott to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, January 28th, 1811.

Dear Sir,—I am induced to trouble you on a subject which concerns me, and if I can obtain the situation, it will be of an advantage to me. Mr. Campbell has been Post Master here many years, and there is not a doubt but will retain it as long as he lives or wishes; but, Sir, he is far advanced in years and very feeble, which makes me desirous to apply in time for the situation. You will oblige me much, by writing a letter to Mr. Heriot, the Post Master General at Quebec, for the situation for me, when vacant, as one word from you, Sir, is better than twenty from me. I think I can obtain such a recommendation as he will approve of. I have wrote to Mr. Heriot on the subject, by this Post, and mentioned to him that I have been solicited by the Gentlemen of the City, particularly the Merchants.

I am Dear Sir your humble serv't.

Jacob S.Mott†.

My dear Winslow,—I have hitherto in consequence of interruptions, which I did not forsee when conveyances have offered, omitted to thank you for your letter and Dr. Jones's Book; his account of the medicine is so ra-

We have a report which I hope is not true, that you have had another violent attack and have again had recourse to the medicine but without success. I should not however be discouraged, if its effects should not be so immediately felt, I am persuaded it will eventually afford relief. I had many things to write about but the time is now so fast approaching when I shall see you, that I will defer all till we meet. I could not however forbear to congratulate you upon Wentworth's Lieutenancy in the 41st, I hope this removal will be attended with the most beneficial consequences on every account. It is everything for a young man to have good examples before him, and such I fear he has not in the N. Scotia Fencibles.

I will take up Dr. Jones book with me, I presume you will not want it sooner.

Adieu ! till we meet.

Sir John Wentworth to Judge Edward Winslow.

[First part of letter missing. Written in England and received 7th February, 1811.]

Your son Edward is an honorable, sensible young man. He is a great favorite here, and merits it every where. His, & our, inestimable friend Lutwyche kindly calls upon us. Time seems to have forgot to make any visible impression on his health or appearance, at least for the last twenty years. Col. Gordon was in town and dined with us about six weeks since: is in high spirits; we went over all our American operations, and shook hands with you at Kingsclear most cordially. General Fox is abroad I believe. I have not seen him nor Colonel Williamson, but will find them if it should be necessary. Our good friend Putnam is unalterable both in body and soul. The former is tough and blooming & the latter nobly honest & faithful to his friends.

This is intended to find its way to you under care of Mr. Robinson*,

*Sir William Henry Robinson, K. C. H., youngest son of Col. Beverley Robinson. Lady Robinson was a daughter of Cortlandt Skinner, last attorney general of New Jersey under the crown, who was brigadier general in command of the New Jersey Volunteers during the Revolution. One of the daughters mentioned above married Major General Smelt of the British army; the other married her cousin, William Henry Robinson, son of Hon. John Robinson, mayor of St. John.

lately appointed Commissary General of British America, as worthy and valuable a man as any of the family, which is saying a great deal indeed. You must have known him at New York. His wife & two young lovely daughters accompany him. Mrs. R. cannot fail of being esteemed & admired in every good & well bred society.

Lady Wentworth has lately made some real progress towards a better state of health but is not yet able to go to any Theatre, or public amusement. I am as well as ever, but find, after three or four hours rambling in the Streets that a days march in your Forests would be too much for me.

Pray remember me and Lady W. to our friends Gen'l and Mrs. Hunter in the kindest manner. Lady W. is lately delighted in receiving a letter from Mrs. H. * * * I hope you will find benefit from the Gout medicine sent you by Lutwyche. It is highly confided in by many sufferers who have been restored. I wish you & Judge Chipman (to whom give my best respects) may be added to its list of perfect gratitude.

I am, my dear Sir, most sincerely & aff'ly

Your faithful friend,

J. Wentworth.

George Heriot to Judge Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 4th March, 1811.

My dear Sir,—I congratulate you on the good news of your son Wentworth having got a lieutenancy in one of the regiments in this country. The 41st regiment is now at Montreal, which is a very pleasant quarter. * * *

Yesterday, being Sunday, I went in the afternoon to the French Cathedral to hear M. de Calonne, brother of the late Financier of France, who is here celebrated as a preacher. His manner is violent and boisterous, and calculated to make an impression on the lower orders, to whom he chiefly addresses himself. His sermons are extemporaneous and he plainly appears to be in earnest in his address. The extravagance of his action, violates as Doctor Johnson remarks the propriety of language, but it is better to use violence of action and loud vociferation than lose the opportunity of converting souls. The preacher is about eighty-four years of age. There was one poetical flight in the course of his sermon which I thought rather pretty :—

"Mes freres, vous ne regardez pas la Croix—vous n'avez point d'amour
"pour la Croix — vous avez le coeur froid comme la glace de ces regions
"Hyperboraes ou vous demeurez —Vous avez le coeur dur comme les roches
"que le fleuve St. Laurent lave avec ses ondes."

Speaking of the St. Lawrence puts me in mind of the pont or bridge across to Point Levi. The river is now frozen over, a circumstance which seldom occurs, and which becomes a pleasant & convenient amusement to the inhabitants, although the facility of communication thereby afforded with the opposite country has had little or no influence in reducing the high prices of the articles of life. This country has become almost as extravagant as England, and the "habitants" are the only people who enrich themselves, as all the silver passes ultimately into their coffers, where it will be hidden for years from the face of day. This causes a great scarcity of money, as there is no possibility under our government of again drawing the coin from its dark recesses.

I shall be happy to hear from you soon and believe me,

Sincerely yours,

Geo. Heriot.

Judge Edward Winslow to G. W. Murray.

Kingsclear, N. Bruns'k, 7th April, 1811.

Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 4th March from N. York has been handed to me by Gen'l Coffin, and I regret that it is not in my power to give you full satisfaction upon a subject which cannot fail to excite considerable Interest and Concern. The following facts, however, adverted to in your letter are within my recollection :

When Boston was evacuated, F. Hutchison Esq:* was Judge, & I was Registrar of Probate, for the County of Suffolk, and I was at the same time Acting Collector of Customs for the Port of Boston.

On the morning of the evacuation the Public Buildings were in possession of a Licentious Rabble, the doors of the Offices were forced and the Records & papers were exposed to instant destruction. Having a party at my Command, and impressed with a due sense of the importance of preserving them, I found means to pack up and place on board a Transport not only the Records of the Probate Office but also those of the Registry of Deeds & Custom House, the latter Office had been peculiarly exposed, having been occupied as a Military Guard Room the preceding night. At that time Sam'l Fitch Esq; who was Judge of the Court of Vice Admiralty, had been several days embarked on board ship with his family, one of whom (a very interesting daughter) was dangerously ill.

On our arrival at Hal'fax, I made application to the Governor of the province to take the Books & papers into the protection of his Government. Accordingly a place was assigned them in the Surrogate's Office in Nova

*Foster Hutchinson was a judge of the supreme court of Massachusetts, and a brother of Thomas Hutchinson, the last royal governor of Massachusetts. He went to Halifax in 1776 with his family of twelve persons and spent the remainder of his life there.

Scotia, under the care of the Surrogate Gen'l, Mr. Morris, reserving a right of access to them upon any emergent occasion by Judge Hutchison, who was to remain there.

The Packages were at that time apparently in perfect good order, but whether every Book (particularly of the Register of Deeds Office) was included in the packages (formed amidst scenes of such confusion) it is impossible for me to say. The Anecdote respecting Mr. Fitch* I never heard mentioned, altho' I was upon terms of great intimacy with him & his family, nor do I conceive it probable that he should have encumbered himself with two large folio Vols. of Public Records, in which he had neither interest or connection and that at a time when he was sinking under the pressure of Domestic anxieties and afflictions; if such volumes were by any accident found in his possession, I should conjecture that they belonged to the Court of Vice Admiralty, which were ex officio in his charge.

I left Halifax with the King's Army and remained with it till the end of the war. Several applications were made for the restoration of the Records which were rejected, but after the publication of the Treaty they were delivered by Judge Hutchison, under proper authority, to a committee appointed by Governor Hancock to receive them, safe and entire as I afterwards understood from the Judge. I believe a Mr. Kent, who was at one time State Attorney was one of the Committee. * * *

Colonel E. G. Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

1 May, 1811.

My dear Winslow,—Your very interesting letter gave us and a few select friends great pleasure. Catherine,† who thinks she has a right to see your letters, seized it with eagerness, nor could I get it until she had perused the whole. The contents caused much laughter, but when she came to the monument it excited sensations which cannot be described, and produced a sensibility which would not have displeased you to have witnessed. How delicate, how sublime the thought, and how elegantly expressed. We offer you all we can in return, our thanks for the huge gratification it afforded us, for to you alone appertains the privilege of

*G. W. Murray in the letter, to which the above is Judge Winslow's reply, says: that Judge Cushing made application, soon after the organization of the State of Massachussets, for the records that had been taken away. This request was not complied with till after the peace in 1783, when, however, not all of the missing books came back. Mr. Murray was informed that a gentleman named Fitch had found in a trunk two books marked on the back "Suffolk." He would like to regain possession of these books he said.

clothing your Ideas in this agreeable manner. The scrap I have since received, announcing the prompt effects of the medicine, gave me the most heartfelt satisfaction. Young Chip is indeed a nice young man, just such as every Father would wish his son to be. Well may his parents be proud of him. I was delighted with the thought of seeing the son of my old friend; but now we are acquainted with him we begin to anticipate much regret at thoughts of parting with him, and fear the short lived pleasure of his acquaintance will not compensate for the pain of a separation.

The "Indus" arrived safe at Bengal the 17th Nov'r. Your son Edward was left at Madras to settle some business there which Capt. Weltden had not time to finish, but had reached Bengal safe and well. They are expected here in July. From the uncommon length of the voyage, they have been hurried, and my young friend did not write, but this I hope will make you happy and your surrounding family together with his numerous friends, for such he must have wherever he has lived.

The campaign in Portugal has opened and closed must auspiciously. Massena with all his boast of driving the British into the sea has been compelled to abandon his object and make a most disgraceful retreat, pursued by Lord Wellington into Spain. Thus has terminated an expedition plan'd by the Corsican* and placed under highest Generals with 80,000 veteran troops, which has been completely frustrated to the great glory of the British and the disgrace of the French. There is not a Frenchman, except prisoners, in the Kingdom of Portugal. The present year is replete with success. The Battle of Busaco and that of Barossa have crowned our warriors with laurels and the conquest of Bourbon and Mauritias is highly honorable to both navy and army. In addition our King is fast recovering. * * *

Penelope Winslow to Edward Winslow Jr.

6th June, 1811.

As I know postage is a great thing in England, I never allow a private opportunity to escape without an epistle, and I flatter myself my dear Edward ere this you are once more safely fixed at Kensington in readiness to receive any communications from Kingsclear.

The Judge's French medicine has I assure you made quite a new man of him. He now seldom submits to more than one day's pain from the gout but takes this wonderful medicine in the evening and the next morning gets up as well as usual. * * *

*Bonaparte.

I am happy to say that matrimony begins to flourish here again. Miss Sproule and Capt. Moodie* have at last entered the "Holy estate" and Miss George on the very brink of it with the Colonel of the 104th†. In the last match I fear there is little prospect of happiness. The Col. is very much given to drink and appears to want common understanding, but is of a good family and a full Colonel, which I fear is his most predominant attraction even in the eyes of the family. Bell Hailes and Postmaster Carmichael are also going to be married in a few weeks—these are not flirtations but settled things. 'Tis thought this regiment is to move to Halifax immediately which I confess I am very sorry for. At present almost all the officers are out on the recruiting service; Hunter, Jenkins, Maule, &c., &c., are in Canada. I shall be grieved indeed if the removal of the regiment carries the General off as I shall miss Mrs. Hunter most shockingly. I returned only last week from spending almost a month with her. She is certainly one of the best women in the world. I don't know what puts it in my head but I always thought Mrs. Weltden and she must be very much alike; she is so gentle and kind to everybody, and though she never felt misfortunes herself, she knows how to pity and feel for those that have. I spend a fortnight with her once in a while, which pleasure I should be very sorry to miss. * * *

When you are a rich man, my dear Edward, I'll thank you to send for me, unless you meet with a housekeeper in England more suited to your taste. We had letters from Wentworth yesterday. The poor fellow has been sick owing to a most severe cold he took on the passage. He is going to Canada immediately where we shall be able to hear from him frequently. Give my love to Chip who I presume you will see very often. * * *

Your affectionate sister,

P.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jun'r.

Kingsclear, 13th June, 1811.

My very dear Son,—I indulge the hope that this letter will find you in England, well and happy. This anticipation keeps me cheerful under many perplexities. Our separation is indispensibly necessary and my anxieties are natural, and cannot be alleviated by any other means than by confirmation under your own hand. In you my son, my principal hopes are centred—any accident happening to you would render the remaining days of my life—insupportable. What I have suffered on account of your two elder brothers is known only to the Searcher of Hearts & myself. Wentworth is now a Lieutenant in His Majesty's 41st reg't of foot—(one of the best regiments in the King's service). He is under good patronage and station'd at Montreal, where I presume he will be contented and comfortable. He is a good officer, of very prepossessing address, and with a large allowance of humour and vivacity — uncommonly well made and handsome. The garrison of Newfoundland is confined and affords no other amusement but drinking & gambling. He will now have more inviting pursuits, and I flatter myself that in real service he will be distinguished. My [American] countrymen, I believe, mean to put us all to the test very soon in these colonies. I say soon, because I conceive it impossible that the British Government can longer endure the insolent equivocation & provoking threats of these Americans, who are but just peeping from their shell and scarcely deserve the name of a nation. * * * If they have any expectation that their political parent Great Britain will persevere in treating them as "froward children," with tenderness & affection on the present occasion—I trust they will find their mistake. This delicate sentiment has too long deluded our Government. Mama must he a ridiculous old fool indeed if she suffers these dear little ones to spit in her face, & knock her down. I think it will be more likely that such base ingratitude will excite her indignation and induce her to bestow upon 'em the chastisement which they so richly deserve. America offers now to view one general Cabal. Electioneering is "a business," and the swindling tricks & deceptions of the Hustings are introduced in an improved state into the branches of the Legislature. Their debates are replete with vulgar abuse, and except from one or two speakers you find nothing to enliven the scene, or attract attention. Once in a while — to be sure — there's a fight or two, but they are not very interesting as it is not a common thing to kill one another. In short their Government has not existed long enough to acquire either character or consistency, and as to the laws of nations and the principles of public honor, &c, &c, &c, they will not do to mix up with the rest part of the system. Thus circumstanced—sans ships—sans funds —sans inclination—sans everything—they must have some other ally, beside Beelzebub & Napoleon, before they can make any serious change in the affairs of Great Britain.

I know not in what manner a war would affect us . An invasion of this province would be a bad speculation—they certainly would get a few hard knocks, and I cannot exactly discern what else they'd be likely to acquire. The old Acadians*, as well as the Canadians, are undoubtedly disaffected, but they are contemptible and unenterprising, and, moreover, I do not discover any advantage that could result to America from the possession of any of these Colonies.

Our province (to use an American expression) is "progressing," but I fear unless more conciliatory measures are adopted [by Great Britain], and the original compact and constitution be more gravely & carefully attended to, there will be a great abatement of that zeal & alacrity which has always distinguished the inhabitants of N. B.

Our metropolis is wonderfully increased and is really a very beautiful town, our shoe makers are all turned merchants and appear to have made their fortunes. Slason, Sewell & E. Sloot have erected fine houses & are importers of goods. Mark Needham has bought Wm. Hazen's house for £700, & Grosvenor, the Messman, has built a complete house & is a very good man. A genteel house is also built by James Berton & all the street round about Capt. Sproule's is filled up. From Blair's corner the street is continued to the wind-mill, and the lots will soon be built upon. * *

While you are in England I wish you would enquire the expence of a strong second hand Carriage & Harnesses. I should prefer 4 low wheels made with substantial tire. I cannot longer exist without—you know how I am situated & how feeble my limbs are, and I am reluctantly compelled now, too frequently to omit my duty at Council & Court. I think such a thing, if it can be found, may be sent out in some of the Spring Mast Ships free of expence:—it should be fixed to go with two horses or one, it must be a decent one, and as it is a monstrous speculation for me, it must be done deliberately & under the best possible advice. You will let me know the result of your enquiries and amount of the expence, I shall then see if I can accomplish the object. Remember me in the most affectionate manner to Capt. Weltden and to the family at Phillimore-place No. 6. To Chipman and all my other friends also—& let me hear from you by every possible chance, and may God shower his blessings upon you.

Ed. Winslow.

*Bishop Plessis of Quebec, who visited Madawaska in 1812, thus speaks of the disposition of the Acadians with regard to the war :—

"On conçoit que dans un moment de guerre, il est difficile de compter beaucoup sur les "dispositions du peuples qui habite une telle contrée, et dont le sort ne peut-être fixé "qu'à la paix prochaine. Aussi plusieurs de ces habitant sont-ils dernièrement refusé de "remplir le devoir de miliciens britannique. 'Dans deux mois,' disent-ils, 'on décidera "peut-être que nous appartenons aux Américaiens; quelle nécessité de nous exercer pour "les aller combattre?'"

OLD VIEW OF FREDERICTON.

George Heriot to Judge Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 3d. July, 1811.

My dear Sir,—I was favored with your letter of the 10th ulto. accompanying a packet for your son Wentworth, which Major Maule was so obliging as to call at my house to deliver. I have only had the pleasure of seeing your son twice since his arrival at this place, as he took up his residence at a great distance from my house. He appears in good health and is grown much stouter than when I had the pleasure of seeing him at Halifax. He did me the favor to take a family dinner with me on Sunday. I should have been happy to have had his company oftener during his stay here, if he had not resided at so great a distance. He informed me that he was to set out on Monday or Tuesday last for Montreal with a party in a Batteau, to join his regiment at that place. I wish it had been to join the 49th at Three Rivers. As you have not given me any trouble, it is unnecessary to apologize, and I am happy whenever it is in my power to oblige or serve my friends.

War with the United States appears to me inevitable, and whenever it takes place, their navy will soon disappear. An American war must, from the nature of the country, be productive of more instances of inhumanity, and barbarity, than any other, as the savages will not remain idle spectators, but exercise their native ferocity on the families of inoffensive and remote settlers. Warfare has ever been the principal occupation of mankind. Peace is only a breathing time, and a great portion of the civilized world is occupied in that interval, in multiplying, inventing and improving the instruments of destruction. * * *

I do not apprehend that the calm tranquility of New Brunswick is likely to be disturbed by the war. The only mode of avoiding calamity is to be prepared for its encounter. Your son has this moment, (11 o'clock) called on me, and I have desired him to send his Letters to be enclosed herewith. He says he sets out tomorrow.

I remain with regard, My Dear Sir,

Yours very faithfully,

George Heriot.

Colonel Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

Kensington, Sept. 16, 1811.

My dear Winslow,—I am greatly in arrears for your entertaining letters and so I fear I must remain. * * * [Letter refers to efforts made on behalf of Mrs. Davidson (whose husband Capt. John Davidson had died May 13, 1810) in order to obtain for her a pension. Capt. and Mrs. Weltden and Edward Winslow, jr., lately had arrived at Dover.]

Edward has no doubt rejoiced you with an account of his adventures this voyage to which I shall only add that he is well and stands well with Capt. W. * * * Dover has had its usual effect of continuing the health of your old friend which is as much as he can expect or desire. To renovate youth after 73, is not in the nature of things.

The State Chair is ordered and will be forwarded by the first good opportunity. I have added on the back, to give it importance when not filled, the King's Arms handsomely carved. In all other respects it is like the Lord Chancellor's. The price is enhanced by it but I flatter myself it will please. Young Chip agreed with me in the addition.

&c., &c., E. G. Lutwyche.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Kingsclear, N. B. 25th Nov'r, 1811.

At present I am very free from that tormenting complaint, the gout, and am surrounded by my five chearful daughters in my comfortable habitation at Kingsclear. Miller was with us yesterday—according to ancient usage—he & his wife & precious flock of little ones eat their dinner with us every Sunday, and as they attend Church before they come up, 'tis part of the bargain that they make as much noise as they please. Your sisters say that every domestic occurrence is regularly communicated to you, and that a batch of 'em has been forwarded by the fall ships. With respect to our public affairs I do not of late trouble myself much about 'em. My duty on the Bench is performed with as much punctuality as my health will allow, but as a Counsellor, (thanks to an Irish mandamus which requires Military men to excute civil offices & Civil men to fight) I have rather inclined to retreat. The presidents of the Council are relieved here now with as little ceremony as an officer's guard. In August Major-General-President Hunter was ordered on Military service to Halifax, and in September Major-General Balfour was ordered by the Military-General commanding at Halifax to proceed to New Brunswick and take upon him the Civil & Military command. Accordingly M. G. Balfour was sworn in as President. In October M. G. Hunter was ordered back again to New Brunswick, but specially commanded to take his station at the City of St. John—so that His Honor the president now resides eighty miles from the seat of Government. His Majesty's Council (of course) are not very frequently consulted. This General we are told is to be off early in the Spring. What will be the consequence of measures so grossly absurd cannot be anticipated, but it appears to me that the united abilities of all His Majesty's Ministers could not have contrived a measure better calculated to alienate the affections of the people and to check the progress of this flourishing Colony.

I wrote you some time ago, and suggested to you that I am under the indispensible necessity of procuring some kind of strong carriage to convey me from my house to town. My limbs & particularly my knees are so crippled that I cannot mount a horse or ride without excruciating pain, and if the weather is wet, I am very often prevented from attending my duty at the Supreme Court for two or three days together, a circumstance which, considering the liberal salaries we receive, is the source of great concern to me. My idea is that some unfashionable 4 wheel Chaise may be found 2d hand, cheap. That (if practicable) it should be purchased without the wheels, and four low wheels strong as Truck wheels should be procured for it, the harness also should be plain and strong. There is not any man in the world whose judgment I would sooner rely on than Sir John Wentworth's on such an occasion. I wish my friends would lay their wise heads all together upon this important occasion, on which my life and reputation so materially depends. Such a Carriage may be sent out in a mast-ship almost freight free. The bearer of this commands one, and he is as good a man as ever was born. The carriage may be stuffed with any articles for the use of my family, such as a piece or two of Cotton (white), Do. of Linnen, 1 Do flannel—1 or 2 dark Waist-coat patterns, some shoes & stockings for my daughters—2 or 3 different sizes, 2 or 3 pieces of figur'd cotton for gowns. If Col. Lutwyche has not sent me out the cloth for 6 Pelises for the Girls let it come by the same conveyance, I also must have 1 piece sheeting, 1 piece for Table Cloths &c. You know the kind of assortment which will suit our wants—among which is 9 rolls of decent paper hangings for our drawing room with the bordering.

Pray let us hear by every packet.

God bless you prays your father,

Ed. Winslow.

P. S. This is a scrambling letter, my dear Edward, wrote in great haste to catch a flying conveyance to St. John. I intend to write to you again & to Col. Lutwyche by Capt. Boag.* Let me be kindly remembered to Ward Chipman; his father writes him everything of course. A letter from me would not be of much consequence to him. Show Boag any civility in your power. Penelope begs me to add to my mem. a set of Table & Desert Knives & forks, & a small crate of Table Crockery.

4 o'clock evg.

[Rec'd at Calcutta 23d. Dec. 1812.]

My dear Edward,—Our very valuable neighbor and friend George Lee has sent us a message that he sets off at daylight tomorrow morning—by which fact I am precluded from writing a very long letter, and your sisters are in the same predicament. We have only time to say that we have been all collected at Christmas from the Venerable Colonel* and Mrs. Miller downwards, making with the young ones about 30, all in great spirits and good health, and all uniting in a flowing bumper to your long life & prosperity.

I wrote to you by Capt. Boag of the Caledonia, which I hope you have received. You will be pleased by hearing of the safe arrival of your long lost brother Murray; he is weather beaten & much worn down by the vicissitudes through which he has just past, but he appears fully sensible of many errors, is a pleasant companion—affectionate & kind—in my present solitude I consider him a great acquisition. * * *

George Lee expresses great anxiety to meet you in England, I hope he'll not be disappointed—to him I refer you for many particulars respecting our domestic concerns; you will of course be highly gratify'd to see him. There's a general torrent of Messages round the table from Lucy Miller & the whole corps of sisters, not one of which is worth communicating.

I am now free from Gout but lame. My friends have protested against my further use of Husson's medicine & I have borne 7 weeks pain which I could have cured in 5 hours. Give my best regards to Chipman.

Yours my dear Edward most affectionately,

Ed. Winslow.

My dear Winslow,— * * * Capt. Weltden is on the eve of departure. He takes leave this day, all is hurry & bustle here. Edward is of course involved in it. He is, however, perfectly well & very diligent & as amiable as ever, only I must repeat that he has not quite devil enough for his profession, but he has other qualities which amply compensate for that defect. He will speak for himself.

knowledge, & I am confident will lay in as good a store of knowledge as any young man who ever came to this country. I think, take him for all in all, he is one of the finest young men I ever knew. No parents ever had greater reason to be satisfied and proud of their Children than Chipman & yourself. Should the Americans be mad enough to disturb you what a fortunate circumstance will it be that your children are so eligibly situated. Chip's residence and education here will prove of incalculable advantage.

Judge Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, 8th May, 1812.

My dear Winslow,—A very awkward circumstance has taken place, which I exceedingly regret and am ashamed to relate; A very stupid old Servant that I have, was the other day sent into the cellar to open a barrel of fish, which was purchased for herrings: he reported that they were mackerel, I immediately informed Edwin Hazen (of whom the fish were purchased) of this unexpected difference in the quality of the fish, who supposed it to be a mistake made at his store, as they did the last season take some mackerel at Cape Quiddy as well as herrings. William Hazen being in want of some fish, I divided the barrel with him; and the old Gentleman* being very fond of mackerel, I sent some of the remaining half to him, of which we have also been since using for ourselves. It occurred to me suddenly about an hour ago, while at dinner, that early in the winter I received a barrel of Mackerel from Halifax for you, which was put into my cellar to be sent up by the first Vessel. With fear and trepidation I ordered the barrel thus opened to be examined, and upon inspecting the head, which had been placed undermost in stowing it away, there was, Alas! found nailed upon it a card directed to you. So that I have thus unwittingly & to my great mortification been disposing of your barrel of Mackerel. But the mischief is done, and nothing now remains but to know how I can make amends for the mistake. Shall I pay to you the amount? Shall I replace it in a barrel of fish of any kind? Or will you next fall instead of one order two barrels of Mackerel from Halifax and let me keep one of them and pay for both. Either of these alternatives I will most readily and chearfully comply with, and then shall have no remaining trouble about it, but the apprehension that you will be greatly disappointed in not receiving your Mackerel, as you must have expected to do, by Pine's Sloop that sailed a few days ago for Fredericton. I am so much provoked at the business that I can add no more upon that or any other subject, more especially as I wrote to you so fully yesterday, but that I am as ever,

Most faithfully & affectionately yours,

W. Chipman.

Penelope Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

20th November, 1812.

Do not my dearest Edward attribute my long silence to any falling off of my affection; this indeed is not the case. I'll do you the justice to say that as yet we have had no reason to complain of you. We had two epistles from you while at Madeira.

This hateful American war has frightened us not a little—this province has not as yet suffered by it, but there is terrible work in Upper Canada. Poor Wentworth is in the midst of it. He is with General Sheaffe at present.

I know of no great changes in our domestic concerns since I wrote you last, except the marriage of your cousin Lucy to an Assistant Surgeon of this regiment (Doctor Woodforde*) which took place last week. He is a very fine young man only three and twenty years old. You will recollect that there must be some disparity in their years, which was the only objection to the match. It was a very sudden affair and has excited a few illnatured remarks. The number of spinsters in our circle is reduced pretty low and Fredericton is more stupid than ever. Our present President, General Smyth†, is not very popular. He is a stiff pedantic old thing —his wife young, handsome, gay and thoughtless—quite unfit to be at the head of such a society as this. He has pitched upon Guy Coffin as his aide-de-camp, and he and his wife have removed to Fredericton. I have been

*Doctor William Woodforde was born in Somersetshire, England. He was assistant surgeon in the 104th Regiment. After the war of 1812 he returned to Fredericton and practised his profession. His family comprised two sons and two daughters—one of the sons was the late Dr. Samuel G. Woodforde of Woodstock, N. B., who was born in Fredericton, April 20, 1823.

†In the south transept of the Cathedral in Fredericton there is a fine marble tablet to the memory of Lieut. Governor George Stacey Smyth. A beautiful medallion at the top shows the strong features of the resolute old soldier, whose sculptured sword recalls the field of Waterloo, where he was A. D. C. to Wellington. The tablet was first erected in the old parish church, which stood near the river side. A circle of trees now marks the spot at or near which Gen. Smyth was interred. The tablet, as we learn from the inscription, was erected by a daughter and son by his first wife as a token of their grateful remembrance of their father and to record his virtues. Lieut General Smyth died March 27, 1823, and it is a rather remarkable coincidence that the Rev. James Milne, rector of Fredericton, died on the same day. An eloquent sermon was preached in connection with the double event by the Rev. James Somerville, president of the college. Lieut. General Smyth was a tory of the old school, a most conscientious, but not particularly popular governor. Perhaps his best work was in connection with education.

a great invalid this year and was sent to St. John this summer for the benefit of my health and I assure you the jaunt had a very salutary effect. You have of course long ere this received our letters of acknowledgement and thanks for the things you sent us in the Spring. Indeed my dear brother I'm afraid your good will has induced you to be more bountiful than you could well afford. Your donation of muslin was most acceptable, and has made us fine, for some time at least. Every article you procured for us was exactly what we wished and wanted, but you did not pay my figure a proper compliment in the size of the gown and pelise. They were about an inch too large in the waist, and more than two inches too short in the skirt. I am much reduced in bulk since you saw me. The Judge has been afflicted with frequent attacks of the gout and violent pains in his head of late. The gout is not so violent as it used to be but returns much oftener.

Your friend Jenkins is a Captain in the Glengarry* regiment, and fighting in Canada. We have lost our neighbors Garden and Lee—they both died this summer. Charles Lee is employed in the Commissariat and is certainly going to marry Sally Odell.

&c., &c.,

Penelope.

Memorandum of Judge Winslow.

Kingsclear, 2d. January, 1813.

"It is now seven months since this right hand of mine has been crip-

"writing has furnished a principal source of my amusement."

E. G. Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

March 1st, 1813.

To see your handwriting my dear Winslow was a cordial, tho' your employing an amanuensis gave me a twinge. By a letter from Mr. Leonard of the 1st January I was relieved by his saying you were then recovered. Both letters came by Mr. Jarvis whom I have not yet seen. * *

Captain Jenkins was a tall, fine looking young officer. As already mentioned in these notes, his father, Lieut. Jenkins, had seen hard service in the Revolutionary war.

Mr. Leonard mentions an apprehension of some of the mails being taken, & from the numerous privateers which infest your coast it is too probable. I am glad the articles sent have proved so useful & such a saving. Would it not be advisable to import what necessaries you want, by which you will avoid the enormous discount on your bills [of exchange] as well as the extravagant charges of your merchants.

Mrs. Weltden has received letters from her husband, dated 17th Sept'r, just arrived at Madras all well. He particularly mentions Edward. Believe me my friend I most heartily sympathise with you all in New Brunswick, for tho' the reluctance your immediate neighbors feel to hostilities* may for a time prevent the distresses consequent upon active operations, yet such a state must be productive of much trouble and vexation. The disgraceful defeats of the American land forces has been counterbalanced by the unforseen & unexpected success at sea. However I trust their triumph will be of short duration as a force is now prepared or preparing that will compel them either to keep in port or subject them to be captured if they venture out. It is true such a force ought to have been ready to strike a decisive blow the moment war was declared, & why it was neglected no satisfactory reason has been assigned. * * *

Judge Ward Chipman to Judge Edward Winslow.

St. John, 3d. April, 1813.

My dear Winslow,—You will perceive by the papers that the Prize Vessels are to be sold here, and I am told that the cargo of the Flour Vessel turns out well and Hazen means to sell in small lots to accommodate the suffering community. I mean to secure one or two barrels for myself and wish to know from you by the first opportunity how many barrels you would wish to have. * * *

From our latest accounts from Fredericton I much fear that the President's relapse will prove fatal, and I do feel very much distressed for him and for the helpless family he will leave if he should be taken away.

I have letters from Chip by the mail to 16 Jan'y, when he was very well. He had received letters from Fitzgerald, who was in winter quarters on the Douro, and wrote in high spirits on the 13 December. There are letters from Robert Hazen; the state of his health was such that the surgeons recommended his coming to this climate. He intended to ask leave of absence & expected to be here about the middle of May.

Adieu! Yours every most faithfully & affectionately,

Penelope Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

7th April, 1813.

It's almost an age, my dearest brother, since I wrote you last and much longer since we have heard from you. * * *

Hannah has written you several times lately, but my father is so incessantly tormented with a head ache and dizziness, that it's almost torture for him to touch a pen. He has had less of the gout this winter than usual, but he has had a great deal to distress him, and has been much out of spirits for a long time. Murray has again left us. We did all we could for him. The Judge gave him much more money that he could afford, and about a week since he commenced a journey to Canada in hopes of obtaining some employment on the Lakes. God only knows what will become of him.

The 104th have at last left Fredericton for the field of action, and ere this are in Canada. Poor Jenkins has been fighting most gallantly. He is Captain of Grenadiers in the Glengarry regiment, and by his exertions an important Fort* has been taken. He has received universal and unbounded applause, but you will think my dear Edward that he has paid very dearly for it when I tell you that he has lost one arm and the other is most severely wounded. After receiving these horrid wounds, he continued to encourage his men until he fainted from loss of blood.

I hate to make such a dismal letter of this, but must tell you my dear brother the present unhappy situation of poor Miller's family. Within one short week Anne and Leah were taken from them by a fever which a few days since attacked dear little George and the Doctors have pronounced that he cannot survive more than a day longer. When you recollect that out of six such sweet children as Mary* had, only Winslow remains, you will wonder how the unfortunate mother can support existence; indeed she is almost stupified with grief. * * *

*Captain Jenkins was the hero of the Battle of Ogdensburg. He led his men gallantly to the charge, advancing as rapidly as the deep snow and the exhausted condition of the men would admit, exposed all the while to the fire of seven guns. His left arm was broken in pieces by a grape shot and soon afterward his right arm shattered by a discharge of case shot. He still ran on cheering his men to the assault until, exhausted by the loss of blood, he fainted near the enemy's trenches. His left arm was amputated, the other was saved, but never entirely recovered from the injury it had sustained. The battle of Ogdensburg was fought on February 22, 1813. At the close of the war Captain Jenkins was appointed town major at Fredericton. When gazetted ensign in the New Brunswick Fencibles, Sept. 19, 1804, he was a youth of eighteen years; he was promoted lieutenant on October 27, 1808; in 1812 he was adjutant of the corps (now become the 104th Regiment), and from this position was transferred to command of the company raised by his efforts for the Glengarry Light Infantry. He never entirely recovered from the effects of his wounds and died in 1819 at the comparatively early age of 32 years.

You have heard I presume that your cousin Lucy is married to a young surgeon of the 104th (Woodforde). He has gone with the others to Canada and she is to follow him in the Spring. He is a fine promising young man. Bradshaw Rainsford has again turned a soldier and is recruiting for General Coffin's regiment.† Allen has a company in it. I rather think it will be some time before they compleat it, as the 104th drained the Country pretty well. * * *

My best love to Chipman. I had the honor of occupying his room for a week last fall. Caroline Coffin is in Canada with Mrs. Pearson, and report says she is shortly to be married. I had a letter from her last night, but she doesn't confirm this information. * * *

Our present President's Lady is just the reverse of Mrs. Hunter, a thoughtless flirting little thing that is never at rest without a Beau at her elbow. She frequently visits us and is pleasant and good natured, but has not one speck of dignity in her composition. Her poor old husband has been ill all winter and they are going to St. John as soon as the season will admit. I have written in such haste that I much fear you will be puzzled to make this epistle out.

God bless you my dearest brother prays,

Your ever affect'e Sister,

Penelope.

George Heriot to Judge Edward Winslow.

Quebec, 23d. June, 1813.

Dear Sir,—Since the capture of Niagara by the Yankees they have received a complete drubbing from General Vincent, against whom they had advanced with 3,500 men to attack his position at the head of Lake Ontario. He anticipated their design and promptly advancing on them in the night defeated them and put them to the route. They fled for several miles; as far as "forty mile creek," so called from its being that distance from the town of Niagara where they re-established their camp; but Sir James Yeo having crossed the Lake with his squadron from York, dislodged them by the shot from his guns and captured several of their Boats. A report had spread itself among the enemy, that General Proctor had arrived from Amherstburg with a reinforcement accompanied by the Great Warrior Tecumseth. This circumstance created a panic which pervaded the whole of Lewis's army and they scampered off with astonishing rapidity. They abandoned Fort Erie and Chipawa and were said to be crossing from Fort George to their own territory as fast as they could embark. Of the affair at Sacket's Harbor the less that it said the better.

*Mrs. E. W. Miller, sister of the writer of this letter.

†This was a second fencible regiment, raised to replace the former one, now become the 104th of the line.

Generals Vincent and Proctor have unquestionably shared the whole of the laurels of Upper Canada between them ever since the death of the brave and gallant Sir Isaac Brock.

As I have in my possession a number of interesting sketches on the banks of the river St. John, I have lately entertained an idea of printing them with a description of the Country, as the whole of the British Colonies have now become interesting. If you could favor me from your own observation and recollection with some account of the original number of settlers, of their names and characters, such as General Arnold, with anecdotes of the most eminent persons who have resided among you, such as Gov. Carleton, General Hunter, Chief Justice Ludlow and his brother, &c., &c., &c., you will much oblige me, and should I be enabled to accomplish something of this kind, it might perhaps be of service to the Colony. We must not omit Mr. Glenie of noted memory, although upon reflection, it would perhaps be as well not to meddle with a character who has sufficiently aimed at notoriety.

I enclose the General Orders &c, respecting the affair of General Vincent, and remain, Dear Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,

Geo. Heriot.

E. G. Lutwyche to Judge Edward Winslow.

July 30, 1813.

My dear Winslow,—Altho' I have written you so recently I could not let my young friend Chip depart empty handed, and hope this will find you in renovated health and spirits. * * * Chipman will tell you everything about Phillimore place, and therefore I shall proceed to give you the news; but first I must advert to what is passing and most interesting to you.

Gen'l Prescott's dispatches are cheering, and from the Generalship and bravery of the British American Army, we entertain sanguine expectations that the Americans will be compleatly foiled in all their attempts on Canada, which is their primary object. They appear to be totally deficient in military skill or in courage, as all their defeats have been marked with disgrace. * * *

Sir John Wentworth to Edward Winslow.

Halifax, 21st August, 1813.

My dear Sir,—A few days before I received your last letter I wrote you pr. post, fully approving of the measures you had taken and proposed to pursue in the office of Surveyor of the King's Woods, which I now confirm in the fullest extent, being convinced that they are the most beneficial & useful that can be devised for the preservation of white pine timber in this country.

Yesterday Sir John Coape Sherbrooke applied to me for twelve or fifteen acres of the reservation in St. Andrews to accommodate the building of Barracks at St. Andrews. It seems there is not any wood remaining on the Lot and that the exchange proposed will be equally useful to your department. I have acceded to this proposal. * * * Your present Commander, Sir Thos. Saumarez, is the best man in the world & therefore I know he will be well with all my friends because they are equally good. His departure was too sudden for me to see & mention them to him, but I will take an efficient opportunity of making him acquainted.

Your affectionate faithful friend,

J. Wentworth.

Judge Edward Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Sept. 1813.

[From a fragment.]

Sarah Ann and the lively Eliza are faithfully attending me under a severe fit of the Gout. I flatter myself 'tis abating. The late Lucy Miller (now Mrs. Woodforde) is not with us. Her husband is Surgeon's Mate in the 104th, late N. B. regiment, now in Upper Canada where that corps have lately had a severe brush with the Americans. A great proportion of the officers, among whom were Leonard, Moody, Drummond, Shore, A Rainsford, &c. were wounded and got back to their own shore at Kingston. I fear that this has not been a very brilliant affair but it would be premature to give an opinion as yet. The rumors have produced a scarcity and raised the price of every necessary of life, and now the rage for recruiting has increased to such a degree that a Labourer cannot be produced at any cost. My infirmities are increasing to such a degree that it is with much difficulty I can ride to town and back again on horseback. * * *

Sir John Wentworth to Judge Edward Winslow.

Halifax 14th October, 1813.

My dear Sir,— * * * I have received your letter, and mentioned to Sir J. Sherbrooke your readiness and ability to be useful to His Majesty's service, commenting thereupon as I sometimes am apt to do when I am speaking of those friends I love and esteem. Mr. Hatch of St. Andrews has written to me about the reservation which is proposed to be exchanged with the Church thereby to obtain a scite for a Fortification & Barracks. He will write to you, transmit a plan of the premises and receive your guidance. At Shediac Mr. Hannington* represents that the old settlers pray for leave to cut some useless pine timber on the reservation, also that Pierre Landry cuts all the grass on the salt marsh to the utter exclusion of Joseph Guigaen (the secular priest), his son, old Dupre, and three others, to whom we must save a part, as they endured all the difficulties of the first settlement and there is enough to assist them all.

When you see Sir Thomas and Lady Saumarez I beg you to present my best respects; they are radically good.

I am your faithful friend,

J. Wentworth.

Sir R. H. Sheaffe to Edward Winslow.

H. M. S. Dover, 12th Nov'r, 1813.

My dear Friend,—I am now at anchor a few miles below Quebec and bound for old England whither I have been rather unexpectedly called to be employed on the Staff there. Lady S. and our little girl are with me—we expect to proceed in a day or two. I left my command on the south side of the St. Lawrence on the 28th Oct'r. * * *

We embarked the 9th, came to anchorage at Patrick's hole, where we have remained tolerably snug during an easterly gale which being over, we shall probably proceed tomorrow morning, if not detained a day or two longer for dispatches.

I received a letter some time since from Wentworth, in which he intimated a desire to quit his situation. I have recommended him not to do so if he find it tenable. I carry with me certificates in his favour which, if he be not already restored, will I think with my own representation produce the effect you would wish; he has certainly been treated with inflexible rigour * * *

I have lately received a letter from my noble friend, a very gratifying one indeed, but that he gives an unfavorable account of himself. He was at N'd House. His Grace† has sent me a superb sword and belt. My little girl too has rec'd some presents from her Godmother the Duchess & Lady Elizabeth— to whom I shall not be ashamed of introducing her.

*The reference is to William Hanington, the progenitor of nearly all of the name in New Brunswick. He came to this country from England in 1784 and settled at Shediac in the County of Westmorland.

†The reference is to the Duke of Northumberland—well known in former years to Sir R. H. Sheaffe and to Judge Winslow as Lord Percy.

She is a sweet, lovely child & said to be "the picture of papa!" I shall indulge the hope of hearing from you very soon after my arrival. Be so good as to direct to N'd House, or to Wm. Gilpin, Esq'r, 33 Villiers St. Strand.

You will always be dear and your family interesting to

R. H. S[heaffe].

Ward Chipman, Jr., to Judge Edward Winslow.

Saint John, Nov. 23, 1813.

My dear Sir,—At length I am safely landed in New Brunswick after a few days of the same sort of perils that the Apostle talks of, but thank God in as sturdy health as a man can well enjoy. On the morning of my arrival I forwarded you a letter from our Excellent friend Colonel Lutwyche, which will probably inform you of the apprehensions that were entertained for the safety of the "Indus." Should any unfortunate accident occur, I am happy to be able to tell you that I heard it as coming from the Captain of one of the ships that came home in the fleet, that Ned was not on board the Indus; he having been left behind by Weltden at Calcutta to close some business relative to his investments, with instructions to follow on and join the ships at Madras, and not having arrived at Madras when the fleet sailed. Lutwyche I left looking very well, and as active as ever. Both he & Danforth* bear up against their years wonderfully. I beg you to remember me kindly to Pen, (whether she be Pen Winslow or not) and the rest of the girls, & believe me, my Dear Sir

With great truth & regard,

very faithfully yours,

W. Chipman, Jr.

I found my father laid up with a severe attack of Gout and Rheumatism, but he is recovering fast. He desires me to say that since he received your letter he has been so ill with the gout in his hand as not to be able to write. He hopes you received the Chaldron of Coals by Creighton.

Sir John Wentworth to Judge Edward Winslow.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, 9th February, 1814.

My dear friend,—I greatly thank my dear namesake for the use of his pen to communicate so many interesting and agreeable circumstances as have combined in raising your health and spirits. Of your son's safety on his passage from India I am the more happy, as untoward conjectures had gone abroad from the length of their voyage, which I know would also be the source of keen anxiety to our most excellent friend Lutwyche and his amiable daughter.

*Thomas Danforth, a lawyer by profession, formerly of Charlestown, Massachusetts. He was a graduate of Harvard and a Loyalist. At the evacuation of Boston in 1776 he retired with the army to Halifax. He died in London in 1825.

I anticipated all the Good you and your department have received from your invaluable Gov'r, Sir Thomas Saumarez. He is so thoroughly sound hearted, benevolent and just, that he must be much deceived if he ever does otherwise than right and kind.

I wrote to you several things relative to the service in a letter to Mr. Tucker the paymaster General, who lately was in your Province, but did not reach Fredericton. He committed the letter to Lt. Col. Roberton* to forward to you. Mr. Hatch of St. Andrews informs me he has communicated to you the proceedings for conveying a part of one of our reservations to the Church there, in exchange for a piece whereon to erect Barracks and Fortifications. I see the Church do not forget their temporal interests for they take more than they give.

In the present state of things it is my opinion that the influx of Americans cannot safely be encouraged, nor would I grant them licenses to cut timber or for occupation of lands while they are contented with desultory unconnected labour or services. They might be permitted, I mean those that are there, to remain, but by no means encouraged to increase, and even these ought to be dispersed as far from your borders as they can be by any prudent, moderate means. People of this description collected in numbers, will naturally retain the principles of those from whom they emigrate, especially if so near to them, and they have no preponderating mixture of rightly disposed foreigners settled among them to over balance their possesssions.

I see the People of New England are beginning to alter their opinion of the French nation and will soon probably detest them. This will arise from the evils incautiously bro't upon them, but they will not so easily eradicate their republican, or rather revolutionary impressions, in which they find a gratification that they will be prone to indulge after this.

You will hardly expect to find I want, and can settle, ten of these men on lands belonging to my son Charles Mary Wentworth Esq: at Antigonyshe on the Gulph of St. Lawrence. The land is uncommonly fertile, the river fine, well skirted with intervale and beautifully watered. It produces large crops of Indian Corn, and for seven or eight years past has not failed of excellent wheat and other grain. It is well wooded, for which there is a ready market at Antigonyshe, that generally pays for clearing the land. The location is within six miles of Antigonyshe town, to which foreign vessels resort for trade and furnish both a coasting and foreign demand for all the produce of the district, now become very considerable. There are already settled eight or ten families from New Hampshire in this vicinity. Every one of them have succeeded and are comfortably competent in their circumstances. Esq. Symonds and Dr. Storms, two of them are become affluent: the former has made a landed estate worth more than £3,000 at auction. This Gentleman will show the lands and allot one hundred acres to each of the settlers, not exceeding ten in number of lots, and give them immediate possession, and the sooner the better. This or a greater number may be safely and usefully settled in this Country, remote from any American border and for 25 miles surrounded with a population of more than 3,000 loyal Scots and others, for whom an example of New England culture and mode of clearing lands would be very useful. If you meet with and can agree with such settlers I will be much obliged for their names, trades and former residence. They may then set off for the land of promise as soon as they please. I had forgot to mention that Roads are made to and thro' that country. I am delighted to find Wentworth's business is in so fair a train as we may hope from Sir R. Sheaffe's letter. My readiest co-operation shall ever be devoted to him with the most zealous affection, but I feel in this case that his wishes will be accomplished without any necessity for our aid and before any can arrive. Nor am I less happy (not much less than you) on hearing of the general approbation his conduct has obtained in Canada, tho' it was not more than I expected whenever he had justice done him. Inflexible rigour, as his worthy friend the General says, he has certainly met with, and I believe it may almost universally be considered that such inflexibility never arises from justice. I return you the General's letter and thank you for its perusal. It is too kind and friendly not to be in your keeping, and from its contents, I most certainly wish him and his family a good voyage and every prosperity. Mrs. Brinley's interest got his first commission, thro' the patronage of the Duke of Northumberland, while we were in Boston. She is now recovering from three weeks illness and is not yet released from her Chamber but begs her regards to you with which I must conclude, only adding my best and warmest assurance of unalterable friendship to you and your family from my dear Sir,

*This name is Roberton, not Robertson. Lieut. Col. Roberton commanded the garrison at St. John at this time.

Yours faithfully & affectionately,

J. Wentworth.

[Sir John Wentworth was retired from the position of Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia in 1808, but he continued to reside in the Prince's Lodge near Halifax until his death, April 8, 1820, in his 84th year. The letter above is written in a feeble hand, showing old age.]

Sir Thomas Saumarez to Judge Edward Winslow.

Fredericton 1st March, 1814.

My dear Judge,—I am much concerned that the application I made to Sir John C. Sherbrooke in behalf of Mr. Winslow has not terminated as I so much wish had been the case, as His Excellency informs me the situation had been promised long before your Honor had expressed a desire to obtain it for him. I sincerely wish that I may prove more fortunate upon a future occasion when in furtherance of your wishes, being with great truth, my good Judge,

Your very faithful & humble servant,

T. Saumarez.

Penelope Jenkins to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Fredericton, 20th March, 1814.

At length my dearest brother I may write to you with a probability that my letter will reach you. A few days since we heard from Edward Jarvis* that you were safely landed in England once more.

* * * My father has hardly been free of the gout for the whole winter, repeated relapses have enfeebled him very much. He is at present better than he has been for several months. You will have heard ere you receive this that I have changed my name and place of abode.† I think you used to prophecy this event when I thought it an impossibility. We have a very comfortable house in town and Jenkins' situation of course a very eligible one. The poor fellow has returned from the wars covered with laurels, but has the loss of an arm to lament, and the other severely wounded, which remains very troublesome yet. We have had a very gay winter; my reign as bride has been a brilliant one. I have had a regular round of Gregorys or dances from every decent family in the territory. Mr. Peter Fraser's‡ is the last on the list; there we are to have a grand Ball on Tuesday. Wentworth is with us. * * *

*Son of Munson Jarvis, a Loyalist. He became chief justice of Prince Edward Island, and resided there until his decease in 1852. At this time he was completing his legal studies in England.

†Capt. Jenkins and Penelope Winslow were married Jan. 10, 1814.

‡Peter Fraser was a leading merchant at Fredericton. He furnished needful supplies to those engaged in cutting pine timber and lumber, and gradually accumulated much property. He at one time owned much land on the St. John river, mortgaged to him in the first instance by those engaged in lumbering. Peter Fraser was elected a member of the house of assembly for York County in 1809, and continued to represent the county for many years. The residence of the late Lieut. Gov. John James Fraser at Fredericton was built by Peter Fraser. There are some references to Peter Fraser in Lt. Col. Baird's "Seventy Years of New Brunswick Life," p. 19. He was well known to the Acadians of Madawaska and commanded a battalion of the York County militia in which many of them were enrolled.

Poor Murray finished his career in Canada. He had just got in a situation as a Lieutenant on board a ship on the Lakes when it pleased heaven to snatch him to eternity. We have never heard the particulars of his death, only that he was among the number killed on board Capt. Barcly's ship.

I have no news to tell you my dear Edward. The only flirtation on foot is between Eliza Saunders and Capt. Mann, aide-de-camp to Sir Thomas Saumarez. He's rather advanced in years, an ugly little fellow, but very good. Your cousin Lucy Woodforde has a very fine little boy. She is daily expecting the return of her husband. * * *

We are told Gen. Smyth is to be out again in the Spring. Our present President* gives general satisfaction. Her ladyship has been ill the whole winter; of course we have not had much merriment at Government House.

Jenkins desires a deal of love to you—

Ever most affectionately yours,

Penelope.

P. S. Chip has just left Fredericton. He is not at all changed by his trip across the Atlantic.

William Ferguson to Edward Winslow.

Tracady, Northumberland, 20th May, 1814.

Sir,—By the courier (Jas. Small) inclosed is the return of permits issued since last return, sent by Captain Teriu. * * *

At present, as times go, there is no money to be had on any occasion in this part of the province. The people here are in general Poor and behind hand with the merchants.

On my way to Ristigouch last April I called on Mr. Munro of St. Peters, i. e., Nipisiquid, settled the plan with him on my return to Ristigouch to go up the main river to survey that part of the reserve below the falls said to be six leagues from the Settlement. * * * It is only from report of the people of the place that I know of a reserve at Nipisiquid; being in some doubt, I have inquired of Edw'd J. Man, Esq'r, at Ristigouch. He says the reserve begins five miles below the falls and extends five miles above the falls, and five miles on each side of the river, forming a tract of country ten miles square, but he points out no particular place for a boundary or beginning. Mr. Munro assures me his people have not been on the reserve as yet; the intermediate space has been surveyed by Mr. Thos. Roy.

*Sir Thomas Saumarez.

The last permit is issued to Jno. Shea for saw logs at the New Mills; this mill is the property of Mr. Caldwell and held by Shea on shares. Mr. Caldwell has a location for a small Tract of land adjoining the west boundary of Sir Andrew Snape Hammond's Tract. Heron Island seems to be the only valuable part of Sir Andrew's lands. Many years back the most valuable timber has been cut and carryed away. The shore is rocky and broken and poorly wooded.

At Ristigouch there is no timber, so far as the land surveys made there have lead me to suppose, that would be any object. My remote situation hath hitherto prevented regular returns, but by the present establishment of a regular post that will not in future be the case.

I remain Sir respectfully
Your most obedient servant
Wm. Ferguson, D'y Surveyor.

Edward Winslow, Jr., to His Sister Penelope.

"Indus," At Sea, Saturday, P. M.
18 June, 1814.

After two days spanking breeze, with square yards, I am at length able to resume my pen, and the first use I make of it shall be to acknowledge my dear sister's truly welcome letter, which I received three days before I left London along with Hannah's and Eliza's. I had begun to be unhappy, fearing that I should embark without hearing from you. Think then what I felt when the budget of five letters was put into my hand at once.

I believe I have never related one of the many incidents with which my homeward passage abounded and I don't know any good that can result from my now entering upon it. It however had one good effect I believe. It served to convince me more strongly, if possible, than I ever had been, of the value of such a friend as my present commander. * * *

Monday 20 June, In. Lat. 36, 58, N., Long. 13, 14 W.

Yesterday was the Lord's day and I fully intended to have spent the time (after Church) writing to you and Hannah, but the weather was so fine that I spent the day in Gossip. I dare say you would like to know with which of the ten, for I will confess that it was principally with one. I think I told Eliza that only six of the ten were "for market," and I will satisfy your curiosity so far as to assure you that it was—neither of them. * * * I can't at all tell you how happy I am my dear Penelope, at your union with Jenkins. I beg you will remember me most particularly to him. I lament that he has met with so many hard rubs. He is a happy fellow my dear Sister in having such a nurse, tell him I say so. * * *

To my surprise I met Col. Johnstone (your old friend) in the street a few days before my departure. He has just returned from the Cape of Good Hope, I suspect for his health, for he looked wretchedly ill.

So both of the Miss Saunders are soon to be spliced. I had heard of Miss Margaret's intention to become one of you from her brother, but I did not know about her sister. John (Saunders) was at Oxford when the mail came, therefore I did not see him previous to my leaving town. He's an uncommon fine fellow I think, and I was so much with him of late that I really regretted not seeing him. I shall write him and Jarvis* from Madeira, and I think I shall trouble the latter with my budget. He is a very great favorite of mine, and you can't conceive what gratification and pleasure I derived from spending my evenings with him or Saunders at my own lodgings or at one of their chambers. * * *

Col. Lutwyche had not arrived at Portsmouth when we got under weigh and I asure you I lamented it very much. I trust he got down that night that he might accompany poor Mrs. Weltden home. My heart ached for her, we left her amongst almost strangers.

Funchal, Sunday night, 11 o'clock, 3d July.

I have just returned from the mountains where I have been all day with a large party of Ladies. I am so dreadfully tired that I cannot add anything to this shabby epistle but a God bless you, which I do most heartily.

Your Brother.

Penelope Jenkins to Edward Winslow, Jr.

21st August, 1814.

Mrs. Kirkwood has arrived and we are told has a letter for us. The Major† is in Fredericton; I dined with him and Col. Moodie at my Father's a few days since. Mrs. Kirkwood remains with her friends until after her accouchment, when I hope they will be near neighbors of ours, as there's a chance of their getting the next house but one to us. The box arrived in perfect safety and I assure you your presents far exceeded our expectations. The China crape is beautiful and the Cornelians are not a common thing in these parts. Eliza and Chris. exhibited their rich gowns and crapes on the 12th at Mrs. Smyth's drawing room and really excited not a little admiration. Sarah never goes into company and Hannah very seldom. The Judge has been better for the last two months than I have seen him for an age.

I am just expecting Mrs. Grant (Caroline Coffin) to spend a week with me on her return to Canada. I presume you heard of her marriage. I don't know her husband, but am told he's a worthy creature and very well situated as to pecuniary affairs. The Major* and I are getting on very snugly—the change from a large family to a very small one made me feel a little dismal for some time, particularly as his military affairs keep him a great deal about the barracks, but I am becoming used to it now and don't mind it much. Fredericton is shockingly dull this summer. No Military here except Gen. Coffin's regiment—a great many of these are stupid married people and a majority of the single not very brilliant, so that the rising generation of damsels have rather a gloomy prospect.

Should my father ever have another box coming across the Atlantic I wish, my dear Edward, you would throw in a few books no matter what they are, or whether they are bound. You have no idea how much we feel the want of such articles. Now that I am so much alone, anything in that way would be an acquisition. * * *

Kirkwood interested us very much in his account of the "Indus" and the nice management exhibited there. He says that Capt. Weltden is a charming man.

Mrs. Moodie was just here and desires her best love to you, indeed I cannot enumerate all the people that send kind messages to you. * * *

We have just met with a great loss in Mr. Pidgeon,† who in consesequence of Dr. Byles' death has removed to St. John. We have at present a wretched preacher but hope soon to get a better one from Canada.‡ There has lately been shocking slaughter in that place, tho' the British are gaining ground. I always dread the arrival of a mail, as there are many officers I am acquainted with and some really a regard for that are just now engaged in the contest. Captain Shore has not yet returned to marry Miss Saunders, but I believe he only waits for a cessation of hostilities. * * *

John Garden has just arrived from Canada on a visit to his mother. He is wonderfully improved and bears a high character in his regiment. Poor James was killed at Lake Erie, very much regreted by all who knew him.

*The reference here is to Capt. Jenkins as town major.

†Rev. George Pidgeon. See biographical note under date 13th July, 1800.

‡The clergyman referred to doubtless was the Rev. Geo. J. Mountain, who succeeded Mr. Pidgeon as rector of Fredericton. He was a son of the first bishop of Quebec, and was himself the third bishop of Quebec.

The patterns Mrs. Weltden was so good as to give you for us were very acceptable. Everything that comes from England is sought after, and you know it's very pleasant to have the glory of wearing a new fashion first. Jenkins desires I will offer his affectionate remembrance to you,

Your sincerely attached sister,

Penelope.

Judge Edward Winslow to John Dunn.*

Fredericton October 14th, 1814.

My dear Mr. Dunn,—A consultation of very respectable physicians has just been held here and the result has this day been communicated to me. It is "That a change of air is absolutely necessary to preserve the life of my very dear daughter Chris." This communication amounts (with me) to a peremptory order, and I have detained the vessel [Segee's vessel] this day to send 'em to St. John tomorrow morning. The affectionate kindness of my daughter Hannah has induced her to attend the other on this arduous & important occasion.

I have now to request, my dear Dunn, that you will upon the receipt of this letter, call upon these interesting children & give them your assistance and advice respecting the important matter of a quiet & convenient Lodging for 'em. Hannah will have money sufficient for the pay of their present expences and will be occasionally supply'd with more.

Remember me most kindly to Mrs. Dunn. Her kind heart will feel keen anxiety for the fate of these interesting and motherless children.

God bless you,

Ed. Winslow.

Judge Edward Winslow to E. G. Lutwyche.

Fredericton, N. B. Nov'r 8, 1814.

My dear Lutwyche,—Previous to my leaving this place on my late excursion I committed the care of my family to my friend Mr. Peter Fraser, who kindly supply'd them with money, &c, and settled several demands made on me before my departure. When I returned I found that the accumulated sum amounted to £65. Having no other resource but my pay as a Judge, I was most reluctantly compelled to give him a bill for the amount. Mr. W. Chipman, Jr., having taken down my certificates up to October last, the next to the end of the year shall be forwarded the moment the period arrives.

*John Dunn was a New York Loyalist and one of the founders of St. Andrews. He was for many years comptroller of customs at that place. He died in 1829 at the age of 76 years.

If I could write a volume it would give no relief to those feelings of gratitude and affection which I always experience when I contemplate the numerous instances of your goodness, I therefore stop. My daughter Chris is now on the river returning home from St. John, where she has been under the advice (and indeed the peremptory order) of her physicians to try the sea air. I dread the result. You know how to pity me.

May God bless you and Mrs. Weltden and your very amiable neighbor Mrs. Hailes and my other friends.

Amen,*

Edward Winslow.

John Bedell† to Judge Edward Winslow.

Woodstock, 9 February, 1815.

Dear Sir,—My sons at Maramichi are desirous to have a licence of occupation for 80 rods of the reserve of lands on the south-west branch, opposite the upper end of the Island adjoining to that in possession of Elijah Fowler, to extend back one half mile. They therefore request that you will have the goodness to hold this spot in reserve for them until they come over in June next, when they will thankfully discharge the fees and if necessary bring a certificate from Mr. Henderson.

I will thank you Sir to favor me with a line on the subject when convenient. With great respect and sincere regard. I have the honor to be, Dear Sir,

Your most obliged & humble servant,

John Bedell.

Commiss's Office, Fredericton,

17th May, 1815—Wednesday.

My very dear Sir,—Little did I suppose that when I wrote you last Post and mentioned the situation of Judge Winslow, by the next I should give you an acco't of his Death. Yes my dear Sir he is dead & buried, and has left behind him a most distressed family.

*This letter contains the last words from the pen of Edward Winslow recorded in this book and the last apparently in the Winslow collection of papers. The busy pen of the "ready writer" is now laid aside, but these last words speak for themselves a fitting ending of a noble life.

†See biographical note under date 26th June, 1802.

‡Henry G. Clopper was the eldest son of Garret Clopper. His mother's maiden name was Penelope Miller; she was a cousin of Judge Winslow. Henry G. Clopper was for some years an officer in the commissariat department at Fredericton. He was founder of the Central Bank, of which he was president until his decease in 1838. His portrait will be found on the five dollar notes of the People's Bank of Fredericton.

I wrote you in my last of my walking down on Monday morning with Aunt Sally to the Judges. She remained there until Wednesday. On Monday and Tuesday our deceased friend was unusually well—spent the whole day in the drawing room, on Wednesday morning was even better and ate a very good breakfast; but about 12 o'clock was suddenly attacked with a fit of apoplexy. He was immediately conveyed to bed and a most eminent physician sent for who took upwards of a quart of blood from his temple, after which he seemed very easy. I saw him in the afternoon and was astonished to see him so easy. He was constantly talking and was full of his fun but rather delirious. At 3 o'clock on the morning of Friday he was attacked with another and fatal apopleptic fit after which there was no hope or chance of his recovery. He lay without sense or motion till 15 minutes past 7 Saturday evening, when he breathed his last. I was with him at the time and had been in the room half an hour. He had the rattles in his throat which is the last stage. They suddenly stopped and he seemed to draw breath more easily, but he raised his head for a moment, opened his eyes (which had been shut from the commencement) uttered a faint cry and expired; He died without the smallest exertion and very easily. I ever shall believe that he was perfectly sensible to the last, for upon the application of a quill dipped in lime juice to his lips not half a minute before he died, he turned away his head. He was buried yesterday with every respect. He was carried to the Province Hall. The Supreme Court was then sitting.

The family are totally destitute, for I fear his Estate will not pay the Debts.

He was elected a member of the House of Assembly for York County in 1813. From 1809 to 1815 he was solicitor general in succession to Ward Chipman. He succeeded Edward Winslow as judge of the supreme court of New Brunswick, and on the death of Ward Chipman in 1824, succeeded him in the administration of the government as president and commander in chief. Hannah Winslow to Edward Winslow, Jr.

May 15, 1815.

My dear dearest Brother,—How shall I tell you of what I know will almost distract you, but you must know it, and for the sake of your wretched sisters bear it. Oh Edward our dear Father is gone, taken almost in a moment from us poor children. I know not how we have supported this dreadful stroke, but it is the will of God. My heart aches for you. It is a blow that I fear you will scarcely be able to bear.

My dear father had been very unwell all the Spring, but as he always was more so at this season we were not alarmed. * * * We flattered ourselves when the fine weather came on so that he could get out he would soon be better. On Sunday he wished several times that Aunt Miller would make us a visit. I immediately wrote to Lucy to urge her to. The poor old lady came down on Monday, and Aunt Sally with her, to spend the day. It rained in the evening and they both staid all night. That day and the next day my dear Father seemed cheerful. Tuesday evening he sat up later than usual, talked over old times, and really seemed to enjoy himself. Wednesday morning he complained of a pain in his head but still seemed better than he had been for months, but about 12 o'clock, as I was standing in the entry talking to Wentworth and Harris Hailes, who were in the garden, Aunt Sally came out of the Parlor and said "your father seems quite faint." I ran to him and found it was a dreadful fit. We got him to bed and the Doctors came in a very few minutes. After consulting a short time they concluded to bleed him in the head, an operation he had often thought would relieve the constant pain he had there. After this was done he recovered his speech and begged us not to be distressed. He had a quiet night and the next day all three of the Doctors that attended him gave us every reason to hope he would recover. * * About daylight on Friday morning he evidently became much worse and continued so all day. About twelve o'clock he looked at us and with difficulty said "My poor children." Every effort he made to speak after that was in vain. He lived till Saturday evening. He was sensible to the last moment. O my Brother how light does every affliction we have met with appear when compared to this. * * *

Your affectionate sister,

Hannah.

Penelope Jenkins to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Fredericton, May 23, 1815.

[Extract from a fragment.]

The officers Barracks in Fredericton took fire on the first of May and burned to the ground. No lives were lost but a great deal of private property was consumed. The Kirkwoods were living in them but did not lose a great deal. The flames were discovered about 12 o'clock and in an hour and a half they were in ashes.

Judge Ward Chipman to Sir John Wentworth.

[A. D. 1815.]

My dear Sir John,— * * *

I with you very sensibly feel the loss of our late excellent and worthy friend Judge Winslow whose usefulness to others, as you well observe, occupied those exertions which his family have so much reason to lament the want of having been more directed to their benefit, as he has left no property of any description for their support. There are three daughters unmarried, Hannah, Sarah Ann, and Eliza, all grown up, left entirely unprovided for. They are very respectable good girls and are I believe ready and willing to exert themselves to the utmost of their power in procuring a livelihood, but the manner in which they have been educated has by no means prepared them for the trials they are destined to undergo, nor fitted them for those efforts which their present situation calls for, without some assistance from their father's friends. I have myself subscribed £50 and my son £25 and I shall apply to such of the Judges friends here as I may have reason to think willing and able to contribute to the relief of these orphans. I shall also write to some friends of his family in England, who I think will not withhold their aid on this occasion. I have written to Chief Justice Blowers on the subject and have taken the liberty of making the same recital to you. I shall write to no others in your Province, being well persuaded that you will be disposed to procure such additions to this little fund as may be conveniently practicable.*

My son is very much flattered by your kind recollection of him, and requests me to present to you his most respectful compliments and regards.

I am, my dear Sir, With the highest esteem & regard,
Your faithful and devoted friend and obedient Humble Servant,
Ward Chipman.

*The general esteem with which Judge Winslow was regarded is shown by the fact that on March 7, 1816, the House of Assembly voted the sum of £100 to Misses Hannah and Eliza Winslow, the unmarried daughters of the late Hon. Edward Winslow deceased, in consideration of the numerous services rendered to the public by that gentleman while a member of His Majesty's Council in this province.

Robert O'Brien to J. F. W. Winslow.

Halifax 17 July, 1815.

Dear Sir,—The lands at Abushie were originally granted by the late Governor Parr to Hugh Mackay Gordon, now a Major General in His Majesty's Service, and by him conveyed by a Deed executed at the Royal Hospital of Kilmainham in Ireland to your Father. That deed and the original grant to General Gordon are now in my possession, as is also your Father's special power of Attorney authorising me to sell and convey the said land on his behalf.

With best respects to your Sisters, I remain, dear Sir,

Yours very truly,

Rob. O'Brien.

Judge Ward Chipman to Sir John Wentworth.

St. John 22 July, 1815.

My dear Sir John—The concerns of the Winslow family, which were the subject of my last letter to you, and in which you have expressed so kind an interest, induce me once more to trouble you by forwarding the inclosed letter which I have just received from General Coffin. I know nothing of the circumstances* which occasioned the removal of young Winslow from the 41st regiment, but have been a witness to the correctness and propriety of his conduct since his return to this Province early in the last winter; his exemplary and filial attention to his father in his debilitated state to the hour of his death and his fraternal solicitude and devotion to the comfort of his sisters in their distressed condition, have merited the esteem and regard of all his friends here. I believe that the principal source of his present anxiety to obtain some provision for himself, is that he may be able to contribute his mite towards the support of the family left in so helpless a situation by his father's death. His capacity and acquirements are such as render him equal to the discharge of any duties of a military life, and I think he will merit the approbation and esteem of any of his friends who may be instrumental in relieving him from his present discouraging situation and prospects. Under these circumstances I cannot but flatter myself, if they were made known to His Excellency Sir John Sherbrooke, that his wonted benevolence and humanity would induce him to recommend him for a commission once more in His Majesty's Service.

I remain, my dear Sir, &c, &c,

W. C.

*A misunderstanding or altercation with another officer, led young Winslow in the heat of his irritation to tender his resignation. This the colonel of the regiment, who was not over friendly to him, at once accepted, and afterwards, when Winslow desired to withdraw his resignation, declined to reinstate him.

Sir John Wentworth to Sir John Sherbrooke.

Halifax, August 9th, 1815.

My dear Sir John,—I beg leave with the utmost respect to enclose to you, extracts of two Letters to me from Major General Coffin & Judge Chipman of New Brunswick, relating to the situation of Mr. Winslow, late of the 41st regiment. The testimony of these highly respectable Gentlemen to the merit of this distressed young man are so well described in these extracts, and may be so entirely relied on, that it would be trespassing on your Excellency's time to add thereto, save only my earnest solicitation for your kind favor in recommending him. It will be a noble and I am sure well timed act of generosity to preserve a very valuable young man. * *

Excuse me one moment in recurring to the character of his late pre-eminently worthy Father, who was meritoriously employed in the King's service from the battle of Lexington in the Revolutionary war in America, when he voluntarily led the army under Lord Percy from its difficult situation across the country to a position of safety on Bunker's Hill, near Boston, which has always been acknowledged by the (now) Duke [of Northumberland]. From that time he has filled many civil & military offices of trust & importance, with the greatest disinterestedness and ability, infinitely more to the public advantage than his own private benefit, as it unfortunately happened that the profits of his services were unequal to the expences of a very large Family in locations peculiarly expensive, whom he has lately left destitute of everything, but the remembrance of his manifold virtues. Happy and very thankful will they be if the good he in every station did to many others, should be retributed by your Excellency's renewed benevolence in recommending his utterly unprovided son for a commission, and most exceedingly happy shall I be in every grateful acknowledgement of the really inestimable favour done to, my dear Sir John, your truly obliged, much attached & sincerely faithful friend & obedient, humble servant,

J. Wentworth.

Edward Winslow, Jr., to his Sisters.

London, 4 Nov, 1815.

My dear Sisters,—I find the packet closes this day & therefore I must write now or not at all. I am on my way to Kensington to witness a scene which would not my sisters be to you so novel as it is to me—another & a great calamity awaits me—my second father* lies at the point of death, indeed I hardly hope to find him alive when I get there, as possibility of his reccvery is at an end. I have spent much of my time there of late & the affliction of my dear Mrs.Weltden and her good husband has almost broken my heart. The good old Gentleman was taken about ten days ago with a complaint which has made such rapid progress that even his extraordinary constitution can no longer contend with it.

When he dies my dear girls I lose—I won't say my only friend, but certainly my most valuable one. I have so long looked up to him & have experienced such affectionate & fatherly treatment from him, that really I feel as if I could hardly support his loss.

Mrs. Weltden behaves like an Angel, but I fear the exertion she makes will prove too much for her weak frame, and I can't help dreading its bringing on a fit of illness. I have not seen the Colonel himself for these three days, but he still continues perfectly sensible & has several times asked after me, but I do not like to go to him—nobody sees him except Mrs. W. & the doctors. I have much to say but now can neither think nor write on any subject but this most melancholly one, & I know of no advantage in dwelling longer on that.

God Almighty bless you prays
Your ever affectionate brother
Edward.

I shall sail for Bombay & China about the first of January—am appointed purser of the Cumberland, one of the largest & finest ships in the service, & a most excellent gentlemanly man (Wilkinson) as Commander. More of this by & bye.

Penelope Jenkins to Edward Winslow, Jr.

Fredericton, 1st October, 1816.

It is some time my dear Edward since I have written to you. We are all getting on much as usual. About three weeks since Sarah presented us with a son & heir—the finest child I ever saw. She is uncommonly well. Bradshaw* expects to remove to his farm in the course of this month. His house is very snug and comfortable and I trust they will be able to get on. He is steady and industrious. Jenkins' mother died last August, and he immediately determined to reside at his farm, and has been ever since busily employed in repairing the house for our reception. He has had to repair the old part thoroughly and put up an addition, which makes it a very comfortable and good looking house. He has always been so much attached to the place, that all his leisure time for the last three years has been devoted to its improvement and it is really a beautiful spot.

*The reference is to Bradshaw Rainsford, who married Judge Winslow's daughter Sarah.

I used to think I never should like to live in the country again, but matrimony reconciles us to a great many things, and I am really now very anxious for the day to come that we may move to the country. The house we have lived in ever since I was married has been a wretched one but we were fortunate to get it, bad as it was, as it is now almost impossible to procure a shelter even, in this great town, although I suppose there have been 30 or 40 fine large houses put up in the town in the course of the summer, and it was the same last year, but they are generally owned by Americans, who are allowed to come and settle here whenever they incline, which is thought by many to be a most impolitic arrangement.

The letters you have already received have I suppose given you an account that Wentworth went to Canada in the hope of obtaining a clerkship in the North West trade but was too late. He was then offered a subaltern's allowance of land (500 acres) in a new settlement in Upper Canada, with three years rations and farming utensils, which he accepted (for the present at least) rather than return as he went. I must confess I am very sorry that he was induced to avail himself of this offer as he is better calculated for anything else than a farmer. It will be hard work indeed to obtain his bread in a wilderness with his own hands. His abilities are equal to any institution where writing and application are necessary, and I have lately thought my dear Edward, that you might think of some situation for him as a clerk or assistant in any office in England that would be more likely to promise him a decent living than the laborious undertaking he is now engaged in. I shall ever think if proper interest had been taken and proper exertions made by my dear Father's friends here, some position might have been obtained for him. But although they all allowed that he was exemplary and industrious, and that he had talent for anything, no one stepped forward to befriend him essentially. Indeed there is an unfledged race here who are ready to catch at everything and who have money, and of course interest, to get what they want for their sons or themselves, and when any little situation becomes vacant it is secured before you can look around you. Wentworth has the most flattering professions from Sir John Wentworth, and a most friendly letter the other day from Sir H. Sheaffe. These things serve to keep his hopes alive but that is all. Indeed my dearest brother he is worthy a better fate. Good hearted and affectionate to his family, his principal distress is that he is unable to add to their comfort. * * *

Believe me my ever dear Brother
Most faithfully and affectionately
Your sister, Penelope.

Maj. Gen. Sir R. H. Sheaffe, Bart., to J. F. W. Winslow.

Edinburgh, 27th Sept'r, 1817.

My dear Winslow,—I have the sincerest pleasure in congratulating you on the success of my recent application in your favour: the following is a copy of the answer I received.

Horse Guards, 18th Sept'r, 1817.

Sir—Having laid before the Commander in Chief your letter of the 7th Inst, with its enclosures, I am directed to acquaint you that from the strong representations, together with the urgency of the request you have made in favor of Mr. John F. Wentworth Winslow, and from his having conducted himself with zeal and great credit upon active service on many occasions to the satisfaction of his superior officers since he resigned, His Royal Highness will recommend to the Prince Regent, that he should be reinstated in his rank as Lieutenant in the 41st Reg't, but he cannot be permitted to receive any back pay beyond the period of the reduction of the late 2nd Battalion (25th Nov'r 1814) when he will be placed on Half pay.

I have &c, &c, (Signed) H. Torrens.

* * To the official letter I addressed to Sir H. T. I added a sort of demi-official one and both were written with so much earnestness that it may account for the sentence "together with the urgency of the request" which in the original is an interlineation in Sir H.'s own writing. * * *

By the time this will reach you, you will have about three years back half pay to receive—the best return you can make to His Royal Highness is to act with "great credit" on all occasions, maintaining the character which has so effectually aided you in obtaining this favor.

If any of your family be near you assure them that they will always share with you in the best wishes and regard of

R. H. S.

[The above letter is addressed to "Lieut. John F. Wentworth Winslow, on Half-pay of the 41st Reg't, Perth, Upper Canada." Doubtless the address on the letter afforded the recipient the first glad intimation of the success of Gen. Sheaffe's efforts in his behalf.]

J. B. Macaulay to John F. W. Winslow.

York, 25 July, 1818.

Dear Sir,— * * * I am sorry to say I have not heard from my friend Jenkins for a very long time, but I suppose he has suffered too much from his unfortunate wounds to find pleasure in writing. I beg you will make my best regards to him when you write, and assure him that I wish him every enjoyment and happiness. He is one of the best fellows ever I knew and I should be sorry to forget him. Give my best regards to the Glengarry Gentlemen residing about Perth. I wish them all success.

Believe me to be very truly yours,

J. B. Macaulay.

Thomas Ritchie* to Miss Hannah Winslow.

[The recipient was daughter of Judge Winslow.]

Annapolis, 6th Sep'r, 1818.

Madam,—A Mr. Dodge wishes to purchase your Lands in Wilmot. He offers 7s. 6d. per acre, to pay in five years by instalments bearing interest after the first year. He will give satisfactory security.

This is the best offer I have had for the Lands since you first wrote to me respecting them. If you are inclined to accept it, have the goodness to inform me.

With the greatest respect,

Your very humble servant,

Miss Winslow. Thos. Ritchie.

J. F. W. Winslow to Edward Winslow.

Perth, Upper Canada, November 19, 1819.

My dear Brother,—I am informed by Hannah that you arrived only 36 hours after we sailed. I certainly would have remained longer in N. B. had any of your letters mentioned a probability of your coming so soon; but I believe that you were doubtful about it when you wrote on the 6th June. * * * Being so pledged as we were to Eliza, and having disappointed her so often, together with the advanced season of the year, I confess I urged our departure and I assure you the apparent change in Eliza the first week of our arrival was very gratifying to me. Her health has suffered a good deal, and I don't think she would have been restored while kept in that constant state of suspense owing to our delay. I am most anxious to hear from you and hope you will indulge me soon. * * I can't bear the idea of your going off again without my seeing you, indeed if I thought you were to I would immediately set off and surprise you. Do write me most particularly about Penelope's affairs.† I could spare £100

*Thomas Ritchie was father of the late Sir Wm. Johnstone Ritchie, chief justice of the supreme court of Canada. See notice of him in Calnek and Savary's History of Annapolis.

†Wentworth Winslow was under the impression that his sister had lost all she possessed by the failure of an agent. Happily this did not prove to be the case.

if you think her affairs require it, and I hope you will not fail to let me know as soon after the receipt of this as possible, in order that I may enclose it to you. I wish to know particularly whether you think Penelope's plans might be benefitted by my returning to N. B. as a residence. I am now merely remaining here the better to secure the Deeds (of my property here) and shall decline being concerned in anything till I hear from you. I don't like the thoughts of remaining in this country on Penelope's account, even should you not devise any plan for our joint operations. It will be my greatest satisfaction if I can render any services to P. and her little darling,* therefore I desire to live where I can most effectually answer this end. This place will be of great consequence ere long, and I confess for various reasons I could content myself very well here. The constant immigration creates a deal of bustle and business in the mercantile way. A Captain on half pay and myself have been talking about doing something. However I shall resolve on nothing yet awhile. It will depend on your answer whether I make a home here or not. I am heartily thankful on poor Pen's account that you arrived so unexpectedly. If you had not come out she would have been miserably lonesome this winter. * * *

Believe me, Yours very affectionately,

J. F. W. Winslow.

George Lambert to Sarah Winslow.

Worcester, [England] Feb'y 29th, 1820.

My Esteemed Friend,—I return you my best thanks for thinking me worthy of memory. I had the pleasure to receive upon the 12th Inst. your friendly letter of the 20 Nov'r last, left by your nephew Mr. E. Winslow at the Barrack Office, London; but who enclosed it to me I know not as I left the office in 1815. * * *

I assure you my good friend I am feelingly impressed at your sorrowful recital. * * *

Be so good as to let me know if Mr. S. D. Street Attorney at Law is in the land of the living, & to get a friend to inquire at the Registry Office if the six acre lot of Land on the hill near Fredericton, granted to Lieut. Peter I. Smith of the King's American Regiment of Foot and purchased by me, is sold.

*The child here referred to, Mary Caroline Jenkins, afterwards married Captain Hale of the 52nd Regiment. Her mother, Mrs. Jenkins, in 1824, married Paymaster Winterbottom of the same regiment. See following notice :—

"Married at Fredericton, on Sunday [Nov. 14, 1824], by the Rev. George "Best, Paymaster Winterbottom, 52d Light Infantry, to Mrs. Penelope Jenkins, "daughter of the late Honorable E. Winslow."—(St. John Courier.)

I am tolerably well now, but often experience the infirmities attendant on old age. Do let me know how Mr. Clopper, &c, &c, all are.

Your sincere friend,

Geo. Lambert.

EDWARD WINSLOW & CO.

Edward Winslow, the third son of Judge Winslow, came to New Brunswick to live in the autumn of 1819, having retired from the East India service. He shortly afterwards engaged in business at St. John with one John Dove as co-partner, under the Firm name of Edward Winslow & Co. They occupied a new store in Water street belonging to John Thomson.

On May 20, 1818, they advertised a stock of goods lately imported in the ship "Canada" from London. A more miscellaneous collection of goods could not well be imagined; it included such articles as Canton crapes, silks, London manufactured jewelry, woollen goods, cloths, hats, hosiery, India cottons, bandana handkerchiefs, an elegant assortment of the most fashionable Millinery, ladies' and gentlemen's boots and shoes, carpenter's tools, cutlery, wines, ale, porter, gin and brandy; Congo, Suchong and Hyson teas, the usual description of groceries, cheese, hams, sugar, mess pork, bar and bolt iron, cast iron pots, stoves, sail cloth, cordage, &c., &c., &c.

Edward Winslow went to England early in 1820 with the intention of importing a large quantity of goods for his store and with every prospect of success as a merchant. For many years he had encountered the perils of the sea unharmed, but sad to relate he was destined now to make his last voyage. The particulars of his death are recorded in the letter that follows.

LOSS OF THE BRIG WILLIAM & MATTHEW.

Barrington, May 19, 1820.

Gentlemen,—I am to inform you, for the information of those who may be interested that the Brig "William and Matthew," Capt. Evans, from London, was wrecked on the night of the 12th inst. on Cape Negro, and what adds to the misfortune is that E. Winslow, Esq., the principal owner, in his anxiety to reach the shore was drowned with one of the seamen. The vessel is now entirely in chips and from the continued violence of the Easterly wind and the nature of the place, very little has been saved. * * *

The body of Mr. Winslow has not yet been found but I have offered a liberal reward for it, and if I succeed shall carry it to Shelburne and inter him with the respect due to his character and connections. Whatever

Son of Judge Edward.

appears to belong to him shall be faithfully taken care of and transmitted to Saint John. Excuse the hurry of this which I send off express to Yarmouth.

I am Gentlemen, yours &c,

Wm. Robertson.

Not a Letter saved.

Harriot [Rainsford?] to Hannah Winslow.

Fredericton 19 June, 1820.

My dear Hannah,—I have requested Mr. Sampson not to hand you this letter until you are informed of its sad subject. Painful indeed is the task which I have undertaken to announce the death of such a Brother. You certainly have the greatest, and indeed only reflection that can reconcile us to such afflictions, that your beloved brother's life was spent in such a manner that his sudden death would not have found him unprepared. What but that soothing hope, and a full trust in Heaven for a happy meeting thereafter would have supported me under my double loss a few short months since. * * * Mrs. Jenkins received a letter from him from London, dated, I think, 4th April. In it he speaks with great pleasure of his settling himself permanently at St. John. He speaks of having met such "Friends as no man ever deserved." He chartered the unfortunate vessel and was bringing out goods to a great amount.

Mrs. Jenkins came to town on the post day not feeling a doubt but that she should hear from him from St. John, and after we found there were no letters for her, we all anxiously searched the newspapers for the arrival of the ship, and she was the first who discovered the inclosed heart rending advertisement. She was not able to go home until the evening when she was a little more composed. I have seen her frequently since, she shows more fortitude than I could have hoped. She is truly to be pitied. Mrs. Miller's family, and her own sweet little girl, must occupy her a great deal and prevent her from dwelling so much upon her loss. * * *

My dear girl it is not alone among relatives that he is mourned. I never knew a person so generally lamented. It's happy for Mrs. Sampson and Wentworth that they had not seen their brother for so many years, they cannot, I think, feel such poignant grief as those relatives who have had such recent proofs of his affection and kindness.

This is a miserable commencement of a correspondence that under other circumstances would have given me so much pleasure, but I hope I shall hear from you as soon as you feel equal to writing, and if I can procure any further accounts they shall be forwarded you as soon as possible. * *

Mama and the girls desire their love.

Believe me my dear Friend,

Very sincerely yours,

Harriot.

Major Gen'l Sir R. H. Sheaffe, Bart., to J. F. W. Winslow.

Alnwick Castle, 11th Jan'y, 1826.

My dear Winslow,— * * * What a scene your vicinity must have exhibited! in ashes*— I of course mean the extensive tracts which have been desolated in so awful a manner, and in which many human beings have perished or have been bereaved of all that gave comfort to their existence. What picture is there so much calculated to interest human feeling as that of the happy & prosperous suddenly overwhelmed by the destruction of all that contributed to happiness & prosperity, finding in their stead heaped on them all the bitter calamities by which man can be assailed. From such a state I hope you are gradually recovering, though some of the evil must be without remedy. To your worthy Governor it affords an opportunity of shewing the excellence of his character by which the sufferers no doubt profit. * * *

Yours very faithfully,

R. H. Sheaffe.

[P. S.] Present to the Lt. Gov'r the friendly regards of an old acquaintance who has a sincere esteem for him.

Note—[The letters that follow came to light too late for insertion in chronological order, but are considered by the Editor to be of sufficient interest to be added here.]

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Fredericton, 26th April, 1786.

Dear Chip,—I am glad you are visibly employed, wish it was more lucrative.

You must detach some professional man to this County; the inconvenience of being without advice is very great. Controversies will arise, and there is not a man in the County who can pretend to any knowledge of the form of proceedings.

---

*The reference is to the great Miramichi fire of October, 1825.

By the way some papers are before me which I will enclose, because it will save me the trouble of writing the whole story over again. The man was suspected, was taken, and it was evident he was not guilty: but some one certainly murdered the whole family and burnt the house*. Application had been made for the administration and I proposed to grant it to Captain Townsend.† I want Father Crannell to send me a form—or memoranda of what I am to do precisely.

A coroner's inquest sat on the bodies of the deceased and reported separately. Will the coroner and jury be entitled to fees on each ?

Judge Allen will be down to the court. I'll write again by him.

Mrs. Winslow and the little ones are all well and ask to be remembered in your prayers. Adieu.

Yours ever,

Ed. Winslow.

Edward Winslow to Ward Chipman.

Fredericton, 21st May, 1786.

Dear Chip,—I this moment received yours, without date, and thank you for the inclosed from Father Crannell.

I feel anxious for an arrival from England. I want to know who's who in this country. Don't defer your visit until the circuit in Sunbury. You cannot render a greater service than by attending our "Inferior Court" in June. I have serious thoughts of soliciting the Governor that a crown lawyer should be requested to attend. There literally is not a man of Law in the County, and there is a variety of business to be performed. Several criminal cases and two or three in common Pleas of considerable importance. These proceedings ought to be carried on with decency and formality. Some person acquainted with practice should set us right at first and we will not err afterwards.

In addition to these considerations I'll venture to affirm that you will receive a portion of business which essentially will pay you for your trouble. It will be a pleasant season to travel, and the task is not so arduous as you suppose. I hope you will make the attempt. I have very much to say to you and I cannot leave my home.

---

*The reference is to the murder of Richard Bydder, his wife and five children, on the night of Sunday, March 26th, 1786. The family lived on the lands assigned the Maryland Loyalists below the Nashwaak. See under "Hue and Cry" at page 327.

†The reference is to Captain Levin Townsend of the Maryland Loyalists.

While I am writing a number of Frenchmen who have been most unjustly ousted of their land, which was reserved by the Government of Nova Scotia, have made application to me, and solicited proceedings against the tresspassers. I have put them off and have assured them that some Lawyer will be here in the second week in June. They say they have money and are determined to try the matter .

I have heard young Sewell is not well; will it not be of service to him to visit this quarter ? The air is pure; he will have the benefit of exercise; he can ride—he can walk—I'll make him laugh in spite of his health. He will gratify me beyond what I could write to tell him. I am solitary; if he can reconcile himself to spend a few days out of your city he will lay me under obligations. You certainly can spare him, I'll return him safe and sound: urge him to come up.

Yours forever,

Ed. Winslow.

Benjamin Marston to Ward Chipman.

London, March 26, 1792.

My dear Chippy,—God in His merciful providence has at last opened me a door to escape out of England and I have embraced the opportunity with as much joy as I ever did to get out from the worst prison I was ever in. It does not indeed bring me to New Brunswick, it carries me rather farther off—to the coast of Africa, whither I am going as Survevor Gen'l of Lands to a large Company who are about making a settlement on the Island Boolam, which lies in the Atlantic Ocean, about four miles from the main continent of Africa in 11 degrees some min. N. Lat., right opposite the mouth of Rio Grande. They gave me £60 str. per annum salary and subsistence, and 500 acres land gratis — other settlers give £30 for that quantity. The salary to be sure is no great thing, but anything with something to eat is infinitely before nothing and starving by inches—but the land will be soon worth £500, if the settlement should succeed, and should it prosper greatly, much more and that in a short time. At any rate I am glad I am leaving England which never pleased me and which has been made tenfold more disagreeable by my being forced to stay in it against my will. I expect to embark in two days from this. You shall hear from me as opportunity offers and perhaps I may have it in my power to institute a commercial intercourse with St. John for house frames and other building materials as I think they will be able to get them much cheaper with you than from the Baltic.

For the present, adieu: Remember me very kindly to my friends: tell them I don't give up hope of yet returning to my loved America. God bless you and them is the fervent wish of

Yours,

Ben. Marston.

P. S.—Don't neglect to tease Lesdernier when you can do it without much trouble to yourself — and why can't you institute a process against my real property at Miramichi, have it let for whatever it will and apply the money to payment where I owe, of which I have given you an account.

The Boolam Island Company go out under a Governor, Lieutenant Gov'r and a Legislative Council chosen by the settlers who go out with them, whose names are as follows

Henry Hew Dalrymple, Esq., Governor.

John Young, Esq., Lt. Gov'r.

Council :—Sir Wm. Halton, Bar't., Jno. King, Philip Beaver, Peter Clutterbuck, Francis Brodie, Charles Drake, John Tubs, Richard Hancome, Robert Dobbin, Isaac Himenes, Esquires.

[Note.—Soon after the arrival of the settlers at their destination they were attacked by the deadly African fever, and of their company of 275 persons only a few survived who abandoned the enterprise and returned home. Among those who perished was Benjamin Marston. His death occurred August 10, 1792.]

Edward Winslow to Jonathan Sewell.

Kingsclear, 14 Jan'y, 1797.

Your letter, my dear Sewell, found me a cripple with the gout in my right arm, which prevented me sooner acknowledging it.

Chipman (I dare say) has wrote you on the subject of our new engagements in the commission for locating the River St. Croix of the Treaty of 1783. You know the cordial friendship between us, and you will conclude that the connexion must render the duty perfectly pleasant.

The office of secretary is not what I originally aimed for. If I had been chosen Umpire I should have acted under every possible restraint. For the duties of the office of secretary I feel myself every way equal; I fear no reflection and will in no degree be responsible for the consequence which may attend the decision. It will be laborious, perhaps not lucrative. One advantage must result both to Chipman and myself: it has taken us from that dreamy path which both of us have been imperceptibly sliding into—obscurity and despair. During the first bustle here we combatted difficulties with alacrity, and we submitted to inconveniences without murmuring. As soon as this was over and the eagerness of expectation had subsided, we saw the whole society sinking into a sort of lethargy. Those who had salaries made their calculations to eat, drink and vegetate to the exact amount of their incomes. Those who had none were saved all the trouble of estimates for they could get nothing either to eat or drink. I belong (nearly) to the latter class. I found myself loaded with titles—overwhelmed with honors, but with little money. I was the proprietor of a tract of land "beautifully situated upon a navigable river and covered with prodigious fine timber." But the river glided by without material advantage to me, for I could not buy a Boat, and the trees might have stood to eternity for I had hardly credit for an axe. I have dashed at every opening, but a wife, ten children, and the gout have held me fast. Chipman was not quite so badly off: he had saved a little cash, so that he did not feel the weight so soon, but when it fairly rested on his shoulders down he dropped, and it would have grinded the heart of a man of sensibility to have watched his countenance for the last two or three years. The late appointment has revived—nay has regenerated him. It may not be of long continuance, and in a pecuniary view possibly will not be very beneficial, but it is an honourable mark of confidence, and it has brought him into a field where he may exert his talents. The vigor of his mind is unabated and he is industrious almost beyond example. I presume he will secure so much credit to himself by his correct management of this important business that it will lead to something which may render the remainder of his days comfortable.

For myself I cannot anticipate any substantial benefits from the employment, and yet I am highly gratified at it. I am almost ready to exclaim like General Ruggles' Indian, when his friends were preparing the last offices for him: "My dear Brothers, you shan't bury me yet" !

Our General Assembly meet this day. I am sickened at the anticipation of the renewal of our controversies led by Glenie, analyzing all the principles of Government, fixing the political Longitudes and Latitudes, and establishing the boundary line between prerogative and privilege.

Our very worthy Rector, Mr. Pidgeon (late 65 Reg't) often speaks of you. He is to be married early in the spring to a daughter of Bishop Inglis.

I assure you, my dear Sewell, I did not intend so long a letter, but you brought yourself into the scrape and I shall write you whenever I please.

I am, yours, &c., &c.,

Ed. Winslow.
